PREFACE.

This annotated edition of the Code of Civil Procedure is the result of labors extending over a period of seven years, and while the editor was actively engaged in the practice of the law. The primary object in publishing this edition was to give the profession a practical, workable annotated code. To reduce the annotations to narrative form would seem more truly to subserve the real purpose of an annotated code: to place before the practitioner a general outline of the law bearing on each section as construed by the appellate courts.

The result of this effort is now submitted to the judgment of the profession; and the editor gives, at the outset, the assurance of a faithful attempt in what he believes to be the right direction, and that he has spared neither time nor effort in the attempt.

The only satisfaction the editor may expect from the result of his labors is the approval of the profession; for no pecuniary compensation, calculated upon the commercial value of the work, could be at all commensurate with the effort made and the work actually performed. It is therefore hoped that the profession, to whom the work is submitted, and for whom alone it was undertaken, will realize and understand not only the difficulties encountered, but also the prodigious labor involved.

While endeavoring always, in this edition, to keep in view the principal object of the framers of the code, viz., to make legal proceedings more intelligible, more certain, more speedy, and less expensive, the constant aim has been to combine what have been proven by usage to be the best features of code compilation and annotation—to combine: 1. A genuine text; 2. Ample cross-references; 3. A complete history of the legislation of each section; 4. Full annotations; and 5. The original notes of the code commissioners.

The aim has been, also, throughout the work, to give the law as it exists, and the construction placed upon it by the court; to harmonize the decisions wherever a conflict was apparent; to explain discrepancies and contradictions, by reference to the law controlling the case under consideration, avoiding, wherever possible, any statement where there is a conflict of opinion, but where such conflict cannot be explained, to give authorities upon which the rule is based.

A genuine text is the first essential of a code: the law as enacted by the legislature, and not the law as issued by the printer, is desired. Because of errors of so palpable a nature accumulating in each edition of the codes as issued, the copy of this code has been diligently compared with the original documents and engrossed bills on file in the office of the secretary of state, so that the present text goes to press free from the errors found in previous editions.

In this effort to secure accuracy, much light was thrown on the origin of the statutes. Thus, among other things, it was found that §§ 798, 799, 800, and 801 had never been officially published in the statutes, but were enacted April 1, 1872, and inserted in the original edition of the code published in that year. It will be remembered that the Code of Civil Procedure was approved by Governor Booth on March 11, 1872.

Cross-references are made not only to the different parts, or departments, of this code, but also to the other codes, as well as to the judicial decisions and annotations of various standard annotated reports published in America.

The legislative history of each section has been prepared with great care, and with attention to detail; the object in view being, to give not only the source of the statute, but also the amendments made by the legislature from time to time. The value of this department of the code is manifest, showing, as it does, the text of each section governing the action or proceeding at the time the decision of the appellate court therein was rendered. A fuller use of this legislation will, it is believed, explain many apparent conflicts in the decisions of the appellate courts.

The annotations in this edition are extensive and complete. The arrangement of the notes is in a convenient form, with headings in black-faced type, that appropriately indicate the subject-matter, and aptly refer to the text of the statute.

The notes of the code commissioners have been reprinted in this edition for the purpose of further explaining and construing the sections to which they relate. These notes show not only the legislation upon which the section is based, but also the decisions of the supreme court; and in many cases it will be found that the code section was based upon a judicial decision of this or of a sister state, as well as upon decisions of English courts, and in some instances upon statements of law contained in standard text-books of law-writers. These notes of the code commissioners therefore furnish the truest guide to the proper construction of the code; and it is unfortunate that hitherto they have not been readily accessible to the profession, as a more frequent reference to them, and a careful study of the cases cited therein, might have tended to simplify our practice.

A careful and analytical study of the decisions of the appellate courts construing the inapt legislative expressions in frequent amendments will convince the profession that the only solution of the question of the simplification of practice is to take that matter entirely out of the hands of the legislature, and regulate practice by rules of court, as has been done successfully in several states.

The great mass of decisions which have accumulated upon questions of practice must necessarily have a disheartening effect upon a student of the law. We find decision after decision upon questions so simple that they never should have been entertained by any court. It has been said, and truly said, that three fourths of the decisions of our appellate courts are based upon questions of practice, and it may be further truthfully asserted, that at least fifty per cent of these questions of practice have been raised and decided many times, all of which will be clear from an examination of the authorities cited in the annotations in these volumes.

GENESIS AND GROWTH OF THE CODES.

The adoption of the codes in 1872 grew out of an effort to revise and compile the laws of the state. In 1868, J. B. Harmon, John Currey, and Henry P. Barber were appointed as commissioners "to revise and compile all the laws of this state," by "An Act to provide for the revision and compilation of the laws of the state of California and the publication thereof," approved March 28, 1868 (Stats. 1867–68, p. 435).

For reasons not published, this commission was not permitted to complete its labors, but the legislature, by "An Act establishing a commission for the revision of the laws," approved April 4, 1870 (Stats. 1869–70, p. 774), provided for the appointment of another commission, consisting of three persons, to be appointed by the governor, to "continue the labors" of that appointed in 1868, and "to revise all the statutes of this state, including those enacted at the present session of the legislature, and correct verbal errors and omissions, and suggest such improvements as will introduce precision and clearness into the wording of the statutes, and by a supplemental report thereto to designate the acts or parts of acts which, in the opinion of the commission, should be repealed, and prepare substitutes therefor when necessary; to recommend all such enactments as shall, in the judgment of the commission, be necessary to supply the defects of and give completeness to the existing legislation of the state, and prepare and present the bills therefor; to examine all special acts, and such as are confined in their operation to particular counties or cities, and to propose such measures as shall be necessary to give unity and uniformity thereto, and especially to propose, when possible, general acts, which shall supersede the same; to arrange the statutes in the most systematic and convenient form, and furnish a complete and alphabetical list of the matters contained therein, which, in future, may be made the basis of an index."

The second code commission was composed of Creed Haymond, John C. Burch, and Charles Lindley. Differences of opinion arising, John H. McKune was appointed commissioner upon the retirement of Judge Lindley, and the complete drafts of the four codes were issued by the state printer in 1871–72.

While the legislature adopted the drafts of the codes substantially as reported, yet many amendments were made, both in the arrangement of the subject-matter and in the language of the text submitted, as will be seen upon consulting the enrolled bills signed by Governor Booth in 1872.

The code system is, for convenience and partial classification, divided into four codes, to each of which a name is given; but they are inseparably interwoven with one another, and no one of them is complete in itself, or absolutely confined to a particular subject. (See Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 72; 63 Pac. 170; Lewis v. Dunne, 134 Cal. 294; 66 Pac. 478.)

The idea prevails generally, in California, that our code is but a reproduction of that of New York, while, in fact, our Code of Civil Procedure is based largely upon the Practice Act and the Probate Act of 1851. Although many of the sections of these two acts were substantially the same as existing New York statutes, yet, as a whole, they bear a more striking resemblance to the statutes of 1850 and to the decisions of our own state. It is true that David Dudley Field and his collaborators in New York had drafted a code system for that state as early as 1849–65, but it was not adopted until after 1850, and indeed their draft of a Code of Civil Procedure was never adopted by that state.

Our Probate Act and Practice Act were based almost entirely upon certain acts of the first session of our legislature (1849–50) at San José. In short, they were mere codifications of those statutes. As to the origin of the statutes themselves we are left in doubt. At that time the report of the code commissioners of New York, covering the subject of procedure, was not available, and was not given to the legislature of that state until December 31, 1849.

While it is true that many of the provisions of the acts of that first session of our legislature are substantially the same as the New York statutes, yet such acts are in no sense copies of the laws of any particular state. Such legislation was undoubtedly the work of the legislative judiciary committees, supplemented by the investigations of members of the San Francisco bar, who were strenuously opposing the proposition to adopt the civil law, (as recommended by Governor Burnett in his message,) instead of the common law. The advocates of the common law finally prevailed, and it was made the rule of decision in this state. The completion of the labors of these men was the embodiment, in several acts, of the principles of common-law procedure, as modified by legislation in the several states of the Union. The rules of that practice, far from being the work of any particular body of men, were the common heritage of the English-speaking people, and the result of the experience of ages.

The statutes of all the states, and the decisions of the courts, both of America and England, were drawn upon for the principles embodied in our first legislative enactments, and harmonized to fit the conditions of the new state.

On March 18, 1872, after the adoption of our code, David Dudley Field sent the following telegram to the code commissioners of this state: "All honor to you for your great work accomplished! It will be the boast of California, that, first of English-speaking states, she set the example of written laws as the necessary complement of a written constitution for a free people."

THE

OF THE

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

AN ACT

TO ESTABLISH A CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

[Approved March 11, 1872.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

TITLE OF ACT.

§ 1. Title and division of this volume.

§ 1. Title and division of this volume. This act shall be known as The Code of Civil Procedure of California, and is divided into four parts, as follows:

Part I. Of Courts of Justice.
II. Of Civil Actions.
III. Of Special Proceedings of a Civil Nature.
IV. Of Evidence.

This act, how cited. See post, § 19.
Construction of the codes and of their various sections. See Pol. Code, §§ 4478 et seq.

Legislation § 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Constitutionality of statute embracing more than one subject. See note 61 Am. Dec. 337.
Statutes embracing subjects not embraced in title. See note 69 Am. Dec. 648.

When title embraces more than one subject, and what it may include. See note 79 Am. St. Rep. 456.
Construction of constitutional provisions relative to titles of statutes. See note 1 Ann. Cas. 584.
Single statute embodying title of statute or compilation of laws as affected by prohibition against plurality of subjects. See note 55 L. R. A. 840.

PRELIMINARY PROVISIONS.

§ 2. When this codes takes effect.
§ 3. Not retroactive.
§ 4. Rule of construction of this code.
§ 5. Provisions similar to existing laws, how construed.
§ 6. Tenure of offices preserved.
§ 7. Construction of repeal as to certain offices.
§ 8. Actions, etc., not affected by this code.
§ 9. Limitations shall continue to run.
§ 10. Holidays.
§ 11. Same.
§ 12. Computation of time.
§ 13. Certain acts not to be done on holidays.
§ 14. "Seal" defined.
§ 15. Joint authority.
§ 16. Words and phrases.
§ 17. Certain terms used in this code defined.
§ 18. Statutes, etc., inconsistent with code repealed.
§ 19. This act, how cited, enumerated, etc.
§ 20. Judicial remedies defined.
§ 21. Division of judicial remedies.
§ 22. Action defined.
§ 23. Special proceeding defined.
§ 24. Division of actions.
§ 25. Civil actions arise out of obligations or injuries.
§ 26. Obligation defined.
§ 27. Division of injuries.
§ 28. Injuries to property.
§ 29. Injuries to the person.
§ 30. Civil action, by whom prosecuted.
§ 31. Criminal actions.
§ 32. Civil and criminal remedies not merged.

§ 2. When this code takes effect. This code takes effect at twelve o'clock noon, on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-three.

Effect of codes generally. See Pol. Code, §§ 4478 et seq.
Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 2; Pol. Code, § 2; Pen. Code, § 2.

Legislation § 2. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Laws passed at the same session at which the codes were adopted prevail over the codes (Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; Ex parte Newton, 53 Cal. 571); but § 3891 of the Political Code declares that provisions concerning revenue are to be considered as if passed and approved on the last day of the session, and all acts passed during the session are repealed, except acts amendatory of or carrying into effect the codes. Mitchell v. Crosby, 46 Cal. 97; Rosasco v. Tuolumne County, 143 Cal. 432; 77 Pac. 148.

§ 3. Not retroactive. No part of it is retroactive, unless expressly so declared.

Effect on pending proceedings and vested rights. See post, § 8.
Effect of code on existing statutes. See post, § 18.
Similar provisions. See Pen. Code, § 3; Pol. Code, § 3; Civ. Code, § 3.

Legislation § 3. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Retrospective law, what is. Justice Story, in Society v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 139, Fed. Cas. No. 13156, declares, "Every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability, in respect to transactions or considerations already past, must be deemed retrospective." See also note to American Mercantile Exchange v. Blunt, 120 Am. St. Rep. 468.

Remedial statutes should be given a retrospective effect, where a repealing or amending statute has no saving clause, and such a construction is necessary to preserve the rights of the parties in pending actions. Bensley v. Ellis, 39 Cal. 309.

Changing procedure. Where the change affects merely the remedy, and the method of enforcing the right, not the right itself, it is within the control of the legislature. Oullahan v. Sweeney, 79 Cal. 537; 12 Am. St. Rep. 172; 21 Pac. 960. When a legal liability exists, a remedy may be given for such liability, where none existed before. Chapman v. State, 104 Cal. 690; 43 Am. St. Rep. 158; 38 Pac. 457. This principle is equally applicable to criminal cases: an offender may be tried by a procedure which did not exist when the offense was committed, provided the act was, at the time of its commission, punishable by law (Ex parte Gutierrez, 45 Cal. 429; People v. Mortimer, 46 Cal. 114; People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 67); and this change may be made to apply to pending actions, where the time within which an act may be done is extended (Bensley v. Ellis, 39 Cal. 309), or shortened. Kerckhoff-Cuzner Mill etc. Co. v. Olmstead, 85 Cal. 80; 24 Pac. 648.

Construction of amendments to codes. This provision also affects amendments to the original code. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Hayes, 56 Cal. 297; Sharp v. Blankenship, 59 Cal. 288; Bank of Ukiah v. Moore, 106 Cal. 673; 39 Pac. 1071; Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 140; 48 Pac. 1025. Amendments are adjusted to the original enactments, so that, in conjunction, they shall form a perfect code; and the portion of the amended section left unchanged must be considered as having been the law continuously, with the new or changed portions as new enactments that shall not be retroactive. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261. An amendment merely shortening the time within which an act may be done, and affecting only the remedy, leaving an adequate and available remedy, is in no sense retroactive (Kerckhoff-Cuzner Mill etc. Co. v. Olmstead, 85 Cal. 80; 24 Pac. 648); but an amendment cannot change the rights or obligations of the parties, nor extend the time for the commencement of an action. Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213. Registry laws will not be given a retroactive effect; and an amendment authorizing the recordation will not operate as a constructive notice of an instrument, where it was not valid, and did not have that effect, when executed. Bank of Ukiah v. Moore, 106 Cal. 673; 39 Pac. 1071. A statute prescribing not merely a rule of evidence, but a rule of property, cannot be given a retroactive effect. Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 140; 48 Pac. 1025.

Construction of Practice Act. The Practice Act was given a like construction. People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127; Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 402; Stockton etc. R. R. Co. v. Common Council, 41 Cal. 147.

Legislative expression. What is an express declaration of an intention to give a retroactive operation may rest on construction. Dunne v. Mastick, 50 Cal. 244; Tulley v. Tranor, 53 Cal. 274; Cummings v. Howard, 63 Cal. 503.

Ex post facto law. See note to Hart v. State, 88 Am. Dec. 752.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It is a rule of construction founded on the principles of general jurisprudence that a statute is not to have a retroactive effect beyond the time of its enactment. See the very elaborate and learned opinion of Justice Wells, and also the dissenting opinion of Justice Heydenfeldt, in People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127, and numerous cases there cited. See Civ. Code, § 3, and note.

§ 4. Rule of construction of this code. The rule of the common law, that statutes in derogation thereof are to be strictly construed, has no application to this code. The code establishes the law of this state respecting the subjects to which it relates, and its provisions and all proceedings under it are to be liberally construed, with a view to effect its objects and to promote justice.

Construction of codes with relation to each other, and reconciling conflicts between titles, chapters, and articles. See Pol. Code, §§ 4480 et seq.

Rules for construction of statutes. See post, §§ 1858, 1859, 1866.

Similar provisions. See Pen. Code, § 4; Pol. Code, § 4; Civ. Code, § 4.

Legislation § 4. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Constitutional provisions part of law. The law of the state is contained in the constitution as well as in the codes. Pasadena v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 781; 109 Pac. 620.

Strict construction. The common-law rule, that statutes in derogation thereof should have a strict construction, was adopted in this state when the common-law rule was made the rule of decision in 1850, and prevailed until the adoption of the codes (Hotaling v. Cronise, 2 Cal. 63; People v. Buster, 11 Cal. 215; Turner v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; 1 Morrison's Min. Rep. 107; Pina v. Peck, 31 Cal. 359), when this rule of construction was changed (Blythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 532; 19 L. R. A. 40; 31 Pac. 915; Robinson v. Southern Pacific Co., 105 Cal. 526; 28 L. R. A. 773; 38 Pac. 94, 722), and the law of the subject to which it relates established (Canavan v. Gray, 64 Cal. 7; 27 Pac. 788; Smith v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 421; 29 Pac. 34; Miller v. Carr, 116 Cal. 378; 58 Am. St. Rep. 180; 48 Pac. 324).

Liberal construction. This provision, requiring the code to be given a liberal construction, is equivalent to a command to the courts (Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703; Bewick v. Muir, 83 Cal. 368; 23 Pac. 389); but, while it applies to the codes, it has no application to the statutes of the state, as such statutes, when in derogation of the common law, are to be strictly construed (Pina v. Peck, 31 Cal. 359; Estate of Jessup, 81 Cal. 408; 6 L. R. A. 594; 21 Pac. 976; 22 Pac. 742, 1028), where such construction does not favor the imposition of a penalty or forfeiture. Snell v. Bradbury, 139 Cal. 379; 73 Pac. 150. Provisions affirmative of the common law are to be interpreted as are the rules of the common law (Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 95; Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; 27 Pac. 356); but those in derogation of the common law, or out of its course, are to be construed strictly (Hotaling v. Cronise, 2 Cal. 60); and re-enacted statutes are to be construed in accordance with the principles in force at the time of the enactment (Blythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 532; 19 L. R. A. 40; 31 Pac. 915; Dixon v. Pluns, 98 Cal. 384; 35 Am. St. Rep. 180; 20 L. R. A. 698; 33 Pac. 268; Estate of Healy, 122 Cal. 162; 54 Pac. 736), in the same manner as if they were new and original pieces of legislation. Donlon v. Jewett, 88 Cal. 530; 26 Pac. 370. The repeal of an act effects the repeal of an act amendatory of the act repealed. Hemstreet v. Wassum, 49 Cal. 273. Under the code, statutes remedial in their nature are to be liberally construed in favor of the remedy (Estate of McManus, 87 Cal. 292; 22 Am. St. Rep. 250; 10 L. R. A. 567; 25 Pac. 413; Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845; Brackett v. Banegas, 99 Cal. 623; 34 Pac. 344; Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Hutton, 144 Cal. 609; 78 Pac. 21; Union Lumber Co. v. Simon, 150 Cal. 751; 89 Pac. 1077, 1081; Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Min. Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Stonesifer v. Kilburn, 94 Cal. 33; 29 Pac. 332; Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932), even where it inflicts a penalty. Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 1; 73 Pac. 597. Courts should always look to the substance of the thing, rather than to its name (Ex parte Spencer, 83 Cal. 460; 17 Am. St. Rep. 266; 23 Pac. 395); and each provision should be referred to the object for which it was intended or to which it relates. Holbrook v. McCarthy, 61 Cal. 216; Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806; Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. The statute should be construed with the plain legislative intent. Blythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 532; 19 L. R. A. 40; 31 Pac. 915.

Rules of procedure. Except in matters which are jurisdictional, rules of procedure should be liberally construed (Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529; Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845); and not given a narrow or technical construction (Howell v. Budd, 91 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 747), but should be made to serve their true purpose, of expediting the disposition of causes upon their merits, rather than of obstructing the action of the court. Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 98 Cal. 134; 32 Pac. 863; Warner v. F. Thomas etc. Works, 105 Cal. 409; 38 Pac. 960. A liberal construction should be given to § 1238, post (San Joaquin etc. Irrigation Co. v. Stevinson, 164 Cal. 221; 128 Pac. 924), and also to § 473, post. Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226. The rule that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be strictly construed has no application to the taking of depositions. Bollinger v. Bollinger, 153 Cal. 190; 94 Pac. 770. It will be assumed, where necessary to give effect to a proceeding, that the party in interest will act in a lawful rather than in an unlawful manner. Clark v. Palmer, 90 Cal. 504; 27 Pac. 375.

Construction of codes with relation to each other. "With relation to each other, the provisions of the four codes must be construed (except as in the next two sections provided) as though all such codes had been passed at the same moment of time, and were parts of the same statute." Pol. Code, § 4480. While the code provisions are controlling where they assume to cover a given subject (McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17), yet they do not necessarily embody the whole law of that subject, as there may be other statutory provisions not embraced in the code. Estate of Apple, 66 Cal. 432; 6 Pac. 7. Where the provisions of the several codes are not contradictory, they should be read together, when dealing with the same subject-matter (St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876; People v. Applegarth, 64 Cal. 229; 30 Pac. 805), and construed as though passed in view of each other (Robinson v. Southern Pacific Co., 105 Cal. 526; 28 L. R. A. 773; 38 Pac. 94, 722), and as parts of the same statute. Estate of Weed, 120 Cal. 634; 53 Pac. 30. Thus, where a term is defined in one code, its use in another code must be deemed to have been with reference to such definition. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341; Keyes v. Cyrus, 100 Cal. 322; 38 Am. St. Rep. 296; 34 Pac. 722. Where one code authorizes or requires a thing to be done, and another provides the means (Page v. Superior Court, 122 Cal. 209; 54 Pac. 730), or limits and defines a power, and enumerates the circumstances under which it may be exercised, they are to be construed as one statute (People v. Fellows, 122 Cal. 233; 54 Pac. 830), and the general provisions of one are modified by the specific provisions of another (People v. Norris, 144 Cal. 422; 77 Pac. 998); and the provisions of the various codes bearing upon the same subject-matter must be construed in pari materia. Estate of Miner, 143 Cal. 194; 76 Pac. 968. Such a construction must therefore be given to the provisions of each, that all may, if possible, have effect (Gonzales v. Wasson, 51 Cal. 295); and every word of each have its proper meaning. Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806. It is only where there is a conflict between the provisions of the different codes that it is necessary to determine which shall prevail (Clarke v. Mead, 102 Cal. 516; 36 Pac. 862), but conflicts should be reconciled, if possible (Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806), and harmonized and construed together. Weber v. McCleverty, 149 Cal. 316; 86 Pac. 706.

Rules of construction in case of conflict. The following rules are laid down for the construction of the several codes, and the different titles, chapters, and sections thereof, where there is a conflict.

Conflict between titles. "If the provisions of any title conflict with or contravene the provisions of another title, the provisions of each title must prevail as to all matters and questions arising out of the subject-matter of such title." Pol. Code, § 4481. This rule applies only where there is a conflict; it implies that where there is no conflict a provision will be valid, although, in the sense of that rule, it is not in regard to a question arising out of the subject-matter of the title. Malone v. Bosch, 104 Cal. 680; 38 Pac. 516. It is a cardinal rule of statutory construction, that specific provisions upon a particular subject control the general provisions for the class to which that subject belongs (London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164); but where it is evident from the language used, and from the incongruity of the nature of the different provisions, that they are to be understood as referring respectively to distinct classes, the rule requiring the statutes to be construed together does not apply. People v. Norris, 144 Cal. 422; 77 Pac. 998. The subject-matter of the title should be ascertained, not so much from its head-lines as from its contents. People v. Freese, 76 Cal. 633; 18 Pac. 812. The particular provision of one title in relation to the subject-matter will prevail over the general provision of another title (Fessenden v. Summers, 62 Cal. 484), especially when the general provision is silent on the point (State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 604; 86 Pac. 840); but if there is any provision of law, in any other title, specially governing the subject-matter, it must prevail (Woods v. Varnum, 83 Cal. 46; 23 Pac. 137); for the provisions specially adapted to the subject will always govern (People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 83 Cal. 393; 23 Pac. 303); but all the provisions of the code bearing upon a single subject-matter are to be construed together harmoniously if possible. Estate of Clarke, 148 Cal. 108; 113 Am. St. Rep. 197; 7 Ann. Cas. 306; 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 996; 82 Pac. 760.

Conflict between chapters. "If the provisions of any chapter conflict with or contravene the provisions of another chapter of the same title, the provisions of each chapter must prevail as to all matters and questions arising out of the subject-matter of such chapter." Pol. Code, § 4482. Where two chapters both relate to the same general subject-matter, but one relates specifically to the particular subject-matter under consideration, the latter must govern. Ham v. Santa Rosa Bank, 62 Cal. 125; 45 Am. Rep. 654. Resort must always be had to the subject-matter, to determine whether it falls more naturally in one chapter than in another (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Painter, 113 Cal. 247; 45 Pac. 320); and the headings of the chapters and titles may be examined for this purpose. Keyes v. Cyrus, 100 Cal. 322; 38 Am. St. Rep. 296; 34 Pac. 722.

Conflict between articles. "If the provisions of any article conflict with or contravene the provisions of another article of the same chapter, the provisions of each article must prevail as to all matters and questions arising out of the subject-matter of such article." Pol. Code, § 4483. In case of conflict, the provision of the article must prevail, under which the subject-matter more properly comes (Odd Fellows' Sav. Bank v. Banton, 46 Cal. 604; People v. Freese, 83 Cal. 453; 23 Pac. 378), and which deals specifically therewith. Estate of Bergin, 100 Cal. 376; 34 Pac. 867.

Conflicting sections of the same chapter or article. "If conflicting provisions are found in different sections of the same chapter or article, the provisions of the sections last in numerical order must prevail, unless such construction is inconsistent with the meaning of such chapter or article." Pol. Code, § 4484. This rule does not apply where the sections were passed at different times, as it is an old and well-settled rule, that when two laws upon the same subject-matter, passed at different times, are inconsistent with each other, the one last passed must prevail; so it has always been the rule, that, when different provisions of a statute, all passed at the same time, could not be reconciled, the one last in point of position must prevail; this was upon the theory that effect should always be given to the later rather than to an earlier expression of the legislative will; the presumption being that the latter part of the statute was last considered: there is no indication in § 4484 of the Political Code of any intent to change this well-established rule. People v. Dobbins, 73 Cal. 257; 14 Pac. 860. In the construction of statutes, all parts are to be considered together, keeping in view the subject-matter in order to ascertain the legislative intent: one clause may enlarge or limit other provisions; but no construction should be given which will lead to absurdities, if it can be reasonably avoided. San Diego v. Granniss, 77 Cal. 511; 19 Pac. 875. The sections of a statute in pari materia must be read together and effect given to each, and so construed as not to render nugatory the restrictions of any section. Gleason v. Spray, 81 Cal. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 47; 22 Pac. 551; People v. Broadway Wharf Co., 31 Cal. 33; Nicolson Pavement Co. v. Painter, 35 Cal. 699. The different sections of a chapter must be construed so as to reconcile apparent conflicts, if possible. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. They must be read together, and that interpretation should be placed upon the language which will, if possible, give effect to each section, and make it compatible with common sense and the plain dictates of justice. People v. Waterman, 31 Cal. 412; Cullerton v. Mead, 22 Cal. 95; People v. Seeley, 137 Cal. 13; 69 Pac. 693. Effect must be given, as far as possible, to all the sections upon the same subject, providing a complete scheme covering the subject-matter. People v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257; 60 Pac. 865.

Effect to be given headings. While the headings of chapters may be resorted to, to determine the correct interpretation of the sections thereof, yet they are not conclusive of the question of the power of the legislature to pass the statute. Ex parte Koser, 60 Cal. 177. Each article of the code is preceded by head-notes, numbered to correspond with the sections following, and purporting to give, in brief, the subject of each of such sections; they are parts of the statute, limiting and defining the sections to which they refer: to refuse to give effect to them according to their import, would be to make the law, not to administer it. Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1; 16 Pac. 345. These head-notes are entitled to more consideration, in explaining the intention of the different sections, where the language is doubtful, than the title of the entire act (Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303), and may be examined for the purpose of determining the particular intent of the legislature with regard to the chapter in which the section to be construed is placed. Keyes v. Cyrus, 100 Cal. 322; 38 Am. St. Rep. 296; 34 Pac. 722. In construing doubtful statutes, the title of an act is sometimes resorted to, in order to ascertain the legislative intent (People v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 358; State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501; People v. Board of Supervisors, 36 Cal. 595), but it is never allowed to enlarge or control the body of the statute. Hagar v. Board of Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The rules of statutory construction present one of the widest fields of learning known to the lawyer. While it is a general principle that the will of the legislature, as expressed in a statute, is to be carried into full effect, and that, for the purpose of ascertaining it, every source of information is to be resorted to, such as its title, its preamble, its history, and attendant circumstances, and above all, the evil aimed at and the remedy intended to be applied, it is equally well settled that a more stringent rule was applicable to a certain class of statutes, namely: to those of a penal nature, and those which are, as it was termed, in derogation of the common law. Within this latter category have been classed statutes prescribing the practice of the courts, in respect to which it was remarked by the supreme court of New York (commenting upon provisions in the Practice Code of that state, which is in most respects similar to this code), that "the rules and practice of the court, being established by the court, may be made to yield to circumstances to promote the ends of justice. Not so as to a statute; it is unbending, requiring implicit obedience as well from the court as from its suitors." Jackson v. Wiseburn, 5 Wend. 137. Without stopping to inquire how far this principle is applicable to statutory provisions prescribing, for example, the time within which a particular act must be done (which was the case in the instance referred to), it certainly should not apply in all its severity to a system of regulation having in view as its sole object the furtherance of justice and a disregard of technical strictness. This is the great principle running through all the provisions of this code. The chief design and the merit of the code, if it has any, is its attempt to make the attainment of justice the paramount object, and the use of forms mere auxiliaries, which, when they come in conflict with the ends of justice, are to be relaxed. This section was intended to obviate much of the difficulty under which courts have labored, and to render the code, instead of a rigid and unbending statute, as construed by some, a rule of procedure susceptible of easy adaptation to the purposes of justice which it alone has in view. See the opinion of Justice Cope, Jones v. Steamship Cortes, 17 Cal. 487; 79 Am. Dec. 142. See also Lucas v. Payne, 7 Cal. 92; Ward v. Severance, 7 Cal. 126; Chamberlain v. Bell, 7 Cal. 292; 68 Am. Dec. 260. See Civ. Code, § 4, and note.

§ 5. Provisions similar to existing laws, how construed. The provisions of this code, so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes, must be construed as continuations thereof, and not as new enactments.

Effect of codes on existing statutes. See post, § 18.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 5; Pen. Code, § 5; Pol. Code, § 5.

Legislation § 5. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 117, and held unconstitutional, in Lewis v. Dunne, 134 Cal. 291; Mr. Justice McFarland saying, "The said act . . . is unconstitutional, and void for all purposes, and is inoperative to change or in any way affect the law of the state as it stood immediately before the approval of said act. . . . The act covers one hundred and fifty pages of the published statutes of 1901; it amends over four hundred sections; it repeals nearly one hundred sections; it changes the numbers of other sections; it adds a great many new sections; and it contains this clause, 'Certain title and chapter headings . . . are hereby inserted, changed, and amended,' and then follow several pages of insertions, changes, and amendments of such headings. . . . We are forced to the conclusion that this act is a revision, and void for want of re-enactment and publication at large of the revised law." Thus the attempted repeals or attempted amendments of the Code of Civil Procedure as embodied in the act of the legislature of 1901 were declared unconstitutional and void. This act was the result of an act approved March 25, 1895 (Stats. 1895, p. 345), whereby the legislature created and established "a commission for revising, systematizing, and reforming the laws of this state," and provided that "said commission, to be known as 'The Commissioners for the Revision and Reform of the Law,' should be appointed by the governor." This commission was duly appointed, and thereafter filed with the secretary of state a report recommending, among other things, a revision of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the legislature (Stats. 1901, p. 117) embodied their recommendations in the act declared "unconstitutional, and void for all purposes."

New enactments. The codes were framed with a view to a complete system of law, with the intent to disturb the existing state of things as little as possible (People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407), and so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes or common law, they must be construed as continuations thereof. Churchill v. Pacific Improvement Co., 96 Cal. 490; 31 Pac. 560. If the statute of limitations had commenced to run before the codes took effect, it continued to run, notwithstanding the passage of the codes, and was not lengthened by them. Benjamin v. Eldridge, 50 Cal. 612.

Construction. The word "construed" does not mean, simply, "to interpret," "to explain," "to translate," or "to show the meaning of," but is intended to mean "regarded" or "considered." Churchill v. Pacific Improvement Co., 96 Cal. 490; 31 Pac. 560. This section is, in part, a rule of construction, and its meaning is, that words used in a former statute on the same subject have the same meaning in this code as in the former statute. Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233–241; 30 Pac. 806.

Constitutionality of code amendments and revisions. See note 86 Am. St. Rep. 267.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The Political Code contains a general provision that the repeal of existing statutes shall not revive any law heretofore repealed or suspended, nor any office heretofore abolished, and therefore such a provision has not been incorporated herein. See People v. Craycroft, 2 Cal. 243; 56 Am. Dec. 331.

§ 6. Tenure of offices preserved. All persons who at the time this code takes effect hold office under any of the acts repealed, continue to hold the same according to the tenure thereof, except those offices which are not continued by one of the codes adopted at this session of the legislature.

Similar provision. See Pol. Code, § 6.

Legislation § 6. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 7. Construction of repeal as to certain offices. When any office is abolished by the repeal of any act, and such act is not in substance re-enacted or continued in either of the codes, such office ceases at the time the codes take effect.

Repeals by implication. See post, § 18.

Legislation § 7. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Abolition of office. Where the act creating an office is repealed, but the office is continued by the Political Code, the incumbent is authorized to occupy the office, until his successor qualifies. People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407. In the absence of a constitutional inhibition, the legislature has power to alter or abridge a term of office created by it (People v. Haskell, 5 Cal. 357; People v. Squires, 14 Cal. 12; Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293; In re Bulger, 45 Cal. 553; Spring Valley Water Works v. Board of Supervisors, 61 Cal. 3; Pennie v. Reis, 80 Cal. 266; 22 Pac. 176; People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470), and may extend the term of an incumbent, provided the extension does not exceed the limitations fixed by the constitution. Christy v. Board of Supervisors, 39 Cal. 3; and see Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 142; 8 Pac. 813. The legislature may also make the enjoyment of an elective office dependent upon conditions (Brodie v. Campbell, 17 Cal. 11), and may take away from the office the duties and emoluments thereof, before the expiration of the term. People v. Squires, 14 Cal. 12. An incumbent has no proprietary interest in an office created by the legislature: it has full control over such office, unless restricted by the constitution (Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 142; 8 Pac. 813; Pennie v. Reis, 80 Cal. 266; 22 Pac. 176); nor has an incumbent any vested right in the office, which would impair the right of the legislature to increase or diminish the salary, or impose new duties, or wholly abolish the office (Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293); nor has he any contractual relation with the state, or obligation, which may be impaired by the abolition of the office or the diminution of the salary. Myers v. English, 9 Cal. 341. There is a clear distinction, however, between an office-holder, as such, and one holding a contract with the state for the performance of services. McDonald v. Yuba County, 14 Cal. 444.

§ 8. Actions, etc., not affected by this code. No action or proceeding commenced before this code takes effect, and no right accrued, is affected by its provisions, but the proceedings therein must conform to the requirements of this code as far as applicable.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 6; Pol. Code, § 8. See also repealing clause at end of this code.

Legislation § 8. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 117; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Pending actions. Actions commenced before the code went into effect were governed by the law in force at the time of commencement (Caulfield v. Doe, 45 Cal. 221; Hancock v. Thom, 46 Cal. 643; Strueven v. His Creditors, 62 Cal. 45); the clear implication from this section being, that actions not commenced and rights not vested prior to the adoption of the codes were to be controlled by the codes; the codes therefore applying only to new actions, and to causes of action which, under the existing statutes, were not barred by limitation. Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213. A proceeding for a new trial after the codes went into effect, being a new proceeding, is governed by the code provisions (Kelly v. Larkin, 47 Cal. 58; and see also Hodgdon v. Griffin, 56 Cal. 610); but proceedings for a new trial instituted before the codes went into effect were governed by the Practice Act. Macy v. Davila, 48 Cal. 646.

"Right accrued." This expression embraces all civil and political rights, absolute and qualified, under the law as it existed prior to the codes, whether arising out of past contracts express or implied, or ownership of property, or in other words, all vested rights. Dewey v. Lambier, 7 Cal. 347; Cohen v. Davis, 20 Cal. 187; Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 511; White v. Moses, 21 Cal. 34; Scott v. Dyer, 54 Cal. 430. The code, being remedial in its nature, is confined to the remedy, and does not extend to vested rights; a remedy is not a vested right; thus, a motion for a new trial is a remedy, and not a right. Kelly v. Larkin, 47 Cal. 58; Townley v. Adams, 118 Cal. 382; 50 Pac. 550.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The repeal of a statute conferring rights or prescribing remedies would have the effect to extinguish actions instituted under it, and which were pending when the repeal went into operation, if no provision were made enabling the court to proceed to try and determine them. McMinn v. Bliss, 31 Cal. 122. Where an inchoate right accrued under the statutes as they existed previous to the adoption of the code, and by the code the proceedings to perfect the right are regulated and prescribed, such regulations and requirements must be pursued, or the party is remediless. See particularly People v. Livingston, 6 Wend. 526; Sedgwick on Stat. and Const. Law, 679; see post, § 18.

§ 9. Limitations shall continue to run. When a limitation or period of time prescribed in any existing statute for acquiring a right or barring a remedy, or for any other purpose, has begun to run before this code goes into effect, and the same or any limitation is prescribed in this code, the time which has already run shall be deemed part of the time prescribed as such limitation by this code.

Existing actions not affected. See post, § 362.
Limitation of actions. See post, §§ 312 et seq.
Similar provision. See Pol. Code, § 9.

Legislation § 9. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 279; (1) words "goes into effect" substituted for "takes effect"; and (2) the last clause substituted for "the time of limitation continues to run and has the like effect as if the whole period had begun and ended after its adoption." 3. Amendment by Code Amdts. 1901, p. 117; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Limitation of actions. Where the statute of limitations commenced to run before the codes went into effect, it continued to run, and was not extended by the enactment of the codes; the running of the statute, in such case, being governed by the law in force at the time of the passage of the codes. Benjamin v. Eldridge, 50 Cal. 612. New and amended sections of the code are governed by this section; but they are not taken to have been the law prior to the time they take effect. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261.

Retrospective operation of statutes. See note 11 Am. Dec. 98.

When retrospective operation of statutes is permissible. See note 10 Am. Dec. 131.

Retrospective operation of statute of limitations. See note 111 Am. St. Rep. 455.

Retroactive operation of statute of limitations. See notes Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1041; 4 Ann. Cas. 166.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Necessary, because the statutes of limitations for civil actions and proceedings are embodied in this code.

§ 10. Holidays. Holidays within the meaning of this code, are every Sunday, the first day of January, twelfth day of February, to be known as Lincoln day, twenty-second day of February, thirtieth day of May, fourth of July, ninth day of September, first Monday in September, twelfth day of October, to be known as "Columbus day," twenty-fifth day of December, every day on which an election is held throughout the state, and every day appointed by the President of the United States or by the governor of this state for a public fast, thanksgiving or holiday. If the first day of January, twelfth day of February, twenty-second day of February, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth day of July, the ninth day of September, the twelfth day of October or the twenty-fifth day of December falls upon a Sunday, the Monday following is a holiday. Every Saturday from twelve o'clock noon until twelve o'clock midnight is a holiday as regards the transaction of business in the public offices of this state, and also in political divisions thereof where laws, ordinances or charters provide that public offices shall be closed on holidays; provided, this shall not be construed to prevent or invalidate the issuance, filing, service, execution or recording of any legal process or written instrument whatever on such Saturday afternoons; and provided further, that the public schools of this state shall close on Saturday, Sunday, the first day of January, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth day of July, the twenty-fifth day of December and on every day appointed by the President of the United States or the governor of this state for a public fast, thanksgiving or holiday. Said public schools shall continue in session on all other legal holidays and shall hold proper exercises commemorating the day. Boards of school trustees and city boards of education shall have power to declare a holiday in the public schools under their jurisdiction when good reason exists therefor.

Non-judicial days. See post, § 134.

Last day falling on holiday. See post, § 13.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 7; Pol. Code, § 10.

Legislation § 10. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Holidays, within the meaning of this code, are: every Sunday, the first day of January, the twenty-second day of February, the fourth day of July, the twenty-fifth day of December, every day on which an election is held throughout the state, and every day appointed by the President of the United States, or by the governor of this state, for a public fast, thanksgiving or holiday."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 59, adding (1) "the thirtieth (30th) day of May"; and, at end, (2) "If the first day of January, the twenty-second day of February, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth day of July, or the twenty-fifth day of December, fall upon a Sunday, the Monday following is a holiday."

3. Amended by Stats. 1889, p. 46, adding "the ninth day of September" in both places.

4. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 186, adding "the first Monday in October."

5. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 15, changing "the first Monday in October" to "the first Monday in September."

6. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 561; the code commissioner saying, "Merely adds the Saturday half-holiday sentence, in order to make this section correspond to the amendment adopted to § 10 of the Political Code in 1905 and § 7 of the Civil Code in 1907."

7. Amended by Stats. Extra Sess. 1907, p. 7, (1) adding, at end of first sentence, "and such days as the governor may declare as special holidays"; (2) changing "this" to "that such" after "provided"; (3) adding a second proviso, reading, "Provided further that the governor of the state may declare special holidays and he may in one proclamation designate one or any number of consecutive days, as special holidays, and during any such special holidays no public duty shall be suspended or prohibited except such as affect the administration of justice in the courts of this state as prescribed by section 135 of this code for the control of such courts."

8. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 22, (1) adding (a) "the twelfth day of October, to be known as 'Discovery Day,'" and (b) "the twelfth day of October"; (2) canceling the amendments of extra session of 1907, noted supra.

9. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 1122, (1) in first sentence, (a) omitting comma after "Holidays," thus making the following phrase restrictive; (b) adding "twelfth day of February, to be known as 'Lincoln Day'"; (c) substituting "Columbus Day" for "Discovery Day"; (2) in second sentence, (a) adding "twelfth day of February"; (b) substituting the verb "falls" for "fall," thus changing the mood; (3) in the first two sentences of the old section, the definite article "the" was used before the day of the month, in each instance; (4) in third sentence, (a) substituting "shall" for "may," in the clause "public offices shall be closed"; (b) adding all the matter after the end of the first provision, from "and provided further," to the end of the section.

Where last day is a holiday. Where the last day appointed for the performance of an act falls upon a holiday, the act may be performed at any time during the next succeeding day (Muir v. Galloway, 61 Cal. 498; Blackwood v. Cutting Packing Co., 71 Cal. 461; 12 Pac. 493; Diggins v. Hartshorne, 108 Cal. 154; 41 Pac. 283; Northey v. Bankers' Life Ass'n, 110 Cal. 547; 42 Pac. 1079; Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074; California Improvement Co. v. Quinchard, 119 Cal. 87; 51 Pac. 24; Crane v. Crane, 121 Cal. 99; 53 Pac. 433; Frassi v. McDonald, 122 Cal. 400; 55 Pac. 139, 772); and this is the rule, also, where both of the last two days are holidays (Crane v. Crane, 121 Cal. 99; 53 Pac. 433); and where the last day is a holiday falling on a Sunday, and by § 11 of this code the Monday following is a holiday, in both of which cases the time is extended so as to include the third succeeding day. Estate of Rose, 63 Cal. 346.

Saturday afternoon. Courts should treat Saturday afternoon as a legal holiday. People v. Heacock, 10 Cal. App. 450; 102 Pac. 543.

Special holidays. The superior court has jurisdiction, on a day declared to be a special holiday, to proceed with the trial of a charge of felony. Risser v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 531; 93 Pac. 85.

Judicial act performed on holiday. A prisoner convicted of a felony cannot be sentenced upon a legal holiday. In re Smith, 152 Cal. 566; 93 Pac. 191.

Effect of invalid holiday. The duration of an invalid holiday cannot operate to extend the time to be computed for serving a statement on motion for a new trial. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365.

Judicial notice. Courts take judicial notice of special holidays declared by the governor. Poheim v. Meyers, 9 Cal. App. 31; 98 Pac. 65.

§ 11. Same. If the first day of January, the twenty-second day of February, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth day of July, the ninth day of September, the twelfth day of October or the twenty-fifth day of December fall upon a Sunday, the Monday following is a holiday.

Last day falling on holiday. See post, § 13.
Similar provision. See Pol. Code, § 11.

Legislation § 11. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 280, adding "the fourth day of July."
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 117; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
4. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 22, adding (1) "the thirtieth day of May" and (2) "the ninth day of September, the twelfth day of October."

Holiday falling on Sunday. Where any of the holidays mentioned in this section fall on a Sunday, the succeeding Monday is a holiday, and is not to be counted in the computation of time in which an act is to be done (Estate of Rose, 63 Cal. 346); and where, by contract executed on a Sunday, a party is given all of the following day within which to perform, no portion of the third day is included. Ropes v. Rosenfeld's Sons, 145 Cal. 671; 79 Pac. 354.

Transfer of holiday from Sunday to Monday. See note 19 L. R. A. 320.

§ 12. Computation of time. The time in which any act provided by law is to be done is computed by excluding the first day, and including the last, unless the last day is a holiday, and then it is also excluded.

Time, how computed. Year, week, and day, defined. Pol. Code, §§ 3255 et seq.
Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 10; Pol. Code, § 11.

Legislation § 12. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Time, when directory. The time prescribed to a public body, in the exercise of a function in which the public is concerned, is merely directory, unless there are negative words restraining the exercise of the power to that time. Tuohy v. Chase, 30 Cal. 524; People v. Board of Supervisors, 33 Cal. 487; Hagenmeyer v. Board of Equalization, 82 Cal. 214; 23 Pac. 14.

Day of the act excluded. It has been uniformly held, from an early day, to be the rule in this state, that, in the computation of time, the first day is excluded and the last day included; differing from the English practice, which was the inclusive method, under which the time began to run upon the day of the happening of the event (Scoville v. Anderson, 131 Cal.

590; 63 Pac. 1013; Dingley v. McDonald, 124 Cal. 90; 56 Pac. 790; Perham v. Kuper, 61 Cal. 331; Misch v. Mayhew, 51 Cal. 514; Hagenmeyer v. Board of Equalization, 82 Cal. 214; 23 Pac. 14; Landregan v. Peppin, 86 Cal. 122; 24 Pac. 859; Derby v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900; Bates v. Howard, 105 Cal. 173; 38 Pac. 715; Bellmer v. Blessington, 136 Cal. 3; 68 Pac. 111); but, under our rule, the last day cannot be excluded also. Landregan v. Peppin, 86 Cal. 122; 24 Pac. 859. Apparently, however, the inclusive rule seems to have obtained at one time in this state. People v. Clark, 1 Cal. 406; Price v. Whitman, 8 Cal. 412. The exclusive rule applies, except where the intent to include is apparent. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347; Derby v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900; Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56.

Last day falling on a holiday. The last day is to be excluded when it falls upon a holiday (Muir v. Galloway, 61 Cal. 498; Estate of Rose, 63 Cal. 346; Northey v. Bankers' Life Ass'n, 110 Cal. 547; 42 Pac. 1079; Robinson v. Templar Lodge, 114 Cal. 41; 45 Pac. 998; Crane v. Crane, 121 Cal. 99; 53 Pac. 433; Frassi v. McDonald, 122 Cal. 400; 55 Pac. 139, 772; Baxter v. Vineland Irrigation District, 136 Cal. 185; 68 Pac. 601; Blackwood v. Cutting Packing Co., 71 Cal. 461; 12 Pac. 493; Jenness v. Bowen, 77 Cal. 310; 19 Pac. 522); but this rule does not apply to matters pending in the supreme court, that court being always open for the transaction of business (Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417), nor does it apply to other courts, where the business is not judicial. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074.

Definition of terms. A day is defined by § 3259 of the Political Code as the period of time between any midnight and the midnight following; and fractions of a day are not regarded in law, unless the order of successive events is to be ascertained, or justice requires it (Derby v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900; People v. Clark, 1 Cal. 406; Craig v. Godfroy, 1 Cal. 415; 54 Am. Dec. 299); and where the order of occurrence involves the legality or propriety of private rights, fractions may be regarded. People v. Beatty, 14 Cal. 566; Scoville v. Anderson, 131 Cal. 590; 63 Pac. 1013. A week is defined by the codes to be a period of seven consecutive days. Derby v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900. A month is a calendar month, and not a lunar month, unless otherwise designated. Videau v. Griffin, 21 Cal. 389; Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347; Sprague v. Norway, 31 Cal. 173. A year is three hundred and sixty-five days; a half-year, one hundred and eighty-two days; a quarter-year, ninety-one days; the added day of a leap-year, and the day immediately preceding it, if they occur in any such period, must be reckoned together as one day. Pol. Code, § 3257; Brown v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 236; 19 Pac. 487.

Holidays as first or last day of time computed. See note 49 L. R. A. 203.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Price v. Whitman, 8 Cal. 412; Iron Mountain Co. v. Haight, 39 Cal. 540; Soldier's Voting Bill, 45 N. H. 612. A day is not to be considered a unit to the prejudice of the rights of a party, and an examination may be had as to the very point of time when the act was done. Craig v. Godfroy, 1 Cal. 415, 54 Am. Dec. 299; People v. Clark, 1 Cal. 406. Whenever time becomes important, courts will inquire into a day, or even a fractional portion of a day. People v. Beatty, 14 Cal. 566.

§ 13. Certain acts not to be done on holidays. Whenever any act of a secular nature, other than a work of necessity or mercy, is appointed by law or contract to be performed upon a particular day, which day falls upon a holiday, such act may be performed upon the next business day with the same effect as if it had been performed upon the day appointed.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 11; Pol. Code, § 13.

Legislation § 13. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Where day appointed by law is a holiday. The supreme court, under the constitution, being always open for the transaction of business, is not affected by this section (Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417; Herrlich v. McDonald, 83 Cal. 505; 23 Pac. 10; Niles v. Edwards, 95 Cal. 41; 30 Pac. 134); neither is the performance of ministerial acts affected thereby. Young v. Patterson, 9 Cal. App. 469; 99 Pac. 552; Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216; 94 Am. St. Rep. 39; 71 Pac. 180; Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074. Thus, a criminal information may be filed (People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532; 93 Pac. 99), and a sale may be made by a tax-collector (Young v. Patterson, 9 Cal. App. 469; 99 Pac. 552), on a legal holiday.

Contract to be performed on holiday. Where the day of performance of a contract falls upon a holiday, it may be performed on the succeeding day. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. O'Grady, 47 Cal. 579; Northey v. Bankers' Life Ass'n, 110 Cal. 547; 42 Pac. 1079. And this is the rule in cases of stipulations of attorneys (Blackwood v. Cutting Packing Co., 71 Cal. 461; 12 Pac. 493); and if the time expires on a holiday, and the next day is a Sunday, the act may be performed on the succeeding Monday (Crane v. Crane, 121 Cal. 99; 53 Pac. 433); and if the last day for the performance of an act falls on a Sunday, it may be done on the following Monday. Wilcox v. Engebretsen, 160 Cal. 288; 116 Pac. 750. This section amounts to no more than a legal permission for the postponement of the act, and does not prohibit it from being done upon the day designated. People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532; 93 Pac. 99.

Computation of time for performance of act required by statute, when last day falls on Sunday. See notes 20 Ann. Cas. 1318; 7 Ann. Cas. 325; 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1162.

Validity of contract completed on secular day, where preliminary negotiations are conducted on Sunday. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 632.

Computation of days of grace allowed for payment of insurance premium or assessment, where date of payment or expiration of such period falls on Sunday or holiday. See note 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 759.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Sunday is not regarded. McGill v. Bank of United States, 12 Wheat. 511; 6 L. Ed. 711.

§ 14. "Seal" defined. When the seal of a court, public officer, or person is required by law to be affixed to any paper, the word "seal" includes an impression of such seal upon the paper alone as well as upon wax or a wafer affixed thereto.

Seals. See post, §§ 147–153, 1929–1934.
Abolition of seals. See Civ. Code, § 1629.
Similar provision. See Pol. Code, § 14.

Legislation § 14. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Seal, defined. A seal, at common law, meant an impression upon wax or wafer, or some other tenacious substance capable of being impressed; but in this state a seal is sufficient, where the impression is made upon paper only, and not upon wax (Connolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 220; Hastings v. Vaughn, 5 Cal. 315); and it may be made as well by a pen as by a stamp. Hastings v. Vaughn, 5 Cal. 315. The court will assume from the word "(Seal)," after the certificate of a notary, printed in a transcript, that the original was properly executed. Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; 81 Am. Dec. 108. In copying a sealed instrument, it is not necessary to transcribe the seal. Jones v. Martin, 16 Cal. 165; Smith v. Dall, 13 Cal. 510. The omission of the county recorder to make any mark for the seal does not vitiate the writing. Smith v. Dall, 13 Cal. 510.

Seal of court. The seal affixed to a document, bearing the inscription of the court to which it belongs, sufficiently designates the court, and the omission to designate the officer's official connection with the court is immaterial. Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; 81 Am. Dec. 108.

Seal of corporation. A corporation may adopt the private seal of the several trustees, or of any one of them (Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11; 91 Am. Dec. 607); but the seal of an individual, when not so adopted by the corporation, is not sufficient. Richardson v. Scott River Water etc. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

"Seal," defined. See note 50 Am. St. Rep. 156.
What is "seal." See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 42.
"Seal," as sufficient seal. See note 11 Ann. Cas. 1110.
"L. S.," as sufficient seal. See note 11 Ann. Cas. 250.
Sufficiency of scroll as seal. See note 1 L. R. A. 861.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. An impression upon paper constitutes a good seal. Connolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 220. There is "no good reason why such impression should not be made with a pen as well as with what is technically a stamp. The object is to give character to the instrument. . . . This is as well effected by a scrawl with the word 'seal' within it, or with the initials 'L. S.'" Hastings v. Vaughn, 5 Cal. 315.

§ 15. Joint authority. Words giving a joint authority to three or more public officers or other persons are construed as giving such authority to a majority of them, unless it is otherwise expressed in the act giving the authority.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 12; Pol. Code, § 15.

Legislation § 15. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Authority of majority. Before the adoption of this section, a grant of joint authority required the presence and participation of the whole number to whom the authority was granted, a majority of whom, however, could decide the question (Talcott v. Blanding, 54 Cal. 289; People v. Coghill, 47 Cal. 361; Wilbur v. Lynde, 49 Cal. 290; 19 Am. Rep. 645; People v. Ahern, 52 Cal. 208); but this section authorizes a majority of a quorum to act, and to decide any question (People v. Harrington, 63 Cal. 257; People v. Hecht, 105 Cal. 621; 45 Am. St. Rep. 96; 27 L. R. A. 203; 38 Pac. 941); so a majority of the grand jury may present an accusation, if not an indictment. Coffey v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 457; 83 Pac. 580.

§ 16. Words and phrases. Words and phrases are construed according to the context and the approved usage of the language; but technical words and phrases, and such others as have acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in law, or are defined in the succeeding section, are to be construed according to such peculiar and appropriate meaning or definition.

Similar provisions. See Civ. Code, § 13; Pol. Code, § 16.

Legislation § 16. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of words and phrases. The rule here announced prevailed before the adoption of the codes, and applies alike to contracts, wills, statutes, and the constitution. Quigley v. Gorham, 5 Cal. 418; 63 Am. Dec. 139; Gross v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 392; Appeal of Houghton, 42 Cal. 35; People v. Eddy, 43 Cal. 331; 13 Am. Rep. 143; Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; San Francisco v. Flood, 64 Cal. 504; 2 Pac. 264; Cottle v. Spitzer, 65 Cal. 456; 52 Am. Rep. 305; 4 Pac. 435.

Words of common use. Words of common use are to be taken in their plain and ordinary import; forced constructions, which extend or limit the terms, are not permissible. Sprague v. Norway, 31 Cal. 173; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387; Miller v. Dunn, 72 Cal. 462; 1 Am. St. Rep. 67; 14 Pac. 27.

Technical words. Technical words will be presumed to be used in a technical sense (Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239, 28 Pac. 341), unless a different intent is manifest from the context. Estate of Lufkin, 131 Cal. 291; 63 Pac. 469. If a technical word is manifestly used in an untechnical sense, however, the court will give it the meaning intended by the party using it (Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Beal, 47 Cal. 151); and if it has both a popular and a technical signification, it will be given its popular meaning, unless the subject or context indicates that it was used in its technical sense. Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; Towle v. Matheus, 130 Cal. 574; 62 Pac. 1064. The word "assessment," in § 4 of article VI of the constitution, conferring appellate jurisdiction in cases at law involving "the legality of tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine," refers to assessments relating to public taxation, or to raise funds for local public improvements: it has no reference to assessments of corporate stock. Bottle Mining etc. Co. v. Kern, 154 Cal. 96; 97 Pac. 25. The word "near," as used in the street-assessment law, does not signify any precise measure of distance; it is a relative term, and its meaning must be determined by a reference to the subject-matter. Haughawout v. Percival, 161 Cal. 491; Ann. Cas. 1913D, 115; 119 Pac. 649. The words "husband" and "wife," as applied to domestic relations, have each but one meaning: "husband," a man that has a wife; "wife," a woman that has a husband; the words cannot mean an unmarried man and an unmarried woman, nor a divorced man and a divorced woman. Zanone v. Sprague, 16 Cal. App. 333; 116 Pac. 898.

§ 17. Certain terms used in this code defined. Words used in this code in the present tense include the future as well as the present; words used in the masculine gender include the feminine and neuter; the singular number includes the plural, and the plural the singular; the word "person" includes a corporation as well as a natural person; the word "county" includes "city and county"; writing includes printing and typewriting; oath includes affirmation or declaration; and every mode of oral statement, under oath or affirmation, is embraced by the term "testify," and every written one in the term "depose"; signature or subscription includes mark, when the person cannot write, his name being written near it by a person who writes his own name as a witness; provided, that when a signature is by mark it must, in order that the same may be acknowledged or may serve as the signature to any sworn statement, be witnessed by two persons who must subscribe their own names as witness thereto.

The following words have in this code the signification attached to them in this section, unless otherwise apparent from the context:

1. The word "property" includes both real and personal property;

2. The words "real property" are coextensive with lands, tenements, and hereditaments;

3. The words "personal property" include money, goods, chattels, things in action, and evidences of debt;

4. The word "month" means a calendar month, unless otherwise expressed;

5. The word "will" includes codicil;

6. The word "writ" signifies an order or precept in writing, issued in the name of the people, or of a court or judicial officer; and the word "process" a writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings;

7. The word "state," when applied to the different parts of the United States, includes the District of Columbia and the territories; and the words "United States" may include the district and territories;

8. The word "section" whenever hereinafter employed, refers to a section of this code, unless some other code or statute is expressly mentioned.

9. The word "affinity" when applied to the marriage relation, signifies the connection existing in consequence of marriage, between each of the married persons and the blood relatives of the other.

Notice, defined. See Pol. Code, § 4175.
Process, defined. See Pol. Code, § 4175.
Words used in boundaries, defined. See Pol. Code, §§ 3903–3907.
Words and phrases, defined. See Pen. Code, § 7; Pol. Code, § 17; Civ. Code, § 14.

Legislation § 17. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, based on Practice Act, § 647, which read: "Words used in this act in the present tense shall be deemed to include the future as well as the present; words used in the singular number shall be deemed to include the plural, and the plural the singular; writing shall be deemed to include printing or printed paper; oath to include affirmation or declaration; signature or subscription, to include mark when the person cannot write, his name being written near it, and witnessed by a person who writes his own name as a witness." As enacted in 1872, § 17 read: "Whenever the terms mentioned in this section are employed in this code they are employed in the senses hereafter affixed to them, except where a different sense plainly appears: 1. The term 'signature' includes any name, mark, or sign, written with intent to authenticate any instrument or writing. 2. The term 'writing' includes both printing and writing. 3. The term 'land,' and the phrases 'real estate' and 'real property,' includes lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and all rights thereto, and interests therein. 4. The words 'personal property' include money, goods, chattels, evidence of debt, and 'things in action.' 5. The word 'property' includes personal and real property. 6. The word 'month' means a calendar month, unless otherwise expressed; and the word 'year,' and also the abbreviation 'A. D.,' is equivalent to the expression 'year of our Lord.' 7. The word 'oath' includes 'affirmation' in all cases where an affirmation may be substituted for an oath; and in like cases the word 'swear' includes the word 'affirm.' Every mode of oral statement under oath or affirmation is embraced by the term 'testify,' and every written one in the term 'depose.' 8. The word 'state,' when applied to the different parts of the United States, includes the District of Columbia and the territories; and the words 'United States' may include the district and territories. 9. Where the term 'person' is used in this code to designate the party whose property may be the subject of any offense, action, or proceeding, it includes this state, any other state, government, or country which may lawfully own any property within this state, and all public and private corporations or joint associations, as well as individuals. 10. The word 'person' includes bodies politic and corporate. 11. The singular number includes the plural, and the plural the singular. 12. Words used in the masculine gender comprehend as well the feminine and neuter. 13. Words used in the present tense include the future, but exclude the past. 14. The word 'will' includes codicils. 15. The word 'writ' signifies an order or precept in writing, issued in the name of the people, or of a court, or judicial officer. 16. 'Process' is a writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings. 17. The word 'vessel,' when used with reference to shipping, includes ships of all kinds, steamboats, and steamships, canal-boats, and every structure adapted to be navigated from place to place. 18. The term 'peace-officer' signifies any one of the officers mentioned in § 817 of the Penal Code. 19. The term 'magistrate' signifies any one of the officers mentioned in § 808 of the Penal Code."

2. Amended by Stats. 1873–74, p. 280, to read as at present, except for the changes of 1903.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1891, p. 117; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 134, (1) adding the clause, "the word 'county' includes 'city and county,'" after the words "a natural person"; (2) changing, after words "written near it," from "and witnessed by a person who writes his own name as a witness" to read to end of paragraph as at present; and (3) adding subds. 8, 9.

Gender. The masculine includes the feminine and the neuter gender. Foltz v. Hoge, 54 Cal. 28; People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50; People v. Monteith, 73 Cal. 7; 14 Pac. 373. Thus, the term "horse" includes all animals of the horse kind, male and female (People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50), as well as a gelding. People v. Monteith, 73 Cal. 7; 14 Pac. 373.

Number. The singular number includes the plural, and vice versa. Simonson v. Burr, 121 Cal. 582; 54 Pac. 87; Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034; Downing v. Rademacher, 136 Cal. 673; 69 Pac. 415; People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119; 79 Pac. 846. In applying this section to the construction of §§ 938, 941, and 963, post, such sections must be read as if the words "appeal," "appellant," and "party aggrieved" were plural. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 1027.

Person. The word "person" includes an artificial as well as a natural person. Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69; Douglass v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 4 Cal. 304; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 60 Cal. 35; People v. Riverside, 66 Cal. 288; 5 Pac. 350.

Writing A printed signature instead of a written one is sufficient, when appended to a published resolution of a board of supervisors (Williams v. McDonald, 58 Cal. 527); and an attorney's printed signature to a pleading will not render void a judgment. Hancock v. Bowman, 49 Cal. 413. Though not expressly authorized by statute, the printed signature of the clerk is sufficient, where the seal of the court is attached to the document (Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777); and the facsimile of an autograph may be adopted by a person, and papers issued with such an autograph printed thereon, issued by his direction, are valid. Pennington v. Baehr, 48 Cal. 565.

Property. The word "property," when used in its ordinary, popular sense, includes not only visible and tangible property, but choses in action also, such as solvent debts secured by mortgage (People v. Eddy, 43 Cal. 331; 13 Am. Rep. 143); and the right to appeal an action is property (People v. Cadman, 57 Cal. 562); but the word "property" does not include "credits," within § 13 of article XI of the constitution of 1849, concerning revenue (People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 51 Cal. 243; 21 Am. Rep. 704; Bank of Mendocino v. Chalfant, 51 Cal. 369; Mackay v. San Francisco, 113 Cal. 392; 45 Pac. 696); nor does it include a business, occupation, or calling (People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; 60 Am. Dec. 581); nor a license to retail intoxicating liquors. Hevren v. Reed, 126 Cal. 219; 58 Pac. 536; Ex parte Christensen, 85 Cal. 208; 24 Pac. 747.

Real property. "Real property" is coextensive with lands, tenements, and hereditaments. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243.

Personal property. A promissory note, under the third subdivision of this section, is personal property (Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153), as is also money (Butler v. Baber, 54 Cal. 178); and an undivided interest in real property converted into a right to receive money in lieu thereof. John M. C. Marble Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 15 Cal. App. 347; 115 Pac. 59.

Undertaking on appeal. This section does not apply to an undertaking on appeal; its signification is to be determined from the language used. Bergevin v. Wood, 11 Cal. App. 643; 105 Pac. 935.

"At." The word "at," when applied to the place or location of an object is not treated as definitely locative; it denotes nearness or proximity, and is less definite than "in" or "on." Los Angeles County v. Hannon, 159 Cal. 37; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1065; 112 Pac. 878.

"Person," as including private corporation. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 737.

Who or what is included in the term "person." See note 19 L. R. A. 222.

What is sufficient signature. See note 55 Am. Rep. 651.

As to whether ability to write invalidates signature made by mark or aid of other person guiding pen. See note 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1193.

"Property," as including standing timber, within meaning of fire-insurance policy. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 569.

"Property," within false-pretenses statute, as including bills and notes. See note 9 Ann. Cas. 970.

"Personal property," in will, as including money. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 857.

What is "month," in computation of time. See note 78 Am. St. Rep. 384.

"Affinity," defined. See note 11 L. R. A. 630.

§ 18. Statutes, etc., inconsistent with code repealed. No statute, law, or rule is continued in force because it is consistent with the provisions of this code on the same subject; but in all cases provided for by this code, all statutes, laws, and rules heretofore in force in this state, whether consistent or not with the provisions of this code, unless expressly continued in force by it, are repealed and abrogated. This repeal or abrogation does not revive any former law heretofore repealed, nor does it affect any right already existing or accrued, or any action or proceeding already taken, except as in this code provided; nor does it affect any private statute not expressly repealed.

Effect of code on prior statutes. See ante, § 8; also repealing clause at the end of this code.

Limitations, effect of code on. See ante, § 9.

Retroactive effect. See ante, § 3.

Statutes continued in force. See Pol. Code, §§ 18, 19.

Vested rights. See ante, § 8.

Legislation § 18. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Cases not provided for by the code. In cases not provided for by the code, the existing statutes governing the same are not repealed (Whitaker v. Haynes, 49 Cal. 596; Heppe v. Johnson, 73 Cal. 265; 14 Pac. 833; Wheatland Mill Co. v. Pirrie, 89 Cal. 459; 26 Pac. 964; Fanning v. Leviston, 93 Cal. 186; 28 Pac. 943; Golden Gate Lumber Co. v. Sahrbacher, 105 Cal. 114; 38 Pac. 635); nor are subsequent statutes passed at the same session. Smith v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 421; 29 Pac. 34.

Consistent statutes. Before the enactment of the codes, the rule was, that, where a later statute showed a clear intent to prescribe the only rule which should govern in the cases provided for, the former statute was repealed thereby, whether consistent or inconsistent (Sacramento v. Bird, 15 Cal. 294; Ex parte Smith, 40 Cal. 419); but where such intent did not appear, both statutes were allowed to stand together, unless the repugnancy between them was irreconcilable. Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372.

Inconsistent provisions. A repeal is either by express words or by necessary implication: a repeal by implication takes place whenever it is apparent from the subsequent legislation that the legislature did not intend that the former act should remain in force (Christy v. Board of Supervisors, 39 Cal. 3); but repeals by implication are not favored by the courts (Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; Scofield v. White, 7 Cal. 400; People v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 28 Cal. 254; In re Yick Wo, 68 Cal. 294; 58 Am. Rep. 12; 9 Pac. 139); and it is only where there is a plain and unavoidable repugnance that a repeal by implication will take place (Estate of Wixom, 35 Cal. 320; Ex parte Smith, 40 Cal. 419; People v. Linn, 23 Cal. 150; People v. Sargent, 44 Cal. 430); and where the former statute regulates the matter only incidentally, the later statute, which is made to govern the whole subject-matter, repeals so much of the former statute as is in conflict (Dobbins v. Board of Supervisors, 5 Cal. 414; People v. McGuire, 32 Cal. 140), and then only so far as the repugnancy extends (Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 438); but, where possible, such a construction will be given the two statutes as will enable both to have effect. Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 438; Pond v. Maddox, 38 Cal. 572; Cerf v. Reichert, 73 Cal. 360; 15 Pac. 10.

Express continuance in force. Where an act contains a clause repealing all laws in conflict therewith, a previous repugnant law is repealed thereby, unless the terms of the act show an intention to keep such previous law in force (People v. Grippen, 20 Cal. 677); but where such an act does not repeal a prior act, by name, on the same subject-matter, it leaves in force such provisions thereof as are not in conflict with the later act (People v. Durick, 20 Cal. 94); and where the subsequent statute designates certain sections or portions of the former act as repealed by implication, the portions not mentioned are continued in force (Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 438), and in such cases the two acts will be construed together as one act (Manlove v. White, 8 Cal. 376); but a mere declaration in a subsequent statute, that a repealing statute shall not repeal certain laws or provisions of a prior act, will not exempt them from the repealing effect of such prior act, nor will it revive the laws so repealed. State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501.

Revival of former laws. Where a general act is repealed as to a part thereof, and is afterwards amended as thus partially repealed, the amendment will not revive the act as to the portion repealed. People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 522. The repeal of a repealing act does not revive the former act, nor give it any force or effect; to revive the former, it must be re-enacted (People v. Hunt, 41 Cal. 435; Meek v. McClure, 49 Cal. 623; Thomason v. Ruggles, 69 Cal. 465; 11 Pac. 20); but where a subsequent special statute controls the provisions of a general statute, the latter is revived by an amendment of the former, calculated to give effect to the general law. People v. Phœnix, 6 Cal. 92; People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 329.

Effect of pending proceeding. The portions of the amended sections of the code, which are merely copied in the new enactment without change, are not to be considered as repealed thereby and again re-enacted, but to have been the law continuously, and the new parts or changed portions are not to be taken as having been the law at any time prior to the passage of the amended act. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736.

Implied repeal of statute by code, revision or re-enactment. See notes 88 Am. St. Rep. 287; 5 Ann. Cas. 502.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. "Every statute must be considered according to what appears to have been the intention of the legislature, and even though two statutes relating to the same subject be not in terms repugnant or inconsistent, if the latter statute was clearly intended to prescribe the only rule which should govern in the case provided for, it will be construed as repealing the original act." City and County of Sacramento v. Bird, 15 Cal. 295; Sedgwick on Stat. and Const. Law, p. 124; also note to § 8, ante. "Whether consistent or not with the provisions of this code." See Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 382, where it is held that, "as all laws are presumed to be passed with deliberation, and with full knowledge of all existing ones on the same subject, it is but reasonable to conclude that the legislature, in passing a statute, did not intend to interfere with or abrogate any former law relating to the same matter, unless the repugnancy between the two is irreconcilable." See also Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill, 221, from which this language is quoted. In view of this decision, the language of the text was necessary repealing all former laws on the same subject, whether consistent or not.

§ 19. This act, how cited, enumerated, etc. This act, whenever cited, enumerated, referred to, or amended, may be designated simply as "The Code of Civil Procedure," adding, when necessary, the number of the section.

Legislation § 19. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 20. Judicial remedies defined. Judicial remedies are such as are administered by the courts of justice, or by judicial officers empowered for that purpose by the constitution and statutes of this state.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Introduced as a concise and convenient definition of judicial remedies.

Definition of "remedy." "The action or means given by law for the recovery of a right." Tomlin's Law Dict. "The means employed to enforce a right or redress an injury." Bouv. Law Dict. The definition in the text is introduced as a concise and convenient definition of judicial remedies. Every original application to a court of justice for a judgment or order is a remedy. Belknap v. Waters, 11 N. Y. 478; Matter of Cooper, 22 N. Y. 87; 11 Abb. Pr. 329; 20 How. Pr. 8.

§ 21. Division of judicial remedies. These remedies are divided into two classes:

1. Actions; and,
2. Special proceedings.

Legislation § 21. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In the Matter of Dodd, 27 N. Y. 633, a special proceeding is said to be limited to a litigation in a court of justice. So, also, the same views are held in People v. Heath, 20 How. Pr. 307; People v. Board of Police, 39 N. Y. 506; affirming S. C., 40 Barb. 626; but see contra, People v. Boardman, 4 Keyes, 59; see People v. Commissioners of Highways, 27 How. Pr. 158, and cases there commented on; Wait's N. Y. Code, § 1.

§ 22. Action defined. An action is an ordinary proceeding in a court of justice by which one party prosecutes another for the enforcement or protection of a right, the redress or prevention of a wrong, or the punishment of a public offense.

Legislation § 22. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Distinction between terms. An action, as distinguished from the suit in which it is enforced, is simply the right or power to enforce an "obligation," or "what is owed to the plaintiff"; the "action" springs from the "obligation" which it seeks to enforce, and the "cause of action" is simply the "obligation," regardless of whether the action is ex contractu or ex delicto, or for compensation, or for damages, or for restitution, or in rem or in personam; the "cause of action" is to be distinguished from the "remedy," which is simply the means by which the "obligation," or the corresponding action, is effectuated, and is also to be distinguished from the "relief" sought. Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705.

Special proceedings. According to the course of the common law, probate matters belonged to ecclesiastical jurisdiction; thus, a proceeding in probate is not an action at law, as defined by this section (Estate of Moore, 72 Cal. 335; 13 Pac. 880; McLeran v. Benton, 73 Cal. 329; 2 Am. St. Rep. 814; 14 Pac. 879); nor are proceedings in insolvency (In re Dennery, 89 Cal. 101; 26 Pac. 639); nor proceedings in eminent domain. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. An action is a lawful demand of a man's right—Co. Litt., p. 285a, § 492; Comyn's Digest, "Action"; Bank of Commerce v. Rutland etc. R. R. Co., 10 How. Pr. 9; see Mayhew v. Robinson, 10 How. Pr. 164. Any judicial proceeding which, if conducted to a termination, will result in a judgment, is an action. People v. County Judge of Rensselaer, 13 How. Pr. 400; see remarks of Justice Potter, in People v. Colborne, 20 How. Pr. 380. Not every judicial decision which terminates in a judgment constitutes an action. Coe v. Coe, 37 Barb. 233; 14 Abb. Pr. 88; see 2 Wait's Law and Practice, p. 40.

What are actions. Under a similar provision in the New York code, it was held that a proceeding supplementary to execution was not a special proceeding under the code, but a proceeding in the action. Dresser v. Van Pelt, 15 How. Pr. 19; Seeley v. Black, 35 How. Pr. 369; Lawrence v. Farmer's L. & T. Co., 6 Duer, 689; Bank of Genesee v. Spencer, 15 How. Pr. 412. An order or decree having been made in an action, if a party to the action institutes proceedings to enforce it, it is a proceeding in the action, and not a special proceeding. Pitt v. Davison, 37 N. Y. 235; 24 How. Pr. 374; 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 405. Held otherwise, however, if proceeding be for punishment, as for contempt, of party disobeying order. See Holstein v. Rice, 24 How. Pr. 135; 15 Abb. Pr. 307; Forbes v. Willard, 54 Barb. 520. Proceedings for partition of lands by summons and complaint are actions. Myers v. Rasback, 2 Code R., p. 13; 4 How. Pr. 83; Backus v. Stilwell, 1 Code R., p. 70; 3 How. Pr. 318; contra, see Traver v. Traver, 3 How. Pr. 351; affirmed 3 How. Pr. 368; 1 Code R., p. 112; explained in Row v. Row, 4 How. Pr. 133. The following have been held actions: A proceeding to enforce mechanic's lien. People v. County Judge of Rensselaer, 13 How. Pr. 398. To compel a determination of claims relating to real property. Mann v. Provost, 3 Abb. Pr. 446. To obtain the remedy given by a writ of mandate where return is made and issues joined. People v. Lewis, 28 How. Pr. 159; 28 How. Pr. 470; People v. Colborne, 20 How. Pr. 382. A proceeding by the attorney-general to annul a patent granting lands. People v. Clarke, 11 Barb. 337; 9 N. Y. 349.

What are not actions. A submission of a controversy under § 1138, post, of this code, would not be an action. See decision on a similar section of New York code, Lang v. Ropke, 1 Duer, 701. Neither would an application to vacate a judgment rendered upon confession. Belknap v. Waters, 11 N. Y. 477. Nor proceedings on the reference of claims against executors or administrators. Coe v. Coe, 37 Barb. 232; 14 Abb. Pr. 86; Akely v. Akely, 17 How. Pr. 21. Nor a proceeding to punish a party for contempt in disobeying order in proceedings supplementary to execution. Holstein v. Rice, 24 How. Pr. 135; Gray v. Cook, 15 Abb. Pr. 308; Forbes v. Willard, 54 Barb. 520. Nor an application for admission as attorney and an order denying it. Matter of Cooper, 22 N. Y. 67; Matter of the Graduates, 20 How. Pr. 1; 11 Abb. Pr. 301. Nor a summary proceeding to remove tenant from possession of demised premises. People v. Hamilton, 15 Abb. Pr. 328; 39 N. Y. 107; People v. Boardman, 4 Keyes, 59. Nor an application for injunction, which before answer is not an ordinary proceeding in the action. Becker v. Hager, 8 How. Pr. 68; see Wait's N. Y. Code, § 2.

§ 23. Special proceeding defined. Every other remedy is a special proceeding.

Special proceedings of a civil nature. See post, Part III, §§ 1063 et seq.

Legislation § 23. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Special proceedings. Any proceeding in a court, which, under the common-law and equity practice, was not either an action at law or a suit in equity, is a special proceeding, under this section. In re Central Irrigation District, 117 Cal. 382; 49 Pac. 354; Yuba County v. North America etc. Mining Co., 12 Cal. App. 223; 107 Pac. 139. Thus, a contest to revoke the probate of a will is a special proceeding (Estate of Joseph, 118 Cal. 660; 50 Pac. 768); and so is a proceeding to determine heirship, under § 1664, post (Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 374; 26 Pac. 206; Estate of Burton, 93 Cal. 459; 29 Pac. 36; Estate of Blythe, 110 Cal. 226; 42 Pac. 641; Estate of Sutro, 143 Cal. 487; 77 Pac. 402), and an insolvency proceeding (In re Dennery, 89 Cal. 101; 26 Pac. 639); and also an action to determine, upon reference by the surveyor-general, the right to purchase school-lands from the state (Risdon v. Prewett, 8 Cal. App. 435; 97 Pac. 73), and an application for a writ of mandate (Jones v. Board of Police Commissioners, 141 Cal. 96; 74 Pac. 696); but the entry of judgment on an appeal bond, against the sureties thereon, is not a special proceeding. Hawley v. Gray Brothers etc. Co., 127 Cal. 560; 60 Pac. 437. In a special proceeding the court is limited by the terms and conditions of the statute under which such proceedings are authorized. Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 374; 26 Pac. 206.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. What is a special proceeding? Punishment of contempts. See Holstein v. Rice, 24 How. Pr. 135; 15 Abb. Pr. 307; Forbes v. Willard, 54 Barb. 520; 37 How. Pr. 193. Mandamus a special proceeding. See People v. Schoonmaker, 19 Barb. 658; but see People v. Lewis, 28 How. Pr. 159; Ct. of App., S. C., 28 How Pr. 470. Proceedings supplementary to execution have been held not to be special proceedings. Dresser v. Van Pelt, 6 Duer, 688; 15 How. Pr. 19. In the Matter of Dodd, 27 N. Y. 629, it was held that "to be a special proceeding in the sense of the New York code, there must be a litigation in a court of justice"; but a different opinion is entertained in People v. Commissioners of Highways, 27 How. Pr. 158; People v. Boardman, 4 Keyes, 59. Part III of this code treats of all such special proceedings as writs of mandate and prohibition. §§ 1067–1110. Contesting elections. §§ 1111–1127. Summary proceedings. §§ 1132–1178. Enforcement of liens. §§ 1180–1206. Contempts. §§ 1209–1222. Voluntary dissolution of corporations. §§ 1227–1233. Eminent domain (condemnation of private property). §§ 1237–1263. Escheated estates. §§ 1269–1272. Change of names. §§ 1275–1278. Arbitrations. §§ 1281–1290. Proceedings in probate courts. §§ 1298–1346. Of sole traders. §§ 1811–1821. Proceedings in insolvency. § 1822. "Special cases" have been defined to be "special proceedings," characteristically differing from ordinary suits at common law, but embracing such matters as writs of quo warranto, mandamus, inquisitions of lunacy, and the like. People v. Day, 15 Cal. 91; Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145; People v. Schoonmaker, 19 Barb. 657; Kundolf v. Thalheimer, 12 N. Y. 593; see, however, Parsons v. Tuolumne Water Co., 5 Cal. 43; 63 Am. Dec. 76; and Brock v. Bruce, 5 Cal. 279. Proceedings for partition are special proceedings. Waterman v. Lawrence, 19 Cal. 218, 79 Am. Dec. 212.

§ 24. Division of actions. Actions are of two kinds:

1. Civil; and,
2. Criminal.

Civil action, form of. See post, § 307.
Criminal action. See post, § 31.

Legislation § 24. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Civil actions. A civil action is one arising out of an obligation or an injury, whether it be at law or in equity. Ex parte Harker, 49 Cal. 465. Thus, a proceeding for the arrest of a defendant in a civil action is civil, and not criminal. Ex parte Harker, 49 Cal. 465.

Criminal actions. A criminal action is defined by § 683 of the Penal Code.

§ 25. Civil actions arise out of obligations or injuries. A civil action arises out of—

1. An obligation;
2. An injury.

Legislation § 25. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 26. Obligation defined. An obligation is a legal duty, by which one person is bound to do or not to do a certain thing, and arises from:

1. Contract; or,
2. Operation of law.

Obligation, what is. See Civ. Code, §§ 1427, 1428.

Legislation § 26. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "An obligation is a legal duty, by which one person is bound to the performance of an act towards another, and arises from: 1. The contract of the parties; or, 2. The operation of law."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 281, to read as at present.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 27. Division of injuries. An injury is of two kinds:

1. To the person; and,
2. To property.

Legislation § 27. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 28. Injuries to property. An injury to property consists in depriving its owner of the benefit of it, which is done by taking, withholding, deteriorating, or destroying it.

Legislation § 28. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 29. Injuries to the person. Every other injury is an injury to the person.

Legislation § 29. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 30. Civil action, by whom prosecuted. A civil action is prosecuted by one party against another for the enforcement or protection of a right, or the redress or prevention of a wrong.

Forms of action. See post, § 307.

Legislation § 30. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Assignment of lien. Where the existence of a lien does not depend upon possession, it may be assigned, and the assignment of the claim carries with it the right to the lien as an incident. Duncan v. Hawn, 104 Cal. 14; 37 Pac. 626.

§ 31. Criminal actions. The Penal Code defines and provides for the prosecution of a criminal action.

Criminal action, defined. See Pen. Code, § 683.

Legislation § 31. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 32. Civil and criminal remedies not merged. When the violation of a right admits of both a civil and criminal remedy, the right to prosecute the one is not merged in the other.

Legislation § 32. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Civil remedies are not merged in felonies, nor are they suspended until the conviction of the offender. Gordon v. Hostetter, 37 N. Y. 99; 4 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 263; 4 Trans. App. 375; Wait's Ann. N. Y. Code, § 7.

CHAPTER I.

COURTS OF JUSTICE IN GENERAL.

§ 33. Courts of justice in general.
§ 34. Courts of record.

§ 33. Courts of justice in general. The following are the courts of justice of this state:

1. The court of impeachments;
2. The supreme court;
3. The superior courts;
4. The justices' courts;
5. The police courts, and such other inferior courts as the legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town, or city and county.

Judicial department. See Const., arts. III, VI. Subd. 5. See Const., art. VI, § 13.

Jurisdiction of above courts considered, post, in the various chapters treating thereof.

Court of impeachment. See post, §§ 36 et seq.

Supreme court. See post, §§ 40 et seq.

District courts of appeal. See Stats. 1903, p. 737.

Superior courts. See post, §§ 65 et seq.

Justices' courts. See post, §§ 85 et seq.

Police courts. See post, § 121.

Legislation § 33. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 333), and then read: "The following are the courts of justice of this state; 1. The court for the trial of impeachments; 2. The supreme court; 3. The district courts; 4. The county courts; 5. The probate courts; 6. The municipal criminal court of San Francisco; 7. The justices' courts; 8. The police courts."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Juvenile court. The Juvenile Court Law of 1911 is constitutional. Moore v. Williams, 19 Cal. App. 600; 127 Pac. 509.

Police court. A police judge, though a judicial officer, is also a municipal officer. People v. Henry, 62 Cal. 557.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Based upon act of 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 333), with the court for the trial of impeachments and the municipal criminal court of San Francisco added, and "police courts" substituted in the place of the sixth subdivision of that act, which reads "Recorders' and other inferior municipal courts."

1. Jurisdiction of courts in general. The first point decided by any court, although it may not be in terms, is that the court has jurisdiction. Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 688.

2. Void judgment if jurisdiction be wanting. The judgment of any court is void where there is a want of jurisdiction. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 402; 94 Am. Dec. 742.

3. Jurisdiction of courts before adoption of constitutional amendments. Effect of amendments to constitution on jurisdiction of the courts existing prior to their adoption. See Gillis v. Barnett, 38 Cal. 393. And as to jurisdiction of courts existing prior to adoption of constitution, in 1849, and intendments in favor of their judgments, see Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69.

4. "Amount in controversy." The "amount in controversy" means the sum claimed in the complaint or declaration, so far as relates to the jurisdiction of the court. Costs of suit, etc., are mere incidents, not controlling the jurisdiction; so a judgment may be for more than the "amount in controversy" and not affect the matter of jurisdiction. Bradley v. Kent, 22 Cal. 169.

5. Jurisdiction by certiorari. The jurisdiction of a court by certiorari (writ of review) does not depend upon the amount in controversy (overruling People v. Carman, 18 Cal. 693). Winter v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Cal. 273.

6. Common-law jurisdiction. The phrase, "courts having common-law jurisdiction," discussed and defined in Matter of Conner, 39 Cal. 98; 2 Am. Rep. 427.

7. Inquiry by one court into jurisdiction of another. The power of a court of law to inquire into the jurisdiction of a court of original jurisdiction by which the judgment was rendered is fully recognized, but the inquiry is limited to an inspection of the record, and if it does not appear affirmatively upon the face of the record that the court had no jurisdiction, the impeachment, for all purposes of a defense to the action at law, has failed. The jurisdiction in courts of original jurisdiction need not appear affirmatively upon the face of the record, the presumption thereof coming to the aid of the record. Carpentier v. City of Oakland, 30 Cal. 439.

8. Presumption in favor of jurisdiction. It is presumed (where judgment is rendered by a court of original jurisdiction) that the court had jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, unless the contrary affirmatively appears in the record. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 507.

9. When jurisdiction presumed in courts of record. As to courts of record, all intendments are in favor of the regularity of their proceedings. People v. Blackwell, 27 Cal. 65; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Barrett v. Carney, 33 Cal. 530; Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458; People v. Connor, 17 Cal. 361; People v. Hobson, 17 Cal. 424; People v. Robinson, 17 Cal. 368; People v. Lawrence, 21 Cal. 372. See generally Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69.

10. Want of jurisdiction, how taken advantage of. In courts of general jurisdiction, the cause of action need only to be stated, and the want of jurisdiction arising from the insufficient value of the subject-matter in dispute must be taken advantage of in some other way. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432. In a court of limited and special jurisdiction, every fact essential to confer jurisdiction must be alleged. But the rule is otherwise in courts of general jurisdiction. A demurrer to their jurisdiction only lies where the want of such jurisdiction appears affirmatively upon the face of the complaint.

11. Jurisdiction not presumed in courts not of record. The jurisdiction of courts not of record being special and limited, the law presumes nothing in favor of their jurisdiction, and a party who asserts a right under a judgment rendered in such a court must show affirmatively every fact necessary to confer such jurisdiction. Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283; Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54; Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; King v. Randlet, 33 Cal. 318; Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321.

12. Meaning of "within the jurisdiction of the court." By the phrase "within the jurisdiction of the court" is meant "within the state," so far as to the necessity of producing a subscribing witness or accounting for an omission so to do. Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306.

13. Appeals from state to Federal courts; transfer of causes; conflicts of jurisdiction; admiralty and maritime cases, etc. As to appeals from state courts to the supreme court of the United States, when allowed, how taken, etc., see Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175; Hart v. Burnett, 20 Cal. 171; Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 610. It was held that no cause can be transferred from a state court to any court of the United States. The Federal and state courts have in some cases concurrent jurisdiction, but the court which first has possession of the subject must decide it. Neither a writ of error nor appeal lies to take a case from a state court to the supreme court of the United States. An appeal is allowed when the decision of the state court is adverse to a law of Congress, treaty, etc. Johnson v. Gordon, 4 Cal. 368. See this case reviewed in Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697, and finally overruled, in most particulars, in Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 613; see also Martin v. Hunter's Lessees, 1 Wheat. 304, 372; 4 L. Ed. 97, 113; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264; Waring v. Clark, 5 How. 461; 12 L. Ed. 237. As to jurisdiction and removal of cause between state and Federal courts, see Calderwood v. Hager, 20 Cal. 167; Hart v. Burnett, 20 Cal. 169. The judge of the United States district court for the district of Oregon has not jurisdiction, while holding the circuit court of the United States for the district of California, to issue a citation on a writ of error from the supreme court of the United States to the supreme court of this state. He has not jurisdiction either to take or approve security required in order to make the writ of error a supersedeas, etc. The citation and security taken would not operate as a supersedeas in such a case. Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 240. The jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in admiralty and maritime causes is not exclusive; the states have power to confer upon their courts all admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. Congress has not power to make this jurisdiction exclusive in the Federal courts. State and Federal courts have in these cases concurrent original jurisdiction. Johnson v. Gordon, 4 Cal. 368; see, however, Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 613, overruling this case; Taylor v. Steamer Columbia, 5 Cal. 268; Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697; Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 369; and see The Moses Taylor, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411; 18 L. Ed. 397; The Hine v. Trevor, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 556; 18 L. Ed. 451. See particularly Appendix Pol. Code, vol. 2, p. 344, note to art. III, § 2, Federal Constitution.

14. Actions against steamers and vessels. The provisions of the code, §§ 813–827, post, providing for actions against steamers, vessels, and boats, confers upon the district court admiralty jurisdiction pro tanto. The rule in regard to action in rem, in both admiralty and common-law courts, gives exclusive jurisdiction in a given case to that tribunal which has acquired it by a judicial seizure of the thing, and such seizure has always been essential to a proceeding in rem. But our statute alters the rule. It makes the service of the process upon a person standing in a particular relation to the thing equivalent to its seizure for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction; and it necessarily follows that jurisdiction in rem may exist in several courts at the same time. The court, however, whose mesne or final process has first made actual seizure must have exclusive power over its disposal and the distribution of the funds arising therefrom. The judgments of other courts, if filed in the court having custody of the fund, are complete adjudications of the subject-matter of litigation which they disclose, and entitled to distribution according to their respective merits. Averill v. The Hartford, 2 Cal. 308; but see The Moses Taylor, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411; 18 L. Ed. 397; The Hine v. Trevor, 4 Wall. 556; 18 L. Ed. 451; see Appendix Pol. Code, vol. 2, p. 344, note to art. III, § 2, Federal Constitution.

15. Admiralty cases. A cause of action, to be cognizable in admiralty, whether arising out of a contract, claim, service, or obligation or liability of any kind, must relate to the business of commerce and navigation. People v. Steamer America, 34 Cal. 679; see also this case for the manner of raising in the state courts the issue of jurisdiction as to whether the action is within maritime jurisdiction.

16. Maritime causes. In a case clearly arising on questions belonging to admiralty and maritime transactions, it has been intimated that a state court might hold its jurisdiction where the people of the state were plaintiffs, and the action was for the collection of state revenues. See People v. Steamer America, 34 Cal. 681.

17. Suits between citizens and foreigners. United States courts have no jurisdiction over suits between alien and alien, but are confined to actions between citizens and foreigners (Mossman v. Higginson, 4 Dall. 12; 1 L. Ed. 720; Montalet v. Murray, 4 Cranch, 46; 2 L. Ed. 545; Hodgson v. Bowerbank, 5 Cranch, 303; 3 L. Ed. 108; Jackson v. Twentyman, 2 Pet. 136; 7 L. Ed. 374); and where both parties to a suit are aliens, the action cannot be on that account transferred from a state to a Federal court. Orosco v. Gagliardo, 22 Cal. 83.

18. When state courts have jurisdiction over foreign seamen, etc. When a foreign master of a foreign vessel discharges a foreign seaman for no wrongful act, the seaman may maintain an action for his wages in a state court. All persons in time of peace (in such matters as these) have the right to resort to the tribunals of the nation where they may happen to be, for the protection of their rights. The jurisdiction of courts over them is complete, except where it is excluded by treaty. Pugh v. Gillam, 1 Cal. 485; The Jerusalem, 2 Gall. 191; Fed. Cas. No. 7293; Moran v. Baudin, 2 Pet. Adm. Decis. 415; Fed. Cas. No. 9785.

19. State courts no jurisdiction over crimes against United States. The state tribunals have no jurisdiction to punish crimes against the laws of the United States, as such. But the same act may be an offense against both the laws of the United States and of this state. People v. Kelly, 38 Cal. 145; 99 Am. Dec. 360. State tribunals have no jurisdiction to punish perjury against the United States. State v. Adams, 4 Blackf. 146; State v. Pike, 15 N. H. 83; People v. Kelly, 38 Cal. 145; 99 Am. Dec. 360.

20. Jurisdiction of state courts over action of United States land department. It has been questioned whether the courts of California have jurisdiction to review the action of the United States land department upon contests of rights of pre-emption when the subject-matter of the investigation, and upon which the preference depended, were not transactions which occurred in the contest, but before it. Quinn v. Kenyon, 38 Cal. 499.

21. Trespass committed by United States officer. The fact that a trespass was committed by a marshal of the United States, or by a deputy, under cover of his office, does not deprive the district court of jurisdiction over the same. Hirsch v. Rand, 39 Cal. 315.

22. Jurisdiction of one court cannot encroach upon that of another. Each branch of the judicial department has its functions assigned by the constitution. The sixth article of the constitution seems to have been drawn with great skill and care, and endeavors to establish a complete judicial system. It not only provides for the establishment of the several judicial tribunals, but also distributes among these tribunals their several powers. It would derange our judicial system if the legislature could confer on one court the functions and powers which the constitution has conferred on another. Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230.

23. Courts of concurrent jurisdiction cannot interfere with each other's actions. One court has no power to interfere with the judgments and decrees of another court of concurrent jurisdiction. The only case in which it will be allowed is where the court in which the action or proceeding is pending is unable, by reason of its jurisdiction, to afford the relief sought. Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26; Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 34; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 268; Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520; Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607; see also Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77. Nor does it make any difference if, in a suit in equity, new parties are brought in strangers to the action at law sought to be enjoined. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607. There are exceptions to the general rule, however, as, for instance, the same fraudulent debtor might confess different fraudulent judgments in different judicial districts. It would not then be necessary for creditors to bring a different suit in each different court. So, also, where the code requires the action to be tried in a particular county, it must be brought there. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607. Compare this case with Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376; 65 Am. Dec. 519. Nor can a state court enjoin the proceedings of a Federal court. Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520.

24. When court has jurisdiction by mandamus. If a court entertained jurisdiction of the action, its proceedings, however erroneous they may have been, could not have been reviewed in proceedings for a mandamus. People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; 87 Am. Dec. 110; Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307. But if the court refused to act in the case, the question whether it rightfully so refused may be entertained in this proceeding. Beguhl v. Swan, 39 Cal. 411. Where the district court has ordered a cause commenced therein to be transferred to the United States circuit court, the supreme court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandate to compel the district judge to proceed with the trial of the cause. Francisco v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 283.

25. When by certiorari. A writ of certiorari will not lie to an inferior court to annul an order which is merely erroneous, but not void in a matter of which such court has acquired jurisdiction. People v. Elkins, 40 Cal. 647.

26. Jurisdiction in injunction proceedings. It is well settled that under our judicial system one court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the execution of a decree of another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, unless it plainly appear that the court rendering the judgment or decree under which proceedings are sought to be stayed "is unable by reason of its jurisdiction to afford the relief sought." Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 27; Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 35; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 270; Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77; Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 614; Hockstacker v. Levy, 11 Cal. 76; Grant v. Quick, 5 Sandf. 612. The fact that parties to an injunction proceeding are not the same as the parties to the judgment or decree sought to be enjoined does not relieve the case from the operation of this rule, nor can the consent of the parties change the rule. It is established and enforced not so much to protect the rights of the parties as to protect the rights of the courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, to avoid conflict of jurisdiction, confusion, and delay in the administration of justice. Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 71; 68 Am. Dec. 304. Proceedings for such purpose should always be commenced in the court rendering the judgment or decree and having control of its execution. Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268.

27. Jurisdiction in injunction proceedings. A court has jurisdiction to issue a restraining order when at the time of issuance there was a suit pending between the parties. Prader v. Purkett, 13 Cal. 588.

28. Explanation of exclusive and concurrent jurisdiction. Their effect. There is nothing in the nature of jurisdiction as applied to courts which renders it exclusive. It is not like a grant of property which cannot have several owners at the same time. It is a matter of common experience that two or more courts may have concurrent powers over the same parties and the same subject-matter. Jurisdiction is not a right or privilege belonging to the judge, but an authority or power to do justice in a given case, when it is brought before him. There is no instance in the whole history of the law where the mere grant of jurisdiction to a particular court without any words of exclusion has been held to oust any other court of the powers which it before possessed. Creating a new forum with concurrent jurisdiction may have the effect of withdrawing from the courts which before existed a portion of the cause which would otherwise have been brought before them, but it cannot affect the power of the old courts to administer justice when it is demanded at their hands. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 580; quoting from Delafield v. State of Illinois, 2 Hill, 164.

29. Exclusive jurisdiction. Where a new right is provided by law, together with a particular remedy for its violation, and the statute prescribes that the remedy must be pursued in a certain court, the jurisdiction on that subject is exclusive in such court. Reed v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 33 Cal. 212.

30. Concurrent jurisdiction. Where the constitution grants original jurisdiction of a particular class of cases to one court, without expressly excluding other courts from exercising any jurisdiction therein, those other courts are not for that reason necessarily excluded from exercising concurrent jurisdiction in the same class of cases. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 580 (commenting on and in some particulars overruling Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230; Caulfield v. Stevens, 28 Cal. 118; while the case of Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 383; Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249; 70 Am. Dec. 717, in matters of concurrent jurisdiction, etc., are approved).

31. Concurrent jurisdiction of equity and law courts. Where courts of law and equity have concurrent jurisdiction, if a court of law has first acquired jurisdiction and decided a case, a court of equity will not interfere to set aside the judgment, unless the party has been prevented by some fraud or accident from availing himself of the defense at law. Dutil v. Pacheco, 21 Cal. 438; 82 Am. Dec. 749; Truly v. Wanzer, 5 How. (U. S.) 141; 12 L. Ed. 88; Allen v. Hopson, 1 Freem. (Miss.) 276; Norton v. Wood, 22 Wend. 524; Smith v. McIver, 9 Wheat. 532, 6 L. Ed. 152; Haden v. Garden, 7 Leigh (Va.), 157.

32. Equity and law jurisdiction over fraud. A court of equity will take jurisdiction in cases of fraud, even if founded on the express provisions of statutes, and especially to guard against the fraudulent acts of a debtor. Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376; 65 Am. Dec. 519; Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 156; 68 Am. Dec. 313. Equity exercises concurrent jurisdiction with courts of law in questions involving fraud, accident, or confidence, and there are cases where, even though an action at law might be maintained, yet a bill in equity is equally proper. See New York Ins. Co. v. Roulet, 24 Wend. 505; Story Eq., p 64; People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348.

33. Equity jurisdiction, specific performance, etc. The ground of the interference of chancery in bills quia timet, and to enforce the specific execution of an agreement, is that there is no other adequate remedy. If a plain, speedy, unembarrassed remedy exists at law, equity will not interfere. As a general rule, equity will not interfere in cases sounding in damages. But there are exceptions to this rule. See Buxton v. Lister, 3 Atk. 384; Adderley v. Dixon, 1 Sim. & S. 607. In these exceptional cases, the jurisdiction is put on the ground that compensation in damages would not afford a full, complete, and satisfactory remedy, and it is denied when this is attainable at law. The jurisdiction attaches also in cases of apprehended injury, as by sureties, etc., where no loss has as yet followed. 2 Story Eq., p. 35. It has been held that in cases of a general covenant to indemnify, although sounding in damages, equity will decree specific performance. See Ranelaugh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 189; Champion v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. 398; Chamberlain v. Blue, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 491; White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521. But equity will not assume jurisdiction where a remedy at law exists, and compel the surrender or cancellation, or enjoin the collection of a promissory note or other instrument. Smith v. Sparrow, 13 Cal. 596, affirming Lewis v. Tobias, 10 Cal. 574. See authorities cited in last-named case.

34. Equity jurisdiction over judgments fraudulently altered, etc. When a judgment was rendered, and afterward fraudulently altered so as to include a new party not in the first instance included in the judgment, and who had never been served with process, equity has jurisdiction of the case, and may vacate the judgment. (The remedy by appeal might suffice in ordinary cases where there was a want of service. See facts of case.) It made no difference that the judgment was void on its face, as the party was liable to be harassed by it and it was about to be enforced against him. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 558.

35. Equity jurisdiction complete between partnership and individual creditors. A court of equity has jurisdiction in cases where there is a conflict between partnership and individual creditors. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605; Place v. Sweetzer, 16 Ohio, 142; Washburn v. Bank of Bellows Falls, 19 Vt. 278–286.

36. Equity jurisdiction to decree execution of deed, etc. Jurisdiction of a court of equity, to decree a re-execution of a deed, is unquestionable. The jurisdiction is maintained in such cases where the destruction would create a defect in the deraignment of the party's title and thus embarrass the assertion of his rights to the property. Cummings v. Coe, 10 Cal. 529.

37. Equity jurisdiction to decree alimony. A court of equity has jurisdiction to decree alimony in an action which has no reference to a divorce or separation. Galland v. Galland, 38 Cal. 265; see dissenting opinion in same case.

38. Jurisdiction of court over infants in partition suits. The proceeding for partition is a special proceeding, and the statute prescribes its course and effect; and though after jurisdiction has attached errors in the course of the cause cannot be collaterally shown to impeach a judgment, yet, so far at least as the rights of infants are involved, the court has no jurisdiction, except over the matter of partition, and has no power to render a decree divesting an infant's estate, not for the purpose of partition, but upon an adverse claim by other parties. Waterman v. Lawrence, 19 Cal. 210; 79 Am. Dec. 212.

39. Jurisdiction of courts over fugitives from justice from other states. A court of general original jurisdiction, exercising the usual powers of a common-law court, has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters, and to issue all necessary writs for the arrest and transfer of a fugitive criminal to the authorized agent of the state from whence he fled. Where a right is established by law, such courts can apply the appropriate remedy and issue the necessary writs without special legislation. Matter of Romaine, 23 Cal. 585.

40. Jurisdiction to review judgment on appeal lost, if appeal is not taken in time. If a court has jurisdiction to review a judgment on an appeal taken within one year after rendition of the same, yet that jurisdiction is lost at the expiration of the year. Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297, 68 Am. Dec. 323; affirmed in Milliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166.

41. Effect of adjournment of court for term on its jurisdiction of cases pending and decided. A court does not lose jurisdiction by adjournment before the case has been finally determined; and the court may vacate a default if final judgment has not been entered, even though the court has adjourned for the term. Wilson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 193 (and De Castro v. Richardson, 25 Cal. 49, and Willson v. McEvoy, 25 Cal. 169, were held not to be inconsistent with this ruling). In a proceeding to condemn land the district court did not lose its power or control over the case by reason of its adjournments at any time. It was unfinished business, and necessarily continued in court until the deed was made and the money paid over under the order of the court. Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 174.

42. Jurisdiction of courts over cases decided is lost by adjournment for the term. After the adjournment of the term the court loses all control over cases decided, unless its jurisdiction is saved by some motion or proceeding at the time, except in the single case provided by statute, where the summons has not been served, in which the party is allowed six months to move to set the judgment aside (Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Robb v. Robb, 6 Cal. 21; Morrison v. Dapman, 3 Cal. 255; Shaw v. McGregor, 8 Cal. 521; Bell v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 706; Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 632); but the court has power to make an order nunc pro tunc, or to correct a mere clerical error. Swain v. Naglee, 19 Cal. 127; De Castro v. Richardson, 25 Cal. 49; see Willson v. McEvoy, 25 Cal. 169.

43. Where general jurisdiction exists, court has full jurisdiction in all particulars of the case. When a court has general jurisdiction of a subject it has power to make a full disposition of the matter and conclude litigation respecting it. Kennedy v. Hammer, 19 Cal. 387.

44. Jurisdiction cannot be conferred by agreement of parties. A stipulation by parties waiving all objections to jurisdiction cannot confer on a district court jurisdiction to try a cause in one county, when by operation of law the court is adjourned in that county and its term commenced in another. Bates v. Gage, 40 Cal. 184; Smith v. Chichester, 1 Cal. 409; Domingues v. Domingues, 4 Cal. 186; Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329. To sustain a personal judgment the court must have jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the person. Where the jurisdiction of the court, as to the subject-matter, has been limited by the constitution or by statute, the consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction. But when the limit regards certain persons, they may, if competent, waive their privilege, and this will give the court jurisdiction. If, however, a party has not been brought into court, and does not of himself come in and waive the necessity of service, the court has no jurisdiction over him. Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562. There is in these cases, however, a decided distinction between want of jurisdiction and irregularity in procuring jurisdiction. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 63.

45. Jurisdiction cannot be divested by agreement of parties. The agreements of parties cannot divest the courts of law or equity of their proper jurisdiction. Muldrow v. Norris, 2 Cal. 74; 56 Am. Dec. 313. The consent of parties cannot alter the jurisdiction of courts. Biddle Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 279. Nor can any stipulation made by them affect their jurisdiction. Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 628.

46. Jurisdiction by publication of summons. The statutory provisions for acquiring jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, by publication of the summons instead of a personal service, must be strictly pursued. People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81; Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100; Evertson v. Thomas, 5 How. Pr. 45; Kendall v. Washburn, 14 How. Pr. 380.

47. Jurisdiction in cases of publication, notice, summons, etc. Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 174; Steinbach v. Lesse, 27 Cal. 295; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300; Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 507; Townsend v. Tallant, 33 Cal. 45; 91 Am. Dec. 617; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458; McDonald v. Katz, 31 Cal. 169; Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Eitel v. Foote, 39 Cal. 439; see post, §§ 1010–1017, inclusive.

48. Jurisdiction by appearance of party in court. A court has jurisdiction of the person where he voluntarily put in an appearance without the issuance of summons. Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51.

49. Jurisdiction of the person by appearance in an action. What is an appearance? See post, § 1014; Steinbach v. Lesse, 27 Cal. 295; Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668; see post, § 406.

50. Jurisdiction by admission of service. See Sharp v. Brunnings, 35 Cal. 528.

51. Jurisdiction over persons appearing by attorney. Court acquires jurisdiction only of those for whom the attorney finally appears. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342.

52. Jurisdiction of special cases. Actions to abate nuisance. The constitution permits the legislature to confer on county courts jurisdiction in "special cases"; but the term "special cases" was not meant to include any class of cases for which the courts of general jurisdiction had always supplied a remedy. The special cases, therefore, must be confined to such new cases as are the creation of statutes and the proceedings under which are unknown to the general framework of courts of common law and equity. The action to prevent or abate nuisances is not one of these, and is amply provided for in courts of general jurisdiction. In conferring this power upon county courts, the legislature exceeded its constitutional authority, and the portion of the act which contains it is invalid. Parsons v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 5 Cal. 43; 63 Am. Dec. 76; see, however, People v. Day, 15 Cal. 91.

53. Jurisdiction of inferior courts. Inferior courts cannot go beyond the authority conferred upon them by the statute under which they act. Winter v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Cal. 273.

54. Jurisdiction of courts of executive of the state by writ of mandate, etc. Courts having jurisdiction of writ of mandamus may issue such a writ to the governor to compel certain ministerial acts. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; 2 Am. Rep. 432 (Temple, J., dissenting in an elaborate opinion). Under the distribution of powers by the constitution the judiciary are not denied jurisdiction in cases where a fugitive from justice from another state is held in custody by virtue of a warrant issued by the executive of this state. The very object of the habeas corpus was to reach just such cases, and while the courts of the state possess no power to control the executive discretion and compel a surrender, yet he having once acted, that discretion may be examined into in every case where the liberty of the subject is involved. Ex parte Manchester, 5 Cal. 237.

55. Jurisdiction of courts to inquire into legislative proceedings, constitutionality of laws, etc. Many provisions of the constitution are addressed solely to the legislative department, and it may be said that all those provisions which require the legislature to do certain things, leaving the means and manner within the legislative discretion, are entirely beyond the reach of the judiciary, whose functions are wholly different from those of the law-making power. Some of the restrictions upon the powers of that body are addressed solely to the legislature. As an instance, I may mention those provisions relating to the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members; and although the constitution expressly requires certain qualifications to constitute a member of either house, yet each house is expressly constituted the exclusive judge of those questions, and this court could not, in any manner, review such a decision. The true rule seems to be this: that when the right to determine the extent and effect of the restriction is either expressly or by necessary implication confided to the legislature, then the judiciary has no right to interfere with the legislative construction, but must take it to be correct. But in all other cases or restriction it is the right and duty of this court to decide the effect and extent of the restriction in the last resort. And as to the question whether the right to determine the extent and effect of the restriction is vested in the legislature or in the judiciary, this court must equally determine in the last resort. Nougues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65; see also Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279. But a court cannot review the act of the legislature upon a question whether or not a certain enterprise (such as a railroad) is a public benefit or use. The legislative declaration seems to be held final as to such matters. Napa Valley R. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 30 Cal. 437; also, as to jurisdiction of the supreme court over a legislative act declaring certain improvements a "public use," see Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241; 91 Am. Dec. 577.

56. Power of legislature over courts and judicial officers. A special law directing a certain court to grant an order transferring an indictment pending therein against a party, for murder, to another district court, is constitutional. People v. Judge of Twelfth Dist., 17 Cal. 547. This case also comments on the general power of the legislature over courts. It has been held that the legislature can impose no duties upon the judiciary but such as are of a judicial character. The legislature cannot delegate to a court the power of establishing town governments or incorporating colleges and the like. People v. Nevada, 6 Cal. 143; Burgoyne v. Board of Supervisors, 5 Cal. 9; Phelan v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 39; affirming S. C., 6 Cal. 531. Nor can it authorize a county judge to designate the time and place of holding an election; such is not a judicial act. Dickey v. Hurlburt, 5 Cal. 343.

57. Miscellaneous. See also as to jurisdiction, etc., of the several courts mentioned, post, §§ 42, 43, 44, 57, 34, 85, 86, 97, 106, 114, 115, 116, 117, 121, 128, 129, 165, 187, 259, and notes.

§ 34. Courts of record.

The courts enumerated in the first three subdivisions of the last preceding section are courts of record.

Courts of record. See Const., art. VI, § 12.

Legislation § 34. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880. p. 21, changing word "six" to "three," before "subdivisions."

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Courts of record. At common law, a court of record is one proceeding according to the course of the common law (Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 220), in which the acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled for a perpetual memorial and testimony. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Any court having a clerk and bailiff, and power to fine and imprison, is a court of record; and it is not necessary, to constitute such a court, that it have a seal. Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 220.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742.

CHAPTER II.

COURT OF IMPEACHMENT.

§ 35. [Amended and renumbered section.]
§ 36. Members of the court.
§ 37. Jurisdiction.
§ 38. Officers of the court.
§ 39. Trial of impeachments provided for in the Penal Code.

§ 35. [See Legislation § 36.]

§ 36. Members of the court. The court of impeachment is the senate; when sitting as such court the senators shall be upon oath; and at least two thirds of the members elected shall be necessary to constitute a quorum.

Legislation § 36. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 35, and then read: "The court for the trial of impeachments is composed of the members of the senate, or a majority of them."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 22, and renumbered § 36.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 37. Jurisdiction. The court has jurisdiction to try impeachments, when presented by the assembly, of the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer, attorney-general, surveyor-general, chief justice of the supreme court, associate justices of the supreme court, and judges of the superior courts, for any misdemeanor in office.

Officers liable to impeachment. See Const., art. IV, § 18; Pen. Code, § 737.

Legislation § 37. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 36, and then read: "The court has power to try impeachments, when presented by the assembly, of the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer, attorney-general, surveyor-general, justices of the supreme court, and judges of the district courts, for any misdemeanor in office."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 22, and renumbered § 37.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Trial of other civil officers. Civil officers, other than those mentioned in this section, are to be tried for misdemeanor in office, as the legislature may provide (In re Marks, 45 Cal. 199), and a complaint may be filed by any private person. Woods v. Varnum, 85 Cal. 639; 24 Pac. 843.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Const. 1849, art. IV, § 18.

§ 38. Officers of the court. The officers of the senate are the officers of the court.

Legislation § 38. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 37.

2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 22, as § 38, in amending Part I.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 39. Trial of impeachments provided for in the Penal Code. Proceedings on the trial of impeachments are provided for in the Penal Code.

Proceedings for removal. See Pen. Code, §§ 737 et seq.

Legislation § 39. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 38.

2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 22, as § 39, in amending Part I.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See Pen. Code, §§ 737–753, inclusive.

CHAPTER III.

SUPREME COURT.

§ 40. Justices, elections, and terms of office.
§ 41. Computation of years of office.
§ 42. Vacancies.
§ 43. Departments.
§ 44. Apportionment of business.
§ 45. Court in bank.
§ 46. Absence or disability of chief justice.
§ 47. Sessions. Expenses.
§ 48. Adjournments.
§ 49. Decisions in writing.
§ 50. Jurisdiction of two kinds.
§ 51. Original jurisdiction.
§ 52. Appellate jurisdiction.
§ 53. Powers in appealed cases.
§ 54. Concurrence necessary to transact business.
§ 55. Transfer of books, papers, and actions.
§ 56. Remittiturs in transferred cases.
§ 57. Appeals in probate proceedings and contested election cases.
§ 58. [Related to terms of district court. Repealed. §§ 59–64. Same.]

§ 40. Justices, elections, and terms of office. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice, and six associate justices, who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state at large, at the general state elections next preceding the expiration of the terms of office of their predecessors respectively, and hold their offices for the term of twelve years from and after the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election; provided, that of the justices elected at the general state election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, the chief justice shall go out of office at the end of eleven years, and the six associate justices shall have so classified, or shall so classify themselves, by lot, that two of them shall go out of office at the end of three years, two of them at the end of seven years, and two of them at the end of eleven years from the first Monday after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty; and an entry of such classification shall have been, or shall be made in the minutes of the court in bank, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof filed in the office of the secretary of state.

Supreme court. See Const., art. VI, §§ 2, 3.
Eligibility. See post, § 156.
Jurisdiction of supreme court. See post, §§ 50–53.
Acts relating to supreme court commission. See post, Appendix, tit. "Courts."

Legislation § 40. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The supreme court consists of a chief justice and four associate justices, elected at the judicial elections, and holding their offices for the term of ten years from the first day of January next after their election."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 22.
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Eligibility. Under the constitution of 1849, justices were not required to be lawyers, nor even licensed attorneys. People v. Dorsey, 32 Cal. 296.

Title to office. The title to office, of a judge of the supreme court, cannot be questioned, except in an action brought for that purpose (People v. Olds, 3 Cal. 167; 58 Am. Dec. 398; People v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 432; Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 314); and one entering into possession of the office by color of right, becomes a judge de facto. People v. Sassovich, 29 Cal. 480; Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 179.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Const., art. VI, §§ 2, 3. In the case of People v. Wells, 2 Cal. 198, the question was raised whether, in the case where a judge was absent from the state, the legislature could authorize the governor to make an appointment during the temporary absence of such judge. The question was not decided at the time, the court disagreeing, but was afterward considered, and it was decided (S. C., 2 Cal. 610) that such an absence was not a vacancy in office which could be filled by appointment of the governor, and that a law authorizing such an appointment was unconstitutional. Who are eligible to the office of justice of the supreme court. See post, § 156.

§ 41. Computation of years of office. The years during which a justice of the supreme court is to hold office are to be computed respectively from and including the first Monday after the first day of January of any one year to and excluding the first Monday after the first day of January of the next succeeding year.

Term, when commenced. See Const., art. VI, § 3.

Legislation § 41. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The justice having the shortest term to serve is the chief justice."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 23.
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 42. Vacancies. If a vacancy occur in the office of a justice of the supreme court, the governor shall appoint an eligible person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a justice to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election; and the justice so elected shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term of his predecessor.

Vacancy in office. See Const., art. VI, § 3.
Vacancy. See subject generally, Pol. Code, §§ 995 et seq.
Absence or inability of chief justice to act. See post, § 46.
Vacancy in office of judge does not affect pending proceedings. See post, § 184.

Legislation § 42. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 23. The present § 50 is an amendment of the original § 42.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Absence on leave. Absence of a judge from the state on leave is not such a vacancy as can be supplied by the executive under legislative authority. People v. Wells, 2 Cal. 198; People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38.

Vacancy and removal. It is only in cases where there is no incumbent to hold over, that the appointee of the executive can fill the office. People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38. The executive has no power to remove an officer whose term is fixed by the constitution or statute. People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

§ 43. Departments. There shall be two departments of the supreme court, denominated respectively department one and department two. The chief justice shall assign three of the associate justices to each department, and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time; provided, that the associate justices shall be competent to sit in either department, and may interchange with one another by agreement among themselves, or if no such agreement be made, as ordered by the chief justice. The chief justice may sit in either department, and shall preside when so sitting; but the justices assigned to each department shall select one of their number as presiding justice. Each of the departments shall have the power to hear and determine causes and all questions arising therein, subject to the provisions in relation to the court in bank. The presence of three justices shall be necessary to transact any business in either of the departments, except such as may be done at chambers; but one or more of the justices may adjourn from time to time with the same effect as if all were present, and the concurrence of three justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment; provided, that if three do not concur, the cause may be reheard in the same department, or transmitted to the other department, or to the court in bank.

Departments. See Const., art. VI, § 2.

Legislation § 43. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 23. The present § 51 is an amendment of the original § 43.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Where justices are equally divided. Where the justices qualified to act are equally divided, there must, of necessity, be an affirmance of the judgment. Luco v. De Toro, 88 Cal. 26; 11 L. R. A. 543; 25 Pac. 983; and see Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 632; and see also Frankel v. Deidesheimer, 93 Cal. 73; 28 Pac. 794; Santa Rosa City Railroad v. Central Street Railway Co., 112 Cal. 436; 44 Pac. 733. Where the division of the justices is as to the reversal or affirmance of the judgment on appeal or writ of error, the judgment must be affirmed; the general rule is, that, where the motion is such as to make an affirmative decision indispensable to further progress of the action, an equal division will stop the action; but where the motion is in arrest of the progress of the action, an equal division is equivalent to a denial of the motion, and the case proceeds as if the motion had not been made; thus, a rehearing will be denied by an equal division of the judges, and likewise a motion for a new trial, an appeal from judgment, and an application for the admission of testimony. Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 632.

Rehearing. Power to grant a hearing in the supreme court, after a determination in a district court of appeal, expires thirty days after the judgment has been pronounced in said district court of appeal; but it is not necessary to file the order granting such hearing in the office of the clerk of the supreme court within that time. People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 581; 114 Pac. 48, 54.

Number of judges necessary to transact business of court. See note Ann. Cas. 1912A. 1251.

§ 44. Apportionment of business. The chief justice shall apportion the business to the departments, and may, in his discretion, order any cause pending before the court to be heard and decided by the court in bank. The order may be made before or after judgment pronounced by a department; but when a cause has been allotted to one of the departments, and a judgment pronounced therein, the order must be made within thirty days after such judgment, and concurred in by two associate justices; and if so made, it shall have the effect to vacate and set aside the judgment. Any four justices may, either before or after judgment by a department, order a cause to be heard in bank. If the order be not made within the time above limited, the judgment shall be final; provided, that no judgment by a department shall become final until the expiration of the period of thirty days aforesaid, unless approved by the chief justice in writing, with the concurrence of two associate justices.

Similar provision in constitution. See Const., art. VI, § 2.

Legislation § 44. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 23. The present § 52 is an amendment of the original § 44.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 45. Court in bank. The chief justice or any four justices may convene the court in bank at any time, and the chief justice shall be the presiding justice of the court when so convened. The presence of four justices shall be necessary to transact any business, and the concurrence of four justices present at the argument shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment in the court in bank; provided, that if four justices so present do not concur in a judgment, then all the justices qualified to sit in the cause shall hear the argument, but to render a judgment a concurrence of four justices shall be necessary; and every judgment of the court in bank shall be final, except in cases in which no previous judgment has been rendered in one of the departments, and in such cases the judgment of the court in bank shall be final, unless within thirty days after such judgment an order be made in writing, signed by five justices, granting a rehearing.

Legislation § 45. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 24. The present § 53 is an amendment of the original § 45.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Hearing in bank. A rehearing in bank will not be granted, in a case where the cause has been heard and decided by the supreme court in department, and afterwards by the court in bank. Hegard v. California Insurance Co., 72 Cal. 535; 14 Pac. 180, 359.

Concurrence of four judges. Where a case is submitted on briefs alone, all the justices, having an equal opportunity to read the argument, are deemed to have been present at the argument, within the meaning of the constitution, and all or any of them are qualified to join in the decision. Philbrook v. Newman, 148 Cal. 173; 82 Pac. 772.

Rehearing. The clause requiring the order granting a rehearing to be "signed by five justices," is unconstitutional. Estate of Jessup, 81 Cal. 408; 6 L. R. A. 594; 21 Pac. 976; 22 Pac. 742, 1028.

§ 46. Absence or disability of chief justice. In case of the absence of the chief justice from the place at which the court in bank is held, or his inability to act, the associate justices shall select one of their own number to perform the duties and exercise the powers of the chief justice during such absence or inability to act.

Legislation § 46. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 24. The present § 54 is an amendment of the original § 46.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 118; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 47. Sessions. Expenses. The supreme court shall always be open for the transaction of business. It shall hold regular sessions for the hearing of causes, either in bank, or in one or both of its departments, at the capital of the state, commencing on the first Mondays of May and second Mondays of November; at the city and county of San Francisco, commencing on the second Mondays of January and third Mondays of July; and at the city of Los Angeles, commencing on the first Mondays of April and second Mondays of October; and special sessions at either of the above-named places at such other times as may be prescribed by the justices thereof. The justices and officers of the supreme court shall be allowed their actual traveling expenses in going to and from their respective places of residence upon the business of the court, or to attend its sessions. If proper rooms in which to hold the court, and for the accommodation of the officers thereof, are not provided by the state, together with attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery, suitable and sufficient for the transaction of business, the court, or any three justices thereof, may direct the clerk of the supreme court to provide such rooms, attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery; and the expenses thereof, certified by any three justices to be correct, shall be paid out of the state treasury, for which expenses, and to defray the traveling expenses of the justices and officers of the supreme court above mentioned, a sufficient sum shall be annually appropriated out of any funds in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated. The moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the order of the clerk of the supreme court, and be by him disbursed on proper vouchers, and the same shall be accounted for by him in annual settlements with the controller of state on the first Monday of December of each year.

Always open. See Const., art. VI, § 2; and post, § 134.

Legislation § 47. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 50, and then read: "The terms of this court must be held at the capital of the state. If proper rooms in which to hold the court, and for the chambers of the justices, are not provided by the state, together with attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery, suitable and sufficient for the transaction of business, the court may direct the sheriff of the county in which it is held to provide such rooms, attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery; and the expenses thereof, certified by a majority of the justices to be correct, must be paid out of the state treasury."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 22, (1) by changing the first sentence to read, "The January and July terms of this court shall be held at the city and county of San Francisco, the April and October term at the city of Los Angeles, and the May and November terms at the state capitol"; (2) by changing the words "chambers of the justices" to "accommodation of the officers thereof"; and (3) by adding, at the end of the section, the words, "for which expenses, and to defray the traveling expenses of the justices and officers of the court, as specified in § 51 of this code, a sufficient sum shall be annually appropriated out of any funds in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated; said moneys shall be subject to the order of the clerk of said court, and by him disbursed on proper vouchers, and the same shall be accounted for by him, in annual settlements with the controller of state, on the first Monday of December of each year." The § 51 referred to supra was embodied in the present § 47 in 1880, when Part I was amended, and was added by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 22, and read, "The justices and officers of the court shall be allowed their actual traveling expenses in going to and from San Francisco, Los Angeles, and the state capitol for the purpose of holding terms of court, as prescribed in sections forty-nine and fifty of this chapter."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 24, and renumbered § 47.

Payment of expenses. An irregularity in the indorsement of the state controller's warrant for the expenses of the court does not render it non-transferable by indorsement; and the fact that the items of expense ordered and allowed have not been actually paid by the clerk will not justify the treasurer in refusing payment. National Bank v. Herold, 74 Cal. 603; 5 Am. St. Rep. 476; 16 Pac. 507.

§ 48. Adjournments. Adjournments from day to day, or from time to time, are to be construed as recesses in the sessions, and shall not prevent the court, or either of its departments, from sitting at any time.

Terms of courts. This section, with § 74, post, does away with the terms of courts. And see post, §§ 88, 104, as to justices' courts.

Legislation § 48. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, to supersede §§ 46, 48, 49, providing for adjournments and terms of court, and to conform to the new constitution.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 49. Decisions in writing. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the supreme court in bank, or in departments, shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated.

Decisions to be in writing. See Const., art. vi, § 2.

Legislation § 49. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25; based on Stats. 1863, p. 334, but was not codified in 1872, as the supreme court, in Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24 [73 Am. Dec. 565], had held unconstitutional the provision requiring that "the reasons or grounds of the decision shall be given in a written opinion accompanying the same"; the objectionable feature being eliminated in the present section.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The provision of the act of 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 334), requiring the court to give written opinion in important cases, has been omitted. In Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24, 73 Am. Dec. 565, it was held that the constitutional duty of the court was discharged by the rendition of decisions; that the legislature could no more require the court to state the reasons for its decisions than the court could require the legislature to accompany the statutes with the reasons for their enactment. Says Justice Field: "No such power can exist in the legislative department, or be sanctioned by any court which has the least respect for its own dignity and independence."

§ 50. Jurisdiction of two kinds. The jurisdiction of the supreme court is of two kinds:

1. Original; and,
2. Appellate.

Jurisdiction generally. See subsequent sections of this chapter.

Legislation § 50. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 42.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, (1) renumbering the section § 50, and (2) changing the word "this" to "supreme."

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 51. Original jurisdiction. In the exercise of its original jurisdiction the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus; and it shall also have power to issue all other writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Original jurisdiction. See Const., art. vi, § 4.
Mandamus. See Const., art. vi, § 4; see also post, §§ 54, 76, 165, 1084 et seq., 1108–1110.
Certiorari. See Const., art. vi, § 4; see also post, §§ 54, 76, 165, 1067 et seq., 1108–1110.
Prohibition. See Const., art. vi, § 4; see also post, §§ 54, 76, 165, 1102 et seq., 1108–1110.
Habeas corpus. See Const., art. vi, § 4; also post, §§ 54, 76, 165. Generally. Pen. Code, §§ 1473 et seq.
Injunction. Post, §§ 54, 76, 165, 356, 525 et seq., 745, 1341.
Scire facias abolished. Post, § 802.

2. Seal. Post, § 153.
3. Issuance. Post, § 54.
4. Service by telegraph. Post, § 1017.

Powers of single justice to issue writs. See post, § 54.
Ne exeat. See post, §§ 478 et seq.

Legislation § 51. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 43 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 334), and then read: "Its original jurisdiction extends to the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, and renumbered § 51.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5. For original § 51, see ante, Legislation § 47.

Certiorari. The jurisdiction of the supreme court, upon certiorari, is limited to those cases which call in question the jurisdiction of an inferior court, board, or officer (People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98); and the writ will be granted, only when the act complained of is judicial in its character. Spring Valley Water Works v. Bryant, 52 Cal. 132; Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319; People v. Board of Education, 54 Cal. 375; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286; 16 Am. St. Rep. 116; 6 L. R. A. 756; 22 Pac. 910, 1046; Quinchard v. Board of Trustees, 113 Cal. 664; 45 Pac. 856. The writ cannot be used as a substitute for an appeal, where the time for taking the appeal has elapsed (Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7), as it does not lie where there is an appeal (People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115; Stuttmeister v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 322; 12 Pac. 270), or where there is any other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy (Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7; Noble v. Superior Court, 109 Cal. 523; 42 Pac. 155); neither can it be used as a writ of error, to correct errors, either of law or of fact, committed within the jurisdiction of the lower court or tribunal. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 46 Cal. 667; Buckley v. Superior Court, 96 Cal.

119; 31 Pac. 8; Sherer v. Superior Court, 96 Cal. 654; 31 Pac. 565; Johnston v. Board of Supervisors, 104 Cal. 390; 37 Pac. 1046.

Mandamus. The supreme court has original jurisdiction to issue the writ, which is provided for by §§ 54, 76, 165, 1084, 1108, 1110, post. Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353; Scott v. Boyle, 164 Cal. 321; 128 Pac. 941. An application for the writ will not be entertained by the district court of appeal, unless accompanied by a showing why it was not applied for in the lower court, and the reason for its being made in the first instance in the appellate court. Gray v. Mullins, 15 Cal. App. 118; 113 Pac. 694.

Prohibition. At common law, the writ of prohibition was an original remedial writ, provided as a remedy for the encroachment of jurisdiction; and, notwithstanding this section empowers the courts of this state to issue the writ to municipal corporations, or to boards clothed with governmental functions, it still retains its character as a prerogative writ, to be issued only in the sound discretion of the court. It ought not to issue to arrest any legislation pending before a body authorized to legislate with reference to matters of public interest. Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111; and see Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 289; Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319; People v. Board of Election Commissioners, 54 Cal. 404; Camron v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 550; Spring Valley Water Works v. Bartlett, 63 Cal. 245; Hobart v. Tillson, 66 Cal. 210; 5 Pac. 83; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286; 16 Am. St. Rep. 116; 6 L. R. A. 756; 22 Pac. 910, 1046. A district court of appeal has concurrent jurisdiction with the supreme court in original proceedings for a writ of prohibition; and a denial, by the district court of appeal, of an application for the writ, on its merits, is a bar to a subsequent application in the supreme court; and the only effectual method of obtaining the intervention of the supreme court, in proceedings before a district court of appeal for a writ of prohibition, is an application for a transfer of the case to the supreme court for review. Dawson v. Superior Court, 158 Cal. 73; 110 Pac. 109.

Habeas corpus. This writ is provided for by §§ 1473 et seq of the Penal Code. If the justices of a district court of appeal are unable to concur in a judgment upon application for a discharge on habeas corpus, the writ must be denied. Application of Ladue, 15 Cal. App. 188; 117 Pac. 586; Application of Galivan, 17 Cal. App. 624; 120 Pac. 1123.

Writs abolished. The writ of ne exeat is abolished (§ 24, ante, § 478, post), as is also the writ of scire facias (§ 802, post).

Necessary to appellate jurisdiction. The phrase "all other writs" includes such other writs as are not enumerated, which can issue only for the purpose of completing the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction by the supreme court. Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353. The supreme court has power to frame and issue all writs and make all rules necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, where the statute has not provided one (Somers v. Somers, 81 Cal. 608; 22 Pac. 967); and in those cases where the constitution has conferred a right of appeal to the supreme court, and the legislature has failed to provide a mode of appeal, that court will adopt a suitable mode. People v. Jordan, 65 Cal. 644; 4 Pac. 683.

Original jurisdiction of court of last resort in mandamus. See notes 20 Ann. Cas. 184; 58 L. R. A. 833; 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1000.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Const., art. vi, § 4; Stats. 1863, p. 334. The provision, that the writ of habeas corpus may be issued by each of the justices, and made returnable before the court, or any justice thereof, or before any district court, etc., relates rather to practice than power of the court, and has been inserted in the Penal Code, under the chapter relating to habeas corpus, Part II, Title XII.

1. Issuance of the writs generally. Before the amendments of 1862 to article vi of the state constitution, the supreme court had only appellate jurisdiction to issue any of the writs mentioned in the text, except habeas corpus. But the supreme court, even then, might issue any of these writs in aid of its appellate powers. See Ex parte Attorney-General, 1 Cal. 85; White v. Lighthall, 1 Cal. 347; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; People v. Shear, 7 Cal. 139; Warner v. Hall, 1 Cal. 90; Purcell v. McKune, 14 Cal. 230; Miliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166. Since the amendments to the constitution it has original jurisdiction to issue these writs. Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26; Miller v. Board of Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93. See the above-cited cases as to when these writs lie.

2. Writ of mandate (mandamus). See cases cited above, and also People v. Weston, 28 Cal. 640; People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 36; People v. Judge of Twelfth District, 17 Cal. 547; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 79; People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; 87 Am. Dec. 110; Hopper v. Kalkman, 17 Cal. 517; Brooks v. Calderwood, 19 Cal. 124; Francisco v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 283. It will compel the performance of a ministerial act. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; 2 Am. Rep. 432. As to when this writ lies, its effect, application, etc., see post, §§ 1084–1097.

3. Writ of review (certiorari). As to cases where a writ of review (certiorari) has been held to issue, see Clary v. Hoagland, 5 Cal. 476; California Northern R. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 18 Cal. 671; Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77; Murray v. Board of Supervisors, 23 Cal. 492; Chard v. Harrison, 7 Cal. 113; Ex parte Field, 1 Cal. 187; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465; People v. Supervisors of El Dorado County, 8 Cal. 58; Miller v. Board of Supervisors, 25 Cal. 94; Hastings v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 49. It does not lie when an appeal may be taken. Clary v. Hoagland, 13 Cal. 173; People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115; Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185. It cannot be taken before the inferior tribunal has completed its judgment. Wilson v. Board of Supervisors, 3 Cal. 386; and see also, as to its issuance and effect, People v. Board of Delegates, 14 Cal. 479; Robinson v. Board of Supervisors, 16 Cal. 208; El Dorado County v. Elstner, 18 Cal. 144; see also Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 32 Cal. 582; 34 Cal. 352.

4. Review. The jurisdiction of the supreme court, under the amended constitution, to review the proceedings of inferior courts, boards, and officers upon certiorari, is limited by the very nature of the writ to cases where the jurisdiction of the inferior court, board, or officer is impeached. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 101.

Certiorari, or writ of review, lies to review the proceedings of inferior tribunals, etc., only when there has been an excess of jurisdiction. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98; see Ex parte Perkins, 18 Cal. 60; Coulter v. Stark, 7 Cal. 244; Ex parte Hanson, 2 Cal. 263; People v. Dwinelle, 29 Cal. 632; Application of Spring Valley Water Works, 17 Cal. 132. But not to correct, merely, errors of law. People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459. Under the provisions of the constitution, a writ of review (certiorari) can be rightfully issued from the office of the clerk of the supreme court, only upon an order of the court. Smith v. Oakland, 40 Cal. 481; see further, post, §§ 1066–1077.

5. Writ of prohibition. Original jurisdiction of supreme court. Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26; see cases cited in note 1, supra; and also, further, post, §§ 1102–1105.

6. Habeas corpus. See Ex parte Rowe, 7 Cal. 175; 7 Cal. 181; 7 Cal. 184; Ex parte Ellis, 11 Cal. 222; Ex parte Perkins, 18 Cal. 60; In re Corryell, 22 Cal. 178; In re Romaine, 23 Cal. 585; In re Perkins, 2 Cal. 424; In re Manchester, 5 Cal. 237; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9; In re Ring, 28 Cal. 247; Ex parte Branigan, 19 Cal. 133; Ex parte Bird, 19 Cal. 130; Ex parte Queen of the Bay, 1 Cal. 157; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 619, 91 Am. Dec. 546; see further, Pen. Code, §§ 1473–1505, inclusive.

§ 52. Appellate jurisdiction. The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction:

1. In all cases in equity, except such as arise in justices' courts.

2. In all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars.

3. In all cases of forcible entry and detainer, proceedings in insolvency, actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, and in all such probate matters as may be provided by law.

4. In all special proceedings.

5. In all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment, or information, in a court of record, on questions of law alone.

Appellate jurisdiction. See Const., art. vi, § 4.
Appeals.
1. In general. Post, §§ 936 et seq.
2. To supreme court. Post, §§ 963 et seq.

Legislation § 52. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 44, and then read: "Its appellate jurisdiction extends: 1. To all civil actions for relief formerly given in courts of equity; 2. To all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is not capable of pecuniary estimation; 3. To all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is capable of pecuniary estimation which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; 4. To all special proceedings; 5. To all cases arising in the probate courts; and, 6. To all criminal actions amounting to felony, on questions of law alone."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, and renumbered § 52.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Appellate jurisdiction. The essential criterion of appellate jurisdiction is, that it revises proceedings already instituted, and does not institute them. People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; and the legislature cannot impair the exercise of the appellate power conferred by the constitution. Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297; 68 Am. Dec. 323; People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039. Where the supreme court has no jurisdiction, it will not decide any legal questions raised (People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98), but will dismiss the proceeding, of its own motion. Bienenfeld v. Fresno Milling Co., 82 Cal. 425; 22 Pac. 1113. Under the constitution of 1849, which conferred no original jurisdiction, except in habeas corpus, it was held that the clause granting to the supreme court power to issue all writs and process necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, conferred authority to issue mandamus and other prerogative writs, only in aid of its appellate jurisdiction (People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353; Ex parte Hollis, 59 Cal. 405; White v. Lighthall, 1 Cal. 347; Cowell v. Buckelew, 14 Cal. 640; Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107); but, under the present constitution, the supreme court has, as it had under the amendment to the constitution of 1849, original jurisdiction in the issuance of such writs. Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353.

Suits in equity. The supreme court has jurisdiction in divorce cases, on appeal; and its jurisdiction is as broad as the original jurisdiction in matters of equity. Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185; 7 Pac. 456, 635; 8 Pac. 709; Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 81 Cal. 182; 15 Am. St. Rep. 38; 22 Pac. 648.

Cases at law. This term, as used in the constitution, means civil cases, as distinguished from criminal cases. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98; Wheeler v. Donnell, 110 Cal. 655; 43 Pac. 1.

Title to and possession of real estate. Where a question of title to or right to the possession of lands is necessarily involved, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction (Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338); but where a complaint in the superior court, after transference from a justice's court, is amended, alleging ownership of lands, and asking damages for a sum less than three hundred dollars, to which no answer is filed, and judgment is taken by default, the supreme court has no jurisdiction. Gorton v. Ferdinando, 64 Cal. 11; 27 Pac. 941; Henigan v. Ervin, 110 Cal. 37; 42 Pac. 457.

Tax, toll, municipal fine. The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases at law involving "the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine." Bottle Mining etc. Co. v. Kern, 154 Cal. 96; 97 Pac. 25. Pilotage allowed by an act establishing pilots is not a toll, and an appeal does not lie, unless within the jurisdictional amount. Harrison v. Green, 18 Cal. 94; and see People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98. A municipal fine, within the provision of the constitution of 1849, is a fine imposed by the local laws of particular places, such as towns and cities. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

Amount in controversy. The amount in controversy controls the jurisdiction of the supreme court in actions to recover money; and the amount sued for, not the amount recovered, is the test of the jurisdiction. People v. Madden, 134 Cal. 611; 66 Pac. 874. The demand spoken of in the constitution is the demand for judgment, evidenced by the prayer of the complaint, and the statement of facts which can uphold the judgment prayed for. Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287; 30 Pac. 82. The demand, exclusive of interest, must amount to three hundred dollars (Doyle v. Seawall, 12 Cal. 280; Hopkins v. Cheeseman, 28 Cal. 180; Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545); and the sum for which the judgment is recovered does not affect the jurisdiction on appeal. Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Pennybecker v. McDougal, 48 Cal. 160; McKiernan v. Hesse, 51 Cal. 594; Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425. While the ad damnum clause in the complaint is the best test of jurisdiction on appeal (Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Erving v. Napa Valley Brewing Co., 17 Cal. App. 367; 119 Pac. 940); yet it is not conclusive, where the complaint shows that the sum is feignedly or purposely added for the sole purpose of obtaining jurisdiction. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195. Where the amount involved is less than three hundred dollars, the proceeding will be dismissed by the supreme court, of its own motion, although the question of jurisdiction is not raised by counsel. Bienenfeld v. Fresno Milling Co., 82 Cal. 425; 22 Pac. 1113. The pleading of a counterclaim in excess of three hundred dollars does not confer jurisdiction (Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545); nor does the statement of jurisdictional facts in a counterclaim on an independent contract (Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820); but where a set-off, less than three hundred dollars in amount, exclusive of interest, is pleaded as purely defensive matter in reduction or extinguishment of the claim of the complaint, the court may very properly entertain jurisdiction (Hart v. Cooper, 47 Cal. 77; Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259, 265; 42 Pac. 820); and if the aggregate amount of the different counts of a complaint exceeds three hundred dollars, the court has jurisdiction. Ventura County v. Clay, 114 Cal. 242; 46 Pac. 9. In certiorari, the amount in controversy does not affect the jurisdiction (Heinlen v. Phillips, 88 Cal. 557; 26 Pac. 366). Costs are not included in determining the jurisdictional amount (Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545), where the amount demanded in the complaint is insufficient to confer jurisdiction (Henigan v. Ervin, 110 Cal. 37; 42 Pac. 457); neither is a percentage, added by authority of statute. Zabriskie v. Torrey, 20 Cal. 173.

Insolvency proceedings. An appeal also lies in insolvency proceedings, to review the judgment (Fisk v. His Creditors, 12 Cal. 281; and see People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115; People v. Rosborough, 29 Cal. 415); which is not now a special proceeding (People v. Rosborough, 29 Cal. 415; Fisk v. His Creditors, 12 Cal. 281); but neither certiorari (People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115) nor error lies in such cases. People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115; Kohlman v. Wright, 6 Cal. 230; Fisk v. His Creditors, 12 Cal. 281.

Probate matters. In probate matters an appeal lies from an order directing payment of a debt or claim, regardless of the amount thereof. Ex parte Orford, 102 Cal. 656, 36 Pac. 928.

Special proceedings. An appeal lies to the supreme court from a judgment in certiorari (Winter v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Cal. 269; Morley v. Elkins, 37 Cal. 454); in mandamus (Palache v. Hunt, 64 Cal. 473; 2 Pac. 245) to compel a trial judge to settle a statement on motion for a new trial (People v. Rosborough, 29 Cal. 415; Wood v. Strother, 76 Cal. 545; 9 Am. St. Rep. 249; 18 Pac. 766); in prohibition (Santa Cruz Gap etc. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 62 Cal. 40); in an action to determine, upon reference by the surveyor-general, the rights of the respective parties to purchase school-lands from the state (Risdon v. Prewett, 8 Cal. App. 434; 97 Pac. 73); and in an action brought, under the Bank Commissioners' Act, to force a bank into liquidation. People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo, 152 Cal. 261; 92 Pac. 481; but there is no appellate jurisdiction in the supreme court in contempt cases (In re Vance, 88 Cal. 262; 26 Pac. 101; Tyler v. Connolly, 65 Cal. 28; 2 Pac. 414; Sanchez v. Newman, 70 Cal. 210; 11 Pac. 645), although the amount of the fine is within its jurisdiction (Tyler v. Connolly, 65 Cal. 28; 2 Pac. 414; Ruggles v. Superior Court, 103 Cal. 128; 37 Pac. 211), and the proceeding is classed as criminal. Tyler v. Connolly, 65 Cal. 28; 2 Pac. 414.

Criminal cases. Under the constitution of 1849, the supreme court had no appellate jurisdiction of misdemeanors, or crimes less than a felony, and none could be conferred by the legislature in such cases (People v. Applegate, 5 Cal. 295; People v. Shear, 7 Cal. 139; People v. Vick, 7 Cal. 165; People v. Fowler, 9 Cal. 85; People v. Cornell, 16 Cal. 187; People v. War, 20 Cal. 117; People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459; People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98; People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389), but, under the present constitution an appeal lies to the supreme court in cases of misdemeanor prosecuted by indictment or information (People v. Pingree, 61 Cal. 141; People v. Jordan, 65 Cal. 644; 4 Pac. 683), and from a judgment rendered in a prosecution for misdemeanor in office. People v. Kalloch, 60 Cal. 113. The district court of appeal has jurisdiction of an appeal by the people, from an order made before judgment, setting aside an information charging the crime of murder. People v. White, 161 Cal. 310; 119 Pac. 79.

Appeal to wrong court. An appeal wrongly taken to the supreme court will be ordered transferred to a district court of appeal for decision (Bottle Mining etc. Co. v. Kern, 154 Cal. 96; 97 Pac. 25; People v. White, 161 Cal. 310; 119 Pac. 79); and an appeal improperly taken to a district court of appeal must be transferred to the supreme court. Erving v. Napa Valley Brewing Co., 17 Cal. App. 367; 119 Pac. 940; Asiatic Club v. Biggy, 160 Cal. 713; 117 Pac. 912; Risdon v. Prewett, 8 Cal. 434; 97 Pac. 73. The jurisdiction of a district court of appeal is limited to cases where the value of the property in controversy is less than two thousand and more than three hundred dollars. Erving v. Napa Valley Brewing Co., 17 Cal. App. 367; 119 Pac. 940; Bottle Mining etc. Co. v. Kern, 154 Cal. 96; 97 Pac. 25.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Construction of the section generally. This section is intended to clearly define the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court. Section 4 of article vi of the constitution, so far as it related to the appellate power, as it stood prior to amendments of 1862, was as follows: "The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases where the matter in dispute exceeds two hundred dollars, when the legality of any tax or impost, or municipal fine, is in question, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. . . ." And, as amended in 1862, is as follows: "The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; also, in all cases arising in the probate courts; and also in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. . . ." To have simply followed the terms of the constitution in defining the jurisdiction would have conveyed to one not familiar with the construction placed upon those terms by our court of last resort, but a faint idea of the extent or limit of that jurisdiction. In Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 252, 70 Am. Dec. 717, which was an action for a divorce from the bonds of matrimony by the wife against her husband, an objection was taken to the hearing of the appeal, based upon the ground of want of appellate jurisdiction, because no question of property was involved. Said Field, J., delivering the opinion of the court [quoting at length].

In Knowles v. Yates, 31 Cal. 84, which was a proceeding under the act of 1850, providing for contesting elections, it was contended that, under the amendment of 1862, the appellate jurisdiction of the court was confined to the class of cases enumerated in article iv, as amended, viz.:

1. To cases in equity;
2. To the cases at law involving questions of property or the legality of a tax, etc.;
3. To cases arising in the probate courts;
4. To criminal cases;

—And that therefore there was no appellate jurisdiction over special proceedings, or any class of cases not included within the constitutional enumeration. After argument and reargument, the court, Currey, C. J., delivering the opinion, sustained the jurisdiction. Said the learned justice, speaking for the court [quoting at length].

In constructing this section the commission kept steadily in view these authoritative expositions of the constitution, and have endeavored to engraft their results upon the text of the amendments of 1862. They do not use the phrases, "cases in equity," "cases at law," and it is a little singular, to say the least, that those phrases were inserted in the constitution more than ten years after the adoption of the Practice Act, the first section of which declared that there should be one form of civil actions, obliterating at once the distinctions between actions at law and suits in equity, abolishing the forms of all such actions and placing in their stead the proceedings under the Practice Act. The continued use of those phrases, and of the terms "ejectment," "trespass," "replevin," etc., when applied to proceedings in our courts, leads but to confusion, and has retarded the enforcement of the Practice Act in the spirit of its conception. An enumeration of the particular orders, etc., which are applicable per se, is omitted in this part of the code; they will be found in Part II, under the title "Appeals in Civil Actions."

2. Divorce decree. The supreme court possesses appellate jurisdiction from a decree rendered in a suit for divorce. Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249; 70 Am. Dec. 717.

3. Real property. Cases involving title to or possession of real property. Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 140; see also Paul v. Silver, 16 Cal. 73.

4. Distinction between civil and criminal cases involving municipal fines, etc. "Cases at law or civil actions involving legality of tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine," defined, and held to refer to civil cases as distinguished from criminal cases. The supreme court has not jurisdiction of a criminal case whenever it may be claimed the validity of a tax, etc., is involved. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

5. Money demands. Value of property in controversy. Before the amendments to the constitution (which went into effect January 1, 1863), the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court over money demands extends only to cases where the amount in dispute exceeded two hundred dollars. Luther v. Ship Apollo, 1 Cal. 15; Simmons v. Brainard, 14 Cal. 278; Crandall v. Blen, 15 Cal. 406; People v. Carman, 18 Cal. 693; Zabriskie v. Torrey, 20 Cal. 173; Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61; Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 199; 83 Am. Dec. 96; Meeker v. Harris, 23 Cal. 285; Bolton v. Landers, 27 Cal. 106. And it made no difference, although the enforcement of a mechanic's lien or foreclosure of a mortgage by which the demand was secured was asked for in the same case. Poland v. Carrigan, 20 Cal. 174. Since the adoption of the amendments (January 1, 1863), the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court has extended over money demands, etc., only where the amount in controversy was for the sum of three hundred dollars or more. Hopkins v. Cheeseman, 28 Cal. 180; Maxfield v.

Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28.

6. Definition and explanation of phrases, "amount in controversy," "value of property in controversy," etc. In Gordon v. Ross, 2 Cal. 156, and Doyle v. Seawall, 12 Cal. 280, it was held that costs might be added to the judgment of the court below, for the purpose of conferring appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court; and if, when added, the total amount exceeded two hundred (now three hundred) dollars, the supreme court had jurisdiction on appeal; but these cases were overruled in Dumphy v. Guindon, 13 Cal. 28, and it was held that costs were merely incidental to the suit, and formed no part of it for the purpose of an appeal. See, too, Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 89; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Bolton v. Landers, 27 Cal. 106; Zabriskie v. Torrey, 20 Cal. 173; see also Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 250; 70 Am. Dec. 717. It was held, also, that where the plaintiff is appellant, and the judgment is for the defendant, the jurisdiction of the supreme court is determined by the amount claimed by the complaint, for that is the amount in dispute in such cases. Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 410; Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 89. And in the last-cited case it was said that if the appeal is by the plaintiff, from a judgment in his favor, then the amount in dispute is the difference between the amount of the judgment and the sum claimed by the complaint; but this part of that decision was overruled in Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 33. In Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 201, 83 Am. Dec. 96, after quoting from and commenting on Gillespie v. Benson, and Votan v. Reese, the court held: "So, upon the same principle, if the appeal is taken by the defendant from a judgment rendered against him for a sum exceeding two hundred dollars, exclusive of costs and percentage, the supreme court had [prior to 1863, when amendments to article vi of the state constitution went into operation] jurisdiction of the case, because the amount of the judgment is the matter in dispute on appeal. So, too, if the appeal is taken by the defendant from a judgment in his favor when he has set up a counterclaim, if that judgment is for a sum more than two [now, since 1863, three] hundred dollars less than he claims in his answer, this court has jurisdiction. The interest due on the demand sued for forms a part of the amount to be included in the estimate of the 'amount in dispute.'" But Justice Sanderson, in reviewing these cases, says: "In actions for the recovery of money, this court has jurisdiction, if 'the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to three hundred dollars.' Const., art. vi, § 4. The demand, exclusive of interest, in this case amounts to five hundred and fifty dollars. The language of the constitution in respect to the jurisdiction of this court is the same as it is in respect to the jurisdiction of the district court, and there can be, therefore, no difference in the rules by which questions as to jurisdiction of the subject-matter are to be determined in the two courts. For the purpose of ascertaining whether the district court has jurisdiction, we look to the complaint, and in this class of cases, if the sum sued for amounts to three hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, that court has jurisdiction, and by parity of reason this court has jurisdiction on appeal. The amount sued for, exclusive of interest, is the test of the jurisdiction of this court, regardless of the judgment of the latter court. We dissent entirely from the dictum of the court in the case of Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 90, to the effect that where the plaintiff recovers in the district court less than he sues for, the test of the jurisdiction of this court, in the event the plaintiff appeals, is the difference between the judgment of the district court and the demand made in the complaint, exclusive of interest. All civil cases which the district courts have jurisdiction to try, this court has jurisdiction to review, no matter what the judgment of the district court may have been. If the plaintiff sues to recover a demand for five hundred dollars, and the district court gives him a judgment for three hundred only, his demand does not thereby become converted into a demand for two hundred dollars for the purpose of an appeal, should he be dissatisfied with the judgment and desire to bring his case to this court. On the contrary, in the sense of the constitution his demand in this court is precisely the same that it was in the court below, and is to be ascertained by looking to the complaint, and not by deducting the judgment of the district court from the demand alleged in the complaint. In other words, the ad damnum clause in the complaint is the test of jurisdiction in the court below." Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 546; Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 33.

7. Certiorari. Appeal from writ of certiorari. The supreme court has jurisdiction over appeals in cases of certiorari. Morley v. Elkins, 37 Cal. 454; see, however, People v. Carman, 18 Cal. 693.

8. Election cases. The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction over the decisions of county courts in election cases. Knowles v. Yates, 31 Cal. 82; Dickinson v. Van Horn, 9 Cal. 207.

9. Insolvency proceedings. It was decided in Kohlman v. Wright, 6 Cal. 231, and in Fisk v. His Creditors, 12 Cal. 281, not only that the supreme court had jurisdiction in error in insolvency cases, but that such errors might be brought up by appeal. (This was prior to the adoption of the amendments to Const., art. vi.) The jurisdiction in error has not been withdrawn by the constitutional amendments. Section 939 (§ 336) of the Practice Act gives an appeal from final judgment in special proceedings. People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 117.

10. Criminal cases. The supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases of a lesser grade than felony (not even on a writ of error, certiorari, or on appeal). People v. Shear, 7 Cal. 139; People v. Vick, 7 Cal. 165; People v. Applegate, 5 Cal. 295; People v. Fowler, 9 Cal. 86; People v. Cornell, 16 Cal. 187; People v. War, 20 Cal. 117; People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459; People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98. And the judgment of conviction of the lower court, and not the indictment, determines the character of this class of cases for the purposes of appeal. If the indictment be for a felony, but the judgment is for only a misdemeanor, the supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction. People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 391, and cases cited. A distinction is made where there is no evidence of a material fact, and where there is some evidence, but not enough to sustain a verdict. The supreme court has jurisdiction on appeal in criminal cases over the question, whether the verdict is contrary to the evidence in one case, as well as in the other. Whether a defendant in a criminal action is entitled to a new trial upon the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, is a question of law, and not a question of fact, within the meaning of article vi, § 4, of the constitution. People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565. See the several opinions in the case.

11. Generally, judgments, whether by default or otherwise, subject to appeal. It was held that, as to the right of appeal, there is no distinction between judgment by default and judgment after issue joined and a trial. There is no force in the suggestion that the supreme court exercises original interest of appellate jurisdiction, if it reviews errors on appeal from judgments by default. Although in such a case, as a matter of fact, the court below does not pass upon the sufficiency of the complaint, yet as a matter of law it does. Though entered by the clerk without the direction of the judge, it is as much the judgment of the court as if it had been announced from the bench, and the defendants are as much entitled to the opinion of the supreme court upon the sufficiency of the complaint as they would have been had they appeared and demurred. Questions of jurisdiction and of the sufficiency of the complaint upon the point whether the facts stated constituted a cause of action are never waived in any case, and may be made for the first time in the supreme court. Hallock v. Jaudin, 34 Cal. 173.

12. Order refusing transfer from district court to United States circuit court not appealable. It was held that from an order refusing to transfer an action from a district court of this state to the circuit court of the United States no appeal lies. The remedy is by mandamus in such cases. Hopper v. Kalkman, 17 Cal. 517; Brooks v. Calderwood, 19 Cal. 124.

13. Law of the case. When a decision is rendered in a particular case by the supreme court, such decision, whether right or wrong, becomes the law of the case, and is not subject to revision on a second appeal. It is conclusive of the rights of the parties. Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75 (see cases cited therein); Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 376; Clary v. Hoagland, 5 Cal. 476; 6 Cal. 685; Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 592; Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. (U. S.) 413, 424; 11 L. Ed. 658; Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387.

14. When remittitur has issued, jurisdiction of case is lost. When a remittitur has issued, and the court has adjourned for the term at which judgment was given, the supreme court has then lost all further jurisdiction over the case. Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 76. The supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction over its own judgments. Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387; but see note to § 45, [§ 53,] post.

15. Legislature can regulate mode of appeal. While the legislature cannot substantially impair the right of appeal, it is competent to regulate the mere mode in which this right must be exercised. Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297; 63 Am. Dec. 323. And for fuller information on the subject of jurisdiction, see notes to §§ 33, 43, ante, and 84, 85, 97, 104, 114, post.

§ 53. Powers in appealed cases. The supreme court may affirm, reverse, or modify any judgment or order appealed from, and may direct the proper judgment or order to be entered, or direct a new trial or further proceedings to be had. The decision of the court shall be given in writing, and in giving its decision, if a new trial be granted, the court shall pass upon and determine all the questions of law involved in the case, presented upon such appeal, and necessary to the final determination of the case. Its judgment in appealed cases shall be remitted to the court from which the appeal was taken.

Errors and defects are to be disregarded. Post, § 475.

Records, though not conclusive, are presumed correctly to determine the rights of the parties. Post, § 1963, subd. 17.

Costs on appeal. Post, § 1027.

Remittitur. Post, § 958.

Legislation § 53. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 45, and then read: "The court may reverse, affirm, or modify any order or judgment appealed from, and may direct the proper judgment or order to be entered, or direct a new trial or further proceedings to be had. Its judgment must be remitted to the court from which the appeal was taken."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, and renumbered § 53.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Decision as to moot questions. The court will not decide question not directly involved in the case, and not necessary to the judgment (West v. Smith, 5 Cal. 96), nor indulge in the discussion of abstract questions in a case over which it has no jurisdiction (People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98), nor decide moot cases (People v. Pratt, 30 Cal. 223), nor moot questions of law raised by counsel. State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 233; 81 Am. Dec. 118; Phelan v. Supervisors of San Francisco, 9 Cal. 15.

Affirmance of judgment. The dismissal of an appeal is, in effect, an affirmance of the judgment. Rowland v. Kreyenhagen, 24 Cal. 52.

Reversal of judgment. The effect of a reversal of judgment is to restore the rights of the parties to the same condition in which they were before the rendition of the judgment reversed. Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458; Falkner v. Hendy, 107 Cal. 49; 20 Pac. 21, 386; Ryan v. Tomlinson, 39 Cal. 639; Phelan v. Supervisors of San Francisco, 9 Cal. 15; Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 443. It does not necessarily bar further proceedings in the action. Id.; Sharp v. Miller, 66 Cal. 98; 4 Pac. 1065; Myers v. McDonald, 68 Cal. 162; 8 Pac. 809. Where the appellate court directs the kind of judgment to be rendered, instead of directing a modification of the judgment, there is, in effect, a reversal. Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458.

Modification of judgment. The appellate court may render such judgment as the court below should have rendered (Gahan v. Neville, 2 Cal. 81; Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 122; Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197; Crosby v. McDermitt, 7 Cal. 146; Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495; People v. Sierra Buttes Quartz Mining Co., 39 Cal. 511; Foucault v. Pinet, 43 Cal. 136; Noonan v. Hood, 49 Cal. 293); and may add to the judgment of reversal, directions that the cause be tried de novo, or may direct that partial issue be tried, leaving all other facts already found by the court as facts in the case, or it may enter or direct that the lower court enter judgment upon certain specified facts (Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458; and see Marziou v. Pioche, 10 Cal. 545; Soule v. Dawes, 14 Cal. 247; Soule v. Ritter, 20 Cal. 522; Myers v. McDonald, 68 Cal. 162; 8 Pac. 809); or it may modify an erroneous judgment to conform to the facts, and, as modified, affirm it (Swan v. Talbot, 152 Cal. 142; 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 94 Pac. 238; American-Hawaiian etc. Co. v. Butler, 17 Cal. App. 764; 121 Pac. 709; Welch v. Ware, 161 Cal. 641; 119 Pac. 1080; Sterling v. Gregory, 149 Cal. 117; 85 Pac. 305; People v. Kerr, 15 Cal. App. 273; 114 Pac. 584; Coghlan v. Quartararo, 15 Cal. App. 662; 115 Pac. 664; Mannix v. Tryon, 152 Cal. 31; 91 Pac. 983; Petitpierre v. Maguire, 155 Cal. 242; 100 Pac. 690; Sheppard v. Sheppard, 161 Cal. 348; 119 Pac. 492), without directing an entire reversal of the judgment. Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421; 95 Pac. 885; Petitpierre v. Maguire, 155 Cal. 242; 100 Pac. 690; Sheppard v. Sheppard, 15 Cal.

App. 619; 115 Pac. 751. Modification of the judgment appealed from will be ordered, where justice can be done, without remanding for a new trial. Atherton v. Fowler, 46 Cal. 320; Daves v. Southern Pacific Co., 98 Cal. 19; 35 Am. St. Rep. 133; 32 Pac. 708. Judgment may be modified by consent (Pearsall v. Henry, 153 Cal. 314; 95 Pac. 159), and a decree, erroneous in form, may, without a reversal, be modified to conform to the findings (Barrett-Hicks Co. v. Glas, 14 Cal. App. 289, 303; 111 Pac. 760); as, where the appellant was entitled to recover costs on the trial, it may be modified as to such costs, without reversal. Petitpierre v. Maguire, 155 Cal. 242; 100 Pac. 690. A modification of a fraudulent judgment does not operate to set it aside. Clark v. Dunnam, 46 Cal. 204.

When new trial results. Unless there is something in the opinion or order of the court to the contrary, an order reversing and remanding simply accords a new trial (Myers v. McDonald, 68 Cal. 162; 8 Pac. 809); but where a new trial is not authorized by the language of the judgment, any judgment rendered upon a new trial is null and void. Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458. The effect of the order, "reversed and remanded," is, simply, to set aside the judgment and to grant a new trial (Ryan v. Tomlinson, 39 Cal. 639). A case may be remanded for a new trial upon a particular issue (Mayberry v. Whittier, 144 Cal. 322; 78 Pac. 16); but where the new trial is granted only on a single issue, the former determination of the trial court upon the remaining issues is allowed to stand. Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1; 35 Pac. 437. Thus, a judgment against two, where only one appeals, may be reversed as to the one who appeals, and affirmed as to the other (Minturn v. Baylis, 33 Cal. 129); or it may be affirmed upon remission of damages. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432; De Costa v. Massachusetts Flat Water etc. Co., 17 Cal. 613; Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175; Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 99; Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160; Atherton v. Fowler, 46 Cal. 320. A new trial will be awarded, and not a modification, where the wrong construction is placed upon a written instrument in evidence. Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122; 85 Am. Dec. 103. Where the construction placed by the lower court upon its findings is doubtful, a new trial should be ordered. Estate of Richardson, 94 Cal. 63; 15 L. R. A. 635; 29 Pac. 484. The appellate court will direct a new trial, where the findings require judgment for a party other than the one for which judgment was had, where the findings were based on evidence erroneously admitted or excluded; otherwise it will modify the judgment. Sun Ins. Co. v. White, 118 Cal. 468; 50 Pac. 546. A party will not be entitled to a new trial, however, where the judgment is for such a small amount that the court may apply the maxim, De minimis non curat lex. Willson v. McEvoy, 52 Cal. 169.

Direct proper judgment. The supreme court, on reversal of the judgment, has power to order judgment in favor of the other party (Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458; Pollard v. Putnam, 54 Cal. 630; Schroeder v. Schweizer Lloyd etc. Gesellschaft, 60 Cal. 467; 44 Am. Rep. 61); or it may direct affirmance upon the remission of excessive damages, and if the excess is not remitted, order the cause remanded for a new trial. Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160; Atherton v. Fowler, 46 Cal. 323; Daves v. Southern Pacific Co., 98 Cal. 19; 35 Am. St. Rep. 133; 32 Pac. 708. The supreme court, under the plenary powers vested in it by this section, will order a judgment only in a proper case, and a new trial where the action seems to demand it. Alden v. Mayfield, 164 Cal. 6; 127 Pac. 44.

New trial. While the parties have a right to retry the cause after judgment reversed, yet they cannot do so in disregard of the opinion of the supreme court, as the directions thereof become a part of the judgment. Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75. The superior court can enter no other judgment than the one directed. Argenti v. Sawyer, 32 Cal. 414. The lower court, having passed on the merits of the controversy on reversal of the judgment, can take no further proceedings, unless authorized by the supreme court, except such as may be necessary to give effect to the judgment on appeal: the whole matter is res adjudicata (Crowell v. Gilmore, 17 Cal. 194; Soule v. Ritter, 20 Cal. 522; McLaughlin v. Kelly, 22 Cal. 211; Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176; Satterlee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489; Argenti v. Sawyer, 32 Cal. 414). The reversal, by the supreme court of the United States, of a judgment of affirmance of the state supreme court, does not immediately reverse the judgment of the superior court: upon the coming down of the remittitur, the appeal is still pending in the state supreme court, for further disposition not inconsistent with the decision of the Federal supreme court. Harding v. Harding, 148 Cal. 397; 83 Pac. 434. If the appellant dies after the submission of the appeal, and the judgment and order appealed from are affirmed, the affirmance will be entered nunc pro tunc as of the date of the submission. Estate of Dolbeer, 149 Cal. 227; 86 Pac. 695. Where the appellate court affirms an order granting a new trial, it is proper to grant the new trial, rather than to order judgment. Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911. A new trial will be awarded, and not a modification, where a wrong construction is placed upon a written instrument in evidence. Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122; 85 Am. Dec. 103. Extreme caution should be exercised in refusing a new trial on reversal; it should be refused only in cases where it is plain, either from the pleadings or from the nature of the controversy, that the party against whom the reversal is procured cannot prevail. Schroeder v. Schweizer Lloyd etc. Gesellschaft, 60 Cal. 467; 44 Am. Rep. 61; Oakland Paving Co. v. Bagge, 79 Cal. 439; 21 Pac. 855; Estate of Richardson, 94 Cal. 63; 15 L. R. A. 635; 29 Pac. 484.

Written decisions. While the constitution requires that all decisions shall be in writing, yet the legislature cannot require the supreme court to give in writing the reasons for its decision. Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24; 73 Am. Dec. 565; and see also Estate of Jessup, 81 Cal. 408; 6 L. R. A. 594; 21 Pac. 976; 22 Pac. 742, 1028. There is a distinction between the decision of the court and the opinion; the decision is the judgment of the court, while the opinion is the reasons given for the judgment. Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24; 73 Am. Dec. 565; Wilson v. Wilson, 64 Cal. 92; 27 Pac. 861. The trial court may give a wrong reason for its decision; yet if it is correct in law, it will not be reversed, as the appellate court will not review the reasons for its decision: the statute does not make it incumbent upon the prevailing party to defend the logic of the trial judge (Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434; Davey v. Southern Pacific Co., 116 Cal. 325; 48 Pac. 117; Groome v. Almstead, 101 Cal. 425; 35 Pac. 1021; Shanklin v. Hall, 100 Cal. 26; 34 Pac. 636; White v. Merrill, 82 Cal. 14; 22 Pac. 1129; People v. Crowey, 56 Cal. 36; Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593; Hubbard v. Sullivan, 18 Cal. 508; Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172; Helm v. Dumars, 3 Cal. 454); besides, any unnecessary expression of opinion by the judge does not settle the law of the case. State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 233; 81 Am. Dec. 118.

Remittitur. The effect of filing the remittitur in the lower court, where everything is regular, and free from fraud or imposition, is to deprive the supreme court of jurisdiction, unless for some valid reason the remittitur is recalled and the jurisdiction resumed. Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 193; Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 231; Phelan v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 39; Blanc v. Bowman, 22 Cal. 23; Rowland v. Kreyenhagen, 24 Cal. 52; Vance v. Peña, 36 Cal. 328; Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178; People v. Sprague, 57 Cal. 147; People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247; 32 Pac. 7; Estate of Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479. Jurisdiction, however, is not lost until the remittitur is filed in the lower court. Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 193; Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 231. Where accident, fraud, imposition, inadvertence, or mistake is shown, the supreme court may recall the remittitur and stay proceedings. Rowland v. Kreyenhagen, 24 Cal. 52; Vance v. Peña, 36 Cal. 328; Estate of Jessup, 81 Cal. 408; 6 L. R. A. 594; 21 Pac. 976; 22 Pac. 742, 1028. If the clerk improperly or improvidently sends the remittitur to the lower court, the supreme court is not thereby deprived of jurisdiction (Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 193; Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 231); as where he makes a wrong entry and transmits the wrong remittitur. Vance v. Peña, 36 Cal. 328. In such cases the supreme court does not lose jurisdiction, and may recall the remittitur even after it has been filed, correct any error, vacate the judgment, and restore the cause to the calendar. Vance v. Peña, 36 Cal. 328; Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178; Bernal v. Wade, 46 Cal. 640. On the death of one of the parties after argument and submission but before decision, if the remittitur has been sent to the lower court, it may be ordered returned, judgment set aside, and the court may render a decision as of the date of the submission. Black v. Shaw, 20 Cal. 68; Savings and Loan Society v. Gibb, 21 Cal. 595; Holloway v. Galliac, 49 Cal. 149. A petition for rehearing, deposited in an express-office so as to reach the clerk within the limit of time fixed by the rule, will be held, in contemplation of law, to be in the hands of the clerk, and the remittitur, having gone down, will be recalled (Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178; Bernal v. Wade, 46 Cal. 640); but a printed transcript in course of transmission is not within this rule. Ward v. Healy, 110 Cal. 587; 42 Pac. 1071. The remittitur will not be recalled after a dismissal for failure to file a brief. People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247; 32 Pac. 7.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. When court will not reverse judgment of lower court. The supreme court will not reverse an order made by a judge, refusing to grant a new trial, unless there has been a gross abuse of discretion in the premises. The court will not review the verdict of a jury, where the evidence is contradictory, or where the jury refuse to give full credit to the testimony of witnesses. Duell v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 5 Cal. 86. The findings of a court, etc., will be taken to be correct, unless it clearly appears to the contrary. Every intendment is in favor of the correctness of a court of general jurisdiction, unless it clearly appears to the contrary. McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 90; Ford v. Holton, 5 Cal. 319; Morgan v. Hugg, 5 Cal. 409; Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272; Dickinson v. Van Horn, 9 Cal. 207; Owen v. Morton, 24 Cal. 378.

2. Setting aside order granting new trial. The supreme court have repeatedly decided that the power to grant new trials is one of legal discretion, and the abuse of that discretion, only, will justify an interference with the order. It is only in rare instances and upon very strong grounds that the supreme court will set aside an order granting a new trial. Quinn v Kenyon, 22 Cal. 82.

3. When court will not direct entry of final judgment of lower court. The supreme court will not direct the entry of a final judgment when there are controverted facts to be decided. Lick v. Diaz, 37 Cal. 446.

4. Correction of false or mistaken entry or order in minutes of supreme court. When there is a false order entered by mistake by the clerk of the supreme court, the minutes of the chief justice may be used in a direct proceeding to amend the record for the purpose of correcting the minutes of the clerk, even after a remittitur has issued. Vance v. Pena 36 Cal. 328.

5. Correction of errors in records of lower court. The supreme court cannot correct errors in the records of a lower court. Applications for that purpose must be made to the court in the record of which the error exists. Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107.

6. Power of court to make rules. The power of the court to make rules for its government, and the time when such rules take effect, is provided for in §§ 129, 130, post.

§ 54. Concurrence necessary to transact business. The concurrence of three justices of the supreme court is necessary for the issuance of any writ, or the transaction of any business, except such as can be done at chambers; provided, that each of the justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the state upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself or the supreme court, or any department, or judge thereof, or before any superior court in the state, or any judge thereof.

Concurrence of judges. See Const., art. vi, § 2.
Business at chambers. Post, § 165.
Habeas corpus. See U. S. Const., art. v, Amdts.; Const., art. vi, § 4. See also post, §§ 76, 165. Generally. Pen. Code, §§ 1268 et seq., 1473 et seq., 1492 et seq.

Legislation § 54. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 46, and then read: "The presence of three justices is necessary for the transaction of business, but one or more of the justices may transact such business as can be done at chambers, and may adjourn the court from day to day, with the same effect as if all were present."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25, and renumbered § 54.
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Concurrence, defined. The joint concurrence of four justices, necessary for the transaction of business by the court, means a union in action and design of the required number of justices qualified, with power to act at the very moment of the decision; the functions of a justice absent from the state are suspended, and a previous concurrence of such absent justice, in an order made during his absence, is of no effect. People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 576, 581; 114 Pac. 48, 54. A judgment of the district court of appeal becomes final, unless within thirty days after such judgment a valid order is made by the supreme court that the cause be heard and determined by the court last named. People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 581; 114 Pac. 48. Two justices of a district court of appeal cannot render a judgment (Daggett v. Southwest Packing Co., 155 Cal. 762; 103 Pac. 202): the three judges of that court must concur in the judgment. Application of Ladue, 15 Cal. App. 188; 117 Pac. 586; Application of Woods, 17 Cal. App. 323; 123 Pac. 1135; Application of Galivan, 17 Cal. App. 624; 120 Pac. 1123.

§ 55. Transfer of books, papers, and actions. All records, books, papers, causes, actions, proceedings, and appeals lodged, deposited, or pending in the supreme court abolished by the constitution, are transferred to the supreme court herein provided for, which has the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance lodged, deposited, filed, or commenced therein, or, in cases of appeal, appealed thereto.

Transfer of papers. Const., art. xxii, § 3.
Legislation § 55. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 25.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 56. Remittiturs in transferred cases. In all cases of appeal transferred to the supreme court, its judgments shall be remitted to the superior courts of the counties, or cities and counties from which the appeals were taken respectively, with the same force and effect as if said cases had been appealed to the supreme court from such superior courts.

Remittitur. See post, § 958.
Legislation § 56. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 26.

§ 57. Appeals in probate proceedings and contested election cases. Appeals in probate proceedings and contested election cases shall be given preference in hearing in the supreme court, and be placed on the calendar in the order of their date of issue, next after cases in which the people of the state are parties.

Legislation § 57. 1. Added by Stats. 1887, p. 82, and then read: "Appeals in probate proceedings shall be given preference in hearing in the supreme court, and be placed on the calendar in the order of their date of issue, next after cases in which the people of the state are parties."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The constitution, art. vi, § 5, [1849,] does not provide fully for the election of district judges. Statutory regulations are required to give efficacy to the constitution, which is not self-executing. The legislature is required to pass laws providing for and regulating the conduct of the election. And an election for district judge would be invalid, unless made in pursuance of the statutory regulations. People v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49; 70 Am. Dec. 854; see further, for elections to fill vacancy, term, etc., People v. Weller, 11 Cal. 77; People v. Burbank, 12 Cal. 378; Brodie v. Campbell, 17 Cal. 11. See Pol. Code, §§ 1042, 1043.

CHAPTER IV.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

§ 65. Judges and elections.
§ 66. Counties having two or more judges.
§ 67. Superior court of the city and county of San Francisco.
§ 67a. Superior court of Los Angeles County.
§ 67b. Extra sessions of the superior court.
§ 68. Terms of office.
§ 69. Computation of years of office.
§ 70. Vacancies.
§ 71. Superior courts, by judges of other counties.
§ 72. Judges pro tempore.
§ 74. Adjournments.
§ 75. Jurisdiction of two kinds.
§ 76. Original jurisdiction.
§ 77. Appellate jurisdiction.
§ 79. Transfer of books, papers, and actions.

§ 65. Judges and elections. There shall be in each of the organized counties, or cities and counties of the state, a superior court, for each of which one judge, and for some of which two or more judges, as hereinafter in subsequent sections specially provided, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general state elections, next preceding the expiration of the terms of office of their predecessors respectively; provided, that in and for the counties of Yuba and Sutter combined only one superior judge shall be elected, who shall hold the superior courts of both said counties, and in accordance with such rules for the dispatch of business in both said counties as he may adopt.

Number of superior judges. See Const., art. vi, § 6.

Jurisdiction of superior courts. See post, §§ 75–78.

Legislation § 65. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 26, to conform to Const. 1879. The original § 65 was included in original code chapter iv, §§ 54–78, Title I, which fixed the terms, etc., of the district courts in the seventeen judicial districts of the state, and was repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 66. Counties having two or more judges. In each of the counties of Alameda, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, and Sonoma, there shall be elected two judges of the superior court; and in each of said counties, and in any county, or city and county, other than the city and county of San Francisco, in which there shall be more than one judge of the superior court, the judges of such court may hold as many sessions of said court at the same time as there are judges thereof, and shall apportion the business among themselves as equally as may be.

Number of superior judges. See Const., art. vi, §§ 6, 7.

Legislation § 66. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 26, to conform to Const. 1879.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

See ante, Legislation, § 65, for repeal of original § 66.

§ 67. Superior court of the city and county of San Francisco. In the city and county of San Francisco, there shall be sixteen judges of the superior court, any one or more of whom may hold court; and there may be as many sessions of said court at the same time, as there are judges thereof. The said judges shall choose from their own number, a presiding judge, who may at any time be removed as presiding judge, and another chosen in his place by a vote of any nine of them. The presiding judge shall distribute the business of the court among the judges thereof, and prescribe the order of business, and perform such other duties as the judges of said court may by rule provide. The judgments, orders and proceedings of any session of the superior court, held by any one or more of the judges of said court, shall be equally as effective as if all of said judges of said court presided at such session.

Within ninety days after this act becomes a law, the governor shall appoint four judges of the superior court in the city and county of San Francisco, in addition to the twelve superior court judges already provided for by law, in and for said city and county of San Francisco, state of California, who shall hold office until the first Monday after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and fifteen. At the next general election to be held in November, nineteen hundred and fourteen, four additional judges of the superior court shall be elected in the city and county of San Francisco, who shall be successors of the judges appointed hereunder for the term prescribed by the constitution and by law. The salaries of the said additional judges shall be the same in amount and be paid in the same manner and at the same time as the salaries of the other judges of the superior court in and for the city and county of San Francisco, and now authorized by law.

Number of superior judges. See Const., art. vi, § 6.

Legislation § 67. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 26, to conform to Const. 1879.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 48, (1) in first sentence substituting "there shall be sixteen judges" for "there shall be elected twelve judges"; (2) in second sentence, (a) adding "as presiding judge," after "removed," and (b) substituting "nine of them" for "seven of them," at end of sentence; (3) in third sentence, adding at end, "and perform such other duties as the judges of said court may by rule provide"; (4) in fourth sentence, substituting "equally as effective as if all of said judges" for "equally effective as if all the judges"; (5) adding the second paragraph.

See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 67.

§ 67a. Superior court of Los Angeles County. In counties of the first class there shall be eighteen judges of the superior court, any one or more of whom may hold court, and there may be as many sessions of said court at the same time as there are judges thereof. The said judges shall choose from their own number a presiding judge, who may at any time be removed as presiding judge and another judge chosen in his place by a vote of any twelve of them. The presiding judge shall distribute the business of the court among the judges thereof, and prescribe the order of business and perform such other duties as the judges of the said court may by rule provide. The judgments, orders and proceedings of any session of the superior court held by any one or more of the judges of said court shall be equally as effective as if all the said judges of said court presided at such session. Within thirty days after this act goes into effect, the governor shall appoint six additional judges of the superior court in counties of the first class in addition to the twelve superior court judges already provided by law in and for the said counties of the first class who shall hold office until the first Monday after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and fifteen. At the next general election to be held in November, A. D. nineteen hundred and fourteen, six additional judges of the superior court shall be elected in counties of the first class, who shall be successors of the judges appointed hereunder, to hold office for the term prescribed by the constitution and by law. The salaries of said additional judges shall be the same in amount and be paid in the same manner and at the same time as the salaries of the other judges of the said counties of the first class now authorized by law.

Legislation § 67a. 1. Added by Stats. 1909, p. 11.

2. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 334, (1) in first sentence, substituting "In counties of the first class there shall be eighteen judges" for "In counties of the second class there shall be twelve judges"; (2) at end of second sentence, substituting "by a vote of any twelve of them" for "by a vote of any seven of them"; (3) at end of fourth sentence, substituting "presided at such session" for "presided as such session," the "as" of the original section being evidently a typographical error; (4) recasting the fifth sentence, the original reading, "Within thirty days after this act becomes a law, the governor shall appoint three additional judges of the superior court in counties of the second class in addition to the nine superior court judges already provided for by law in and for the said county of Los Angeles, state of California, who shall hold office until the first Monday after the first day of January, 1911"; (5) in sixth sentence, substituting (a) "in November, A. D. 1914, six additional judges" for "in November, A. D. 1910, three additional judges," and (b) "counties of the first class" for "counties of the second class"; (6) in seventh (the last) sentence, substituting "said counties of the first class" for "superior court of Los Angeles County."

§ 67b. Extra sessions of the superior court. Whenever, in the opinion of the judge or a majority of the judges of the superior court of any county, or city and county, the public interests so justify or require, one or more sessions of said superior court, to be known as extra sessions of said superior court, may be held in addition to and at the same time as the sessions of said court spoken of in sections numbered sixty-six and sixty-seven of this code.

Whenever the judge or a majority of the judges of the superior court of any county or city and county shall decide that an extra session of said court shall be held, said judge or a majority of said judges shall appoint the time when said extra session shall be held, but no extra session of any superior court shall continue beyond the thirty-first day of December of the year in which such session is established. The judge or a majority of the judges of said superior court shall likewise appoint a place, within the county seat of said county or city and county, where such extra session of said court shall be held, and shall have the same power and authority to provide a place for holding such extra session of said court as is had by a judge of a superior court to provide a place for holding a session of a superior court.

Whenever, in a county or city and county having but one judge of the superior court, said judge shall provide for an extra session of said court, he shall, at the time of so providing or from time to time during the continuance of said extra session, apportion to the judge who may preside over said extra session such portion of the business of said court as he may desire, and at the close of such extra session shall order such portions of said business so apportioned and not transacted to be transferred to himself.

Whenever, in any county or city and county having more than one judge of the superior court, a majority of said judges shall provide for an extra session of said court, a majority of said judges, at the time of so providing or from time to time during the continuance of said extra session, shall order transferred to the judge who may preside over such extra session from the judges to whom they have been assigned according to law or the rules of said court, such portions of the business of said court as they may select; and, at the close of such extra session shall order retransferred to the judges of said court such portions of said business so transferred as shall not have been transacted. Except as above provided, any rules of any superior court relating to the transfer of any business from one judge of said court to another shall apply to the transfer of any business duly assigned to the judge presiding over any extra session from said judge to any judge of said court.

Whenever an extra session of the superior court of any county or city and county has been provided for, the judge or a majority of the judges of said superior court shall invite and authorize a judge of the superior court of some other county or city and county to hold and preside over such extra session, and upon such invitation and authorization such judge may so serve.

Upon the request of the judge or a majority of the judges of the superior court of any county or city and county, the governor of the state shall designate and authorize, to hold and preside over such extra session of the superior court of said county or city and county, a judge of the superior court of some other county or city and county; and upon such designation and authorization by the governor such judge must so serve.

The judgments, orders, and proceedings of any extra session of any superior court, held in accordance with the provisions of this section, shall be equally effective as if any or all of the judges of said court presided at such session. Any judge or any number of the judges of any superior court may hold and preside over any extra session of said court, with or without, the judge designated and authorized to hold and preside over said session. Any judge of any superior court may perform in connection with any business duly assigned to the judge presiding over any extra session of said court any act which he could perform in connection with any business assigned to any other judge of said court. Any judge, holding or presiding over any extra session of a superior court, may perform in chambers or in court, in connection with any business duly assigned to him, any act which could be performed by any judge of said court, in chambers or in court, in connection with such business if duly assigned to himself; but no judge, holding or presiding over any extra session of any superior court, shall perform, in chambers or in court, any act in connection with any business that has not been duly assigned to him.

All provisions of the laws of this state applying to the compensation of a judge of a superior court, holding the superior court in a county other than his home county, shall apply to judges holding extra sessions of a superior court in any county other than his home county.

Legislation § 67b. Added by Stats. 1909, p. 1004.

Majority action. A request, made by a majority of the judges of a superior court, necessarily constitutes a request made by one judge. Williams v. Hawkins, 20 Cal. App. 161; 128 Pac. 754.

§ 68. Terms of office. The term of office of judges of the superior court shall be six years from and after the first Monday of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the twelve judges of the superior court elected in the city and county of San Francisco at the general state election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine shall have so classified, or shall so classify themselves, by lot, that four of them shall go out of office at the end of one year, four of them at the end of three years, and four of them at the end of five years from the first Monday of January, eighteen hundred and eighty; and the entry of such classification shall have been, or shall be, made in the minutes of the court, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof filed in the office of the secretary of state; and provided further, that all the other superior judges elected at the general state election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine shall go out of office at the end of five years from the first Monday of January, eighteen hundred and eighty.

Term of office. See Const., art. vi, § 6.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 68.

§ 69. Computation of years of office. The years during which a judge of a superior court is to hold office are to be computed respectively from and including the first Monday of January of any one year to and excluding the first Monday of January of the next succeeding year.

Computation of time. See Const., art. vi, § 6. See ante, § 41.

Legislation § 69. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 27, to conform to Const. 1879.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 69.

Excluding Monday. The constitution of the state seems to exclude the first Monday, in computing the term of the judges of the superior court. Merced Bank v. Rosenthal, 99 Cal. 39; 31 Pac. 849; 33 Pac. 732.

§ 70. Vacancies. If a vacancy occur in the office of judge of a superior court, the governor shall appoint an eligible person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a judge to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the judge so elected shall hold office for the remainder of the unexpired term.

Vacancy.

1. Filling. See Const., art. vi, § 6. See ante, § 42.

2. In office, and mode of supplying. See Pol. Code, §§ 995 et seq.

3. Does not affect pending proceedings. See post, § 184.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 70.

§ 71. Superior courts, by judges of other counties. A judge of any superior court may hold the superior court in any county, at the request of the judge or judges of the superior court thereof, and, upon the request of the governor, it shall be his duty to do so; and in either case the judge holding the court shall have the same power as a judge thereof.

Sitting for another judge. See Const., art. vi, § 8. See post, § 160.

Legislation § 71. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 27, to conform to Const. 1879.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Holding court by request. This section provides a mode of securing the attendance of another judge, where the judge of the court is disqualified; a change of the place of trial in criminal cases, on the ground of the disqualification of the judge, is not authorized by law (People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327), but it is permissible in civil cases. Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140; 21 Pac. 527, 855. A judge so holding court in another county is presumed to be acting legally, and upon a proper request, in the absence of any showing to the contrary. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171; 31 Pac. 933.

Power of judge acting out of county. The provision giving a judge, holding court in another county on request, the same power as the judge of that county, is constitutional (Gardner v. Jones, 126 Cal. 614; 59 Pac. 126; and see also Kirkwood v. Soto, 87 Cal. 394; 25 Pac. 488); and a judge so acting has the same power as the judge for whom he acts. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171; 31 Pac. 933.

§ 72. Judges pro tempore. Any cause in a superior court may be tried by a judge pro tempore, who must be a member of the bar admitted to practice before the supreme court, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court, and sworn to try the cause; and his action in the trial of such cause shall have the same effect as if he were a judge of such court. A judge pro tempore shall, before entering upon his duties in any cause, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of judge pro tempore in the cause wherein —— is plaintiff, and —— is defendant, according to the best of my ability."

Judge.
1. Pro tempore. Const., art. vi, § 8.
2. Superior, must be admitted before supreme court. See post, § 157.

Legislation § 72. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 27, to conform to Const. 1879.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 72.

§ 73. Sessions. The superior courts shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted), and they shall hold their sessions at the county seats of the several counties, or cities and counties, respectively. They shall hold regular sessions, commencing on the first Mondays of January, April, July, and October, and special sessions at such other times as may be prescribed by the judge or judges thereof; provided, that in the city and county of San Francisco the presiding judge shall prescribe the times of holding such special sessions.

Duties of superior judges, generally. See Pol. Code, §§ 4150, 4151.
Always open. See Const., art. vi, § 5; post, § 134.
Holidays, etc. See ante, § 10; post, §§ 134, 135.

Legislation § 73. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 27, to conform to Const. 1879.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 73.

Superior court always open. Terms of the superior court were abolished by the constitution of 1879. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541; 11 Pac. 240. Prior to that time, it was held, under § 76, post, which then provided therefor and expressly authorized it, that the superior court was always open to hear special proceedings of a civil nature. Stewart v. Mahoney Mining Co., 54 Cal. 149.

Ministerial acts may be performed on holiday. See note ante, § 13.

Sessions of superior court. A session of court means the time during which the court is in fact held at a place appointed, and engaged in the transaction of business. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541; 11 Pac. 240; Falltrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 613; 51 Pac. 947.

Recess. By the term "recess" is meant the time in which the court is not actually engaged in business. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 641; 11 Pac. 240; Falltrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 613; 51 Pac. 947.

§ 74. Adjournments. Adjournments from day to day, or from time to time, are to be construed as recesses in the sessions, and shall not prevent the court from sitting at any time.

Adjournments from time to time mere recesses in the sessions. See ante, § 48.

Legislation § 74. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 28, to conform to Const. 1879.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
See ante, Legislation § 65, for repeal of original § 74.

Adjournment presumed. It will be presumed, in favor of a judgment, that the court regularly adjourned, although the record fails to show it. Doty v. Jenkins, 112 Cal. 497; 77 Pac. 1104.

§ 75. Jurisdiction of two kinds. The jurisdiction of the superior courts is of two kinds:

1. Original; and,

2. Appellate.

Legislation § 75. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 84, and then applied to county courts.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 28, (1) renumbering the section § 75, and (2) changing the words "this court" to "the superior courts."
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Jurisdiction, defined. While jurisdiction has been defined to be the power to hear and determine (Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 43 Cal. 365; Ex parte Bennett, 44 Cal. 84), and does not depend upon the rightfulness of the decision (Sherer v. Superior Court, 96 Cal. 653; 31 Pac. 565), yet it may be understood that the power to pronounce the resulting judgment constitutes a part of the subject-matter over which jurisdiction extends. Crew v. Pratt, 119 Cal. 131; 51 Pac. 44.

§ 76. Original jurisdiction. The superior courts shall have original jurisdiction:

1. In all cases in equity;

2. In all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is not capable of pecuniary estimation;

3. In all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars.

4. Of actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, of all matters of probate, of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and of all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for.

5. In all criminal cases amounting to felony, and cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for. Said courts shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor. Said courts and their judges, or any of them, shall have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, and of habeas corpus on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties. Injunctions and writs of prohibition may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

Jurisdiction of superior court. See Const., art. vi, § 5.

Jurisdiction in eminent domain. See post, § 1243.

Venue of actions. Post, §§ 392 et seq.

Act conferring upon superior judges powers of probate, district, and county judges. See Stats. 1880, p. 23 (Bancroft ed., p. 115).

Legislation § 76. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 28; based on original code §§ 57, 85, defining the respective jurisdiction of the district courts and the county courts created by Const. 1849. Original code § 57 read: "The jurisdiction of the district courts extends: 1. To all civil actions for relief formerly given in courts of equity; 2. To all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is not capable of pecuniary estimation; 3. To all civil actions (except actions of forcible entry and detainer) in which the subject of litigation is capable of pecuniary estimation, which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; 4. To all special proceedings not within the jurisdiction of the county and probate courts, as defined in this code; 5. To the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its powers; 6. To the trial of all indictments for treason, misprision of treason, murder, and manslaughter." Original code § 85 read: "Its original jurisdiction extends: 1. To actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; 2. To actions of forcible entry and detainer; 3. To proceedings in insolvency; 4. To all special cases or proceedings in which the law giving the remedy or authorizing the proceedings confers the jurisdiction upon it; 5. To the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its powers; 6. To inquire, by the intervention of a grand jury, of all public offenses committed or triable in the county; 7. To the trial of all indictments, except for treason, misprision of treason, murder, and manslaughter."

The original § 76 related to the duration of the terms of the district courts.

Original jurisdiction. Defining the jurisdiction of a court limits it (Ex parte Attorney-General, 1 Cal. 85), but the grant of original jurisdiction, without words of exclusion, does not deprive other courts of concurrent jurisdiction. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573; Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490; Stoppelkamp v. Mangeot, 42 Cal. 316; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387; Learned v. Castle, 67 Cal. 41; 7 Pac. 34. Thus, where jurisdiction is conferred on a justice's court in certain cases, the district court is not deprived of jurisdiction in those cases where the amount in controversy is within its jurisdiction. Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 219; Yolo County v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387. Where jurisdiction is conferred by the constitution on courts of general jurisdiction, it cannot be taken away by statute. Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 219; Fitzgerald v. Urton, 4 Cal. 235; Caulfield v. Stevens, 28 Cal. 118; Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573; Yolo County v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193; Stoppelkamp v. Mangeot, 42 Cal. 316.

Equitable jurisdiction. Original jurisdiction over suits in equity is conferred by the constitution, and any act of the legislature seeking to take away that jurisdiction, or transfer it to another court, is unconstitutional. Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490; and see Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 362; Clarke v. Perry, 5 Cal. 58; 63 Am. Dec. 82; Griggs v. Clark, 23 Cal. 427. The court, while keeping within the rules and principles upon which equitable jurisdiction is founded, will adapt and apply its jurisdiction to such new suits in equity as may arise (Dougherty v. Creary, 30 Cal. 290; 89 Am. Dec. 116; and see Aldrich v. Willis, 55 Cal. 81); and, having the same power in suits in equity as the court of chancery had, it will set aside a judgment for fraud and collusion (Sanford v. Head, 5 Cal. 297), appoint a master to execute a deed for a deceased sheriff (People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406; 68 Am. Dec. 331), compel the surrender and cancellation of papers (Lewis v. Tobias, 10 Cal. 574), complete the foreclosure of a mortgage after the death of the mortgagee (Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123), settle partnership accounts (Griggs v. Clark, 23 Cal. 427), prevent, by injunction, irreparable injury (Lewis v. Tobias, 10 Cal. 574; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127), construe the will of a testator after it had been admitted to probate (Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387; Williams v. Williams, 73 Cal. 99; 14 Pac. 394; Siddall v. Harrison, 73 Cal. 560; 15 Pac. 130; McDaniel v. Pattison, 98 Cal. 86; 27 Pac. 651; 32 Pac. 805); but it should never entertain a suit to construe a will that has been probated, except where there is some special reason for seeking its interpretation. Siddall v. Harrison, 73 Cal. 560; 15 Pac. 130. Testamentary and probate matters are not exclusively under the jurisdiction of the probate court; most of the powers of the probate court belong peculiarly and originally to a court of chancery, and courts of equity still retain jurisdiction. Clarke v. Perry, 5 Cal. 58; 63 Am. Dec. 82; Deck v. Gerke, 12 Cal. 433; 73 Am. Dec. 555; Brodrib v. Brodrib, 56 Cal. 563; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387; Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 362. In all cases where there are peculiar circumstances of embarrassment, the superior court will assume jurisdiction, in probate matters, to prevent waste, delay, and expense, and thus conclude the action without vexatious litigation (Deck v. Gerke, 12 Cal. 433; 73 Am. Dec. 555); and a guardian's account may be opened by a court of equity, after approval by the probate court (Brodrib v. Brodrib, 56 Cal. 563); and where the powers of the probate court are inadequate to do justice, a court of equity alone can and will afford relief; but it cannot go into an accounting of a copartnership, nor determine the ownership of shares of stock not yet a part of the estate. Raisch v. Warren, 18 Cal. App. 655; 124 Pac. 95.

Prohibition. The writ does not lie to restrain the prosecution of an action by city authorities to condemn a right of way for public purposes. Bishop v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 226; 25 Pac. 435; Pacific Railway Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449; 25 Am. St. Rep. 201; 13 L. R. A. 754; 27 Pac. 768.

Injunction. One court has no power to interfere with the judgments and decrees of another court of concurrent jurisdiction, unless the latter court, by reason of want of jurisdiction, is unable to afford relief (Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 268; Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520; Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77; Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607; Hockstacker v. Levy, 11 Cal. 76; Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268; Flaherty v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 145; Porter v. Garrissino, 51 Cal. 559; Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253; Buell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 65 Cal. 292; 4 Pac. 14): a state court cannot enjoin proceedings in a Federal court (Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520), nor can one superior court restrain another from executing its orders and decrees. Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 34; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Flaherty v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 145; Judson v. Porter, 51 Cal. 562; Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646; 44 Pac. 1086. This rule is not based on the personal rights of the parties which they can waive, but upon the rights of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607. With respect to jurisdiction, the superior courts of two different counties of the state stand on the same footing. Raisch v. Warren, 18 Cal. App. 655; 124 Pac. 95. The courts of this state cannot restrain persons within the state from prosecuting pending actions in a foreign or domestic court, except to prevent a multiplicity of suits (Spreckels v. Hawaiian Commercial etc. Co., 117 Cal. 377; 49 Pac. 353); but the rule that one court will not restrain another does not extend to actions restraining sales of land under execution, as such actions are not against the court (Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127); nor does this rule extend to proceedings which, by law, are required to be brought in a particular county; for if brought in the wrong county, the court has no jurisdiction. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607. Proceedings to restrain execution should be instituted in the court rendering the judgment. Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268; Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253; Buell v. San Francisco Savings Union, 65 Cal. 292; 4 Pac. 14; Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646; 44 Pac. 1086.

Title to and possession of real estate. The superior court has original jurisdiction of all questions pertaining to the title to or the possession of real property; and, having jurisdiction of the parties in an appeal from a justice's court, may properly try an issue as to the right of possession of land. Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132; 37 Pac. 196. Where the right of recovery depends upon whether the defendant had a defective or a good title to land, the case involves title to land, and the superior court has jurisdiction. Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 181; 18 Pac. 256.

Tax, impost, assessment, etc. The superior court has jurisdiction in cases involving less than three hundred dollars, where the legality of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine is involved. Williams v. Mecartney, 69 Cal. 556; 11 Pac. 186; Bottle Mining Co. v. Kern, 154 Cal. 96; 97 Pac. 25. An action to recover a penalty for exacting illegal toll does not, however, give the court jurisdiction, regardless of the amount involved (Brown v. Rice, 52 Cal. 489); neither does an action to recover unpaid taxes (People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61; Bell v. Crippen, 28 Cal. 327; People v. Olvera, 43 Cal. 492); but where the action is for the purpose of enforcing a tax lien by sale of the property, it is an equitable action, and the superior court has jurisdiction, regardless of the amount. People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61; People v. Olvera, 43 Cal. 492; Mahlstadt v. Blanc, 34 Cal. 577. An action against an assessor for a wrongful and malicious act is not within the jurisdiction of the superior court, unless the amount involved is three hundred dollars. Perkins v. Ralls, 71 Cal. 87; 11 Pac. 860.

Amount in controversy. Jurisdiction is determined by the amount for which judgment is asked, and not by the averment of damage. Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425. The ad damnum clause is the test of the jurisdiction. Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Greenbaum v. Martinez, 86 Cal. 459, 461; 25 Pac. 12. The demand of the complaint, regardless of the finding, is the test of jurisdiction for the value of property claimed. J. Dewing Co. v. Thompson, 19 Cal. App. 85; 124 Pac. 1035. While the amount claimed by the plaintiff in the suit is the test of the jurisdiction of the court (Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 226; 58 Pac. 530), yet it does not conclude that question, regardless of the allegations upon which the liability is founded. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195. Costs constitute no part of the amount in controversy, and are not included for the purpose of making the jurisdictional amount. Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Zabriskie v. Torrey, 20 Cal. 173; Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 89. The superior court has no jurisdiction of an action upon a note for two hundred dollars, though the principal and interest exceed the jurisdictional amount. Gallagher v. McGraw, 132 Cal. 601; 64 Pac. 1080. The settled rule is, that the amount sued for, exclusive of interest, is the test of jurisdiction in all cases where actions are brought to recover money. Dashiell v. Slingerland, 60 Cal. 653; Christian v. Superior Court, 122 Cal. 117; 54 Pac. 518; Howe v. Halsey, 6 Cal. Unrep. 148; 54 Pac. 748; Gallagher v. McGraw, 132 Cal. 601; 64 Pac. 1080. Thus, the superior court has not jurisdiction, where the claims do not amount to three hundred dollars, in an action for a money judgment (Reeg v. McArthur, 17 Cal. App. 203; 19 Pac. 105); nor in an action for damages for injury to land, in a sum less than three hundred dollars (Stewart v. Birchfield, 15 Cal. App. 378; 14 Pac. 999); and an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, for an amount less than three hundred dollars, must show a substantial compliance with the statute creating the lien (Davis v. Treacy, 8 Cal. App. 395; 97 Pac. 78); but there are cases where the court has jurisdiction, regardless of the amount involved (Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349; Lord v. Thomas, 3 Cal. Unrep. 424; 27 Pac. 410); as, where the action puts in issue the title to real estate. Randolph v. Kraemer, 106 Cal. 199; 39 Pac. 533. If the plaintiff, by mistake, alleges an amount which gives the court jurisdiction, the subsequent discovery of the error does not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Rodley v. Currey, 120 Cal. 541; 52 Pac. 999. The several liabilities of different defendants cannot be combined to give jurisdiction (Thomas v. Anderson, 58 Cal. 99; Bailey v. Sloane, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349; Galloway v. Jones, 13 Pac. 712; Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287; 30 Pac. 820); and parties having separate claims, each under three hundred dollars, but no joint interest in the aggregate, cannot, by joinder of their claim, in one action, confer jurisdiction on the superior court. Winrod v. Wolters, 141 Cal. 399, 403; 74 Pac. 1037. Thus, the court has no jurisdiction in an action to recover from each of several stockholders of a corporation his proportion of a debt, where the amount sued for is less than three hundred dollars, though the aggregate amount sought is more than that sum (Evans v. Bailey, 2 Cal. Unrep. 457; 6 Pac. 428; Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287; 30 Pac. 820); but where the several liability of sureties is less than the jurisdictional amount, the superior court has jurisdiction. Moore v. McSleeper, 102 Cal. 277; 36 Pac. 593. Where the court renders a judgment within its jurisdiction, the fact that the complaint prayed a recovery in excess does not affect the jurisdiction. Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 463. If the jurisdictional amount is pleaded in the complaint, the defendant may set up as a counterclaim a demand arising upon a contract, although it is insufficient in amount to give the court jurisdiction (Freeman v. Seitz, 126 Cal. 291; 58 Pac. 690); but where the counterclaim so set up is less than the jurisdictional amount, and shows that the plaintiff's action is unfounded, the defendant is not entitled to judgment on his counterclaim. Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820. See also note ante, § 52.

Insolvency. The state courts have jurisdiction of an action prosecuted by an assignee, appointed under the United States Bankruptcy Act, to recover the assets of a bankrupt (Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439); and the authority of an assignee, under the state insolvent act, to maintain such an action cannot be collaterally attacked. Fitzgerald v. Neustadt, 91 Cal. 600; 27 Pac. 936.

In probate proceedings. The probate jurisdiction of the superior court is separate and distinct from its jurisdiction in ordinary civil actions (Guardianship of Allgier, 65 Cal. 228; 3 Pac. 849; Estate of Hudson, 63 Cal. 454); but most of its general powers belong peculiarly and originally to the court of chancery. Clarke v. Perry, 5 Cal. 58; 63 Am. Dec. 82. While probate courts are to be regarded as courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction (Townsend v. Gordon, 19 Cal. 188), yet, in probate matters, they are upon the same footing with courts of superior common-law jurisdiction. Irwin v. Scriber, 18 Cal. 499. The grant of jurisdiction in probate matters is part of the general jurisdiction of the superior court (Burris v. Kennedy, 108 Cal. 331; 41 Pac. 458); and where there are two or more judges of the superior court, each judge has jurisdiction in probate matters. Estate of Pearsons, 113 Cal. 577; 45 Pac. 849, 1062. In the exercise of its probate powers, the jurisdiction of the superior court is special and limited (Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 374; 26 Pac. 206; Grimes's Estate v. Norris, 6 Cal. 621; 65 Am. Dec. 545); and it has only such powers as are given by statute, with the incidental power necessary to the exercise of the power conferred (Strong's Estate, 119 Cal. 663; 51 Pac. 1078; Ryder's Estate, 141 Cal. 366; 74 Pac. 993); but the jurisdiction conferred upon it by the constitution cannot be limited by statute. Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373; 40 Pac. 492. The statute, however, does not confer on the superior court jurisdiction of all matters relating to estates of deceased persons. Bush v. Lindsey, 44 Cal. 121. It has no power to determine suits between heirs or devisees and strangers as to the title to property in probate (Buckley v. Superior Court, 102 Cal. 6; 41 Am. St. Rep. 135; 36 Pac. 360; Ryder's Estate, 141 Cal. 369; 74 Pac. 993; Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373; 40 Pac. 492), except in appropriate proceedings, and under proper pleadings, in the manner prescribed by the code. Reither v. Murdock, 135 Cal. 197; 67 Pac. 784; Estate of Heeney, 3 Cal. App. 548; 86 Pac. 842. It has the same jurisdiction in matters of probate as in suits in equity, in actions at law, or in special proceedings (Estate of Burton, 93 Cal. 459; 29 Pac. 36), and has jurisdiction to try and determine issues of fact arising in the proceedings before it (Keller v. De Franklin, 5 Cal. 432); its authority to award costs comes from the statute. Henry v. Superior Court, 93 Cal. 569; 29 Pac. 230. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to settle the accounts of a living guardian (Allen v. Tiffany, 53 Cal. 16; Anderson v. Fisk, 41 Cal. 308), but it has no jurisdiction of controversies between a guardian and his ward, after the estate has been expended for the benefit of the ward, and he has become of age. Guardianship of Kincaid, 120 Cal. 203; 52 Pac. 492. Nor has it equitable jurisdiction (Meyers v. Farquharson, 46 Cal. 190; Estate of Clary, 112 Cal. 292; 44 Pac. 569), although it proceeds in accordance with the principles of equity. Estate of Clary, 112 Cal. 292; 44 Pac. 569. Nor can it determine questions of title to a homestead (Davis v. Caldwell, 12 Cal. 125); nor has it the requisite machinery to try questions of fraud (Curtis v. Schell, 129 Cal. 208; 79 Am. St. Rep. 107; 61 Pac. 951); nor can it divide a homestead between the widow and the heirs (Estate of James, 23 Cal. 415), although it has power to set apart a homestead for the use of the family (Rich v. Tubbs, 41 Cal. 34), but, after the homestead has been set apart, it has no jurisdiction over it for the purpose of distribution (Estate of Gilmore, 81 Cal. 240; 22 Pac. 655), nor has it jurisdiction to try adverse claims to the homestead (Estate of Kimberly, 97 Cal. 281; 32 Pac. 234), nor to determine the rights of those claiming adversely to the estate (Plass v. Plass, 121 Cal. 135; 53 Pac. 148), nor to determine the quality of the title to the property which it distributes (Estate of Dunn, Myr. Prob. 122); but it may delay the final decree until the rights of the parties can be determined in another forum. Estate of Burdick, 112 Cal. 387; 44 Pac. 734. Nor has the probate court jurisdiction to inquire into the consideration or validity or operation of a deed of separation between a testator and his widow. Corker v. Corker, 87 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 922. The court which granted administration upon the estate of a person supposed to be deceased, but who afterwards appears, has power to vacate the order and annul the proceedings (Stevenson v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 60), but it has no power, after the vacation of probate proceedings, to make any order in the premises. Costa v. Superior Court, 137 Cal. 79; 69 Pac. 840.

Criminal cases. The superior court has original jurisdiction in habeas corpus cases, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony (Ex parte Williams, 87 Cal. 78; 24 Pac. 602; 25 Pac. 248; Smith v. Hill, 89 Cal. 122; 26 Pac. 644; People v. Colby, 54 Cal. 184), and in cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for. In re Grosbois, 109 Cal. 445; 42 Pac. 444; Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 307, 541; People v. Joselyn, 80 Cal. 544; 22 Pac. 217; In re Marks, 45 Cal. 199; People v. Lawrence, 82 Cal. 182; 22 Pac. 1120; Ex parte Wallingford, 60 Cal. 103; Gafford v. Bush, 60 Cal. 149; Ex parte Noble, 96 Cal. 362; 31 Pac. 224. The legislature has "not otherwise provided for" the following misdemeanors, and the superior court has original jurisdiction in such cases: 1. Assaults or batteries committed upon public officers in the discharge of their duties; 2. Willful injuries to property; and 3. When the punishment is by fine exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment exceeding six months, or both. In re Grosbois, 109 Cal. 445; 42 Pac. 444; Thomas v. Justice's Court, 80 Cal. 40; 22 Pac. 80. The superior court also has jurisdiction of crimes which may be punishable either as a felony or a misdemeanor; such as obtaining money by false pretenses (Ex parte Neustadt, 82 Cal. 273; 23 Pac. 124), assault by means likely to produce great bodily injury (People v. Fahey, 64 Cal. 342; 30 Pac. 1030), a public nuisance injurious to health (Application of Kurtz, 68 Cal. 412; 9 Pac. 449); but the presentment of a misdemeanor, of which the justice's court has jurisdiction by indictment, does not give the superior court jurisdiction. Ex parte Wallingford, 60 Cal. 103; Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 307, 541. The jurisdiction of the superior court over a criminal case is not dependent upon a compliance with the provisions of § 925 of the Penal Code. People v. Delhantie, 163 Cal. 461; 125 Pac. 1066.

Original writs. Mandamus. The superior court, and a judge thereof, has original jurisdiction to issue mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, and habeas corpus (Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372; Reynolds v. County Court, 47 Cal. 601; Spring Valley Water Works v. Bryant, 52 Cal. 132; Garretson v. Board of Supervisors, 61 Cal. 54), and may issue such writs to run out of the county in which the court is held. Kings County v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 198; 37 Pac. 870.

Quo warranto. The mode of proceeding in quo warranto has not, in modern times, been very uniform; but in this state, if the proper parties are before the court.. the action may be brought in the name of the attorney-general. People v. Dashaway Ass'n, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277.

Habeas corpus. The superior court has jurisdiction, in habeas corpus, to test the legality of the imprisonment of one held under authority of the warrant of the governor of the state for the purposes of extradition (In re Robb, 64 Cal. 431; 1 Pac. 881; In re Manchester, 5 Cal. 237); but the only thing that can be inquired into is, whether the prisoner is properly detained, under the constitution and laws (In re Manchester, 5 Cal. 237); and the judges of the superior court have the same authority as the supreme court would have, under a writ issued by the supreme court, and made returnable before a judge of the superior court. People v. Booker, 51 Cal. 317; Ex parte Marks, 49 Cal. 680.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Construction of this section. Section 6 of article vi of the constitution, which defines the jurisdiction of the district court, follows the language (so far as civil jurisdiction is concerned) of § 4 of the same article relating to the jurisdiction of the supreme court, and it must, from the very nature of things, receive the same construction. We would look in vain, giving to its terms their ordinary import, for any power or authority over that large class of cases in which the subject of litigation is incapable of pecuniary estimation, and which did not fall within the jurisdiction of courts of equity, or over that other class known as special proceedings, or for the power to issue writs of certiorari, mandamus, or prohibition. The truth is, that the amendments of 1862, in so far as they attempt to fix and define the jurisdiction of the several courts of record, were so framed that to have given their terms any fair or reasonable construction, would have emasculated our whole judicial system. To support this proposition we need but refer the lawyer to the terms of those amendments, and invoke a comparison between the power there conferred and the power now exercised by our courts of record, and to the same end we need but refer the layman to the case of Knowles v. Yates, cited and quoted from at length in the note to § 44, [§ 52,] ante, and to the able and elaborate opinion of Justice Rhodes, in Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 578. In the latter case, said the learned justice, speaking for the court: "It is a matter of some doubt whether that article [article vi, before the amendments] deserved the commendation of having been drawn with great skill, . . . but there is less question that the same cannot be said of the article [article vi] as it now stands." See also Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 383. The supreme court, by judicial construction, has fixed the limit of the jurisdiction of the different courts. From the very necessities of the case that tribunal was driven to the adoption of the broadest rules of constitutional construction. Indeed, it may well be doubted whether any rule, save that of "necessity which knows no law," could have been invoked to work out the results at which our courts have arrived. We have referred to these matters at some length in this and the note to § 44, [§ 52,] ante, in order to present the inherent difficulties surrounding the subject, and to call the special attention of the profession to the questions involved.

2. No appellate jurisdiction. The legislature has no power to confer appellate jurisdiction on district courts. Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 688; Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52; Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389; Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230. The district court has no appellate jurisdiction. The legislature cannot provide for appeals from inferior courts to the district court. People v. Peralta, 3 Cal. 379; Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389; Hernandes v. Simon, 3 Cal. 464; Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185; Reed v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 342; Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52. No appellate jurisdiction exists, even from probate courts. Reed v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 342; Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495. Nor can a district court review proceedings in a justice's court, if the error complained of might have been corrected by an appeal to the county court. Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185.

3. Admiralty jurisdiction. District courts have admiralty jurisdiction pro tanto (post, §§ 813 et seq). Averill v. The Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

4. Jurisdiction of mining claims. Although jurisdiction of mining claims is given to justices of the peace, that of the district court remains unaffected, if the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred [now three hundred] dollars. Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 224.

5. Loses jurisdiction of decided cause after adjournment for term. A court loses all power over a cause upon the adjournment of the term, and cannot disturb its judgments, except in cases provided by the statute. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Whipley v. Dewey, 17 Cal. 314.

6. Jurisdiction by appearance. An appearance entered by attorney is a good and sufficient appearance to bind the party. Such appearance amounts to an acknowledged waiver of service. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280.

7. Actions to abate nuisance. District courts have jurisdiction in actions to abate nuisances. An act giving jurisdiction of cases of nuisance to the county court cannot avail to take away the jurisdiction given to the district courts by the constitution. Fitzgerald v. Urton, 4 Cal. 235. District and county courts, under the amended constitution, have concurrent jurisdiction in actions to abate nuisance. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 576; Yolo County v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193. An action to abate a nuisance is a case in equity, and the district court has jurisdiction thereof, without regard to the amount in controversy. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573. And county courts have concurrent jurisdiction in these cases. People v. Moore, 29 Cal. 427. District courts have jurisdiction in cases of nuisance, and because an act gives jurisdiction in like cases to the county court it does not avail to take away the jurisdiction of the district court in these matters. Fitzgerald v. Urton, 4 Cal. 235. But it was decided that county courts did not have jurisdiction in actions to abate a nuisance. Parsons v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 5 Cal. 43; 63 Am. Dec. 76; see, however, People v. Day, 15 Cal. 91.

8. Forcible entry and unlawful detainer. District courts have no jurisdiction in actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer. Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52.

9. Removal of causes from one district to another. The district court is a court of general original jurisdiction. Its process is coextensive with the state. Causes may be removed from one district or county to another county or district in the manner provided by statute. But this would not be permitted after the party had appeared and answered to the merits. Reyes v. Sanford, 5 Cal. 117.

10. Verity of records. Correction of records. An application for mandamus was made to compel a district judge to sign what was alleged by applicant as a true bill of exceptions, which the judge refused to sign. The judge, in answer, stated he did sign a bill of exceptions, which he believed to be correct. Applicant claims the right to try the issue by a jury. Held, such issues could not be tried by jury. The record of a district court cannot be corrected by the verdict of a jury. Courts of such extended jurisdiction and grave responsibility as the district courts must be trusted as to the fidelity of their own records. People v. Judge Tenth Judicial District, 9 Cal. 19.

11. Cannot restrain courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. District courts cannot restrain the execution of the judgments or orders of courts of coordinate jurisdiction. All such proceedings must be had in the courts having control of such judgments. Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77; see also Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

12. Chancery supervision over and control of minors. District courts have the same control over the persons of minors, as well as their estates, that the courts of chancery in England possess. The jurisdiction is conferred by the constitution, and cannot be divested by any legislative enactment. Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 366.

13. Issues sent up formerly from probate courts. Power of district court over issues sent up from probate courts, and over testamentary and probate matters generally, see Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495; Deck v. Gerke, 12 Cal. 433; 73 Am. Dec. 555; Hope v. Jones, 24 Cal. 89. The necessary provisions for trials in the probate court are now made.

14. Supervision over inferior tribunals. The general power of supervision over inferior tribunals which pertains to the court of king's bench in England pertains to the district courts of this state. Miliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 169; Gurnee v. Maloney, 38 Cal. 85; 99 Am. Dec. 352.

15. Action for charging excessive railroad fare. Jurisdiction of district court in certain actions provided for by statute; forfeitures imposed on railroad company for charging passengers excess of fare (see Stats. 1863, p. 296). Reed v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 33 Cal. 212; Smith v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 36 Cal. 281.

16. District court to enter judgment prescribed by supreme court. When the district court is directed by the supreme court to enter a certain judgment, its duty is to enter a judgment in conformity with the order of the supreme court. Argenti v. Sawyer, 32 Cal. 414. It cannot even add interest to the judgment so ordered. Meyer v. Kohn, 33 Cal. 484.

17. Judgment of district court to meet the exigencies of the case. District courts have power, when not expressly limited by the constitution or by a statute, to pronounce such judgment as the exigencies of each case require. Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 160.

18. Court to direct payment of fees to indigent witnesses in criminal cases. District courts may, in a criminal case, when witness is poor or has come from another county, direct the county treasurer to pay the witness such a sum as the court may name. Sargent v. Cavis, 36 Cal. 552.

19. Judgment of district court, only void when in excess of jurisdiction. When the district court has jurisdiction of the person of the defendant and of the subject-matter of the action, its judgment, no matter how erroneous, is not void. A judgment of a justice's court which was in excess of its jurisdiction, and therefore void, was rendered, and the district court rendered a judgment founded upon the judgment rendered by the justice of the peace. Held: that though the judgment of the district court was erroneous, yet it was not void, and that it was valid against a collateral attack. Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 426.

20. Stipulation cannot confer jurisdiction. See Wicks v. Ludwig, 9 Cal. 173. A stipulation by parties, waiving all objections to jurisdiction, cannot confer on a district court jurisdiction to try a suit in one county, when on that day, by operation of law, the court is adjourned in that county and its term commenced in another county of that district. Batea v. Gage, 40 Cal. 183.

21. Jurisdiction over actions for usurpation of office, franchise, etc. Title to office comes from the will of the people as expressed through the ballot-box, and they have a prerogative right to enforce their will, when it has been so expressed, by excluding usurpers, and putting in power such as have been chosen by themselves. For that purpose the attorney-general, either upon his own suggestion or upon the complaint of a private party, may bring an action against any person who usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any public office, civil or military, or any franchise within the state. The district court has jurisdiction in these cases. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. See also County Court Jurisdiction in Contested Elections.

22. Disposal of community property by one district court, when divorce was granted in another court. Another court than the one decreeing a divorce may acquire jurisdiction to dispose of the community property if it be otherwise competent. De Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

23. Custody of children, alimony, etc., in such a case. Where a wife sued for divorce, the judge of the court where the suit was pending had no jurisdiction, "pending the action, to hear and determine in the district court of an adjoining county of the same district an application by the wife for an allowance pendente lite, and for the care and custody of the children of the marriage." Bennett v. Southard, 35 Cal. 691. An order for alimony and for the custody of the children, pendente lite, can only be made by the court in which the action for divorce is pending. Id.

24. Supervision over decrees, orders, etc., of inferior tribunals. Correction of decrees fraudulently entered. It was held that the district judge, whilst sitting as in an equity case, is possessed of all the powers of a court of chancery. The district court, being a court of general jurisdiction, can, in a case in equity, where fraud and collusion are charged against a judge in entering an order or decree, review the same, and annul it if the facts justify such a conclusion. Unless a court of general jurisdiction possessed such a power over limited and inferior tribunals, such as probate courts, the rights of heirs and orphans might be at any time endangered without remedy. Sanford v. Head, 5 Cal. 297.

25. Fraud, accident, mistake, etc. The jurisdiction of courts of equity originally embraced all cases involving questions of fraud, accident, or confidence. In many cases of this sort, courts of common law have for a long time exercised jurisdiction, and in many other cases, in which anciently no such remedy was allowed, is now expanded so as to reach them: but the jurisdiction of courts of equity is not destroyed or impaired merely because courts of law exercise an equitable jurisdiction; jurisdiction in such cases is concurrent. People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348.

26. Suit against administrator. It was held that an administrator might be sued in the district court as a court of equity, by the people, to compel him to pay over certain moneys which were collected by the intestate as a tax-collector. See People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348. The district court has no jurisdiction over an action against an administrator when he attempts to make charges against the estate for expenses in administering thereon. See Gurnee v. Maloney, 38 Cal. 85; 99 Am. Dec. 352.

27. Jurisdiction over claims against estate of decedent. The fact that a claim against the estate of a deceased person has not been presented to the administrator does not take away from the district court jurisdiction over such claim. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; see Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140, commenting on the cases of Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386, and Falkner v. Folsom's Exrs., 6 Cal. 412; see also Pechaud v. Rinquet, 21 Cal. 76. The district court has no jurisdiction over the allowance or apportionment of the commissions of the executors and administrators, and if it can interfere at all with the decree of the probate court, it can only do so as a court of chancery, and can go no further than to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud, or other like ground of equitable interference, and leave the parties to make another settlement in the probate court. Searles v. Scott, 14 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 94; Hope v. Jones, 24 Cal. 89.

28. Foreclosure of mortgages upon estate of decedent. District courts have jurisdiction over an action for the foreclosure of mortgages upon the estates of decedents, even though the debt was presented as a claim against the estate to the administrator or executor, and allowed by him and also by the probate judge. If the object sought to be attained is to subject the lands mortgaged to sale for the satisfaction of the debt, and no judgment is asked to bind the estate or for the payment of any moneys out of the estate (overruling Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386, and Falkner v. Folsom's Exrs., 6 Cal. 412). Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140; see also Pechaud v. Rinquet, 21 Cal. 76. In some of the earlier cases it was held that a mortgage creditor whose claim was allowed could not maintain an action in the district court for the foreclosure of his mortgage, but that his debt must abide the administration and settlement of the estate under the supervision of the probate court. Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 392; Falkner v. Folsom's Exrs., 6 Cal. 412. But the doctrine of these cases in this respect may be said to have been disapproved by the court in its later decisions, mainly, if not entirely, on the ground that the district court had, under the constitution as it then existed, original jurisdiction in law and equity in all cases where the amount in dispute exceeded two hundred dollars, exclusive of interest. Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 559; Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 30; 81 Am. Dec. 140. By the constitution as amended, it is provided that the district courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity. Const., art. vi, § 6. The foreclosure of mortgages and the sales of premises for the payment of debts thereby secured are matters of purely equitable cognizance. Hence, a creditor of an estate of a decedent whose debt is secured by mortgage may, after having duly presented it to the executor or administrator and probate judge, whether it be allowed or rejected, proceed at once to foreclose his mortgage in the proper court of original equitable jurisdiction. Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 491.

29. Equitable and complete relief to be administered. It is the duty of the court, as a court of equity, while keeping within the rules and principles on which its remedial jurisdiction is founded, to adapt its course of proceeding, as far as possible, to the existing state of things, and to apply its jurisdiction to all those new cases which, from the diversified transactions among men, are continually arising, and to administer justice and enforce right, for which there is no remedy save in a court of equity. Taylor v. Salmon, 4 Myl. & C. 141; Walworth v. Holt, Id. 635; Dougherty v. Creary, 30 Cal. 297; 89 Am. Dec. 116. See this case as to mining matters, abandonment of water, on tailings, etc.

30. Enjoining erection of wharves, etc. The equity jurisdiction with which our district courts are invested under the constitution is that administered in the high court of chancery in England. People v. Davidson, 30 Cal. 390; and see this case as to power of district courts to enjoin erection of wharves, public nuisance, and as to its equity powers generally. Id.

31. Annulment of decree of county court condemning land. Powers of district court as a court of equity to annul condemnation of land for certain uses, had by order of county court. See

San Francisco etc. Water Co. v. Alameda Water Co., 36 Cal. 639.

32. Title or possession of real property. Construction of the phrase, "The district court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property." See Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338. It was held that it was not necessary, however, that the title or possession be put in issue, if either is alleged in the pleadings on either side; as an issuable fact it is sufficient to give the district court jurisdiction. Actions for damages without reference to the amount for trespass upon lands, are within the jurisdiction of the district court. Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338. But this case was materially modified by the same justice, in Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 684; see, too, Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 144; see note to § 114, [§ 112,] post, "Justices' Courts." Two actions were commenced in a justice's court to recover damages to real property. The amount claimed was two hundred dollars. The answer of the defendants put in issue the ownership of the property, and moved to transfer the cases to the district court. The motions were overruled. On appeal to the county court the order was made granting transfer to the district court. Held: the county court had authority to transfer the cases to the district court, under § 838 (§ 581) of the code. The fact that the title of the property was involved, and not the amount claimed in damages, established the jurisdiction of the district court. Cullen v. Langridge, 17 Cal. 67.

33. Legality of any tax, impost, assessment, etc. In People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61, the supreme court held that in actions to recover taxes (under the somewhat anomalous condition in which the law then stood: Revenue Laws 1861–62), the character of the action, as to whether it was a case at law or in equity, must be determined by the relief sought in the prayer of the complaint; and that when the amount of the taxes sued for was less than three hundred dollars, and there was no prayer for the foreclosure of the tax lien, order of sale, etc., the district court had no jurisdiction. Adhered to in Bell v. Crippen, 28 Cal. 327. If the defense set up in an answer involves the legality of the tax (in an action in a justice's court, brought for the recovery of a money judgment), the jurisdiction of the justice would be ousted on the filing of the answer. People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

34. Value or amount of property in controversy. Before the amendments to the state constitution (adopted 1862), the district court had jurisdiction, where the amount sued for, exclusive of interest, exceeded two hundred dollars. Arnold v. Van Brunt, 4 Cal. 89; Page v. Ellis, 9 Cal. 248. But a judgment could be rendered for a less amount than the sum prescribed by the constitution, limiting the jurisdiction of the court in the commencement of the action. Jackson v. Whartenby, 5 Cal. 94. In actions for the recovery of money, the district courts have jurisdiction, if the demand in the complaint, exclusive of interest, amounts to three hundred dollars. Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 32; see particularly note 6, § 44, [§ 52,] ante.

35. Insolvency proceedings. Proceedings in insolvency (state law) are not, strictí juris, either proceedings in law or equity, but a new remedy or proceeding, created by statute, the administration of which has been vested in the district courts of this state, independently of their common-law or chancery powers, as courts of general jurisdiction; and second, wherever a new right is created by statute, and the enforcement of such right is committed to a court even of general original jurisdiction, that such court, quoad hoc, is an inferior court, and must pursue the statute strictly. The district court acts as a court of limited or inferior jurisdiction in these matters. Cohen v. Barrett, 5 Cal. 195.

36. Writs of mandate. District courts have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandate. Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372; Cariaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 246; Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573.

37. Writ of review (certiorari). District courts have not jurisdiction, by certiorari (writ of review), over the judgment rendered in a justice's court in cases where the error might have been corrected by an appeal to the county court. Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185. When district courts have jurisdiction to review cases by certiorari (or writ of review), see People v. Hester, 6 Cal. 680 (and cases cited in brief of petitioner); see further, Chard v. Harrison, 7 Cal. 113; and People v. El Dorado County Supervisors, 8 Cal. 58, overruling People v. Hester, supra; also examine Murray v. Board of Supervisors, 23 Cal. 492; Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372; Morley v. Elkins, 37 Cal. 454; see also, on habeas corpus, Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372.

38. Formation of new districts. Jurisdiction over causes arising previous to formation of district. Where a new county is created or a new district is formed by statute, the district court of the new county or (of the new district) has jurisdiction to try all indictments for murder found in the county court of the old county, but committed in the new county after the passage of the act creating such new county, provided the trial is not had until the new county or district is organized. See People v. McGuire, 32 Cal. 140.

§ 77. Appellate jurisdiction. The superior courts shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices' and other inferior courts in their respective counties as may be prescribed by law.

Appellate jurisdiction. See Const., art. vi, § 5. Appeals to superior court. See post, §§ 974–980.

Legislation § 77. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 28, to conform to Const. 1879.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Original § 77, "Adjournment of [district] court."

Appellate jurisdiction. This section limits the appellate jurisdiction of the superior court to the extent and mode prescribed. (Sherer v. Superior Court, 94 Cal. 354; 29 Pac. 716): the court has appellate jurisdiction only as prescribed by law. People v. Treadwell, 66 Cal. 400; 5 Pac. 686; Shealor v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 564; 11 Pac. 653.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. [§ 57, original code.] No appellate jurisdiction. The legislature has no power to confer appellate jurisdiction on district courts. Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 668; Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52; Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389; Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230. The district court has no appellate jurisdiction. The legislature cannot provide for appeals from inferior courts to the district court. People v. Peralta, 3 Cal. 379; Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389; Hernandes v. Simon, 3 Cal. 464; Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185; Reed v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 342; Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52. No appellate jurisdiction exists even from probate courts. Reed v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 342; Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495. Nor can a district court review proceedings in a justice's court if the error complained of might have been corrected by an appeal to the county court. Gray v. Schupp, 4 Cal. 185.

§ 78. Process. The process of the superior courts shall extend to all parts of the state; provided, that all actions for the recovery of the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real estate, shall be commenced in the county in which the real estate, or any part thereof affected by such action or actions, is situated.

Process runs throughout state. Const., art. vi, § 5.

Venue of actions affecting real property is in any county in which part of the land affected by the action is situated. Kimball v. Tripp, 136 Cal. 631; 69 Pac. 428.

§ 79. Transfer of books, papers, and actions. All records, books, papers, causes, actions, proceedings, and appeals lodged, deposited, or pending in the district court or courts, county court, probate court, municipal criminal court, or municipal court of appeals, of, in, or for any county, or city and county, of the state, abolished by the constitution, are transferred to the superior court of such county, or city and county, which has the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance lodged, deposited, filed, or commenced therein, or, in cases of appeal, appealed thereto.

§§ 82, 83, 84. [Related to county courts. Repealed.]

Legislation §§ 82, 83, 84. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and related to county courts.
2. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

§ 85. Justices' courts and justices. There shall be in every city and county of more than four hundred thousand population a justice's court for which five justices of the peace shall be elected by the qualified electors at the general state election next preceding the expiration of the terms of office of their predecessors. Any of said justices may hold court and there may be as many sessions of said court at the same time as there are justices thereof. Said justices shall choose one of their number to be presiding justice who may at any time be removed and another appointed in his place by a vote of a majority of them; providing, that in the case of the temporary absence or disability of the presiding justice, any one of the other justices, to be designated by the presiding justice, may act as presiding justice during such absence or disability. Each justice of the peace so elected must at the time of his election be an elector of such city and county, and qualified to practice in all the courts of this state.

Justices, number, etc. Const., art. vi, § 11.
Justices' courts. Compare §§ 103, 110, post.
Act organizing San Francisco justices' court (Stats. 1865–66, p. 423; 1869–70, p. 56; 1871–72, p. 758) governed before 1880.

Legislation § 85. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 29.
2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 1440, (1) in first sentence, (a) substituting "four hundred thousand population" for "one hundred thousand population," and (c) striking out "of such city and county" after "qualified electors"; (2) in second sentence, striking out "one" after "Any"; (3) in third sentence, (a) striking out "The" as the initial word of the sentence, and (b) adding "the" before "case"; (4) adding the final sentence.
The original § 85 defined the original jurisdiction of county courts.

§ 86. Clerks of justices' courts. The supervisors of such city and county shall appoint a justices' clerk on the written nomination and recommendation of said justices, or a majority of them, who shall hold office during good behavior, and who shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars a year. Said justices' clerk shall take the constitutional oath of office, and give bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and in the same manner as is or may be required of officers of such city and county. A new or additional bond may be required by the supervisors of such city and county, and in such amount as may be fixed by said supervisors, whenever they may deem it necessary. The said clerk may appoint a chief deputy and a cashier, each at a salary of eighteen hundred dollars a year, and three deputy clerks and one messenger each at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. Said justices' clerk, and each of said appointees shall have authority to administer oaths, take and certify affidavits and issue and sign writs, summons, and all other processes, in any action, suit or proceeding in said justices' court, and generally to do all the acts specified in sections one hundred and two and one hundred and two a of this code. They shall be at their respective offices for the dispatch of official business daily, except Sundays, holidays and Saturday afternoons, from the hour of nine o'clock a. m. until five o'clock p. m. The salaries of said justices' clerk and his appointees shall be paid out of the treasury of said city and county in the same manner that salaries of officers of such city and county are paid, and shall be in lieu of all fees collected by them, and all persons appointed to such positions shall, after they have served a period of six months in their respective positions, be entitled to all the benefits of the civil service laws of this state.

Legislation § 86. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 29.
2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 58, (1) in first sentence, substituting the final clause for "who shall hold office for two years, and until his successor is in like manner appointed and qualified"; (2) in second sentence, striking out "other" before "officers"; (3) substituting the present four final sentences for the former two final sentences, which read, "The justices' clerk shall have authority to appoint two deputy clerks, for whose acts he shall be responsible on his official bond, the said deputy clerks to hold office during the pleasure of said clerk. Said justices' clerk and deputy shall have authority to administer oaths, and take and certify affidavits in any action, suit, or proceeding in said justices' court."
The amending act of 1915 contained a repealing clause, reading, "Sec. 2. All acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed."
The original § 86 defined the appellate jurisdiction of county courts.

Liability of clerks of courts: 1. On official bonds. See note 91 Am. St. Rep. 562; 2. To individuals for non-performance of official duties. See note 95 Am. St. Rep. 89.

§ 87. Sheriff and deputies. The sheriff of such city and county shall be ex officio an officer of said court, and it shall be his duty to serve or execute, or cause to be served and executed, each and every process, writ, or order that may be issued by said justices' court; provided, that a summons issued from said court may be served and returned as provided in section eight hundred and forty-nine of this code; and that subpœnas may be issued by the justices' clerk and served as provided in section one thousand nine hundred and eighty-seven and one thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight of this code. The said sheriff may appoint, in addition to the other deputies allowed by law, three deputies, whose duty it shall be to assist said sheriff in serving and executing the process, writs, and orders of the said justices' court. Said deputies shall receive a salary of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month each, payable monthly, out of the city and county treasury, and out of the special fee fund, after being first allowed and audited as other demands are by law required to be audited and allowed. One of said deputies shall remain in attendance during the sessions of said court, and at such other times as the said court or the presiding justice thereof may order and direct, for the purpose of attending to such duties as may be imposed on said sheriff or said deputies as herein provided, or required by law. The said sheriff shall be liable on his official bond for the faithful performance of all duties required of him, or any of his said deputies.

Sheriff, generally. See Pol. Code, §§ 4175 et seq.
Legislation § 87. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 30.
The original § 87 defined presumptions in favor of judgments of county courts.

Legislation § 88. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 30.
The original § 88 provided for terms of county courts in the several counties.

§ 89. Actions. All actions, suits, and proceedings in such city and county whereof justices of the peace or justices' courts have jurisdiction, except those cases of concurrent jurisdiction that may be commenced in some other court, shall be entitled "In the Justices' Court of the City and County of ——" (inserting the name of the city and county), and commenced and prosecuted in said justices' court, which shall be always open. The original process shall be returnable, and the parties summoned required to appear before the presiding justice, or before one of the other justices of the peace, to be designated by the presiding justice, at his office; but all complaints, answers, and other pleadings and papers, required to be filed, shall be filed, and a record of all such actions, suits, and proceedings made and kept in the clerk's office aforesaid; and the presiding justice, and each of the other justices shall have power, jurisdiction, and authority to hear, try, and determine any action, suit, or proceeding so commenced, and which shall have been made returnable before him, or may be assigned or transferred to him, or any motion, application, or issue therein (subject to the constitutional right of trial by jury), and to make any necessary and proper orders therein.

Concurrent jurisdiction. See post, § 113.
Jurisdiction of justice's court. See post, §§ 112 et seq.
Legislation § 89. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 30.
The original § 89 declared county courts always open for certain purposes.

§ 90. Reassignment and transfer of actions. In case of sickness or disability or absence of a justice of the peace (on the return of a summons or at the time appointed for trial) to whom a cause has been assigned, the presiding justice shall reassign the cause to some other justice, who shall proceed with the trial and disposition of said cause in the same manner as if originally assigned to him; and if, at any time before the trial of a cause or matter returnable or pending before any of said justices, either party shall object to having the cause or matter tried before such justice, on the ground that such justice is a material witness for either party, or on the ground of the interest, prejudice, or bias of such justice, and such objection be made to appear in the manner prescribed by section eight hundred and thirty-three of this code, the said justice shall suspend proceedings, and the presiding justice, on motion and production before him of the affidavit and proofs, shall order the transfer of the cause or matter for trial before some other justice, to be designated by him. The presiding justice may, in like manner, assign or transfer any contested motion, application, or issue in law, arising in any cause returnable or pending before him or any other justice, to some other justice; and the said justice, to whom any cause, matter, motion, application, or issue shall be so as aforesaid assigned or transferred, shall have power, jurisdiction, and authority to hear, try, and determine the same accordingly.

Legislation § 90. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 31. The original § 90 provided for place of holding county courts.

§ 91. Payment of fees. All legal process of every kind in actions, suits, or proceedings in said justices' court, for the issue or service of which any fee is or may be allowed by law, shall be issued by the said justices' clerk upon the order of the presiding justice, or upon the order of one of the justices of the peace, acting as presiding justice, as in this article provided; and the fees for issuance and service of all such process, and all other fees which are allowed by law for any official services of justices, justices' clerk, or sheriff, shall be exacted and paid in advance into the hands of said clerk, and be by him daily, or weekly, or monthly, as the supervisors may require, and before his salary shall be allowed, accounted for in detail, under oath, and paid into the treasury of such city and county as part of the special fee fund thereof; provided, that such payment in advance shall not be exacted from parties who may prove to the satisfaction of the presiding justice that they have a good cause of action, and that they are not of sufficient pecuniary ability to pay the legal fees; and no judgment shall be rendered in any action before said justices' court, or any of said justices, until the fees allowed therefor, and all fees for previous services therein, which are destined to be paid into the treasury, shall have been paid, except in cases of poor persons, as hereinbefore provided.

Legislation § 91. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 31.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 119; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Process on order of presiding justice. An order of the presiding justice is necessary to secure issuance of process; and mandamus will not lie to compel the clerk to issue process without such order. Kosminsky v. Williams, 126 Cal. 26; 58 Pac. 310. The signature to the process may be by the clerk, who should sign as "justice's clerk": the process need not be signed by the presiding justice. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100. Where the process recites that it was issued upon the order of the presiding justice, it may be proved that the order was in fact made by the presiding justice, though there is a mistake in his name. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100.

Fees. The fee for entering judgment is two dollars, but the justice is not authorized to receive the same: it must be paid to the clerk. Reid v. Groezinger, 115 Cal. 551; 47 Pac. 374; Miller v. Curry, 113 Cal. 644; 45 Pac. 877.

§ 92. Certificates, transcripts, and other papers. Cases which by the provisions of law are required to be certified to the superior court, by reason of involving the question of title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, shall be so certified by the presiding justice and justices' clerk; and for that purpose, if such question shall arise on the trial, while the case is pending before one of the other justices, such justice shall certify the same to the presiding justice. All abstracts and transcripts of judgments and proceedings in said court, or in any of the dockets or registers of or deposited in said court, shall be given and certified from any of such dockets or registers, and signed by the presiding justice and clerk, and shall have the same force and effect as abstracts and transcripts of justices of the peace in other cases. Appeals from judgments rendered in said court shall be taken and perfected in the manner prescribed by law; but the notice of appeal, and all the papers required to be filed to perfect it, shall be filed with the justices' clerk. Statements on appeal shall be settled by the justice who tried the cause. Sureties on appeal, or on any bond, or undertaking given in any cause or proceeding in said court, when required to justify, may justify before any one of the justices.

Transfer to superior court. See post, § 838.
Appeals. See post, §§ 974 et seq.

Legislation § 92. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 32.

Undertaking on appeal. An undertaking on appeal from a justice's court, defective merely, and not a nullity, may be cured by filing in the superior court a sufficient undertaking, in pursuance of leave first obtained from that court. Werner v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 209; 118 Pac. 709. After a case in the justice's court of the city and county of San Francisco has been assigned for trial to a particular justice, the justification of sureties on an undertaking on appeal may, after due notice to the adverse party, be taken before any other justice of the same court. Werner v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 209; 118 Pac. 709.

§ 93. Justices' docket. In a suitable book, strongly bound, the justices' clerk shall keep a permanent record of all actions, proceedings, and judgments commenced, had, or rendered in said justices' court, which book shall be a public record, and be known as the "justices' docket," in which docket the clerk shall make the same entries as are provided for in section nine hundred and eleven of this code, and which said docket and entries therein shall have the same force and effect as is provided by law in reference to dockets of justices of the peace. To enable the clerk to make up such docket, each of the justices shall keep minutes of his proceedings in every cause returnable before or assigned or transferred to him for trial or hearing; and upon judgment or other disposition of a cause, such justice shall immediately certify and return the said minutes, together with all pleadings and papers in said cause, to the clerk's office, who shall immediately thereupon file the same and make the proper entries under the title of the action in the docket aforesaid.

Docket.

2. Effect of. Post, § 912.

Legislation § 93. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 32.

Effect of entry in docket. The entry in the justice's docket is primary evidence of the facts therein alleged, where they are not rebutted by anything else in the record. Rauer v. Justice's Court, 115 Cal. 84; 46 Pac. 870.

§ 94. Territorial extent of jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the justices' court of such city and county extends to the limits of the city and county, and its process may be served in any part thereof.

Jurisdiction. Post, §§ 112 et seq., 925.
Process, where runs. See post, § 106.
Legislation § 94. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 32.
The original § 94 provided that a probate court must be held in each county.

§ 95. Practice and rules. The justices' court and the justices of the peace of every such city and county shall be governed in their proceedings by the provisions of law regulating proceedings before justices of the peace, so far as such provisions are not altered or modified in this article, and the same are or can be made applicable in the several cases arising before them. The justices' courts of such city and county shall have power to make rules not inconsistent with the constitution and laws for the government of such justices' court and the officers thereof; but such rules shall not be in force until thirty days after their publication; and no rules shall be made imposing any tax or charge on any legal proceeding, or giving any allowance to any justice or officer for services.

§ 96. Attorney. Who shall not act as. It shall not be lawful for any justice of the peace, justices' clerk, or sheriff of any such city and county, or any of their deputies, to appear or advocate, or in any manner act as attorney, counsel, or agent for any party or person in any cause, or in relation to any demand, account, or claim pending, or to be sued or prosecuted before said court or justices, or either of them; nor shall any person other than an attorney at law, duly admitted to practice in courts of record, be permitted to appear as attorney or agent for any party in any cause or proceeding before said justices' court, or any of said justices, unless he produce a sufficient power of attorney to that effect, duly executed and acknowledged before some officer authorized by law to take acknowledgments of deeds, which power of attorney, or a copy thereof, duly certified by one of the justices (who, on inspection of the original, and being satisfied of its genuineness, shall certify such copy), shall be filed among the papers in such cause or proceeding.

Legislation § 96. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 33.
The original § 96 provided for the election of a probate judge in the city and county of San Francisco.

§ 97. Salaries. The justices of the peace shall receive for their official services the following salaries and no other or further compensation, payable monthly, out of the city and county treasury, after being first allowed and audited, as other similar demands are by law required to be allowed and audited; to each of the justices of the peace four thousand two hundred dollars per annum.

Legislation § 97. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 33, and then read: "The justices of the peace, and justices' clerk, and his deputy shall receive for their official services the following salaries, and no other or further compensation, payable monthly, out of the city and county treasury, and out of the special fee fund thereof, after being first allowed and audited as other similar demands are by law required to be allowed and audited: To the presiding justice, twenty-seven hundred dollars per annum; to the other justices of the peace and the justices' clerk, each, twenty-four hundred dollars per annum; to the deputy of the justices' clerk, twelve hundred dollars per annum."

3. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 1440, substituting "four thousand two hundred dollars" for "thirty-six hundred dollars."
The original § 97 defined the jurisdiction of probate courts.

§ 98. What justices successors of others. The justices of the peace elected in any such city and county at the general election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, or persons appointed to fill their places, are successors of the justices of the peace of such city and county who held office at the time of such election; and all records, registers, dockets, books, papers, causes, actions, and proceedings lodged, deposited, or pending before the justices' court, or any justice of any such city and county, are transferred to the justices' court of such city and county, herein provided for, which shall have the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance lodged, deposited, filed, or commenced therein.

§ 99. Justices' courts and justices in townships having a population between two hundred and fifty thousand and four hundred thousand. There shall be in each township having a population of more than two hundred and fifty thousand and less than four hundred thousand, one justices' court composed of six justices of the peace, which shall have the powers and jurisdiction prescribed and conferred by law upon justices of the peace. Said justices shall choose one of their number to be presiding justice, and in case of his disability or temporary absence he may designate any one of the other justices to act in his stead. Any of said justices may hold court and there may be as many sessions of said court at the same time as there are justices thereof. The supervisors shall provide in a convenient locality a suitable office for the presiding justice, justices' clerk, and rooms suitable for holding sessions of said court, separate from each other, for each of said justices of the peace. The said justices, justices' clerk, and deputy clerk, shall be in attendance at their respective offices for the dispatch of official business daily from nine o'clock a. m. until five p. m.

Nothing in this act shall affect the tenure of office of any justice of the peace now holding office.

Legislation § 99. 1. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 442; the act (adding §§ 99–102b) containing a saving clause, reading, "Sec. 7. Nothing in this act shall in any way interfere with or terminate the term of office of any person now holding the office of either justice of the peace or clerk of the justices' court, but immediately upon this act taking effect said justice of the peace shall organize said court under the provision of this act."

§ 100. Return of process. The original process in actions or proceedings begun in said justices' court shall be returnable and the parties summoned required to appear before said court.

Legislation § 100. 1. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 442 (see ante, Legislation § 99), and then read: "The original process in all actions or proceedings begun in said justices' court shall be returnable, and the parties summoned required to appear before the presiding justice or before one of the other justices of the peace to be designated by the presiding justice, and each of the justices shall have power, jurisdiction and authority to hear, try and determine any action or proceeding so commenced and which may have been made returnable before him or may be assigned or transferred to him."
2. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 1326.
The original § 100 (a part of article i) related to places of holding probate courts, and was enacted March 11, 1872, and repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

Process, how returnable. Under this section as added in 1911, a summons commanding the defendant to appear and answer before the "justices' court" was insufficient to give jurisdiction: it should have required him to appear before either the presiding justice or one of the other justices designated and named therein. Nellis v. Justices' Court, 20 Cal. App. 394; 129 Pac. 472.

§ 101. Appointment of justices' clerk. Said justices shall appoint a justices' clerk and assistant justices' clerk, who shall hold office at the pleasure of said justices and shall give such bond for the faithful performance of the duties of his office as said justices may require. Each justice shall also appoint one deputy clerk who shall hold office at the pleasure of the justice appointing him and perform such duties as shall be required by said justice or justices' clerk. Said justices' clerk, said assistant justices' clerk and said deputy clerks shall be authorized to administer oaths and take and certify affidavits. And they shall each be authorized to issue and sign writs, summons and all other processes in any actions or proceedings in said justices' courts in the name of the presiding justice or the acting presiding justice substantially as follows: ——, Presiding Justice. By ——, Clerk.

Legislation § 101. 1. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 442. See ante, Legislation § 99.

2. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 1326, (1) in first sentence, adding "and assistant justices' clerk"; (2) recasting the section after the second sentence, the original section, after that sentence, reading, "Said justices' clerk, and said deputy clerks shall be authorized to administer oaths and take and certify affidavits and to issue writs, summons and all other processes in any action or proceeding in said justices' court."

§ 102. Duties of justices' clerk. All papers to be filed with the clerk, all legal process of every kind in actions or proceedings in said justices' court, shall be issued by one of said justices or by said justices' clerk, assistant justices' clerk or deputy justices' clerk. Any one of said justices or the said justices' clerk, assistant justices' clerk or said deputy clerks shall issue, sign and certify in the name of the presiding justice or acting presiding justice to any and all papers, transcripts or records which are required to be issued, signed or certified by said justices of the peace. All complaints, answers and other pleadings and papers required to be filed in said justices' court shall be filed with said justices' clerk who shall keep a permanent record of all such actions and proceedings in said justices' docket now provided by law to be kept.

Legislation § 102. 1. Enacted by Stats. 1911, p. 443 (see ante, Legislation § 99), the section then reading, "§ 102. All legal processes of every kind in actions or proceedings in said justices' court shall be issued by the said justices' clerk upon the order of the presiding justice. The said justices' clerk shall issue, sign and certify to any and all papers, transcripts or records which are required to be issued, signed or certified by the said justice of the peace. All complaints, answers and other pleadings and papers required to be filed in the justices' court, shall be filed with the said justices' clerk, who shall keep a permanent record of all such actions and proceedings in the justices' docket, now provided by law to be kept."

Issuance of process. Under this section as added in 1911, the clerk cannot issue the summons, unless the presiding justice, after the commencement of the action, makes an order, in writing, directing him to do so: a general order to the clerk to sign all necessary legal process is insufficient. Nellis v. Justices' Court, 20 Cal. App. 394; 129 Pac. 472.

Legislation § 102a. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 443. See ante, Legislation § 99.

§ 102b. Salaries of justices and clerks. Said justices of the peace shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars per year, and said justices' clerk shall receive a salary of eighteen hundred dollars per year, and said deputy clerks shall each receive a salary of one thousand two hundred dollars per year, each payable in like manner and out of the same funds and at like times as county officers are paid, and such salaries provided to be paid to said justices of the peace shall be in lieu of all fees due and to become due such justices of the peace for the performance of any official act.

Legislation § 102b. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 443. See ante, Legislation § 99.

§ 103. Justices' courts and justices. In counties. In cities of various classes. Jurisdiction. Qualifications. Salaries. Fees. There shall be at least one justices' court in each of the townships of the state, for which one justice of the peace must be elected by the qualified electors of the townships, at the general state election next preceding the expiration of the term of office of his predecessor. In any county where in the opinion of the board of supervisors the public convenience requires it, the said board may, by order, provide that two justices' courts may be established in any township, designating the same in such order; and in such case, one justice of the peace must be elected in the manner herein provided for each of said courts. In every city or town of the first and one half class there must be five justices of the peace, and in every city or town of the second class there must be two justices of the peace, and in every city or town of the second and one half class there must be one justice of the peace, and in every city or town of the third and fourth classes there must be one justice of the peace, to be elected in like manner by the electors of such cities or towns respectively; and such justices of the peace of cities or towns shall have the same jurisdiction, civil and criminal, as justices of the peace of townships and township justices' courts. Said justices of the peace of cities and justices' courts of cities shall also have jurisdiction of all proceedings for the violation of any ordinance of any city in which courts are established, both civil and criminal, and of all actions for the collection of any license required by any ordinance of any such city or town, and generally exercise all powers, duties and jurisdiction civil and criminal, of police judges, judges of police courts, recorder's court or mayor's court, within such city. No person is eligible to the office of justice of the peace in any city or town of the first, first and one half, second, second and one half or third class, who has not been admitted to practice law in a court of record; and no justice of the peace is permitted to practice law before another justice of the peace in the city, town or county in which he resides, or to have a partner engaged in the practice of law in any justices' court in such city, town or county. Every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the first and one half class shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the second class shall receive a salary of three thousand six hundred dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the second and one half class shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the third class shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the fourth class shall receive a salary of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum; and each justice of the peace shall be provided by the city or town authorities with a suitable office in which to hold his court. Where the compensation of the justice of the peace of any city or town is by salary it shall be paid by warrants drawn each month upon the salary fund, or if there be no salary fund, then upon the general fund of such city or town; such warrants to be audited and paid as salaries of any other city officials. All fees which are chargeable by law for services rendered by such city justice of the peace in cities or towns aforesaid shall be by them respectively collected, and on the first Monday of each month every such city or town justice shall make a report, under oath, to the city or town treasurer, of the amount of fees so by him collected, and pay the amount so collected into the city or town treasury, to the credit of the general fund thereof. Said salaries shall be the sole compensation of the said city justice.

Act of Stats. 1883, p. 63. This section superseded the act of Stats. 1883, p. 63, fixing jurisdiction and providing compensation for justices of the peace.

2. Disabilities. See post, §§ 170 et seq.
3. Fees. See Const., art. vi, § 15.

Legislation § 103. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 34, and then read: "There shall be at least one justices' court in each of the townships of the state, for which one justice of the peace shall be elected by the qualified electors of the township, at the general state election next preceding the expiration of the term of office of his predecessor; provided, that in any county where, in the opinion of the board of supervisors the public convenience requires it, the said board may, by order, provide that two justices' courts may be established in any township, designating the same in such order, and in such case one justice of the peace shall be elected in the manner herein provided for each of such courts. In every city having ten thousand and not more than twenty thousand inhabitants there shall be one justice of the peace, and in every city having twenty thousand and not more than one hundred thousand inhabitants two justices of the peace, to be elected in like manner by the electors of such cities respectively. No person shall be eligible to the office of justice of the peace in any city having over ten thousand inhabitants who has not been admitted to practice law in a court of record; and no justice of the peace shall be permitted to practice law before any other justice of the peace in the city or county in which he resides, or to have a partner engaged in the practice of law in any justices' court in such city or county. Every justice of the peace in any city having over ten thousand inhabitants shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and shall be provided by the city authorities with a suitable office in which to hold his court. All fees which are by law chargeable for services rendered by such justices of the peace in the cities aforesaid, shall be by them respectively collected, and on the first Monday in each month every such city justice of the peace shall make report, under oath, to the city treasurer, of the amount of fees so by him collected, and pay the amount so reported into the city treasury, to the credit of the general fund thereof."

2. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 456, (1) by changing the second sentence to read, "In every city having fifteen thousand and not more than thirty-four thousand inhabitants, there shall be one justice of the peace, and in every city having thirty-four thousand and not more than one hundred thousand inhabitants, two justices of the peace, to be elected in like manner by the electors of such cities, respectively; and such justices of the peace of cities, and justice's courts of cities, shall have the same jurisdiction, civil and criminal, as justices of the peace of townships and township justice's courts"; and (2) by changing "ten thousand inhabitants," in both places where subsequently printed, to "fifteen thousand inhabitants."

3. Amended by Stats. 1899, p. 88, by changing the section, after the first sentence, to read, "In every city or town of the third and fourth class there shall be one justice of the peace, and in every city or town of the second class there shall be two justices of the peace, to be elected in like manner by the electors of such cities, or towns, respectively; and such justices of the peace of cities or towns, and justices' courts of cities or towns, shall have the same jurisdiction, civil and criminal, as justices of the peace of townships, and township justices' courts. Said justices of the peace of cities, and justices' courts of cities, shall also have jurisdiction of all proceedings for the violation of any ordinance of any city in which courts are established, both civil and criminal, and of all actions for the collection of any license required by any ordinance of any such city or town. No person shall be eligible to the office of justice of the peace in any city or town of the first, second, or third class who shall not have been admitted to practice law in a court of record; and no justice of the peace shall be permitted to practice law before another justice of the peace in the city, or town, and county in which he resides, or to have a partner engaged in the practice of law in any justice's court in such city, or town, and county. Every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the fourth class shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the second or third class shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and each justice of the peace shall be provided by the city or town authorities with a suitable office in which to hold his court. All fees which are chargeable by law for services rendered by such city justices of the peace in the cities or towns aforesaid shall be by them, respectively, collected; and on the first Monday of each month every such city or town justice of the peace shall make a report, under oath, to the city or town treasurer, of the amount of fees so by him collected, and pay the amount so collected into the city or town treasury, to the credit of the general fund thereof. Said salaries shall be the sole compensation of said city justices."

4. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 100; (1) in the first sentence, (a) "shall" is changed to "must" twice, where printed, (b) the words "provided, that" are stricken out, and a new sentence begun with the words "In any county," (c) the words "provided that two" are changed to "provide that two"; (2) in the second sentence, (a) the words "the third and fourth class there shall be one justice" are changed to "the third and the fourth class there must be one justice"; (b) the words "the second class there shall be two justices" are changed to "the first and one half and the second class there must be two justices"; (3) in sentence beginning "Said justices," after the words "such city or town," there is added the clause, "and generally exercise all powers, duties and jurisdiction, civil and criminal, of police judges, judges of the police court, recorder's court, or mayor's court within such city"; (4) entire sentence beginning "No person shall" is changed to read, "No person is eligible to the office of justice of the peace in any city or town of the first, first and one half, second or third class who has not been admitted to practice law in a court of record; and no justice of the peace is permitted to practice law before another justice of the peace in the city, town or county in which he resides, or to have a partner engaged in the practice of law in any justice's court in such city, town or county"; (5) in sentence beginning "Every city justice," the last clause, beginning "and each justice," is changed to read, preceded by a semicolon, "and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the second or third class shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum; and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the first and one half class shall receive a salary of twenty-four hundred dollars per annum; and each city justice of the peace shall be provided by the city or town authorities with a suitable office in which to hold his court"; (6) following the words "his court," a new sentence is added, "Where the compensation of the justice of the peace of any city or town is by salary, it shall be paid by warrants drawn each month upon the salary fund, or, if there be no salary fund, then upon the general fund, of such city or town; such warrants to be audited and paid as salaries of other city officials."

5. Amended again by Stats. 1901, p. 119 (code commission amendment); unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

6. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 210, by (1) changing, in the last sentence, the words "Said salaries" to "Said salary," and (2) adding the proviso, at the end of the section, "provided, that the provisions of this section as to the establishment of justices' courts and city justices of the peace in cities or towns, shall not apply to cities or towns in which recorders' courts or city or town recorders are now or may hereafter be established, and city justices' courts now existing in such cities or towns are hereby abolished."

7. Amended by Stats. 1905, pp. 49, 50, (1) in the sentence beginning "In every city or town," the words "first and one half and the second class" were changed to "first and one half class there must be three justices of the peace, and [in] every city or town of the second class"; (2) the sentence fixing the salary was amended to read, "Every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the fourth class shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the third class shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum; and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the first and one half class and the second class[,] shall receive a salary of twenty-four hundred dollars per annum; and each city justice of the peace shall be provided by the city or town authorities with a suitable office in which to hold his court"; and (3) the proviso at the end of the section was stricken out. There were two amendments of § 103 enacted on the same day (March 3, 1905); the first (Stats. 1905, p. 49) was to go into effect immediately, and the second (Stats. 1905, p. 50) on the first Monday after the first day of January, 1907; they were identical, except for the changes indicated supra by brackets, the second amendment, on page 50, being printed minus these changes, and containing, also, several unimportant typographical variations.

8. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 190, by changing, in the sentence beginning "In every city or town," the words "there must be three justices" to "there must be four justices."

9. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 47, (1) the first two sentences reading the same as the present amendment (1911); (2) the third sentence then reading, "In every city or town of the third and the fourth class, there must be one justice of the peace, and in every city or town of the first and one half class there must be four justices of the peace, and in every city or town of the second class there must be two justices of the peace, to be elected in like manner by the electors of such cities or towns respectively; and such justices of the peace of cities or towns shall have the same jurisdiction, civil and criminal, as justices of the peace of townships, and township justices' courts"; (3) the fourth sentence had (a) a comma after "cities," where it is first printed in the sentence, and (b) the definite article "the" before "police court," in the last clause; (4) the fifth sentence, beginning "No person," did not have the words "second and one half" in the first clause; (5) the sixth sentence, down to the last clause, reading, "Every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the fourth class shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the third class shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the first and one half class shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars per annum and every city justice of the peace in any city or town of the second class shall receive a salary of thirty-six hundred dollars per annum," the last clause reading the same as the present amendment; (6) the seventh sentence, beginning "Where the compensation," did not have the word "any" before "other city officials," at the end thereof; (7) the eighth sentence had the words "of the peace," after "town justice"; (8) the last sentence then read, "Said salaries shall be the sole compensation of said city justices."

Township justices. This section provides for the selection of township justices (People v. Sands, 102 Cal. 12; 36 Pac. 404; People v. Cobb, 133 Cal. 74; 65 Pac. 325), and also for their tenure of office, which is four years. Bailey v. Board of Supervisors, 66 Cal. 10; 56 Am. Rep. 73; 4 Pac. 768; Milner v. Reibenstein, 85 Cal. 593; 24 Pac. 935; People v. Cobb, 133 Cal. 74; 65 Pac. 325. A justice of the peace, holding office by virtue of general laws, is a "part of the constitutional judicial system of the state." Graham v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 151 Cal. 465; 91 Pac. 147; Peterbaugh v. Wadham, 162 Cal. 611; 123 Pac. 804.

Number of justices of the peace. Where a judicial township consists entirely of a city having a population of more than five thousand, and is provided, by charter, with a city justice of the peace appointed by the city council, such township is, under § 4101 of the Political Code, entitled to have but one justice of the peace elected at a general election. Odell v. Rihn, 19 Cal. App. 713; 127 Pac. 802. If a township is entitled to two justices of the peace, and two are in fact voted for at an election, two should be declared elected, though the proclamation called for the election of but one. If only one justice is in fact voted for at an election, when two should be elected, there is a failure to choose a second justice. Almon v. McEvoy, 19 Cal. App. 141; 124 Pac. 874.

De facto officer. The incumbent is entitled to discharge the duties and receive the compensation until his successor qualifies, and also, on the absolute failure of his successor to qualify, to hold the office for the entire term for which his successor was elected. French v. Santa Clara County, 69 Cal. 519; 11 Pac. 30.

City justices. This section also provides for the election of city justices, and for their tenure of office, which is fixed at two years. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110; Milner v. Reibenstein, 85 Cal. 593; 24 Pac. 935; People v. Sands, 102 Cal. 12; 36 Pac. 404. All city justices' courts in the state, whether in cities with freeholders' charters, or in those organized under the general law, are dependent upon this section, and therefore upon the classification act, for a valid existence (In re Johnson, 6 Cal. App. 734; 93 Pac. 199); and where they exist under a special charter, granted prior to the adoption of the present constitution, they are not disturbed or superseded. Ex parte Armstrong, 84 Cal. 655; 24 Pac. 598. In its broadest sense, the word "elected" means, merely, selected; hence, if a justice of the peace has been selected by the votes of several members of a city council, it is tantamount to an election. Odell v. Rihn, 19 Cal. App. 713; 127 Pac. 802.

Salary of justice of the peace. The inhibition of the constitution against increasing an officer's salary has reference only to the compensation as fixed by law when his term of office began; the legislature has power, pending the term, to lower the compensation, and afterwards raise it to a figure not in excess of that fixed when the term began. Puterbaugh v. Wadham, 162 Cal. 611; 123 Pac. 804. The prohibition of § 9 of article xi of the constitution, against increasing an officer's salary, is directed to the legislature: it has no application to an automatic increase in salary, due to the passing of a city, not by legislative act, but by increased population, from one class to another. Puterbaugh v. Wadham. 162 Cal. 611; 123 Pac. 804. A justice of the peace of a city of the second and one half class had no right to salary until the amendment of this section in 1911. Puterbaugh v. Wadham, 162 Cal. 611; 123 Pac. 804. The salary of city justices is paid by the city, and payments are made monthly. Jenks v. Council of City of Oakland, 58 Cal. 576; Los Angeles County v. Los Angeles, 65 Cal. 476; 4 Pac. 453; Milner v. Reibenstein, 85 Cal. 593; 24 Pac. 935.

City justices under charters. As to cities acting under a freeholders' charter, a city justice of the peace is the same as a township justice, simply a county or township officer performing no municipal functions whatever. Graham v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 151 Cal. 465; 91 Pac. 147. Justices' courts in municipalities are part of the constitutional judiciary. People v. Ransom, 58 Cal. 558; People v. Sands, 102 Cal. 12; 36 Pac. 404; Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316; 33 L. R. A. 620; 46 Pac. 87; In re Mitchell, 120 Cal. 384; 52 Pac. 799. A police court established by a city under a freeholders' charter is purely a municipal affair, and exempt from legislative control. Graham v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 151 Cal. 465; 91 Pac. 147. The prosecution of offenses against a state law or a county ordinance is not a municipal duty; and the legislature cannot impose the cost of performing this function upon a city. Fleming v. Hance, 153 Cal. 162; 94 Pac. 620. The requirement to furnish city justice of the peace with a suitable office in which to hold his court, is not applicable to a city having a freeholders' charter, since the constitutional amendments of 1896. Graham v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 151 Cal. 465; 91 Pac. 147.

Commitment on imperfect complaint. When a charge has been examined by a magistrate, and the evidence warrants an order holding the defendant to answer, imperfections in the complaint are cured, and the commitment is legal. People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546; 82 Pac. 196; Ex parte Stevens, 16 Cal. App. 424; 117 Pac. 1127.

§ 103½. Clerk to justices' court in cities of second and one half and third classes, duties, etc. Every city justices' court in any city or town of the second and one half class and the third class shall have a clerk, who shall be appointed by the justice of the peace of said court, subject to the approval of the board of supervisors of the county, and shall hold office during the pleasure of said justice. Said clerk shall give a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars, with at least two sureties to be approved by the mayor, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. He shall keep a record of the proceedings of said court and issue all process ordered by the justices of said court, and receive and pay into the city treasury all fines, forfeitures and fees paid into said court. He shall render each month to the city council an exact account under oath of all fines, forfeitures and fees paid and collected. He shall prepare bonds, justify bail, when the amount has been fixed by the court or justice, and may administer and certify oaths and shall remain in the courtrooms of said court during court hours and during such reasonable times thereafter as may be necessary for the proper performance of his duty. He shall have custody of all records and papers of said justice court. Every clerk of the justices' court in any city or town of the second and one half class shall receive an annual salary of one thousand six hundred dollars, and every clerk of the justices' court in any city or town of the third class shall receive an annual salary of one thousand two hundred dollars; said salaries shall respectively be payable in equal monthly installments out of the treasury of said cities and said salaries shall be the full compensation for all services rendered by the clerks of said courts.

Legislation § 103½. 1. Added by Stats. 1909, p. 268, being then entitled "Clerks in cities of the third class," and the text then reading, "§ 103½. Every city justice court in any city or town of the third class shall have a clerk, who shall be appointed by the justice of said court, subject to the approval of the board of supervisors of the county, and shall hold office during the pleasure of said justice. Said clerk shall give a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars, with at least two sureties, to be approved by the mayor, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office; he shall receive an annual salary of one thousand two hundred dollars, payable in equal monthly installments out of the treasury of said city, which salary shall be the full compensation for all services rendered by him; he shall keep a record of the proceedings of said court and issue all process ordered by the justice of said court, and receive and pay into the city treasury all fines, forfeitures and fees paid into said court. He shall also render each month to the city council, an exact account, under oath, of all fines, forfeitures and fees paid and collected. He shall prepare bonds, justify bail when the amount has been fixed by said court or justice and may administer and certify oaths, and shall remain in the courtrooms of said court during court hours and during such reasonable times thereafter as may be necessary for the proper performance of his duty. He shall have custody of all records and papers of said justice court."

2. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 1214, and differed from the present text, in having, (1) in the third sentence, "justice of said court," instead of "justices of said court"; (2) in the fifth sentence, beginning "He shall prepare bonds," a comma after "oaths" (as to the meaning of the change in 1913, quære); (3) in the first clause of the last sentence, "one thousand four hundred dollars," instead of "one thousand six hundred dollars."

3. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 68.

§ 103a. Justices' clerks, additional powers of. In every township wherein provision is made by law for a clerk, or clerks, for the justice of the peace, or the justices of the peace, of such township, said clerk or clerks, in addition to the other powers conferred upon them by law, shall have power to administer and certify oaths to affidavits, and all papers, documents or instruments used in, or in connection with, the civil actions or proceedings in such justices courts and to issue summons and other writs in civil actions in said courts in the name of the justice before whom the same is pending or out of whose court the same is issued.

Legislation § 103a. Added by Stats. 1915, p. 942.

§ 103b. Justices' clerks in counties of the seventh class, appointed when, and powers and duties of. In any township in a county of the seventh class having more than one justice of the peace as provided in section one hundred three of the Code of Civil Procedure, where in the opinion of the board of supervisors of the county, the public convenience requires it, said board may, by order, authorize a justices' court clerk and necessary deputies or a justice's court clerk for each justice of the peace for such township to be appointed, maintained and supported as hereinafter provided. Said justices when so authorized as hereinabove provided shall appoint a justices' clerk, who shall hold office at the pleasure of said justices, and shall give such bond for the faithful performance of the duties of his office in the sum of one thousand dollars. Each justice shall also appoint one deputy clerk when so authorized who shall hold office at the pleasure of the justice appointing him and perform such duties as shall be required by said justices and justices' clerk. Such justices' clerk, and such deputy clerks shall be authorized to administer oaths, take and certify affidavits; and they shall each be authorized to issue and sign writs, summons, and all other process in any action or proceeding in the justice court of the township for which they are appointed, or pending before any justice of the peace of said township in the name of the justice before whom the same is pending or out of whose court the same is issued, which shall be in substantially the following form: ——, Justice of the Peace.

——, Clerk.

By ——, Deputy Clerk.

All legal papers of every kind in actions or proceedings in such justices' court shall be issued by the said justices' clerk in the manner and form hereinabove set out. The said justices' clerk shall issue, sign and certify to any and all papers, transcripts or records which are required to be issued, signed or certified by the said justice of the peace. All complaints, answers and other pleadings and papers required to be filed in said justices' court shall be filed with such justices' clerk who shall keep a permanent record of all such actions and proceedings in the justices' docket, now provided by law to be kept by the justice; provided, that in the event that the said board of supervisors shall deem one justice's clerk for each justice of the peace sufficient to perform the duties hereinabove set out, said board shall authorize the appointment of one justice's clerk for each justice of the peace and one clerk shall be appointed by each of said justices and no deputy clerks shall be in such event appointed. And each of said clerks so appointed shall exercise the powers and fulfill the duties heretofore provided for a justice's clerk and shall receive a salary of twelve hundred dollars per year each. All fees for the issuance of all process, or other fees, which are by law allowed for any official service of the justice of the peace shall be exacted and paid in advance into the hands of the justice's clerk, which, together with all fees, fines, or penalties received in said justice's court shall be by him accounted for in detail under oath in the manner provided by law and paid into the treasury of the county at the time and in the manner as now required by law of the justice of the peace. Said justices' clerk shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per year and said deputy clerks shall each receive a salary of twelve hundred dollars per year, which shall be payable in like manner and out of the same funds and at like times as county officers are paid. The board of supervisors shall provide in a convenient locality a suitable office for the justices' clerk. The said justices' clerk shall be in attendance at his respective office in the discharge of official business daily from nine a. m. until five p. m. Nothing in this section shall in any way interfere with or terminate the term of office of any person now holding the office of justice of the peace.

Legislation § 103b. Added by Stats. 1915, p. 303.

§ 104. Courts, where held. A justices' court may be held at any place selected by the justice holding the same, in the township for which he is elected or appointed; and such court shall be always open for the transaction of business.

Hours of justice. See ante, § 88.

Legislation § 104. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 34; based on original code §§ 112, 118, which were based on Stats. 1863, p. 340. Original code § 112 read: "Every justice of the peace must hold a justice's court in the town or city in which he is elected." And § 118 read: "These courts may be held at any place selected by the justice holding the same, in the township or city for which he is elected, and they are always open for the transaction of business."

The original § 104 provided for the continuance of the municipal criminal court of San Francisco.

§ 105. What justice may hold court for another. A justice of the peace of any township, or city, or city and county may hold the court of any other justice of the peace of any township, city and county, or city within the same county, at his written request, and while so acting shall be vested with all the powers of the justice for whom he so holds court. In which case the proper entry of the proceedings before the attending justice subscribed by him shall be made in the docket of the justice for whom he so holds the court; and the same shall be prima facie evidence of such proceedings, and form and become a part of the record of any, or any part of any and all actions, causes, or proceedings had before such attending justice while so holding the court.

With respect to superior courts, see ante, § 71.

Legislation § 105. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 34, and then read: "A justice of the peace of any township may hold the court of any other justice of the peace of the same county, at his request, and while so acting shall be vested with the power of the justice for whom he so holds court, in which case the proper entry of the proceedings before the attending justice, subscribed by him, shall be made in the docket of the justice for whom he so holds the court."

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 8.

The original § 105 provided for the election of the judge of the municipal criminal court of San Francisco.

Justice holding court outside his township or city. Power is granted to justices, by this section, to hold or conclude preliminary examinations outside of their townships or cities. People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235; 33 Pac. 202; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495. If there is any irregularity in the proceedings to secure the justice, it does not affect the substantial rights of the accused, and furnishes no grounds for quashing the information. People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495; People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 601; 11 Pac. 481.

Entry in docket. The order requesting another justice to act need not set forth the reasons therefor; and a failure to subscribe the docket by such other justice, as required by this section, does not affect the substantial rights of the accused: this requirement is merely directory, and not mandatory. People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495.

Effect of failure to comply with section. A failure to follow the course prescribed by this section renders the judgment invalid, as the justice of the peace acquires no jurisdiction. Harlan v. Gladding, 7 Cal. App. 49; 93 Pac. 400.

§ 106. Territorial extent of civil jurisdiction. The civil jurisdiction of justices' courts extends to the limits of the townships in which they are held; but mesne and final process of any justices' court in a county may be issued to and served in any part of the county.

Jurisdiction. See ante, § 94, and post, §§ 112 et seq.

Process, where runs. See ante, § 94.

Legislation § 106. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 34; based on original code § 116, which read: "The civil jurisdiction of justice's courts, within an incorporated city, extends to the limits of such city, or township in which the city is situated. Mesne and final process of justices' courts may be issued to any part of the county in which they are held." This enactment was based on Stats. 1863, p. 340.

The original § 106 defined the jurisdiction of the municipal criminal court of San Francisco

Territorial jurisdiction. Where a party has contracted to perform an obligation at a particular place, and resides in a different county, an action to recover damages for a breach of this contract may be brought either in the township or city where the contract was to be performed, or in that in which the defendant resides; if brought in the place of performance, the summons may be served in the county in which the defendant resides. Cole v.

Fisher, 66 Cal. 441; 5 Pac. 915. Since this decision, however, the second subdivision of § 848 has been amended by the insertion of the words "in writing," after the word "contracted," and before the words "to perform," so that summons, in such a case, cannot now be served upon a defendant residing in a different county, except when the contract is in writing.

§ 107. What justices successors of others. The justices of the peace elected in the townships at the general state election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, or persons appointed to fill their places, are successors of the justices of the peace of the townships, respectively, who held office at the time of such election; and, in case the townships of any county are hereafter changed or altered, the board of supervisors of such county shall make provision as to what justices shall be successors of the justices of townships so changed or altered.

The original § 107 defined presumptions in favor of judgments of municipal criminal court of San Francisco.

Change or alteration of township. The constitutional provision as to justices' courts operates, specifically, only by means of local legislation, and establishes, automatically, a justice's court in each township created by the local body, which continues while such township exists, and is merged in another justice's court when two townships are merged into one. Proulx v. Graves, 143 Cal. 243; 76 Pac. 1025.

ARTICLE III.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND JUSTICES' COURTS IN GENERAL.

§ 110. Term of office.
§ 111. Vacancies.
§ 112. Civil jurisdiction.
§ 113. Concurrent jurisdiction.
§ 114. Civil jurisdiction restricted.
§ 115. Criminal jurisdiction. [Repealed.]
§ 116. [Amended and renumbered section. §§ 117–119. Same.]

§ 110. Term of office. The term of office of justices of the peace shall be four years from and after twelve o'clock meridian on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election.

Legislation § 110. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 113 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 340), and read: "Justices of the peace are elected by the electors of their respective townships or cities, at the judicial elections, and hold their offices for two years from the first day of January next following their election."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 97, to read: "Justices of the peace are elected by the electors of their respective cities or townships at the general elections, and hold their offices for two years from the first day of January next following their election."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 35, and renumbered § 110, and then read: "The term of office of justices of the peace shall be two years from the first day of January next succeeding their election; provided, that all justices of the peace elected at the general state election of eighteen hundred and seventy-nine shall go out of office at the end of one year from the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty."

4. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 630.

The original § 110 was the last section of chapter vii, and provided for officers and salaries of municipal criminal court of San Francisco.

Term of office. The term of office of justices of the peace within the city and county of San Francisco is two years. In re Mitchell, 120 Cal. 384; 52 Pac. 799.

Creation of office of justice of the peace. The constitution of 1879 did not abolish justices' courts, but expressly retained them. French v. Santa Clara County, 69 Cal. 519; 11 Pac. 30. A justice's court cannot be created by a city charter; the justices of the peace are elected at the general election, and qualify under the general laws of the state. People v. Sands, 102 Cal. 12; 36 Pac. 404; Graham v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 151 Cal. 469; 91 Pac. 148.

§ 111. Vacancies. If a vacancy occurs in the office of a justice of the peace, the board of supervisors of the county shall appoint an eligible person to hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term.

Legislation § 111. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 35.

Vacancy in office. A failure to qualify within the time required causes a vacancy in office (People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620; Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 174; French v. Santa Clara County, 69 Cal. 519; 11 Pac. 30; People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509; 26 Pac. 245); and the death of a person elected, after qualification, and before the expiration of his predecessor's term, also causes a vacancy (People v. Ward, 107 Cal. 236; 40 Pac. 538); but a vacancy is not created by resignation before the time of qualification and entering upon the duties of office. Miller v. Board of Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93.

Vacancies, how filled. Vacancies in the office of township justices of the peace are filled by the board of supervisors (People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620; French v. Santa Clara County, 69 Cal. 519; 11 Pac. 30; People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134; 54 Pac. 596); but the board cannot anticipate a future vacancy, to arise during the term of a newly elected board. People v. Ward, 107 Cal. 236; 40 Pac. 538. Boards of supervisors have power to appoint a justice in a newly created township. People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134; 54 Pac. 596. Vacancies in the city of Oakland are filled by the board of supervisors, and not by the mayor; the term of the appointee is the remainder of the unexpired term of the original incumbent. People v. Cobb, 133 Cal. 74; 65 Pac. 325.

§ 112. Civil jurisdiction. The justices' courts shall have civil jurisdiction:

1. In actions arising on contract for the recovery of money only if the sum claimed, exclusive of interest, does not amount to three hundred dollars;

2. In actions for damages for injury to the person or for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, or for injury to real property where no issue is raised by the verified answer of the defendant involving the title to or possession of the same, if the damage claimed do not amount to three hundred dollars;

3. In actions to recover the possession of personal property, if the value of such property does not amount to three hundred dollars;

4. In actions for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, not amounting to three hundred dollars, given by statute, or the ordinance of an incorporated city and county, city, or town, where no issue is raised by the answer involving the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine;

5. In actions upon bonds or undertakings conditioned for the payment of money, if the sum claimed does not amount to three hundred dollars, though the penalty may exceed that sum;

6. To take and enter judgment for the recovery of money on the confession of a defendant, when the amount confessed, exclusive of interest, does not amount to three hundred dollars.

Local and special legislation with respect to jurisdiction of justice prohibited. Const. 1879, art. iv, § 25.

Jurisdiction of justice's court. See post, § 838.

Justice's court cannot issue writ of—

1. Mandamus. See post, § 1085.
2. Prohibition. See post, § 1103.
3. Certiorari. See post, § 1068.

Confession of judgment in justices' courts. See post, § 1135.

Transfer of cause to superior court, where certain questions involved. See post, § 838.

Legislation § 112. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 114, and then read: "The civil jurisdiction of these courts within their respective townships or cities extends: 1. To an action arising on contract, for the recovery of money only, if the sum claimed, exclusive of interest, does not amount to three hundred dollars; 2. To an action for damages for injury to the person, or for taking or detaining personal property, or for injuring personal property, or for an injury to real property, where no issue is raised by the answer involving the plaintiff's title, or possession of the same, if the damages claimed do not amount to three hundred dollars; 3. To an action for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, not amounting to three hundred dollars, given by statute or the ordinance of an incorporated city or town; 4. To an action upon a bond or undertaking conditioned for the payment of money, not amounting to three hundred dollars, though the penalty exceed that sum; the judgment to be given for the sum actually due. When the payments are to be made by installments, an action may be brought for each installment as it becomes due; 5. To an action to recover the possession of personal property, when the value of such property does not amount to three hundred dollars; 6. To take and enter judgment on the confession of a defendant, when the amount confessed, exclusive of interest, does not amount to three hundred dollars."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 35, and renumbered § 112.

The original § 112 provided for the place of holding justices' courts.

Jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of justices' courts is special and limited: there is no presumption in favor of their jurisdiction (Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318); but they must strictly pursue the powers conferred upon them. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575. Consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction of the subject-matter (Feillet v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76), but can confer jurisdiction of the party. Ex parte Lou Ah Sun, 7 Pac. 305. The record must affirmatively show the jurisdiction of the justice: nothing can be taken by implication (Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449; Van Etten v. Jilson, 6 Cal. 19; Smith v. Andrews, 6 Cal. 652; Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283; Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Kane v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 464); and jurisdiction is sufficiently shown by recitals in the docket. Cardwell v. Sabichi, 59 Cal. 490. The record must affirmatively show that the action was brought in the right township; failure to object does not waive the defect (Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296); and the record must set forth the facts showing service and return of summons. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 49; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 32 Cal. 582; Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321. The burden of showing affirmatively all matter necessary to confer jurisdiction is on the party asserting a right under judgment. Van Etten v. Jilson, 6 Cal. 19; Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54; Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283; Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318; Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321; Ex parte Kearny, 55 Cal. 212; Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838; Eltzroth v. Ryan, 89 Cal. 135; 26 Pac. 647. Where the complaint states a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the court, a demurrer, on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction, will be overruled. Thornton, J., concurring, in Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737. Parol proof of the facts showing jurisdiction must be made to appear, where the record fails to state such facts. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321.

Determination as to jurisdiction and review. The justice's court has power to pass upon and determine the facts upon which its jurisdiction depends (Ex parte Noble, 96 Cal. 362; 31 Pac. 224; In re Grove Street, 61 Cal. 438; Ex parte Sternes, 77 Cal. 156; 11 Am. St. Rep. 251; 19 Pac. 275); and it is questionable whether such decision and determination, being insufficient, can be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296. Jurisdiction is not affected by an erroneous decision. Karry v. Superior Court, 162 Cal. 281; 122 Pac. 475; 128 Pac. 760. One method of attacking the jurisdiction of a justice's court is by appeal to the superior court; but, after such appeal, no further attack can be made upon the judgment given in the justice's court. American Law Book Co. v. Superior Court, 164 Cal. 327; 128 Pac. 921. The better practice, in such cases, is, not to appeal the case on its merits, but to assail the jurisdiction by certiorari, as it is doubtful whether the appeal will not estop a party from questioning the jurisdiction of the justice's court. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351. The mere exercise of jurisdiction by a justice's court cannot be reviewed on certiorari. Karry v. Superior Court, 162 Cal. 281; 122 Pac. 475; 128 Pac. 760.

Notice of trial as affecting jurisdiction. A failure to give notice of trial in writing, where the parties have appeared, renders the judgment void (Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; Los Angeles v. Young, 118 Cal. 295; 62 Am. St. Rep. 234; 50 Pac. 534); but no notice is required as to a party in default. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

No equitable jurisdiction. A justice's court has no jurisdiction in equitable matters but it may appoint a receiver of rents and profits in an ejectment proceeding at law. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351.

Actions arising on contract. A judgment is a contract, within the meaning of this section (Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538; Ames v. Hoy, 12 Cal. 11); and an action against a stockholder of a corporation, for his proportion of the indebtedness of the corporation, is an obligation arising upon contract, within the meaning of this section. Dennis v. Superior Court, 91 Cal. 548; 27 Pac. 1031; Kennedy v. California Savings Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846; Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155; Morrow v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383; 1 Pac. 354.

Amount in controversy. The test of jurisdiction of the justice's court over the subject-matter of the controversy is the principal sum sued for, exclusive of interest. Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230; Bradley v. Kent, 22 Cal. 169; Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425; Dashiell v. Slingerland, 60 Cal. 653; Shealor v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 564; 11 Pac. 653; Hoban v. Ryan, 130 Cal. 96; 62 Pac. 296. Prior to 1863, the jurisdiction of the justice's court was only two hundred dollars (Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230; Brock v. Bruce, 5 Cal. 279; Ford v. Smith, 5 Cal. 331; Hart v. Moon, 6 Cal. 161; Small v. Gwinn, 6 Cal. 447; Freeman v. Powers, 7 Cal. 104; Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76; Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61); but since that time it has been three hundred dollars. Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 628; Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425; Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349. The ad damnum clause is the test of jurisdiction (Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425; Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349; Lord v. Goldberg, 81 Cal. 596; 15 Am. St. Rep. 82; 22 Pac. 1126); but this is not conclusive, regardless of the allegations of the complaint. Lohnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195. Where the complaint shows an amount beyond the jurisdiction, but the prayer is for judgment within the jurisdiction, there is a waiver of the excess, and the court has power to try the cause. Sanborn v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 425. The plaintiff has the right to waive any sum, to bring the cause within the jurisdiction of the court (Van Etten v. Jilson, 6 Cal. 19; Grass Valley Quartz Mining Co. v. Stackhouse, 6 Cal. 413; Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465); but, the test of jurisdiction being the amount sued for, the waiver must be made before the action is commenced; jurisdiction cannot be conferred by an amendment remitting the sum in excess of the jurisdictional amount. Hoban v. Ryan, 130 Cal. 96; 62 Pac. 296. Where attorneys' fees, stipulated in a note, are demanded in addition to the principal sum due, increasing the amount beyond three hundred dollars, the justice's court is ousted of jurisdiction (Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 628; De Jarnatt v. Marquez, 127 Cal. 558; 78 Am. St. Rep. 90; 60 Pac. 45); and the justice's court has no jurisdiction, where, by trebling the damages in unlawful detainer, the sum demanded exceeds the jurisdictional amount. Hoban v. Ryan, 130 Cal. 96; 62 Pac. 296. A counterclaim, to be available, must be within the jurisdictional amount. Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545. Where two actions in a justice's court are, by stipulation, consolidated for the purpose of trial, a verdict for a specified amount, less than three hundred dollars in each case, is not uncertain nor in excess of jurisdiction, though the verdict specifies the aggregate amount found, which exceeds three hundred dollars. La Due v. Forbes, 19 Cal. App. 124; 124 Pac. 867.

Injury to real property. A justice's court has no jurisdiction to receive evidence in or to try an issue involving title to or possession of real property; where such evidence is offered, it is the duty of the justice to suspend further proceedings, and to certify the cause to the superior court. King v. Kutner-Goldstein Co., 135 Cal. 65; 67 Pac. 10. This section makes no attempt to confer jurisdiction upon justices' courts in actions involving the right to possession of real property. O'Meara v. Hables, 163 Cal. 240; 124 Pac. 1003. It is not enough that possession is in fact in controversy, or incidentally in question, or that the fact of possession is in issue, to oust the justice of jurisdiction, within the meaning of the constitution: the right to the possession must be involved. Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 683. The justice is not ousted of jurisdiction, where possession only is involved (Livingston v. Morgan, 53 Cal. 23); nor where title to land is not directly called in question (Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737), although the question need not necessarily be raised by the pleadings (Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 181; 18 Pac. 256; Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132; 37 Pac. 196); but see contra, Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737; Livingston v. Morgan, 53 Cal. 23; Ghiradelli v. Greene, 56 Cal. 629; Williams v. Mecartney, 69 Cal. 556; 11 Pac. 186. The true rule seems to be this: If the issue of title or right to the possession is so involved that it must be decided in order to determine the case, the superior court has original jurisdiction, whether the involution may be said to be merely incidental or not. Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132; 37 Pac. 196; Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338; Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 181; 18 Pac. 256; Randolph v. Kraemer, 106 Cal. 199; 39 Pac. 533; Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 455; 42 Pac. 975. An action to recover half the value of a partition-fence involves the title of the respective parties to their lands, and the justice's court has no jurisdiction (Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338); but the title or right to the possession is not put in issue in an action to recover rent due on a written lease, where the action denies the plaintiff's title or right to possession. Ghiradelli v. Greene, 56 Cal. 629. The justice's court has jurisdiction of an action to recover a deposit on the purchase of land, where the amount demanded does not exceed the jurisdictional amount (Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737); but an action for part payment of the purchase-money, because of a defect of title, involves the title to real property, and is not within the jurisdiction of the justice's court. Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 181; 18 Pac. 256.

Transfer of cases to superior court. See note post, § 838.

Conversion. In an action for the conversion of grain, the question of injury does not involve the title to or the right to the possession of the ground on which the grain was grown (Ethridge v. Jackson, 2 Sawy. C. C. 598; 8 Fed. Cas. 801; Fed. Cas. No. 4541); and the justice's court has jurisdiction of an action to recover damages for taking and removing a fence. Livingston v. Morgan, 53 Cal. 23.

Actions to recover personal property. In an action in a justice's court for the recovery of specific personal property, the standard of jurisdiction is "the value of the property"; and it seems that the justice's jurisdiction for the incidental damages for detention is unlimited; at all events, the demand for damages cannot oust the justice of jurisdiction, if the value of the property is less than three hundred dollars. Astell v. Phillippi, 55 Cal. 265; and see post, §§ 509–521.

Action on bonds. A justice's court has jurisdiction of an action to enforce a bond given to secure the payment of the costs of an attachment suit, brought in the superior court and appealed to the supreme court, even though the appeal is pending and undetermined. Karry v. Superior Court, 162 Cal. 281; 122 Pac. 475; 128 Pac. 760.

Fines, penalty, or forfeiture. The justice's court has jurisdiction of actions to recover a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, where the amount sued for is within its jurisdiction, unless a question as to the legality of the tax, impost, toll, assessment, or municipal fine is raised. Williams v. Mecartney, 69 Cal. 556; 11 Pac. 186; and see Randolph v. Kraemer, 106 Cal. 199; 39 Pac. 533.

Confession of judgment. A verified statement by the defendant, consenting to a judgment, specifying the amount, authorizes a judgment in accordance therewith (Pond v. Davenport, 44 Cal. 481); and such a judgment, rendered upon an insufficient statement, is not a nullity, and cannot be attacked collaterally. Lee v. Figg, 37 Cal. 328; 99 Am. Dec. 271. An application to set aside confession of judgment must show that the claim was not just, and that the judgment ought not to have been confessed. Arrington v. Sherry, 5 Cal. 513; Lee v. Figg, 37 Cal. 328; 99 Am. Dec. 271. Where the insolvency laws prohibit the confession of judgment by a bankrupt, the assignee in insolvency can have the judgment declared void, upon proper proceedings for that purpose. Pehrson v. Hewitt, 79 Cal. 594; 21 Pac. 950. It is not necessary for a defendant to be an execution creditor, in order to maintain an action to set aside a confession of judgment to defraud creditors; it is sufficient if he have an attachment (Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605), as creditors who have acquired liens upon a debtor's property, before sale, under confessed judgments, may attack the same for fraud (Lee v. Figg, 37 Cal. 328; 99 Am. Dec. 271); but the complaint must set forth the specific facts constituting the fraud (Meeker v. Harris, 19 Cal. 278; 79 Am. Dec. 215; King v. Davis, 34 Cal. 100; Lawrence v. Gayetty, 78 Cal. 126; 12 Am. St. Rep. 29; 20 Pac. 382; 17 Morrison's Min. Rep. 169; People v. McKenna, 81 Cal. 158; 22 Pac. 488; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286; 16 Am. St. Rep. 116; 6 L. R. A. 756; 22 Pac. 910, 1046), as a general allegation that it is fraudulent, and was intended to hinder and delay creditors, is not sufficient. Pehrson v. Hewitt, 79 Cal. 594; 21 Pac. 950; Albertoli v. Branham, 80 Cal. 631; 13 Am. St. Rep. 200; 22 Pac. 404; Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 25 Pac. 497; Cosgrove v. Fisk, 90 Cal. 75; 27 Pac. 56. Such averments are merely the conclusions of the pleader. Oakland v. Carpentier, 21 Cal.

642; Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75; Oroville etc. R. R. Co. v. Supervisors of Plumas County, 37 Cal. 354; Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195; Payne v. Elliott, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80; Pehrson v. Hewitt, 79 Cal. 591; 21 Pac. 950; Albertoli v. Branham, 80 Cal. 631; 13 Am. St. Rep. 200; 22 Pac. 404; Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 25 Pac. 497; Cosgrove v. Fisk, 90 Cal. 75; 27 Pac. 56; Heller v. Dyerville Mfg. Co., 116 Cal. 127; 47 Pac. 1016.

Appeals to superior court. See notes post, §§ 974–980.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The preceding action is based upon the act of 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 340). In the original section the jurisdiction extended in actions upon a contract or to recover damages to an "amount not exceeding three hundred dollars." The constitution (art. vi, § 9) declares that the jurisdiction of these courts shall not trench upon the jurisdiction of courts of record, and § 6 of the same article conferred jurisdiction in this class of cases when the sum in controversy amounts to three hundred dollars. To obviate this constitutional objection, we have stricken out the words "does not exceed three hundred dollars," wherever they occurred in the original section, and inserted instead thereof the words "does not amount to three hundred dollars." Subdivision 5 of the original section gave these courts jurisdiction of actions of foreclosure when the debt secured did not exceed three hundred dollars, trenching upon the equity jurisdiction cast by the constitution upon the district courts; therefore we have omitted this subdivision, and for kindred reasons we have omitted the provisions of the eighth subdivision of the original section, conferring jurisdiction upon justices' courts to determine the right to a mining claim, when the value of the claim did not exceed three hundred dollars.

1. Jurisdiction to appear from records. The record of the proceedings of a justice's court must affirmatively show jurisdiction. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321; King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296.

2. Legality of tax. Where the legality of a tax is put in issue, the justice is ousted of jurisdiction. People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

3. Final judgments of justice cannot be reviewed by him. A justice has no power to vacate a judgment of dismissal and reinstate the case. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. A justice has no power to vacate or set aside a judgment made by him, except upon a motion for a new trial. And when this is done the proper remedy is by certiorari from district or county court, and not by appeal. No appeal lies in such a case. The judgment of the district court annulling such order should not, however, affirm the original judgment. Winter v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Cal. 269.

4. Amendment of complaint, so as to show jurisdiction. A justice has the right to allow a complaint to be amended in all respects, so that the case may be determined on its substantial merits; and this whether the defect be in the statement, jurisdiction, or other facts. Linhart v. Buiff, 11 Cal. 280; Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465. When a complaint in a justice's court avers a good cause of action, and in addition thereto avers and asks relief for matters not within the jurisdiction of the court, the action should not on that account be dismissed, but the court should direct the complaint to be amended, or should disregard the objectionable matter. Howard v. Valentine, 20 Cal. 282; Van Etten v. Jilson, 6 Cal. 19; Grass Valley Quartz Min. Co. v. Stackhouse, 6 Cal. 413; Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465.

5. Granting appeals, stay of executions, etc. Justices can exercise jurisdiction to grant appeals, and thereupon stay execution, etc. Coulter v. Stark, 7 Cal. 244.

6. Deserting seamen. Under the acts of Congress (1790), justices of the peace have jurisdiction to try and commit deserting seamen, and no other court has this power. Ex parte Crandall, 2 Cal. 144.

7. Money demands. Amount in controversy. A judgment by confession for a greater amount than (notwithstanding the complaint was within) the jurisdictional amount allowed by the constitution, was held void. Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76. But this case is commented on, and it was held that the "amount in controversy is what determines the jurisdiction." That this was the amount sued for, exclusive of costs. The judgment may exceed the amount in controversy. Bradley v. Kent, 22 Cal. 169; but see Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 629; see note 6 to § 44, ante. Formerly, under the constitution, the jurisdiction of the justice's court was limited, as to money demands, to an "amount not exceeding two hundred dollars." Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76; Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230; Ford v. Smith, 5 Cal. 331; Brock v. Bruce, 5 Cal. 279; Hart v. Morn, 6 Cal. 161; Freeman v. Powers, 7 Cal. 104; Small v. Gwinn, 6 Cal. 447; Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61. But since 1863 the jurisdiction has been established at any sum not amounting to three hundred dollars. Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307; Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; see Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 629. Justices' courts would have no jurisdiction where a defendant sets up a counterclaim for a sum exceeding three hundred dollars. Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545. Plaintiff commenced three actions in a justice's court for the recovery of the same property, the action being against several defendants. The property sued for was of value less than three hundred dollars. Under § 1048 of this code (§ 526) the several actions were consolidated. The court held, the value of the property being less than three hundred dollars, that the justice had jurisdiction. Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307.

8. Trespass on real property. A justice's court has jurisdiction of an action of trespass on real property, the damages claimed being less than three hundred dollars. Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 683. But the right of possession must not be put in issue. Cornett v. Bishop, 39 Cal. 319.

9. Damages for injury to, or detention of, mining claims. It was held that justices' courts could not take jurisdiction of suits to recover damages for injury to a mining claim, or for its detention. Van Etten v. Jilson, 6 Cal. 19.

10. Damage for diversion of water. Water rights. A justice of the peace has no power conferred upon him to try a cause, where there is an alleged injury arising out of a diversion of water from the natural or artificial channel in which it is conducted. Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 445; 63 Am. Dec. 140.

11. Action for penalty for charging excessive fare by railroad company. See Reed v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 33 Cal. 212.

12. Judgment on confession of defendant. Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76.

§ 113. Concurrent jurisdiction. The justices' courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior courts within their respective townships:

1. In actions of forcible entry and detainer, where the rental value of the property entered upon or unlawfully detained does not exceed twenty-five dollars per month, and the whole amount of damages claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars;

2. In actions to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property, where neither the amount of the liens nor the value of the property amounts to three hundred dollars.

Concurrent jurisdiction. See Const., art. vi, § 11.
Concurrent jurisdiction in action for forcible entry and detainer. See post, § 1163.
Forcible entry. See post, §§ 1159 et seq.

Legislation § 113. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 35.
The original § 113 provided for terms and election of justices of the peace. See ante, § 110.

Actions of forcible entry and detainer. Justices' courts have jurisdiction concurrent with the superior court in cases of unlawful detainer, where the amount involved brings the action within this section. Ivory v. Brown, 137 Cal. 603; 70 Pac. 657. The constitutional provision of 1849 giving justices' courts jurisdiction in actions in forcible entry and detainer was held to include unlawful detainers (Caulfield v. Stevens, 28 Cal. 118; Brummagim v. Spencer, 29 Cal. 661; Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154; Johnson v. Chely, 43 Cal. 299); and this section is given the same construction. Ivory v. Brown, 137 Cal. 603; 70 Pac. 657. The test of jurisdiction in such actions is: 1. That the whole amount of damages claimed must not exceed two hundred dollars; and 2. That the rental value of the property must not exceed twenty-five dollars a month, as a matter of fact (Ballerino v. Bigelow, 90 Cal. 500; 27 Pac. 372); and this amount must be computed by excluding interest. Hoban v. Ryan, 130 Cal. 96; 62 Pac. 296. Where the plaintiff seeks to have the damages trebled, and by so doing exceeds the jurisdictional amount, the court is ousted of jurisdiction (Hoban v. Ryan, 130 Cal. 96; 62 Pac. 296), and also where the evidence shows that the rental involved is in excess of twenty-five dollars a month, as jurisdiction cannot be conferred by the fictitious framing of a complaint to bring the action within the jurisdictional amount, and thus deprive the defendant of the right to submit his case to the proper tribunal. Ballerino v. Bigelow, 90 Cal. 500; 27 Pac. 372.

Concurrent and conflicting jurisdiction. See note 29 Am. St. Rep. 310.
Right to control action as between two courts of concurrent jurisdiction. See note Ann. Cas. 1912A, 150.

§ 114. Civil jurisdiction restricted. Except as in the last preceding section provided, the jurisdiction of the justices' courts shall not, in any case, trench upon the jurisdiction of the several courts of record of the state, nor extend to any action or proceeding against ships, vessels, or boats, for the recovery of seamen's wages for a voyage performed in whole or in part without the waters of this state.

Not to trench upon jurisdiction of courts of record. See Const., art. vi, § 11.
Actions against vessels. Post, §§ 813 et seq.

Legislation § 114. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 115, and then read: "The jurisdiction conferred by the last section shall not extend, however: 1. To a civil action in which the title or possession of real property is put in issue; 2. Nor to an action or proceeding against ships, vessels, or boats, or against the owners or masters thereof, when the suit or proceeding is for the recovery of seamen's wages for a voyage performed in whole or in part without the waters of this state."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 399, and the words "or against the owners or masters thereof" omitted.
3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 36, and renumbered § 114.
The original § 114 defined the civil jurisdiction of justices' courts. See ante, § 112.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 340.

Cases involving title or possession of real property. The constitution confers on the district courts original jurisdiction in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, and on the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in all such cases. Const., art. vi, §§ 4, 6. The ninth section of the same article of the constitution authorizes the legislature to fix by law the powers of justices of the peace, provided such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several courts of record; and the act concerning the courts of justice of this state and judicial officers provides that courts of justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction in a civil action in which the title or possession of real estate shall necessarily come in question. Laws 1863, p. 340, § 49. The objection suggested is untenable, because the action, though commenced in a justice's court for damages in a sum less than three hundred dollars, upon the filing of the defendant's answer involved a question of title to the land on which stood the fence that was destroyed. The cause was transferred from the justice's court to the district court, upon the filing of the defendant's verified answer, showing that the determination of the action would necessarily involve the decision of a question of title to real property, as provided by the five hundred and eighty-first section of the Practice Act (post, § 838), and upon its becoming so transferred, the district court obtained complete jurisdiction in the premises. Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 144, 145. In Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338, the title of the respective parties to certain parcels of real estate was in issue, and in ascertaining the meaning of the clause of the constitution, "all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property," the subject of possession was considered, but only by way of argument, and for the purpose of illustration; and in the discussion the language of the court was not in all respects sufficiently guarded and definite. To constitute a case which involves the possession of real property, it is not enough that the possession is a fact in controversy, or incidentally in question, or that the fact of possession is in issue; but the right of possession must be involved in the action. The paraphrase of the clause of the constitution, given in Holman v. Taylor, would be more accurate, and would more fully express the meaning of that clause, if given in this language: "Cases at law in which the title or right of possession of real property is a material fact in the case, upon which the plaintiff relies for a recovery, or the defendant for a defense." The allegation of the right of possession is quite different from that of possession in fact, which may constitute merely the basis of some right or claim constituting the cause of action, or the defense to the action. In an action for use and occupation, the possession of the defendant may be alleged on the one side and denied on the other without presenting an issue as to the right of possession. And so, in an action of trespass upon real property, the plaintiff may recover upon alleging and showing, in addition to the injury complained of, his possession of the premises, and his right to the possession is not involved unless the defendant tenders an issue upon that fact, and in such case, as was said in Holman v. Taylor, the right of recovery depends both upon possession in fact and the right of possession. It was not the intention to withdraw from justices of the peace and other inferior courts, and confer upon the district courts, jurisdiction of cases of the character of those mentioned, in which the right of possession is not involved; but it was intended to give to the latter courts jurisdiction of cases involving the right of possession of real property. Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 685. See also Cornett v. Bishop, 39 Cal. 319; Cullen v. Langridge, 17 Cal. 69.

Police courts. Police courts constitute part of the courts of the state, and police judges part of the judiciary (Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110; McGrew v. Mayor and Board of Trustees, 55 Cal. 611; People v. Ransom, 58 Cal. 558; Jenks v. Council of City of Oakland, 58 Cal. 576; Coggins v. Sacramento, 59 Cal. 599; Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316; 33 L. R. A. 620; 46 Pac. 87; People v. Provines, 34 Cal. 520); and police judges, though judicial officers, are also municipal officers. People v. Henry, 62 Cal. 557.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. People v. Provines, 34 Cal. 520.

CHAPTER VII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS RESPECTING COURTS OF JUSTICE.

Article I. Publicity of Proceedings. §§ 124, 125.
II. Incidental Powers and Duties of Courts. §§ 128–131.
III. Judicial Days. §§ 133–135.
IV. Proceedings in Case of Absence of Judge. §§ 139, 140.
V. Provisions respecting Places of Holding Courts. §§ 142–144.
VI. Seals of Courts. §§ 147–153.

ARTICLE I.

PUBLICITY OF PROCEEDINGS.

§ 124. Sittings, public.
§ 125. Sittings, when private.

§ 124. Sittings, public. The sittings of every court of justice shall be public, except as provided in the next section.

Publicity of proceedings. U. S. Const., art. vi, § 1, Amdts.

Legislation § 124. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 342.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 36, and the word "are" changed to words "shall be."

Public sittings. "A public trial" means one not held in secret. People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223; 3 Pac. 809. The trial should be public, in the ordinary, common-sense acceptation of the term; the doors of the courtroom kept open; the public admitted; the trial public in all respects; with due regard to the size of the courtroom and the conveniences of the court, with the right in the court to exclude objectionable characters as well as youths of tender years, and to do other things which may facilitate the proper conduct of the trial. People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242; 42 Am. St. Rep. 108; 37 Pac. 153. The exclusion of spectators from the courtroom during the trial, against the objection of defendant, is a violation of the constitution; and injury to the defendant will be presumed (People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242; 42 Am. St. Rep. 108; 37 Pac. 153; and see People v. Kerrigan, 73 Cal. 222; 14 Pac. 849), but this right to a public trial may be waived by the defendant (People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57; 46 Pac. 896), and, in the absence of any showing, it will be presumed that an excluding order was with the consent of the defendant. People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223; 3 Pac. 809. An order excluding from the courtroom all persons, except the judge, jurors, witnesses, and persons connected with the cause, does not violate this statutory provision. People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223; 3 Pac. 809; People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57; 46 Pac. 896; People v. Kerrigan, 73 Cal. 222; 14 Pac. 849.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 342.

§ 125. Sittings, when private. In an action for divorce, criminal conversation, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage, the court may direct the trial of any issue of fact joined therein to be private, and may exclude all persons except the officers of the court, the parties, their witnesses, and counsel; provided, that in any cause the court may, in the exercise of a sound discretion, during the examination of a witness, exclude any or all other witnesses in the cause.

Records in divorce and attachment proceedings to be kept secret. See Pol. Code, § 1032.

Exclusion of witnesses. Post, § 2043.

Legislation § 125. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 342), and then read: "§ 125. In an action for divorce the court may direct the trial of any issue of fact joined therein to be private, and may exclude all persons, except the officers of the court, the parties, their witnesses, and counsel."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 284, the text then reading as at present, except that it did not have proviso.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 36, and proviso added.

Private sittings. This section, permitting private sittings of the court, does not apply to criminal cases, but only to civil actions. People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242; 42 Am. St. Rep. 108; 37 Pac. 153. The object of this section is to secure decorum in the conduct of trials involving the relation of the sexes, and to protect witnesses of refined sensibilities from giving testimony of a delicate or filthy nature in the presence of a crowd of vulgar or curious spectators; it was not intended for the protection of the public from the influence of revelations often made in such cases, nor to prevent the publication of the evidence. In re Shortridge, 99 Cal. 526; 37 Am. St. Rep. 78; 21 L. R. A. 755; 34 Pac. 227; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 542, note.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 342.

ARTICLE II.

INCIDENTAL POWERS AND DUTIES OF COURTS.

§ 128. Powers respecting conduct of proceedings.
§ 129. Courts of record may make rules.
§ 130. When rules take effect.
§ 131. Probationary treatment of juvenile offenders.

§ 128. Powers respecting conduct of proceedings. Every court shall have power:

1. To preserve and enforce order in its immediate presence;

2. To enforce order in the proceedings before it, or before a person or persons empowered to conduct a judicial investigation under its authority;

3. To provide for the orderly conduct of proceedings before it, or its officers;

4. To compel obedience to its judgments, orders, and process, and to the orders of a judge out of court, in an action or proceeding pending therein;

5. To control in furtherance of justice, the conduct of its ministerial officers, and of all other persons in any manner connected with a judicial proceeding before it, in every matter appertaining thereto;

6. To compel the attendance of persons to testify in an action or proceeding pending therein, in the cases and manner provided in this code;

7. To administer oaths in an action or proceeding pending therein, and in all other cases where it may be necessary in the exercise of its powers and duties;

8. To amend and control its process and orders so as to make them conformable to law and justice.

Power of judicial officers. See post, § 177.
Contempt. See post, § 1209.
In justice's court. See post, §§ 906 et seq.
Subd. 6. Attendance of witnesses. See post, §§ 1985 et seq.
Subd 7. Administration of oaths. See post, §§ 2093 et seq.

Legislation § 128. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 342, and on New York code.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 37, and words "Every court has power" changed to "Every court shall have power."

Power over conduct of proceedings. It is important that courts of justice should be upheld in the enforcement of all necessary and reasonable rules for the orderly, speedy, and effective conduct of their duties. People v. Kerrigan, 73 Cal. 222; 14 Pac. 849; People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223; 3 Pac. 809.

Obedience to orders and judgments. This section provides power to compel obedience to judgments, orders, or processes (Ex parte Smith, 53 Cal. 204); and when an act is within the power of the party to perform, the court may direct him to be imprisoned until he complies with its order. Ex parte Latimer, 47 Cal. 131; People v. Center, 54 Cal. 236; Ex parte Kellogg, 64 Cal. 343; 30 Pac. 1030.

Control conduct of ministerial officers. For the purpose of appeal, the supreme court has power to control the conduct of the clerk of the trial court. People v. Center, 54 Cal. 236; Winder v. Hendrick, 54 Cal. 275; Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 109 Cal. 602; 42 Pac. 147.

Control conduct of persons connected with proceedings. The court may order the defendant to allow an expert witness of the plaintiff to examine the machinery of the defendant, in an action for damages occasioned by negligence. Clark v. Tulare Lake Dredging Co., 14 Cal. App. 414, 439; 112 Pac. 564. Where the plaintiff, in an action to recover for personal injuries, offers the testimony of attending physicians to prove the nature and extent of the injuries sustained, the court has power, and it is its duty, to order a physical examination in the presence of the plaintiff's physicians and physicians of the defendant, to ascertain the nature and extent of such injuries. Johnston v. Southern Pacific Co., 150 Cal. 535; 11 Ann. Cas. 841; 89 Pac. 348.

Compel attendance of witnesses. The court has power, under this section, to compel the attendance of witnesses confined in the state prison. Willard v. Superior Court, 82 Cal. 456; 22 Pac. 1120.

Amendment of process. The court has power to amend its process, pending its service. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

Control over process. The court wherein judgment is entered has control of such judgment, and authority to direct issuance and execution of process thereunder, in the interest of the party entitled thereto; and necessarily, as incidental to such power, that of determining, in any instance, who is entitled to such process. Rowe v. Blake, 112 Cal. 637; 44 Pac. 1084; McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268; 38 Pac. 730.

Control over record. Every court of record has the inherent right and power to cause its acts and proceedings to be correctly set forth in its records; the clerk is but an instrument and assistant of the court, whose duty it is to make memorial of its orders and directions; and whenever it is brought to the knowledge of the court that the record made by the clerk does not correctly show the order or direction which was in fact made by the court at the time it was given, the authority of the court to cause its record to be corrected in accordance with the facts is undoubted. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 25 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. While the court has power to correct and set aside an order entered inadvertently, yet it has no authority to do any more than to make those records correspond with the actual facts; it cannot, under the form of an amendment, correct a judicial error, nor make of record an order or judgment which was never in fact given or made (Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393; People v. Curtis, 113 Cal. 68; 45 Pac. 180; People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75); and to correct or set aside an order inadvertently made, the court is not bound by the record, but may receive evidence for that purpose. Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393. This power may be exercised at any time (Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22), even after an appeal, a judgment of affirmance, and the issuance of execution. Rousset v. Boyle, 45 Cal. 64; Sheldon v. Gunn, 57 Cal. 40; Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280; People v. Murback, 64 Cal. 369; 30 Pac. 608.

Power of courts to punish contempts. See note 12 Am. Dec. 178.

Power of courts to compel parties to convey land or surrender property or children situated in another state. See note 67 Am. Dec. 95.

Power to punish for contempt at chambers or in vacation. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 35.

Power of magistrate to punish for contempt. See note 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1135.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Subdivisions 1, 2, 4, and the first clause of subdivision 5, substantially embrace the provisions of § 65 of the act of 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 342); the other subdivisions are taken from the New York code, because they concisely embody various statutory provisions scattered through our laws, or well-settled common-law principles, applicable to the powers of judicial tribunals. This arrangement presents them in a form convenient to the profession, and in their logical order.

§ 129. Courts of record may make rules. Every court of record may make rules not inconsistent with the laws of this state, for its own government and the government of its officers; but such rules shall neither impose any tax, charge or penalty upon any legal proceeding, or for filing any pleading allowed by law, nor give any allowance to any officer for services.

When rules take effect. Post, § 130.

Legislation § 129. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 643, which read: "The supreme court may make rules not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the state, for its own government, and the government of the district courts, and the superior court of the city of San Francisco; but such rules shall not be in force until thirty days after their adoption and publication." (The superior court of San Francisco was abolished May 1, 1857.) When enacted in 1872, the first clause of this section was the same as the amendment of 1880 and of the present amendment (1913), the second clause then reading, "but such rules must neither impose a tax or charge upon any legal proceeding nor give an allowance to any officer for services."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 37, changing the second clause to read, "but such rules shall neither impose any tax or charge upon any legal proceeding, nor give any allowance to any officer for services."

3. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 90, the changes being in the second clause.

Power to make rules. The rules of court are but the means to accomplish the ends of justice (Pickett v. Wallace, 54 Cal. 147), and may be altered or amended from time to time, as the ends of justice or the convenience of the court require. Meyer v. Tupper, 66 U. S. (1 Black) 522; 17 L. Ed. 180; Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 220. Although the court has power to suspend its own rules, or except particular cases from their operation, whenever the purposes of justice require it (People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280; Pickett v. Wallace, 54 Cal. 147; Sullivan v. Wallace, 73 Cal. 307; 14 Pac. 789), yet the rules cannot be changed to deprive a party of a statutory right. People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 101. Rules cannot contravene the statutes of the state (Estate of Jessup, 81 Cal. 408; 6 L. R. A. 594; 21 Pac. 976; 22 Pac. 742, 1028; People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 101), and the parties have no unqualified right to stipulate for their abrogation. Reynolds v. Lawrence, 15 Cal. 359. They must be construed the same as statutes are construed (Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178), and they bind the court, as well as the suitor, until they are abrogated. Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178.

Subjects governed. Such rules may prescribe the time for filing transcripts on appeal (McKay v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 431; 25 Pac. 10); and may require a deposit of the clerk's costs, on appeal from a justice's court. Behymer v. Superior Court, 18 Cal. App. 464; 123 Pac. 340. A rule of the supreme court, requiring points and authorities in behalf of the respective parties to be filed within a specified time after the filing of the transcript confers rights that may be enforced by litigants. Barnhart v. Conley, 17 Cal. App. 230; 119 Pac. 200.

Proof of rules. The supreme court will not take judicial notice of the rules of the superior court (Warden v. Mendocino County, 32 Cal. 655; Cutter v. Caruthers, 48 Cal. 178; Sweeney v. Stanford, 60 Cal. 362); and where a party relies upon such rules he must incorporate them in the record. Cutter v. Caruthers, 48 Cal. 178; Sweeney v. Stanford, 60 Cal. 362.

Rules of court. See note 41 Am. St. Rep. 639.
Validity of court rule in contravention of common law or statute. See note 19 Ann. Cas. 801.
Power of court to disregard rules. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 592.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 335; Stats. 1870, p. 528.

§ 130. When rules take effect. Rules adopted by the supreme court shall take effect sixty days, and rules adopted by superior courts, thirty days after their publication. When adopted they shall be spread upon the record of the court, printed and filed in the office of the clerk of the court.

Legislation § 130. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 335), and then read: "The rules adopted by the supreme court take effect sixty days, and those adopted by other courts, thirty days, after their publication."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 37.
3. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 90, adding the second sentence. Quære as to "printed . . . in the office of the clerk of the court."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 335.

§ 131. Probationary treatment of juvenile offenders. 1. The judge of the superior court in and for each county or city and county of the state, or where there are more than one judge of said court, a majority of the judges thereof by an order entered in the minutes of such court, may appoint seven discreet citizens of good moral character, and of either sex, to be known as probation committee, and shall fill all vacancies occurring in such committee. The clerk of said court shall immediately notify each person appointed on said committee and thereupon said persons shall appear before the judge of said superior court in said county and qualify by taking oath, to be entered in the minutes of said superior court, to faithfully perform the duties of a member of such probation committee.

2. The members of such probation committee shall hold office for four years, and until their successors are appointed, provided that of those first appointed, one shall hold office for one year, two for two years, two for three years, and two for four years, the terms for which the respective members first appointed shall hold office to be determined by lot as soon after their appointment as may be. When any vacancy occurs in any probation committee by expiration of the term of office of any member thereof, the successor shall be appointed to hold for the term of four years; when any vacancy occurs for any other reason, the appointee shall hold for the unexpired term of his predecessor.

3. The members of the probation committee shall serve without compensation.

4. The superior court or any judge thereof may at any time require said probation committee or a probation officer to examine into the qualifications and management of any society, association or corporation, other than a state institution, applying to receive any child or children under this act, and to report to the court, provided that nothing in this section shall be construed as giving any probation committee or probation officer any power to enter any institution without the consent of such institution.

It shall be the duty of each probation committee prior to December first in each year to prepare a report in writing on the qualifications and management of all societies, associations and corporations, except state institutions, applying for or receiving any child under this act from the courts of their respective counties, and in said report said committee may make such suggestions or comments as to them may seem fit; said report to be filed in the office of the clerk of the court appointing such committee, for the information of the judges thereof.

5. In counties of the first class there shall be one probation officer and not more than five deputy probation officers; in counties of the second class, one probation officer and not more than one deputy probation officer; in all other counties there shall be one probation officer. In any county or city and county additional deputy probation officers may be appointed and their appointment approved or disapproved as hereinafter provided, from time to time when in the opinion of the court it may be necessary, provided that they serve without salary.

6. The probation officer and deputy probation officers in all the counties of the state shall be allowed such necessary incidental expenses as may be authorized by a judge of the superior court; and the same shall be a charge upon the county in which the court appointing them has jurisdiction, and the said expenses shall be paid out of the county treasury upon a warrant therefor issued by the said court.

7. The offices of probation officers and deputy probation officers are hereby created. The appointments of probation officers and deputy probation officers to serve hereunder in any county or city and county shall be made by the probation committee of said county or city and county from discreet citizens of good moral character. The appointments by each probation committee shall be made in writing, signed by a majority of the members of such committee, and filed with the county clerk of such county, and shall be subject to and shall take effect upon approval by the judge of the superior court appointing such committee, or by a majority of the judges thereof if there be more than one; such approval to be by order entered in the minutes of said court. The term of office of probation officers and of deputy probation officers shall be two years from the date of the said approval of their several appointments. Such probation officers and deputy probation officers may at any time be removed by the judge approving their appointment in his discretion.

8. Any of the duties of the probation officer may be performed by a deputy probation officer and shall be performed by him whenever detailed to perform the same by the probation officer; and it shall be the duty of the probation officer to see that the deputy probation officer performs his duties.

9. It is the intention of this act that the same probation committees, the same probation officers and deputy probation officers shall be appointed and serve under this act as under the act known as the juvenile court act, and entitled "An act defining and providing for the control, protection and treatment of dependent and delinquent children; prescribing the powers and duties of courts with respect thereto; providing for the appointment of probation officers, and prescribing their powers and duties; providing for the separation of children from adults when confined in jails or other institutions; providing for the appointment of boards to investigate the qualifications of organizations receiving children under this act, and prescribing the duties of such boards; and providing when proceedings under this act shall be admissible in evidence," and approved February 26, 1903; or under any laws amending or superseding the same.

10. Either at the time of the arrest for crime of any person over sixteen years of age, or at the time of the plea or verdict of guilty, the probation officer of the county of the jurisdiction of said crime shall, when so directed by the court, inquire into the antecedents, character, history, family environment and offense of such person, and must report the same to the court and file his report in writing in the records of said court. His report shall contain his recommendation for or against the release of such person on probation. If any such person shall be released on probation and committed to the care of the probation officer, such officer must keep a complete and accurate record in suitable books of the history of the case in court and of the name of the probation officer, and his acts in connection with said case; also the age; sex; nativity; residence; education; habits of temperance; whether married or single; and the conduct, employment and occupation and parents' occupation and condition of such person so committed to his care during the term of such probation, and the result of such probation, which record shall be and constitute a part of the records of the court and shall at all times be open to the inspection of the court or any person appointed by the court for that purpose, as well as of all magistrates and the chief of police or other head of the police, unless otherwise ordered by the court. The said books of record shall be furnished by the county clerk of said county, and shall be paid for out of the county treasury.

11. The probation officer shall furnish to each person released on probation and committed to his care, a written statement of the terms and conditions of his probation, and shall report to the court, judge, or justice appointing him, any violation or breach of the terms and conditions imposed by such court on the person placed in his care.

12. The probation officers and deputy probation officers appointed under this section shall serve as such probation officers in all courts having original jurisdiction of criminal actions in this state.

13. Such probation officer and each deputy probation officer shall have, as to the person so committed to the care of such probation officer or deputy probation officer, the powers of a peace-officer.

Juvenile court law. Stats. 1909, p. 213.

Legislation § 131. 1. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 36, and then read: "1. The judges and justices of the courts having original jurisdiction of criminal actions in this state shall, from time to time, if in their judgment the interests of justice will be promoted thereby, appoint a person or persons from among the officers of any charity organization, society, associated charities, or any strictly non-sectarian charitable association, or from among the citizens, either men or women, to perform the duties of probation officer, as hereinafter described, within the jurisdiction and under the direction of said court; to hold such office during the pleasure of the judge or justice making such appointment. 2. No probation officer appointed under the provisions of this section shall receive compensation for service as such probation officer; provided, however, that the probation officer shall be allowed his necessary expenses, and the same shall be a charge upon the county in which the court appointing him has jurisdiction, and the said expenses shall be paid out of the county treasury upon a warrant therefor issued by the said court. 3. Every probation officer so appointed shall, when so directed by the court, inquire into the antecedents, character, history, and offense of persons over the age of sixteen years arrested for a crime within the jurisdiction of the court appointing him, and shall report the same to the court. It shall be his duty to make such report of all cases investigated by him, of all cases placed in his care by the court, and of all other duties performed by him in the discharge of his office as shall be prescribed by the court or judge making the appointment, or his successor, or by the court or judge assigning the case to him, or his successor, which report shall be filed with the clerk of the court, or where there is no clerk, the justice thereof. He shall keep a complete and accurate record of each case committed to his care, or investigated by him, in suitable books; also a record of the conduct of the person committed to his care during such term of probation, which record shall be a part of the records of the court, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of the court, or any person appointed by the court for that purpose, as well as of all magistrates and the chief of police or other head officer of police, unless otherwise ordered by the court. 4. He shall furnish to each person released on probation committed to his care a written statement of the terms and conditions of his probation, and shall report to the court, judge, or justice appointing him, any violation or breach of the terms and conditions imposed by such court on the person placed in his care. 5. Such probation officer shall have, as to the person so committed to his care, the powers of a peace-officer."

2. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 780.

ARTICLE III.

JUDICIAL DAYS.

§ 133. Days on which courts, etc., may be held.
§ 134. Non-judicial days.
§ 135. Appointments on non-judicial days.

§ 133. Days on which courts, etc., may be held. Courts of justice may be held and judicial business transacted on any day, except as provided in the next section.

Legislation § 133. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 343), and then read: "The courts of justice may be held, and judicial business may be transacted, on any day except as provided in the next section."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 37.

Non-judicial days. Non-judicial days are defined by this section (Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417), as qualified by § 134, post (Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074); but the supreme court is expressly exempted from its operation. Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417.

Ministerial acts. The filing of a complaint on a legal holiday is not sufficient ground for setting aside the judgment, where no objection was made in the court below (Peterson v. Weissbein, 65 Cal. 42; 2 Pac. 730; Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138; 73 Am. Dec. 639); and this section does not prohibit the transaction of ministerial acts, such as the service of process (Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074; Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216; 94 Am. St. Rep. 39; 71 Pac. 180), or the presentation of an information by the district attorney for filing. Ex parte Sternes, 82 Cal. 245; 23 Pac. 38; People v. Nogiri, 142 Cal. 596; 76 Pac. 490; People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532; 93 Pac. 99.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 343.

§ 134. Non-judicial days. No court, other than the supreme court, must be open for the transaction of judicial business on any of the holidays mentioned in section ten, except for the following purposes:

1. To give, upon their request, instructions to jury when deliberating on their verdict;

2. To receive a verdict or discharge a jury;

3. For the exercise of the powers of a magistrate in a criminal action, or in a proceeding of a criminal nature.

Injunctions and writs of prohibition may be issued and served on any day.

Legal holidays and non-judicial days.
1. Holidays. Ante, §§ 10–13.
2. Courts always open. Const., art. vi, § 5; ante, §§ 47, 73, 104.
3. Injunctions and writs of prohibition, issuance of, on. Ante, § 76, subd. 5; Const., art. vi, § 5.

Legislation § 134. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 343), the introductory paragraph reading, "No court can be opened, nor can any judicial business be transacted, on Sunday, on the first day of January, on the fourth of July, on Christmas or Thanksgiving day, or on a day on which the general or the judicial election is held, except for the following purposes"; subds. 1, 2, 3 (which ended section) reading as at present.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 38, (1) changing introductory paragraph to read: "No court shall be open, nor shall any judicial business be transacted on Sunday, on the first day of January, on the twenty-second day of February, on the fourth day of July, on the twenty-fifth day of December, on a day in which an election is held throughout the state, or on a day appointed by the President of the United States, or by the governor of this state, for a public fast, thanksgiving, or holiday, except for the following purposes"; (2) adding at end of subd. 3, "provided, that the supreme court shall always be open for the transaction of business; and provided further, that injunctions and writs of prohibition may be issued and served on any day."

3. Amended by Stats. 1889, p. 46, adding "on the thirtieth day of May" and "on the ninth day of September."

4. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 187, (1) in introductory paragraph, adding "on the first Monday of October"; (2), in subd. 3, adding, after "supreme court," "and the superior courts."

5. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 15, (1) changing "first Monday of September" to "first Monday of October," and (2) omitting "or on a day appointed by the President of the United States."

6. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 120; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

7. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 681; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment recast the section, substituting the words 'on any of the holidays mentioned in § 10,' instead of attempting to mention the holidays, which are always changing. The amendments are designed to conform to the section in the constitution: See Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 610."

Acts permitted on non-judicial days. The constitution does not prohibit legislation allowing or disallowing transactions of any and all classes of judicial business on holidays. People v. Soto, 65 Cal. 621; 4

Pac. 664; Diepenbrock v. Superior Court, 153 Cal. 597; 95 Pac. 1121; Ex parte Smith, 152 Cal. 566; 93 Pac. 191. The service of a statement on motion for a new trial is not judicial business (Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074); neither is the holding of a special election (People v. Loyalton, 147 Cal. 774; 82 Pac. 620); nor the filing of a criminal information (People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532; 93 Pac. 99); but a prisoner convicted of a felony cannot be sentenced upon a legal holiday. In re Smith, 152 Cal. 566; 93 Pac. 191. All transactions not within the statutory prohibitions may be done on legal holidays. People v. Loyalton, 147 Cal. 774; 82 Pac. 620. The duration of an invalid holiday cannot operate to extend the time to be computed for serving a statement on motion for a new trial. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365. It is suggested by the supreme court, in People v. Heacock, 10 Cal. App. 450, 459, 102 Pac. 543, that it would be safer to treat Saturday afternoon as a legal holiday, until the question is determined.

Ministerial as distinguished from judicial acts under prohibitory Sunday laws. See notes 1 Ann. Cas. 278; 18 Ann. Cas. 1040.

Transaction of judicial business on holidays. See note 19 L. R. A. 317.

Validity of court business transacted on legal holiday. See note 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 791.

Receiving verdict on Sunday. See note 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 844.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 343.

§ 135. Appointments on non-judicial days. On all special holidays the courts of this state shall be open for the transaction of any and all judicial business, except the trial of an action or the rendition of a judgment based upon a contract, expressed or implied, for the direct payment of money. Provided, if any day mentioned in section ten of this code other than a special holiday happen to be the day appointed for the holding or sitting of a court, or to which it is adjourned, it shall be deemed appointed for or adjourned to the next day.

Legislation § 135. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If any of the days mentioned in the last section happen to be the day appointed for the holding of a court, or to which it is adjourned, it is deemed appointed for or adjourned to the next day."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 38, to read: "If any day mentioned in the last section happen to be the day appointed for the holding or sitting of a court, or to which it is adjourned, it shall be deemed appointed for or adjourned to the next day."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 120; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 682, to read: "If any day mentioned in section ten be a day appointed for the holding or sitting of any court, other than the supreme court, it is deemed adjourned to the next succeeding judicial day"; the code commissioner saying, "To conform with § 10 and with the amendments made to § 134."

5. Amended by Stats. Extra Sess. 1907, p. 9.

Exception unconstitutional. The clause in this section, "except the trial of an action or the rendition of a judgment based upon a contract, expressed or implied, for the direct payment of money," is unconstitutional. Diepenbrock v. Superior Court, 153 Cal. 597; 95 Pac. 1121.

Judicial acts on special holidays. The superior court has jurisdiction, on a day declared to be a special holiday, to proceed with the trial of a charge of felony. Risser v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 531; 93 Pac. 85.

Power of court to sit and try causes on legal holiday other than Sunday. See notes 5 Ann. Cas. 919; 11 Ann. Cas. 559.

ARTICLE IV.

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF ABSENCE OF JUDGE.

§ 139. Adjournment for absence of judge.
§ 140. Adjournment till next regular session. [Repealed.]

§ 139. Adjournment for absence of judge. If no judge attends on the day appointed for the holding or sitting of a court, or on the day to which it may have been adjourned, before noon, the sheriff or clerk shall adjourn the same until the next day, at ten o'clock a. m., and if no judge attend on that day, before noon, the sheriff or clerk shall adjourn the same until the following day at the same hour; and so on, from day to day, unless the judge, by written order, directs it to be adjourned to some day certain, fixed in said order, in which case it shall be so adjourned.

Non-judicial day. Ante, §§ 134, 135.

Legislation § 139. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "If no judge attend on the day appointed for holding the court, or on the day to which it may have been adjourned, before noon, the sheriff or clerk must adjourn the court until the next day at ten o'clock; and if no judge attend on that day, before noon, the sheriff or clerk must adjourn the court until the following day, and so on, from day to day, for one week."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 38, and then had the words "for one week," after "from day to day."

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 681; the code commissioner saying, "The change strikes out the words 'for one week.' Neither the sheriff nor the clerk can, under the constitution, be authorized to adjourn court, and thus close it for a definite time, other than from day to day."

Adjournment by clerk or sheriff. The judge may open the court at any hour before the close of the day where it had been adjourned by the clerk or sheriff on his failure to appear by noon (People v. Sanchez, 24 Cal. 17), as the court may sit and exercise jurisdiction in the trial of cases or for the transaction of any legal business at any time, except, of course, on nonjudicial days. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541; 11 Pac. 240. Daily adjournments may be had for a full week. Thomas v. Fogarty, 19 Cal. 644.

Meaning of "absent" or "absence" as applied to judge. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 353.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344. Thomas v. Fogarty, 19 Cal. 644; People v. Sanchez, 24 Cal. 17.

§ 140. [Adjournment till next regular session. Repealed.]

Sessions. Ante, § 73.

Legislation § 140. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 38.
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 120; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
4. Repealed by Stats. 1907, p. 681; the code commissioner saying, "Repealed, because both unnecessary and unconstitutional."

ARTICLE V.

PROVISIONS RESPECTING PLACES OF HOLDING COURTS.

§ 142. Change in certain cases of place of holding court.
§ 143. Parties to appear at place appointed.
§ 144. When sheriff to provide courtrooms, etc.

§ 142. Change in certain cases of places of holding court. The judge or judges authorized to hold or preside at a court appointed to be held at a particular place in a city and county, county, city, or town, may, by an order filed with the city and county or county clerk, and published as he or they may prescribe, direct that the court be held or continued at any other place in the city and county, county, city, or town than that appointed, when war, insurrection, pestilence, or other public calamity, or the danger thereof, or the destruction or danger of the building appointed for holding the court may render it necessary; and may in the same manner revoke the order, and in his or their discretion, appoint another place in the same city and county, county, city, or town, for holding the court.

Legislation § 142. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "A judge authorized to hold or preside at a court appointed to be held in a county, city, or town, may, by an order filed with the county clerk, and published as he may prescribe, direct that the court be held or continued at any other place in the city, town, or county than that appointed, when war, insurrection, pestilence, or other public calamity, or the dangers thereof, or the destruction of the building appointed for holding the court, may render it necessary; and may, in the same manner, revoke the order, and, in his discretion, appoint another place in the same city, town, or county, for holding the court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 38.

Power of trial court to sit at place other than county seat. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 939.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 143. Parties to appear at place appointed. When the court is held at a place appointed, as provided in the last section, every person held to appear at the court must appear at the place so appointed.

Legislation § 143. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 344.
2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39, in amending Part I.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 144. When sheriff to provide courtrooms, etc. If suitable rooms for holding the superior courts and the chambers of the judges of said courts are not provided in any county by the supervisors thereof, together with the attendants, furniture, fuel, lights and stationery, sufficient for the transaction of business, the courts, or the judge or judges thereof, may direct the sheriff of the county to provide such rooms, attendants, furniture, fuel, lights .

and stationery; and the expenses incurred, certified by the judge or judges to be correct, are a charge against the county treasury, and must be paid out of the general fund thereof.

Legislation § 144. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 345), and then read: "If suitable rooms for holding the district courts, county courts, and probate courts, and the chambers of the judges of such courts, be not provided in any county by the supervisors thereof, together with attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery sufficient for the transaction of business, the courts may direct the sheriff of such county to provide such rooms, attendants, furniture, fuel, lights, and stationery, and the expenses thereof are a charge against such county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39, to read as at present, except for the changes noted by the code commissioner, infra, and those bracketed in and following his note.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 120; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 680; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in [(1)] the insertion of the word 'county' in place of 'city and county,' where those last words occur in the section, and in omitting the words 'city and county[, or]' when they occur earlier in the section, they being unnecessary in view of the amendment to § 17 adopted in 1903 (Stats. 1903, p. 134)"; (2) changing the words "courts be not" to "courts are not"; (3) changing the words "shall be a charge" to "are a charge"; and (4) changing, in the last line, the words "and paid out" to "and must be paid out."

Power to provide courtrooms. This section gives the court power to create charges against the county for suitable rooms for holding court, and for the chambers of the judges, where they are not otherwise provided (Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806), and the expense thereof is to be audited by the judge of the court. Ex parte Widber, 91 Cal. 367; 27 Pac. 733. The grant of power is limited by the express language of the section, and cannot be extended by implication; its exercise is justified only by necessity (Falconer v. Hughes, 8 Cal. App. 56; 96 Pac. 19); and the judges are not authorized to interfere with the action of the board of supervisors in such matters, even though there is an unnecessary and unreasonable delay on the part of the board (Los Angeles County v. Superior Court, 93 Cal. 380; 28 Pac. 1062); nor are the judges authorized to select a particular room, where another room has been provided by the board, if it is suitable for the purpose. San Joaquin County v. Budd, 96 Cal. 47; 30 Pac. 967.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

ARTICLE VI.

SEALS OF COURTS.

§ 147. What courts shall have seals.
§ 148. Seal of supreme court.
§ 149. Seals of superior courts.
§ 150. Seals of police courts of cities and counties.
§ 151. Seals, how provided; private seals, when used.
§ 152. Clerk of court to keep seal.
§ 153. Seals of courts, to what documents affixed.

§ 147. What courts shall have seals. Each of the following courts shall have a seal:

1. The supreme court;
2. The superior courts;
3. The police court of every city and county.

Seal.
1. Defined.
2. Of court, judicial notice taken of. Post, § 1875, subd. 4.
3. Court commissioner may provide official. Post, § 259, subd. 5.

Police courts.
1. Are not courts of record. See ante, §§ 33, 34.
2. Have a seal. Post, § 150.

Legislation § 147. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "Each of the following courts has a seal: 1. The supreme court; 2. The district courts; 3. The county courts; 4. The probate courts; 5. The municipal criminal court of the city and county of San Francisco; 6. The police court of the city and county of San Francisco."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39.

Effect of seal. The fact that a court has a seal does not necessarily, and of itself, make such court a court of record. Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 220.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 148. Seal of supreme court. The seal used by the supreme court, abolished by the constitution, shall be the seal of the supreme court herein provided for; but the said court may direct the clerk of the supreme court to provide two duplicates of said seal, each of which shall be considered the same as and have the same force and effect as the original.

Legislation § 148. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "The seal now used by the supreme court shall be the seal of that court; and where seals have been provided for the district, county and probate courts, municipal criminal and the police court of the city and county of San Francisco, such seals shall continue to be used as the seals of those courts."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 149. Seals of superior courts. The seals of the superior courts shall be circular, not less than one and three fourths inches in diameter, and having in the center any word, words, or design adopted by the judges thereof, and the following inscription surrounding the same: "Superior Court ——, California," inserting the name of the county or city and county; provided, that the seal of any such court, which has been adopted previous to the passage of this act, shall be the seal of such court until another be adopted.

Validating writs, process, and certificates issued from superior courts before seal provided. See Stats. 1880, p. 19.

Legislation § 149. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "The several district, county, and probate courts, for which separate seals have not been heretofore provided, shall direct their respective clerks to procure seals, which shall be devised by the respective judges of such courts, and shall have the following inscriptions surrounding the same: 1. For the district courts: 'District Court, —— County, California.' (Inserting the name of the county;) 2. For the county courts: 'County Court. —— County, California.' (Inserting the name of the county;) 3. For the probate courts: 'Probate Court, —— County, California.' (Inserting the name of the county.)"

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 150. Seals of police courts of cities and counties. The police court of every city and county may use any seal having upon it the inscription, "Police Court ——," (inserting the name of the city and county).

Legislation § 150. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39; based on Stats. 1863, p. 344, and original code § 150, both being identical, and reading, "Until the seals devised, as provided in the last section, are procured, the clerk of each court may use his private seal, whenever a seal is required."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 151. Seals, how provided; private seals, when used. Courts which have not the necessary seal provided, or the judge or judges thereof, shall request the supervisors of their respective counties, or cities and counties, to provide the same, and in case of their failure to do so may order the sheriff to provide the same, and the expense thereof shall be a charge against the county or city and county treasury, and paid out of the general fund thereof; and until such seal be provided the clerk of each court may use his private seal whenever a seal is required.

Legislation § 151. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 39; based on Stats. 1863, p. 344, and original code supra, § 150.

§ 152. Clerk of court to keep seal. The clerks of the court shall keep the seal thereof.

Legislation § 152. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 151 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "§ 152. The clerk of the court must keep the seal thereof."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 40, and renumbered § 152.

§ 153. Seals of courts, to what documents affixed. The seal of a court need not be affixed to any proceeding therein or document, except:

1. To a writ;

2. To the certificate of probate of a will or of the appointment of an executor, administrator, or guardian;

3. To the authentication of a copy of a record or other proceeding of a court, or of an officer thereof, or of a copy of a document on file in the office of the clerk.

Legislation § 153. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 152 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 344), and then read: "The seal of the court need not be affixed to any proceedings therein, except: 1. To a writ; 2. To the proof of a will, or the appointment of an executor, administrator, or guardian; 3. To the authentication of a copy of a record or other proceeding of the court, or an officer thereof, for the purpose of evidence in another court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 284, to read as at present, except that (1) the words "seal of a court" were printed "seal of the court," and (2) the words "certificate of probate," "certificate of the probate."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 40, and renumbered § 153.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344. The provision permitting seals to be impressed on paper is omitted, as a general provision to the same end is contained in the preliminary provisions of this code.

TITLE II.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

Chapter I. Judicial Officers in General. §§ 156–162.
II. Powers and Duties of Judges at Chambers. §§ 165–167.
III. Disqualifications of Judges. §§ 170–173.
IV. Incidental Powers and Duties of Judicial Officers. §§ 176–179.
V. Miscellaneous Provisions respecting Courts and Judicial Officers. §§ 182–188.

CHAPTER I.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS IN GENERAL.

§ 156. Qualifications of justices of supreme court.
§ 157. Qualifications of superior judges.
§ 158. Residence of superior judges.
§ 159. Residence and qualification of justices of the peace.
§ 160. Judges holding superior courts at request of governor.
§ 161. Justices and judges ineligible to other than judicial office.
§ 162. County or probate judge who may hold term in another county. How designated. [Repealed.]

§ 156. Qualifications of justices of supreme court. No person shall be eligible to the office of chief or associate justice of the supreme court unless he shall have been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state for two years next preceding his election or appointment, nor unless he shall have been admitted to practice before the supreme court of the state.

Judge must be an attorney. Const., art. vi, § 23.

Legislation § 156. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 333), and then read: "No person is eligible to the office of justice of the supreme court who has not been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state, for two years next preceding his election."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 40.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 120; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Qualification of judges. Under the old constitution, judges of the supreme court were not required to be licensed attorneys. People v. Dorsey, 32 Cal. 296.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 333.

§ 157. Qualifications of superior judges. No person shall be eligible to the office of judge of a superior court unless he shall have been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state for two years next preceding his election or appointment, nor unless he shall have been admitted to practice before the supreme court of the state.

Legislation § 157. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 335), and then read: "No person is eligible to the office of district judge who has not been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state for two years, and of the district one year next preceding his election."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 40.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 121; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Eligibility. Effect of promise not to qualify. A promise by a candidate for the office, that he would not qualify if elected, does not affect his eligibility. Bush v. Head, 154 Cal. 277; 97 Pac. 512.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 335. People v. Turner, 20 Cal. 144; People v. De la Guerra, 40 Cal. 311.

§ 158. Residence of superior judges. Each judge of a superior court shall reside at the county seat of the county in which such court is held, or within three miles thereof, and within the county, except that in the counties of Yuba and Sutter the judge may reside in either of said counties; provided, that when there is more than one judge of the superior court in a county, it shall not be necessary for more than one judge to reside at the county seat, as provided herein.

Separate judges provided for Sutter and Yuba counties. Stats. 1897, p. 48.

Legislation § 158. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 335), and then read: "Each district judge must reside in his district, and each county and probate judge must reside at the county seat of his respective county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 40, to read: "Each judge of a superior court shall reside at the county seat of the county in which such court is held, or within three miles thereof, and within the county, except that in the counties of Yuba and Sutter the judge may reside in either of said counties."

3. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 277.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 335.

§ 159. Residence and qualification of justices of the peace. Every justice of the peace shall reside in the city and county, or township, in which his court is held, and no person shall be eligible to the office of justice of the peace unless he shall have been a citizen of the United States and a resident of the city and county, or county, in which he is to serve for one year next preceding his election or appointment.

Legislation § 159. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 41.

The original § 159, enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 335), read: "A residence in any part of the city and county of San Francisco is, within the meaning of the two preceding sections, a residence in the judicial districts embracing portions of that city."

Effect of change of boundaries of townships. Where the boundaries of a township are changed after the election or appointment of a justice of the peace, so as to make him a non-resident, he is a de facto justice for that township, where he continues to act, and his actions cannot be called in question in collateral proceedings. People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495; People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 214; Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 174; People v. Hecht, 105 Cal. 621; 45 Am. St. Rep. 96; 27 L. R. A. 203; 38 Pac. 941.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 335.

§ 160. Judges holding superior courts at request of governor. If by reason of sickness, absence, disability, or other causes, a regular session of the superior court cannot be held in any county by the judge or judges thereof, or by a superior judge requested by him or them to hold such court, a certificate of that fact shall be transmitted by the clerk thereof to the governor, who may thereupon request some other superior judge to hold such court; and a judge so holding a court at the request of the governor, or at the request of the judge or judges of said superior court, shall be allowed his actual and necessary expenses in going to, returning from, and attending upon the business of such court, which shall be a charge against the treasury of the county where such court is held, and paid out of the general fund thereof.

Holding court for another judge. Ante, § 71.

Legislation § 160. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 336), and then read: "A district judge may hold a court in any county in this state, upon the request of the judge of the district in which such court is to be held; and when, by reason of sickness or absence from the state, or from any other cause, a court cannot be held in any county in a district by the judge thereof, a certificate of that fact must be transmitted by the clerk to the governor, who may thereupon direct some other district judge to hold such court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 85, by adding, at the end of the section, "A district judge may hear and determine motions in actions pending in any district, upon the request of the judge of the district in which the action is pending, and the stipulation of the parties to the action. All decisions of such motions shall be filed and entered by the clerk of the court in which such action is pending."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 41, to read as at present, except that, (1) in first line, a comma was used after the word "If," and the word "causes" was printed "cause"; (2) a comma was used between the words "judge requested," and after the word "court" in the words "court at the request"; and (3) the words "or at the request of the judge or judges of said superior court," and the words "and necessary" before the word "expenses," were not used, as now.

4. Amended by Stats. 1887, p. 147.

Change of judges during trial. The judges may be changed during the course of a trial, even in criminal cases, with the consent of the defendant. People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465. This section cannot be construed to refer to the disqualification of a judge on account of his interest in the matter involved in the proceeding, as mentioned in § 170, post. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293.

Presumption as to acts of judge holding court out of county. In the absence of a showing to the contrary, it is presumed that a judge holding court is acting under the proper authority. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171; 31 Pac. 933.

Powers of judge out of county. The judge so holding court may grant extensions of time to make and serve a statement on motion for a new trial (Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128), and may send his findings from another court to the clerk to be filed. Comstock Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 57 Cal. 625.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 336. [See Code Commissioners' Note to § 161, post.]

§ 161. Justices and judges ineligible to other than judicial office. The justices of the supreme court and judges of the superior courts shall be ineligible to any other office or public employment than a judicial office or employment during the term for which they shall have been elected.

Ineligible to public employment. Const., art. vi, § 18.

Legislation § 161. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 41.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 121; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

The original § 161 provided for county and probate judges holding court in another county.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648. The text held to be constitutional. Id. Where the record of the court does not show for what reason the judge of one county holds court for the judge of another, the existence of some one of the causes mentioned in the statute will be presumed. CHAPTER II.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF JUDGES AT CHAMBERS.

§ 165. Powers of justices of supreme court at chambers.
§ 166. Powers of superior judges at chambers.
§ 167. [Related to powers of probate judges at chambers. Repealed.]

§ 165. Powers of justices of supreme court at chambers. The justices of the supreme court, or any of them, may, at chambers, grant all orders and writs which are usually granted in the first instance upon an ex parte application, except writs of mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition; and may, in their discretion, hear applications to discharge such orders and writs.

Powers of judges out of court. Post, § 176.

Legislation § 165. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 41, and (1) the words "or any" changed from "and each," and (2) the words "mandamus, certiorari," changed from "review, mandate."

§ 166. Powers of superior judges at chambers. The judge or judges of a superior court, or any of them, may, at chambers, grant all orders and writs which are usually granted in the first instance upon an ex parte application, and may, at chambers, hear and dispose of such orders and writs; and may also, at chambers, appoint appraisers, receive inventories and accounts to be filed, suspend the powers of executors, administrators, or guardians in the cases allowed by law, grant special letters of administration or guardianship, approve claims and bonds, and direct the issuance from the court of all writs and process necessary in the exercise of their powers in matters of probate.

Power of judges out of court. Post, § 176.
Chamber hours for judges. Pol. Code, § 4116.
Power of probate judge at chambers. Post, § 1035.

Legislation § 166. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 336), and then read: "District and county judges, at chambers, may grant all orders and writs which are usually granted in the first instance upon ex parte applications, and may, at chambers, hear and dispose of such writs and of motions for new trials." 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 41.

Locus of chambers. The judge may have his chambers at any place, within the jurisdiction of the court, where he may be found. Estate of Lux, 100 Cal. 593; 35 Pac. 341; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109.

Powers at chambers. Judicial business must be transacted in court; the powers of the judge at chambers are limited to those enumerated in this section. Carpenter v. Nutter, 127 Cal. 61; 59 Pac. 301. The judge may, at chambers, grant all orders and writs which are usually granted in the first instance upon ex parte application, and may, at chambers, hear and dispose of such writs. Real Estate Associates v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 223; Kenney v. Kelleher, 63 Cal. 442; Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109; Estate of Lux, 100 Cal. 593; 35 Pac. 341; Glass v. Glass, 4 Cal. App. 604; 88 Pac. 734. Thus, at chambers, he may dispense with a bond on appeal by a municipal officer (Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109; Estate of Lux, 100 Cal. 593; 35 Pac. 341), extend time in which to prepare and serve a statement on motion for a new trial (Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128), grant leave to renew a motion (Kenney v. Kelleher, 63 Cal. 442), make an order to show cause, by creditors, why an insolvent should not be discharged (Flint v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 24), and appoint a receiver in insolvency proceedings (Real Estate Associates v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 223); but he cannot grant a continuance at chambers (Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329), nor discharge a person accused of crime (Carpenter v. Nutter, 127 Cal. 61; 59 Pac. 301); neither can he set aside an execution, nor stay perpetually its enforcement, on the ground that the judgment was erroneous (Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530); but he may make an order suspending its operation, pending a hearing to quash or recall. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200; Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157; Bell v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 706; Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170. He cannot, at chambers, hear a motion to strike out pleadings (Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530), nor enter an order nunc pro tunc, as having been made and entered by the court. Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491. An appeal lies from an order at chambers, regarding writs authorized to be granted or denied out of court, as such orders are judgments. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530; Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15; 99 Am. Dec. 237; Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Granting continuances. It was held that a county judge at chambers cannot grant a continuance of a cause which was pending and set down for trial at a future day in the county court. Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329.

2. Certiorari issued at chambers. The district judge may issue writs of certiorari, and hear them on their return, at chambers. People v. Supervisors of Marin County, 10 Cal. 344.

3. Certain orders nunc pro tunc cannot be made. A judge at chambers cannot make an order directing the clerk to enter in the minutes of the court nunc pro tunc an order alleged to have been made in open court. After the adjournment of a term the court cannot direct the entry nunc pro tunc of an order made during the adjourned term where the records do not show that such an order was made. Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491.

4. Hearing motion to strike out pleadings. The general rule as to powers of judges at chambers is, that all judicial business must be transacted in term, whether there is any express direction to that effect or not. Such business as may be transacted out of court is exceptional, and must find its warrant in some express provision of the statute. Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 564. A district judge at chambers has not jurisdiction to hear motions to strike out pleadings. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 532.

5. Order setting aside execution, etc. A judge at chambers has no jurisdiction to make an order setting aside an execution and perpetually staying its enforcement. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 532.

6. What orders in insolvency proceedings can be made by county judges. Certain orders in insolvency proceedings (under state act) can be made by county judge at chambers. Flint v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 24.

7. Writs of mandate, review, quo warranto, etc. The legislature is not prohibited by the constitution from conferring upon the judge authority to hear and determine actions and proceedings at chambers. Such authority is granted in respect to writs of mandate, review, and quo warranto, and special proceedings, to determine the validity of a corporation election. A decision in these cases is a judgment, and an appeal therefrom is given by § 963, post. Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal 15; 99 Am. Dec. 237.

8. Arrest of process issued in void judgment. Where a judgment upon which the execution is based, and the execution itself, are void upon their face, a court has entire control over the process, and may arrest it. A judge at chambers has authority to order a suspension of the execution till a motion before the court to recall or quash it can be heard. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 201; see also Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 158; Bell v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 708; Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 172.

9. Judge at chambers cannot decide certain controversies. "Action for damages for trespass alleged to have been committed by defendants upon certain quartz-mining claims; and also for a perpetual injunction against future trespasses, which was granted. Defendants deny all the allegations of the complaint, and set up ownership of certain mining-ground. Verdict generally 'for defendants,' and judgment in their favor for costs. Defendants move to amend the judgment by dissolving the injunction. Motion denied, but the judgment modified so as to permit defendants to work the ground set up in their answer. After the term had expired, defendants appeal from this order refusing to dissolve the injunction, and subsequently, upon defendants giving bond, the judge, in chambers, made an ex parte order directing plaintiffs to yield possession of the ground described in the answer to defendants, which order plaintiffs refused to obey; and then followed an order to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt. Held: that the court had no power to make the ex parte order for the restitution of possession or the induction of defendants into possession of the premises, as this was in effect, to decide the whole controversy in limine, and to execute the judgment by an ex parte order; that the possession by plaintiffs of the premises was property, and could not be disposed of except in due course of law; and that all the subsequent orders, for contempt, etc., being dependent on this, fall with it." Syllabus in Brennan v. Gaston, 17 Cal. 375.

10. Making order for discharge of guardian, etc. See note to next section.

§ 167. [Related to powers of probate judges at chambers. Repealed.]

Legislation § 167. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

CHAPTER III.

DISQUALIFICATIONS OF JUDGES.

§ 170. Disqualification of judicial officer to sit or act.
§ 171. Judges and county clerks, when prohibited from practicing law.
§ 172. No judicial officer to have partner practicing law.
§ 173. [Renumbered and amended section.]

§ 170. Disqualification of judicial officer to sit or act. No justice, judge, or justice of the peace shall sit or act as such in any action or proceeding:

1. To which he is a party or in which he is interested;

2. When he is related to either party, or to an officer of a corporation which is a party, or to an attorney, counsel, or agent of either party, by consanguinity or affinity, within the third degree, computed according to the rules of law; provided, however, that if the parties to the action, or the executor, or administrator of the estate, or the guardian of the minor or incompetent person, or the receiver, or the commissioner, or the referee, or the attorney for a party in all special proceedings of a civil or criminal nature, shall sign and file in the action or matter, a stipulation in writing waiving the disqualification herein, the judge or court may proceed with the trial or hearing with the same legal effect as if no such disqualification existed.

3. When in the action or proceeding, or in any previous action or proceeding involving any of the same issues, he has been attorney or counsel for either party; or when he has given advice to either party upon any matter involved in the action or proceeding;

4. When it appears from the affidavit or affidavits on file that either party cannot have a fair and impartial trial before any judge of a court of record about to try the case by reason of the prejudice or bias of such judge, said judge shall forthwith secure the services of some other judge, of the same or another county, to preside at the trial of said action or proceeding; provided, that in an action in the superior court of a county, or of a city and county, having more than one department, said action shall be transferred to another department thereof, and tried therein in the same manner as though originally assigned to such department. The affidavit or affidavits alleging the disqualification of a judge, must be filed and served upon the adverse party or the attorney for such party at least one day before the day set for trial of such action or proceeding; provided, counter-affidavits may be filed at least one day thereafter, or such further time as the court may extend the time for filing such counter-affidavits, not exceeding five days, and for this purpose the court may continue the trial; and in no one cause or proceeding can more than one such change of judges be had. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the arrangement of the calendar, or to the regulation of the order of business, nor the power of transferring the action or proceeding to some other court, or the hearing upon such affidavits and counter-affidavits;

5. In an action or proceeding brought in the superior court or justices' court by or against the reclamation board of the state of California, or any reclamation, levee, swamp-land or drainage district, or any public agency, or trustee, officer or employee thereof, affecting or relating to any real property or any easement or right of way, levee, embankment, canal, or any work provided for or approved by the reclamation board of the state of California, the judge of the superior court of the county, or justice of the peace of the township in which such real property, or any part thereof, or such easement or right of way, levee, embankment, canal or work, or any part thereof, is situated, shall be disqualified to sit or act, and such action, if brought in the superior court, shall be heard and tried by some other judge of the superior court requested to sit therein by the governor, or if brought in the justices' court, by some other justice of the peace requested to sit therein by the governor; unless the parties to the action shall sign and file in the action or proceeding a stipulation in writing, waiving the disqualification in this subdivision of this section provided, in which case such judge or justice of the peace may proceed with the trial or hearing with the same legal effect as if no such legal disqualification existed. If, however, the parties to the action shall sign and file a stipulation agreeing upon some other judge of the superior court or justice of the peace to sit or act in place of the judge or justice disqualified under the provisions of this subdivision, the judge or justice agreed upon shall be designated by the governor to sit in the action; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed as preventing the judge of the superior court of such county from issuing a temporary injunction or restraining order, which shall, if granted, remain in force until vacated or modified by the judge designated by the governor as herein provided.

Nothing in this section contained shall affect a party's right to a change of the place of trial in the cases provided for in title four, part two of this code.

Change of venue. Post, §§ 397 et seq.

Subd. 2. Consanguinity and affinity. See Civ. Code, §§ 1390 et seq.

Subd. 3. Judge cannot act as attorney. Post, §§ 171, 172.

Legislation § 170. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 343), and then read: "A judge cannot act as such in any of the following cases: 1. In an action or proceeding to which he is a party, or in which he is interested; 2. When he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, computed according to the rules of law; 3. When he has been attorney or counsel for either party in the action or proceeding; —But this section does not apply to the arrangement of the calendar or the regulation of the order of business, nor to the power of transferring the cause to another county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, and then read: "§ 170. No justice, judge, or justice of the peace, shall sit or act as such in any action or proceeding: 1. To which he is a party, or in which he is interested; 2. When he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, computed according to the rules of law; 3. When he has been attorney or counsel for either party in the action or proceeding. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the arrangement of the calendar or the regulation of the order of business, nor to the power of transferring the action or proceeding to some other court."

3. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 234, and then read: "§ 170. No justice, judge, or justice of the peace shall sit or act as such in any action or proceeding—1. To which he is a party or in which he is interested. 2. When he is related to either party, or to an attorney, counsel, or agent of either party, by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, computed according to the rules of law. 3. When he has been attorney or counsel for either party in the action or proceeding. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the arrangement of the calendar, or the regulation of the order of business, nor the power of transferring the action or proceeding to some other court."

4. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 287, and then read: "§ 170. No justice, judge, or justice of the peace shall sit or act as such in any action or proceeding: 1. To which he is a party or in which he is interested. 2. When he is related to either party, or to an attorney, counsel, or agent of either party, by consanguinity or affinity, within the third degree, computed according to the rules of law. 3. When he has been attorney or counsel for either party in the action or proceeding. 4. When it appears from the affidavit or affidavits on file that either party cannot have a fair and impartial trial before any judge of a court of record about to try the case by reason of the prejudice or bias of such judge, said judge shall forthwith secure the services of some other judge, of the same or another county, to preside at the trial of said action or proceeding; provided, that in an action in the superior court of a county, or of a city and county, having more than one department, said action shall be transferred to another department thereof, and tried therein in the same manner as though originally assigned to such department. The affidavit or affidavits alleging the disqualification of a judge, must be filed and served upon the adverse party, or the attorney for such party, at least one day before the day set for trial of such action or proceeding; provided, counter-affidavits may be filed at least one day thereafter or such further time as the court may extend the time for filing such counter-affidavits, not exceeding five days, and for this purpose the court may continue the trial; and in no one cause or proceeding can more than one such change of judges be had. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the arrangement of the calendar, or to the regulation of the order of business, nor the power of transferring the action or proceeding to some other court, or the hearing upon such affidavits and counter-affidavits."

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 121; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

6. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 467; differing from the text of the amendment of 1915, only in not having subd. 5 and the saving clause.

7. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 530, adding subd. 5 and the saving clause.

Where the judge is a party. A judge, made a party defendant to proceedings for the partition of real estate, with the allegation that he has or claims an interest therein, is disqualified to try the cause, and has no jurisdiction arbitrarily to determine that he has no interest, and by an ex parte order, made of his own motion, direct that the complaint be stricken from the files. Younger v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 682; 69 Pac. 485; McClatchy v. Superior Court, 119 Cal. 413; 39 L. R. A. 691; 51 Pac. 696; Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122.

Where judge is interested. A judge cannot act in a cause or proceeding in which he is interested, directly or indirectly (Tracy v. Colby, 55 Cal. 67; North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 315; Blue Tent Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 329; Howell v. Budd, 91 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 747; Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 249; 50 Pac. 268); but his interest must be made clearly to appear, in order to disqualify. Heinlen v. Heilbron, 97 Cal. 101; 31 Pac. 838; Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 102; 66 Am. St. Rep. 22; 41 L. R. A. 702; 53 Pac. 424. The term "interested," however, embraces only a direct, proximate, substantial, and certain interest in the result of the action, and does not include a remote, indirect, contingent, uncertain, and shadowy interest. Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 249; 50 Pac. 268; Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440; Higgins v. San Diego, 126 Cal. 303; 58 Pac. 700; 59 Pac. 209. The interest that disqualifies a judge is a property or personal interest, an interest in the event of the suit, in the judgment that may be rendered therein: a mere sentimental interest, or an interest in the facts that the issues make it necessary for a judge to determine and that may tend to induce him to give more weight to the evidence for one party than to that for the other, respecting such facts, is not the interest that will disqualify. Lassen Irrigation Co. v. Superior Court, 151 Cal. 357; 90 Pac. 709. A judge is interested in an action to establish the validity of bonds, where a bank, of which he is a stockholder, is the owner thereof. Adams v. Minor, 121 Cal. 372; 53 Pac. 815. Where the judge has disposed of all his interest in the subject-matter of the action, he is not disqualified (Gregg v. Pemberton, 53 Cal. 251; Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440); but his disqualification is not removed by a disposal of his stock after he has heard the evidence, and before the rendition of judgment. Adams v. Minor, 121 Cal. 372; 53 Pac. 815. The interest of the judge as a taxpayer does not disqualify him, in a suit to collect money demands against the county (Higgins v. San Diego, 126 Cal. 303; 58 Pac. 700; 59 Pac. 209), nor where the action may result in the diminution of taxes (Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 249; 50 Pac. 268); nor is he disqualified by reason of his having pending an independent action against one of the parties in a case to be tried by him, in no way connected with the matter on trial (Southern California Motor Road Co. v. San Bernardino Nat. Bank, 100 Cal. 316; 34 Pac. 711); but where he claims an interest in the land in controversy, adversely to both parties litigant, he is disqualified, in an action to determine the title to such land (Heilhorn v. Campbell, 3 Cal. Unrep. 204; 23 Pac. 122); and he is also disqualified where he is interested in an estate in probate (Estate of White, 37 Cal. 190), but not where he is a mere creditor. Regents of University v. Turner, 159 Cal. 541; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1162; 114 Pac. 842.

Power of judge disqualified by interest. A judge, disqualified by reason of interest, may make an order respecting a change of name, fix the time of hearing the application, and direct the giving of the required notice; such action relates solely to the arrangement of the calendar, and regulation of the order of business. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56. There is a marked distinction between the disqualification of the judge under this section, and accidental disqualification under § 160, ante: under § 160, the judge may transfer a case to a judge of his own selection, but he cannot so transfer a case in which he is interested, and where disqualified by reason of interest, it is his legal duty to transfer the proceeding. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293.

Grounds of disqualification. The grounds of disqualification of a judge are only those enumerated in this section (Patterson v. Conlon, 123 Cal. 453; 56 Pac. 105; McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500); but the section should be given a broad and liberal, not a technical, construction. North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 315. A judge is not disqualified, under this section, for counseling or advising with persons who are not parties to the action (Lassen Irrigation Co. v. Superior Court, 151 Cal. 357; 90 Pac. 709); nor from trying an action to foreclose a mortgage against an estate, though he, as an attorney, before he became judge, signed a petition for letters of administration in the matter of such estate; nor is the decree foreclosing the mortgage invalid because the judge, presiding at the foreclosure suit, drafted the mortgage while practicing as an attorney. Morrissey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390; 117 Pac. 438. Though the judge, as prosecuting attorney, had, sixteen years previously, prosecuted and convicted a defendant, yet there is no inference that he cannot try the case with perfect impartiality. Hoyt v. Zumwalt, 149 Cal. 381; 86 Pac. 602. The burden is upon the party seeking to show disqualification; the question involved is judicial, to be determined by the tribunal before which it is presented. Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129.

Relationship to a party. Relationship by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, to either party to an action, disqualifies the judge from acting therein, and he ought, of his own motion, to decline to sit as a judge, even when no objections are made. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; De la Guerra v. Burton, 23 Cal. 592. The word "party" is not confined to persons who are parties of record, but includes all persons whose interest is represented by such parties. Howell v. Budd, 91 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 747; North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 315; Fredericks v. Judah, 73 Cal. 604; 15 Pac. 305. The rule for computing the degree of relationship is the rule of the civil law (People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73), and a first-cousin by marriage, or a cousin german, is not within the prohibited degree. Robinson v. Southern Pacific Co., 105 Cal. 526; 28 L. R. A. 773; 38 Pac. 94, 722; but see contra, People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73. In insolvency proceedings, the term "parties" includes the insolvent and persons who have filed claims. Chinette v. Conklin, 105 Cal. 465; 38 Pac. 1107; In re Chope, 112 Cal. 630; 44 Pac. 1066.

Relationship to attorney. It is not essential to the disqualification of the judge, that an attorney, who was a relative of the judge, should be of record; it is sufficient if he is in fact an attorney for the party. Johnson v. Brown, 115 Cal. 694; 47 Pac. 686. Where the judge is the father of the attorney who is about to try the cause, upon a contingent fee, depending upon the success of the action, the judge is disqualified by reason of relationship to a party. Howell v. Budd, 91 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 747. Of course, under the existing law, he would be disqualified also by reason of his relationship to the attorney, as such; the law was amended at the session of the legislature immediately after the decision of Howell v. Budd, supra. An order extending time, made by a judge who was disqualified from acting, under this section, prior to its amendment in 1905, was void. Johnson v. German-American Ins. Co., 150 Cal. 336; 88 Pac. 985.

Judge formerly counsel in the proceeding. The judge, having been an attorney or counsel in the proceeding, is disqualified (Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 59 Cal. 130; Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746), and he is also disqualified where he received a general retainer from one of the parties (Kern Valley Water Co. v. McCord, 70 Cal. 646; 11 Pac. 798); but he is not disqualified where he had previously been the attorney in another action for one of the parties, although such action involved one of the issues in the case on trial. Cleghorn v. Cleghorn, 66 Cal. 309; 5 Pac. 516.

Bias and prejudice. The bias and prejudice of the judge was not a ground for disqualification before the amendment of this section in 1897, when the fourth subdivision was added (People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180; People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261; People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31; People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490; Hibberd v. Smith, 39 Cal. 145; Bulwer Cons. Mining Co. v. Standard Cons. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 613; 23 Pac. 1109; Patterson v. Conlon, 123 Cal. 453; 56 Pac. 105); and even the expression of an unqualified opinion did not then disqualify a magistrate from holding a preliminary examination (McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500), as the law established a different rule for determining the disqualification of judges from that applied to jurors. McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500; People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180. The filing of an affidavit showing bias and prejudice was then a contempt of court (In re Jones, 103 Cal. 397; 37 Pac. 385); but, since the amendment of 1897, facts showing bias and prejudice, being pertinent and relevant, do not constitute contempt. Works v. Superior Court, 130 Cal. 304; 62 Pac. 507. If the affidavit, however, fails to state any facts, and makes charges of corruption against the judge, upon belief merely, it is contempt of court (Lamberson v. Superior Court, 151 Cal. 458; 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 619; 91 Pac. 100), and the judge is not disqualified from hearing said contempt proceedings by reason of the fact that his integrity has been so attacked. Id.

Affidavits of bias and prejudice. The right to make and file affidavits is not restricted to any particular party. Parrish v. Riverside Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 95; 93 Pac. 685. Upon a motion to call in another judge, the judge whose bias is alleged must himself decide the motion, but he must decide it upon the facts averred in the affidavits, without reference to his own knowledge of his own state of mind. Hoyt v. Zumwalt, 149 Cal. 381; 86 Pac. 600; Swan v. Talbot, 152 Cal. 142; 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 94 Pac. 238. Under the law prior to the addition of the fourth subdivision, the judge might act upon his own knowledge as to his condition of mind (Southern California Motor Road Co. v. San Bernardino Nat. Bank, 100 Cal. 316; 34 Pac. 711); but, under the present section, the knowledge or belief of the judge as to his qualification cannot affect the fact of his disqualification. Adams v. Minor, 121 Cal. 372; 53 Pac. 815. Unverified statements of the judge cannot be considered in determining the question. Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332; 68 Pac. 976; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44. Even if the judge knows himself to be disqualified in fact, he cannot deny the motion, if the contrary appears from the affidavit on file. People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44. The disqualification of the judge is to be determined wholly from the affidavits and counter-affidavits on file, and if there is no conflict upon the affidavits showing bias and prejudice, the court must grant a change of venue (People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44; Bassford v. Earl, 162 Cal. 115; 121 Pac. 395; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44), but in case of conflict the court may pass upon the question of bias and prejudice (People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240; 63 Pac. 351), and determine his own qualification. Talbot v. Pirkey, 139 Cal. 326; 73 Pac. 858. A judge must not shirk the painful duty imposed upon him, of being the trier of the question touching his own bias or other disqualification. Swan v. Talbot, 152 Cal. 142; 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 94 Pac. 238. It is the duty of a judge, alleged to be biased, to grant a motion to call in another judge, should bias or other disqualification be shown; but it is equally his duty to deny the motion, and to sit in the case himself, if, in his judgment, the disqualifying cause alleged is not sufficiently established by the evidence. Swan v. Talbot, 152 Cal. 142; 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 94 Pac. 238; Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332; 68 Pac. 976; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44; Hoyt v. Zumwalt, 149 Cal. 381; 86 Pac. 600. The finding of the trial judge, on conflicting affidavits, is conclusive on appeal, even though the question in controversy be the disqualification of the judge himself. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 66; 109 Pac. 884. It is not sufficient that the party believes he cannot have a fair and impartial trial, but the facts must be set forth, which would lead a reasonable mind to believe that such was the case. People v. Findlay, 132 Cal. 301; 64 Pac. 472. An affidavit made upon information and belief is not sufficient: the facts must be stated, and the source of the information shown, upon which the belief is based. People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31; Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332; 68 Pac. 976. Facts must be shown (Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129); the conclusions of the party are not sufficient. Hoyt v. Zumwalt, 149 Cal. 382; 86 Pac. 600. Erroneous rulings are not evidence of bias. People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

Test of bias. When the facts would justify a reasonable person in believing that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial before the judge about to try the cause, another judge should be called in. Johnston v. Dakan, 9 Cal. App. 524; 99 Pac. 729.

Power of judge disqualified by bias. In case of disqualification, the judge has no power, except to arrange his calendar, regulate the order of business (People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73), and transfer the cause to another court (Livermore v. Brundage, 64 Cal. 299; 30 Pac. 848), or grant a motion for change of venue. People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327; Kern Valley Water Co. v. McCord, 79 Cal. 646; 11 Pac. 798. He may transfer the matter from his department to another department of the superior court for hearing, instead of to the superior court of another county. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56. A disqualified judge cannot preside at the arraignment of a defendant, nor hear his plea, nor take any step in the prosecution against him. People v. Ebey, 6 Cal. App. 769; 93 Pac. 379. A disqualification is no ground for change of place of trial in criminal cases. People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327. The motion for a change of place of trial, in civil cases, on account of the disqualification of the judge, must be granted, where the judge is disqualified, and there is no other superior judge present to try the cause; but it is otherwise where another superior judge, who is holding court at the time, and who is qualified to try the cause, has been called for that purpose, and is ready and willing to try it. Upton v. Upton, 94 Cal. 26; 29 Pac. 411; Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 59 Cal. 130; Livermore v. Brundage, 64 Cal. 299; 30 Pac. 848; Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746. Where a qualified judge has been called in with the consent of both parties, a party is estopped to object, after trial has commenced, upon the ground that such judge was called in by the disqualified judge. Oakland v. Hart, 129 Cal. 98; 61 Pac. 779. The validity of the transfer to another county cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding. Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140; 21 Pac. 527, 855. Where the judge has jurisdiction to make an order or render a judgment, it is not a subject for collateral attack (Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep.

48; 13 Pac. 621; Johnston v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 75 Cal. 134; 7 Am. St. Rep. 129; 16 Pac. 753; Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140; 21 Pac. 527, 855; Hill v. City Cab etc. Co., 79 Cal. 188; 21 Pac. 728; Pehrson v. Hewitt, 79 Cal. 594; 21 Pac. 950); but a judgment by a disqualified judge is void. Estate of White, 37 Cal. 190.

Selection of judge. The law selects the judge to try the action, where undisputed facts showing bias and prejudice are before the court; a disqualified judge can neither try the case nor select his own judge to try it. Parrish v. Riverside Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 95; 93 Pac. 685. A judge disqualified by relationship to an attorney for a defendant in a criminal case has power to select a qualified judge to try the case. Decision by the supreme court in People v. Ebey, 6 Cal. App. 769, 774; 93 Pac. 379. The express prohibition of this section, that no disqualified judge shall act, applies in construing § 1054, post. Johnson v. German American Ins. Co., 150 Cal. 336; 88 Pac. 985.

Power of judge acting in another county. A judge called to act for a disqualified judge is not required to deliberate upon the case, nor to prepare his findings and order for judgment, in the county in which the cause is pending. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 66; 109 Pac. 884.

Validity of judgment by disqualified judge. See note 84 Am. Dec. 126.

Power of disqualified judge to make formal orders or to perform ministerial acts. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 975.

Effect upon decision of tribunal of participation by disqualified judge whose vote does not produce result. See note 13 Ann. Cas. 336.

Disqualification of judge who is resident or taxpayer in municipality which is party to proceedings before him. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 406.

Disqualification of judge interested in decedent's estate to act in estate matter. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1165.

Degree of relationship to party necessary to disqualify judge. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 516.

Affinity or relationship to party as disqualification of judge. See note 79 Am. St. Rep. 199.

Waiver of objection to disqualified judge. See notes 10 Ann. Cas. 969; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1072.

Disqualification of judge by prior connection with case. See note 25 L. R. A. 114.

Disqualification of judge for political bias or prejudice. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 424.

Membership in association or body instigating or conducting disbarment proceedings as disqualifying judge to sit in case. See notes Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1229; 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 116.

Prejudice against liquor traffic as constituting disqualification of judge to try case involving liquor laws. See note Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1203.

Signing petition for local option election as disqualifying judge from action thereon. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1092.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 343. The three causes stated in the text are the only ones which work a disqualification of a judicial officer. The exhibition by a judge of partisan feeling, or the unnecessary expression of an opinion upon the justice or merits of a controversy, though exceedingly indecorous, improper, and reprehensible, as calculated to throw suspicion upon the judgments of the court and bring administration of justice into contempt, are not, under the statute, sufficient to authorize a change of venue on the ground that the judge is disqualified from sitting. The law establishes a different rule for determining the qualification of judges from that applied to jurors. The reason for the distinction is obvious. The province of the jury is to determine from the evidence the issues of fact presented by the parties, and their decision is final in all cases where there is a conflict of testimony. The province of a judge is to decide such questions of law as may arise in the progress of the trial. His decisions upon these points are not final, and if erroneous, the party has his remedy by appeal. McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500.

§ 171. Judges and county clerks, when prohibited from practicing law. No justice, or judge of a court of record, or county clerk, shall practice law in any court of this state, nor act as attorney, agent, or solicitor in the prosecution of any claim or application for lands, pensions, patent rights, or other proceedings, before any department of the state or general government, or courts of the United States, during his continuance in office; nor shall any justice of the peace practice law before any justices' court in the county in which he resides.

Legislation § 171. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 343); and then read: "A judge cannot act as attorney or counsel in a court in which he is judge, or in an action or proceeding removed therefrom to another court for trial or review, or in an action or proceeding from which an appeal may lie to his own court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, to read: "No justice or judge of a court of record shall practice law in any court of this state during his continuance in office, nor shall any justice of the peace practice law before any justice's court in the county where he resides."

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 78.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 343.

§ 172. No judicial officer to have partner practicing law. No justice, judge, or other elective judicial officer, or court commissioner, shall have a partner acting as attorney or counsel in any court of this state.

Legislation § 172. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 173 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 343), and then read: "No judge or other elective judicial officer, or district court commissioner, shall have a partner acting as attorney or counsel in any court of this state."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, and renumbered § 172.

§ 173. [Renumbered and amended section.]

Legislation § 173. Renumbered § 172 by Stats. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I. See ante, Legislation § 172.

CHAPTER IV.

INCIDENTAL POWERS AND DUTIES OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

§ 176. Powers of justice or judge out of court.
§ 177. Powers of judicial officers as to conduct of proceedings.
§ 178. To punish for contempt.
§ 179. To take acknowledgments and affidavits.

§ 176. Powers of justice or judge out of court. A justice or judge may exercise out of court all the powers expressly conferred upon a justice or judge, as contradistinguished from the court.

Power of judge.
1. At chambers. Ante, §§ 165, 166.
2. To administer oaths. Post, § 179.

Legislation § 176. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, (1) adding the words "justice or" before the word "judge," in both places where printed, and (2) omitting the comma after "exercise" and after "court," in first line.

Power of judge out of court. This section confers power to extend the time in which to prepare and serve a statement on motion for a new trial, even in a county other than that in which the trial took place. Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128.

§ 177. Powers of judicial officers as to conduct of proceedings. Every judicial officer shall have power:

1. To preserve and enforce order in his immediate presence, and in proceedings before him, when he is engaged in the performance of official duty;

2. To compel obedience to his lawful orders as provided in this code;

3. To compel the attendance of persons to testify in a proceeding before him, in the cases and manner provided in this code;

4. To administer oaths to persons in a proceeding pending before him, and in all other cases where it may be necessary in the exercise of his powers and duties.

Incidental powers of courts. Ante, § 128.

Legislation § 177. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, (1) in introductory paragraph, substituting "shall have" for "has"; (2) in subd. 1, striking out (a) "the" before "proceedings," and (b) "an" before "official duty"; (3) in subd. 2, striking out a comma after "orders"; (4) in subd. 4, striking out a comma after "necessary."

Power to compel witness to testify. This section gives a judge, in whose court an action is pending, power to order the attendance of a witness before him to make a deposition, and may command the witness to answer proper interrogatories, and if his orders are disobeyed, he may punish the witness for contempt. Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 1; 73 Pac. 597.

Power to administer oaths. A justice of the peace has power to administer oaths, and to certify to a complaint charging a person with the commission of a crime. People v. Le Roy, 65 Cal. 613; 4 Pac. 649.

§ 178. To punish for contempt. For the effectual exercise of the powers conferred by the last section, a judicial officer may punish for contempt in the cases provided in this code.

Contempt.
1. Generally. Post, § 1209.
2. In justices' courts. Post, § 906.

Legislation § 178. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, in amending Part I.

Power to punish for contempt. A judicial officer has power, under this section, and it is his duty, to punish a witness for contempt for a refusal to answer pertinent questions upon the taking of his deposition, and the supreme court will, by writ of mandate, compel such judicial officer to employ the process of contempt against the witness who so refuses. Crocker v. Conrey, 140 Cal. 213; 73 Pac. 1006.

Power of judges to punish for contempt. See note 117 Am. St. Rep. 956.

Power of magistrate to punish witness for contempt. See note 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1135.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See post, §§ 1209 to 1222, inclusive.

§ 179. To take acknowledgments and affidavits. Each of the justices of the supreme court, and judges of the superior courts, shall have power in any part of the state, and every justice of the peace within his city and county, or county, and a judge of a police or other inferior court within his city and county, city, or town, to take and certify:

1. The proof and acknowledgment of a conveyance of real property, or of any other written instrument;

2. The acknowledgment of satisfaction of a judgment of any court;

3. An affidavit or deposition to be used in this state.

Subd. 1. Real property, acknowledgment of conveyance of. See Civ. Code, §§ 1180 et seq.
Subd. 2. Satisfaction of judgment. Post, § 675.
Subd. 3. Affidavit. Post, §§ 2009 et seq.
Deposition. Post, §§ 2019 et seq.

Legislation § 179. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 345.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 42, substituting a new introductory sentence for the original, which read: "The justices of the supreme court, and the judges of the district and county courts, have power in any part of the state, and justices of the peace within their respective counties, and police judges, and judges of municipal courts, within their respective cities or towns, to take and certify."

Power of justice of the peace. A justice of the peace may take acknowledgments, but his jurisdiction in such matters is limited to his own county, and where a certificate of acknowledgment is by the justice of the peace of another county, it must be accompanied by a certificate of the county clerk of that county, before it may be recorded. Middlecoff v. Hemstreet, 135 Cal. 173; 67 Pac. 768.

Power of judge of an inferior court. Where a city recorder has been given the power of a justice of the peace, he may, like a justice of the peace, take and certify acknowledgments and affidavits. Prince v. Fresno, 88 Cal. 407; 26 Pac. 606.

What disqualification prevents officer from taking acknowledgment. See note 32 Am. Dec. 757.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

CHAPTER V.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RESPECTING COURTS AND JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

§ 182. Subsequent applications for orders refused, when prohibited.
§ 183. Violations of preceding section.
§ 184. Proceedings not affected by vacancy in office.
§ 185. Proceedings to be in English language.
§ 186. Abbreviations and figures.
§ 187. Means to carry jurisdiction into effect.
§ 188. Disposition of funds paid to clerk or treasurer by order of court.

§ 182. Subsequent applications for orders refused, when prohibited. If an application for an order, made to a judge of a court in which the action or proceeding is pending, is refused in whole or in part, or is granted conditionally, no subsequent application for the same order shall be made to any court commissioner, or any other judge, except of a higher court; but nothing in this section applies to motions refused for informality in the papers or proceedings necessary to obtain the order, or to motions refused with liberty to renew the same.

Orders and motions generally. Post, §§ 1003 et seq.
Orders, appealable. Post, § 939, subd. 3.

Legislation § 182. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 345.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43, (1) changing "can" to "shall," after words "same order"; (2) omitting word "any" before "informality"; and (3) adding at end of section the clause beginning "or to motions."

Application for order after denial. The court will not enforce the rule of the statute, where it has acted prematurely or inadvertently in making an order (Odd Fellows' Sav. Bank v. Deuprey, 66 Cal. 168; 4 Pac. 1173); nor where there was an informality in the papers or proceedings, and the motion is denied upon that ground. Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487. A dismissal of the motion as to one party and a denial as to another, is a final disposition, and a second motion will not be considered (Hellings v. Duvall, 131 Cal. 618; 63 Pac. 1017); but a dismissal without prejudice is not a denial of the motion. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825. Striking a motion from the calendar is a denial. Lang v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 491; 12 Pac. 306, 416. Granting leave to renew motions, where jurisdiction is not limited by statute, is in the discretion of the judge; and this discretion will not be interfered with, except in cases of palpable abuse. Bowers v. Cherokee Bob, 46 Cal. 279; Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487;

Johnston v. Brown, 115 Cal. 694; 47 Pac. 686. Leave may be granted after an original motion has been denied. Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487; Kenney v. Kelleher, 63 Cal. 442; Johnston v. Brown, 115 Cal. 694; 47 Pac. 686. The doctrine of res adjudicata is not applicable to motions in pending actions. Johnston v. Brown, 115 Cal. 694; 47 Pac. 686; Ford v. Doyle, 44 Cal. 635; Bowers v. Cherokee Bob, 46 Cal. 279. But a party seeking to renew his motion, after a denial thereof, must show either that the denial was for some informality in the papers or proceedings, or that he has been granted permission to renew the same. Victor Power etc. Co. v. Cole, 11 Cal. App. 497; 105 Pac. 758.

Renewal of motion without leave. Where a renewal of the motion is made without leave of court, the papers may be stricken from the files. People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191. If an attorney has rendered services to an executor in the defense of a contest to a will, and his application for compensation is denied, but with the privilege of renewing the same, he may make a second application, after judgment admitting the will to probate and the perfection of an appeal from such judgment. Estate of Riviere, 8 Cal. App. 773; 98 Pac. 46. A second motion for a new trial cannot be made after a denial of the first: the remedy is by appeal from the first order. Coombs v. Hibberd, 43 Cal. 452; Thompson v. Lynch, 43 Cal. 482; People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191; Dorland v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 484; 6 Pac. 135; Goyhinech v. Goyhinech, 80 Cal. 409, 410; 22 Pac. 175.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

§ 183. Violations of preceding section. A violation of the last section may be punished as a contempt; and an order made contrary thereto may be revoked by the judge or commissioner who made it, or vacated by a judge of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending.

Ex parte order, vacating or modifying. Post, § 937.

Legislation § 183. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 345.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43, and the words "or commissioner" added before "who made it."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

§ 184. Proceedings not affected by vacancy in office. No proceeding in any court of justice, in an action or special proceeding pending therein, shall be affected by a vacancy in the office of all or any of the judges thereof.

Legislation § 184. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 345), and then read: "No proceeding in any court of justice, in an action or special proceeding pending therein, is affected by a vacancy in the office of all or any of the judges, or by the failure of a term thereof."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

§ 185. Proceedings to be in English language. Every written proceeding in a court of justice in this state shall be in the English language, and judicial proceedings shall be conducted, preserved, and published in no other.

Legislation § 185. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 345), and then read: "Every written proceeding in a court of justice in this state, or before a judicial officer, except in the counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Diego, must be in the English language, and in the excepted counties may be either in the English or Spanish language."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 345.

§ 186. Abbreviations and figures. Such abbreviations as are in common use may be used, and numbers may be expressed by figures or numerals in the customary manner.

2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43, in amending Part I.

Abbreviations in common use. Under the head "abbreviations" are to be included all conventional expressions or arbitrary signs that have passed into common use, such, for example, as punctuation-marks, the Arabic numerals and other mathematical signs, and similar signs used by merchants; this rule simply applies to judicial proceedings a rule elsewhere universal. Estate of Lakemeyer, 135 Cal. 28; 87 Am. St. Rep. 96; 66 Pac. 961; Raggio v. Palmtag, 155 Cal. 797; 103 Pac. 312.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 344.

§ 187. Means to carry jurisdiction into effect. When jurisdiction is, by the constitution or this code, or by any other statute, conferred on a court or judicial officer, all the means necessary to carry it into effect are also given; and in the exercise of this jurisdiction, if the course of proceeding be not specifically pointed out by this code or the statute, any suitable process or mode of proceeding may be adopted which may appear most conformable to the spirit of this code.

Legislation § 187. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on New York code.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 43, (1) adding, in first line, the words "the constitution or," and (2) changing "the" to "this," before "jurisdiction."

The means necessary. This section is merely declaratory of the common law (Golden Gate Cons. etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628); but, to make it available, there must be some law conferring jurisdiction upon the court (Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 195; 49 Pac. 8), as it does not confer jurisdiction: it merely operates to enable the court to exercise a jurisdiction otherwise conferred. Union Collection Co. v. Superior Court, 149 Cal. 790; 87 Pac. 1035. The provision is conformable to the spirit of the code, and is limited to those cases where no course of procedure is pointed out by the code or some statute. Gardner v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 548; 126 Pac. 501. The power should not be exercised when the existing law, by a reasonable construction, provides the process or mode of proceeding. McKendrick v. Western Zinc Min. Co., 165 Cal. 30; 130 Pac. 865. Where neither the legislature nor the rules of court prescribe any means or method for enforcing a right, the court may adopt any appropriate and approved mode of procedure that may have been employed by an aggrieved party. People v. Robinson, 17 Cal. App. 273; 119 Pac. 527. The superior court has power to compel a discovery in all cases, where, under the established rules of chancery practice existing at the time of the adoption of the constitution, a party would have been entitled to such relief. Union Collection Co. v. Superior Court, 149 Cal. 790; 87 Pac. 1035. It has power to determine that the amount of legal taxes due was just and legal, and to require the payment thereof as a condition to the granting of an injunction against the execution of a tax deed (San Diego Realty Co. v. Cornell, 150 Cal. 637; 89 Pac. 603); to take evidence to determine the degree of a crime (People v. Chew Lan Ong, 141 Cal. 550; 99 Am. St. Rep. 88; 75 Pac. 186); to appoint a commissioner to sell land under a decree of foreclosure (Crane v. Cummings, 137 Cal. 201; 69 Pac. 984; Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 413; 50 Pac. 546); to appoint a receiver to make a conveyance of property under decree of court (Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440); to issue a writ of assistance in a judgment in ejectment (Kirsch v. Kirsch, 113 Cal. 56; 45 Pac. 164); to make interlocutory decrees and orders in equity (Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505; Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616; Packard v. Bird, 40 Cal. 378; Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393; McFadden v. McFadden, 44 Cal. 306; Hinds v. Gage, 56 Cal. 486); and to order the withdrawal of an execution after return, for further levy. Weldon v. Rogers, 157 Cal. 410; 108 Pac. 266. Under this section, courts may inquire into frauds, mistakes, and cognate matters. Cerini v. De Long, 7 Cal. App. 398; 94 Pac. 582. Where a foreign court has jurisdiction to compel the holding of a stockholders' meeting, it has jurisdiction to make its judgment in mandamus effective by appointing a commissioner to give notice of the time and place of such meeting (Potomac Oil Co. v. Dye, 14 Cal. App. 674; 113 Pac. 126, 130); but this section does not authorize a proceeding to compel one of many stockholders in a corporation, made defendants to a creditor's bill to reach their unpaid subscriptions to its stock, to testify to or discover the whereabouts of other defendants, to enable the plaintiff to serve them with summons. Union Collection Co. v. Superior Court, 149 Cal. 790; 87 Pac. 1035. There is nothing in the Juvenile Court Law to preclude the district attorney from making the technical accusation against the defendant in the form of an information; that law contemplates an information without any preliminary examination, but such an examination, prior to an information, may be treated as surplusage, and this section, therefore, has no material application to the question. Edington v. Superior Court, 18 Cal. App. 739; 124 Pac. 450; 128 Pac. 338. If any judicial wrong has been committed in the conduct of an election, the superior court may, in the exercise of its equity powers, remedy it. Cerini v. De Long, 7 Cal. App. 398; 94 Pac. 582.

Process and procedure. The court has power, under this section, to adopt a mode of proceeding in setting aside a homestead (Mawson v. Mawson, 50 Cal. 539; Estate of McCauley, 50 Cal. 544; Kearney v. Kearney, 72 Cal. 591; 15 Pac. 769; Brown v. Starr, 75 Cal. 163; 16 Pac. 760; Estate of Burdick, 76 Cal. 639; 18 Pac. 805; Estate of Walkerly, 81 Cal. 579; 22 Pac. 888; Somers v. Somers, 81 Cal. 608; 22 Pac. 967), and dealing with the same, cutting down and limiting it (Estate of Burdick, 76 Cal. 639; 18 Pac. 805); requiring an appraiser to divide the homestead (Brown v. Starr, 75 Cal. 163; 16 Pac. 760); authenticating papers (Somers v. Somers, 81 Cal. 608; 22 Pac. 967); enforcing the constitutional rights of the defendant to have witnesses examined in open court (Willard v. Superior Court, 82 Cal. 256; 22 Pac. 1120); levying taxes for road purposes (Comstock v. Yolo County, 71 Cal. 599; 12 Pac. 728; San Luis Obispo County v. White, 91 Cal. 432; 24 Pac. 864; 27 Pac. 756); adjudicating the insolvency of a banking corporation (People v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 105; 34 Pac. 492); setting aside and declaring fraudulent proceedings in insolvency (Estudillo v. Meyerstein, 72 Cal. 317; 13 Pac. 869); authorizing service of an order, where a party conceals himself (Golden Gate Cons. etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628); enforcing a stipulation of the parties (Grady v. Porter, 53 Cal. 680); reviewing the ruling of a justice's court on appeal (Maxson v. Superior Court, 124 Cal. 468; 57 Pac. 379); and making up, auditing, and settling the account of a guardian beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Trumpler v. Cotton, 109 Cal. 250, 41 Pac. 1033; Graff v. Mesmer, 52 Cal. 636.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section is adopted from the New York code. The italicized words ["necessary" and "or the statute"] have been added by this commission.

§ 188. Disposition of funds paid to clerk or treasurer by order of court. When any money is deposited with the clerk of any superior court pursuant to any action or proceeding therein or pursuant to any order, decree or judgment of the court, or when any money is to be paid to the treasurer pursuant to any provision of this code, such money shall be forthwith deposited with such treasurer and a duplicate receipt of the treasurer therefor shall be filed with the auditor. The certificate of the auditor that such duplicate receipt has been so filed shall be necessary before the clerk or party required to deposit such money shall be entitled to a discharge of the obligation imposed upon him to make such deposit. When any money so deposited is to be withdrawn or paid out, the order directing such payment or withdrawal shall require the auditor to draw his warrant therefor and the treasurer to pay the same.

Legislation § 188. Added by Stats. 1915, p. 942.

The original § 188, entitled "Trials and intervening terms," was added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 285, and repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

ARTICLE I.

JURORS IN GENERAL.

§ 190. Jury defined.
§ 191. Different kinds of juries.
§ 192. Grand jury defined.
§ 193. Trial jury defined.
§ 194. Number of a trial jury.
§ 195. Jury of inquest defined.

§ 190. Jury defined. A jury is a body of men temporarily selected from the citizens of a particular district, and invested with power to present or indict a person for a public offense, or to try a question of fact.

Jurors.
1. Qualifications and exemptions. Post, §§ 198–202.
2. Selecting and summoning. Post, §§ 204, 238.
3. Impaneling. Post, §§ 241–254.

Legislation § 190. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44, in amending Part I.

§ 191. Different kinds of juries. Juries are of three kinds:

1. Grand juries;
2. Trial juries;
3. Juries of inquest.

Legislation § 191. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44, in amending Part I.

§ 192. Grand jury defined. A grand jury is a body of men, nineteen in number, returned in pursuance of law, from the citizens of a county, or city and county, before a court of competent jurisdiction, and sworn to inquire of public offense committed or triable within the county, or city and county.

Grand jury.
1. Impaneling. Post, §§ 241–243.
2. How often drawn. Const., art. i, § 8.

Legislation § 192. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 630), and then read: "A grand jury is a body of men, not less than thirteen nor more than fifteen in number, returned at stated periods from citizens of the county, before a court of competent jurisdiction, and sworn to inquire of public offenses committed or triable within the county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 86, to read as at present, except that (1) it did not contain the words "or city and county" in either place; (2) the words "citizens of a county" were printed "citizens of the county"; and (3) the word "offense" was printed "offenses."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44.

Jurisdiction of court. The jurisdiction of the superior court to impanel a grand jury is drawn from the law, and not from any order of the court. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341.

Return of grand jury. It is competent for the court to summon a special venire to complete the panel, instead of drawing the requisite number from the grand jury box. Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272. The court has no power to appoint an elisor to summon the grand jury, however, unless both the sheriff and the coroner are disqualified. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341.

Number of grand jurors necessary to constitute quorum. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 30.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630.

§ 193. Trial jury defined. A trial jury is a body of men returned from the citizens of a particular district before a court or officer of competent jurisdiction, and sworn to try and determine, by verdict, a question of fact.

Trial by jury. Post, §§ 600–619.

Verdict. Three quarters of jury can find. Const., art. i, § 7. See also post, § 618.

Legislation § 193. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44, striking out "unanimous" before "verdict."

§ 194. Number of a trial jury. A trial jury shall consist of twelve men; provided, that in civil actions and cases of misdemeanor, it may consist of twelve, or of any number less than twelve, upon which the parties may agree in open court.

Less than twelve. Const., art. i, § 7.

Legislation § 194. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "A trial jury consists of twelve men, unless the parties to the action or proceeding agree upon a less number."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A party failing to appear at the trial, it operated as a consent on his part that the issue should be tried by the court without a jury. The other party could have made this consent mutual by submitting the case to the court; but if such a course is not taken, and the party appearing calls for a jury, he is bound to take the number required by law. Twelve is the number, and a less number will not constitute a legal jury without the consent of the adverse party. Such consent must be express, and entered at the time in the minutes of the court; it cannot be inferred from the mere absence of the adverse party. Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 411.

§ 195. Jury of inquest defined. A jury of inquest, is a body of men summoned from the citizens of a particular district before the sheriff, coroner, or other ministerial officer, to inquire of particular facts.

Legislation § 195. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 44.

ARTICLE II.

QUALIFICATIONS AND EXEMPTIONS OF JURORS.

§ 198. Who competent to act as juror.
§ 199. Who not competent to act as juror.
§ 200. Who exempt from jury duty.
§ 201. Who may be excused.
§ 202. Affidavit of claim to exemption.

§ 198. Who competent to act as juror. A person is competent to act as juror if he be:

1. A citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years who shall have been a resident of the state and of the county or city and county for one year immediately before being selected and returned;

2. In possession of his natural faculties and of ordinary intelligence and not decrepit;

3. Possessed of sufficient knowledge of the English language.

Residence, generally. See Const., art. ii, § 4; Pol. Code, § 52.

Legislation § 198. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 630; Stats. 1863–64, pp. 462, 524), and then read: "A person is competent to act as a juror if he be: 1. A citizen of the United States, an elector of the county, and a resident of the township at least three months before being selected and returned; 2. In possession of his natural faculties and not decrepit; 3. Possessed of sufficient knowledge of the language in which the proceedings of the courts are had; 4. Assessed on the last assessment-roll of his county, on property belonging to him."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 89, inserting, in subd. 1, after the word "county," the words, in parentheses, "(whether his name be enrolled on the great register of the county, or not)."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 45, the textual differences from the present section being noted infra, par. 5.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 121; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 826, (1) in subd. 1, substituting "a resident of the state and of the county or city and county for one year immediately before being selected and returned," for "a resident of the state one year, and of the county, or city and county, ninety days before being selected and returned"; (2) striking out subd. 4, which read, "4. Assessed on the last assessment-roll of the county, or city and county, on property belonging to him."

Competency. This and the next section provide the qualifications of all jurors, grand and trial alike. People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 317; 39 Pac. 617. Lack of qualification affects individual jurors only; objections on that ground cannot be urged to a panel. People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8; 41 Pac. 281; People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 1; 41 L. R. A. 157; 53 Pac. 359. In impaneling a jury, it is the duty of the parties to an action, whether civil or criminal, to inquire first as to the qualifications prescribed by the first and fourth subdivisions of this section; otherwise there is a waiver of the right to challenge for a want of such qualification. People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135; 118 Pac. 957. It is the function of the trial court to determine the true state of mind of each member of the panel, touching his qualifications to act. People v. Loper, 159 Cal. 6; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1193; 112 Pac. 720.

Citizenship. Aliens are expressly prohibited from serving in the capacity of jurors. People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 320; People v. Chin Mook Sow, 51 Cal. 597.

Residence. The juror must have been a resident of the county for ninety days before being selected and returned (People v. Cochran, 61 Cal. 548); and the statute formerly required that he should be an elector of the county in which he was returned. Sampson v. Schaffer, 3 Cal. 107.

Natural capacity. It must be presumed that the hearing of a juror is normal, where misconduct of the juror in listening to the reading of a newspaper article is charged. People v. Wong Loung, 159 Cal. 520; 114 Pac. 829. An objection to the natural capacity of a juror, though not made upon his voir dire examination, is not waived: he may be excused whenever the want of natural capacity appears. People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135; 118 Pac. 957.

Knowledge of English. The juror's knowledge of the English language must be sufficient to enable him to understand the proceedings. People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

Property qualification. The juror must have been assessed on property belonging to him: it is not sufficient that he is an heir of a deceased person, who had owned property in the county (People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546; 82 Pac. 196); but where property is assessed to a partnership, of which the juror is a member, it is sufficient. People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482; 56 Pac. 251. A person not assessed in the last assessment-roll is not a competent juror. People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546; 82 Pac. 196; Kitts v. Superior Court, 5 Cal. App. 462; 90 Pac. 977. Lack of property qualification may be waived, and it is waived where the juror is accepted and sworn without objection. People v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 671; People v. Mortier, 58 Cal. 262; People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29.

Mistaken identity. A person not summoned is not selected and returned as required by law, although he bears the same name as a venireman whose name is in the box: he is not a qualified juror, and may be challenged; but it is too late to raise the question after verdict. People v. Duncan, 8 Cal. App. 186, 199; 96 Pac. 414.

Juror as "freeholder." See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 331.

Constitutionality of statute requiring jurors to be taxpayers. See note 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 414.

Waiver of property qualification of juror. See note 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 967.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630; Stats. 1864, p. 462. Sampson v. Schaffer, 3 Cal. 107; People v. Peralta, 4 Cal. 175; People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 405; People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 320.

Subd. 1. "An elector of the county," etc. Sampson v. Schaffer, 3 Cal. 107. "And a resident." Residence depends upon intention, as well as fact, and mere inhabitancy for a short period, against the intention of acquiring a domicile, would not make a resident within the meaning of the law. People v. Peralta, 4 Cal. 175. A citizen of the state who has resided only fourteen days in a county, and then was absent several months from the state, with the intention of returning to that county as his home, and does return, and has resided fourteen days in the county since his return, is qualified to act as a juror, so far as residence is concerned. If he had resided but one day, with the intention, in good faith, of making the county his home, and then left, with the intention of returning (animus revertendi), and actually did return, his residence would have dated from the day of his first settlement or arrival in the county, and not from the date of his return. People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 410. On a motion for a new trial, plaintiff's attorney (the client being absent) made affidavit that since the trial he had discovered that M., one of the jurors, was incompetent, because a resident of the state only three months. M. also made affidavit that he was a resident of the state for that time only. Held: that M. was a competent juror. Thompson v. Paige, 16 Cal. 78. In a criminal case, the objection that one of the jurors was an alien, cannot be taken for the first time upon the motion for a new trial, not even if the defendant was not aware of the juror's alienage at the time of the verdict. The defendant might have examined the juror on this subject and exercised the right of challenge before the juror was sworn. People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 322. See also People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 405.

Subd. 2. The words "and not decrepit" are added to the law as it existed prior to the passage of this code. Want of hearing, or of sight, suffering from physical disease, which prevents him from giving attention to the proceedings of the court, are enough to render a juror disqualified. Montague v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 767; People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 45.

Subd. 3. See the case of People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

Subd. 4. A person otherwise qualified is not a competent juror, unless he has been assessed on the last assessment-roll of his county, on property belonging to him. People v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 672.

§ 199. Who not competent to act as juror. A person is not competent to act as a juror:

1. Who does not possess the qualifications prescribed by the preceding section;

2. Who has been convicted of malfeasance in office or any felony or other high crime; or

3. Who has been discharged as a juror by any court of record in this state within a year, as provided in section two hundred of this code, or who has been drawn as a grand juror in any such court and served as such within a year and been discharged.

4. A person who is serving as a grand juror in any court of record in this state is not competent to act as a trial juror in any such court.

And a person who is serving as a trial juror in any court of this state is not competent to act as a grand juror in any such court.

Legislation § 199. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 630), and then read: "A person is not competent to act as a juror: 1. Who does not possess the qualifications prescribed by the preceding section; 2. Who has been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor, involving moral turpitude."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 45, changing subd. 2 to read as now printed, except that, then ending the section, it did not have, at end, the word "or."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 122; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 70, adding subds. 3 and 4, and the last paragraph; subd. 3 then having the words "section two hundred and three," a manifest error, corrected in 1909. Quære as to the "hinging" of subd. 4 on the introductory paragraph.

5. Amended by Stats. 1909, c. 645, changing the section number in subd. 3; the act to take effect June 1, 1909.

Service within a year. A trial juror, who has been discharged within a year, is not rendered incompetent to sit upon a grand jury (Application of Ruef, 150 Cal. 665; 89 Pac. 605; People v. Quijada, 154 Cal. 243; 97 Pac. 689; People v. Carson, 155 Cal. 164; 99 Pac. 970); and the validity of an indictment is not affected by the fact that a member of the grand jury was disqualified because he had served and been discharged as a juror in the superior court within a year. Application of Ruef, 150 Cal. 665; 89 Pac. 605; Kitts v. Superior Court, 5 Cal. App. 462; 90 Pac. 977.

Competency of jurors who have previously served in cause involving same or similar facts. See notes 4 Ann. Cas. 965; 68 L. R. A. 871.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630.

§ 200. Who exempt from jury duty. A person is exempt from liability to act as a juror if he be:

1. A judicial, civil, or military officer of the United States, or of this state;

2. A person holding a county, city and county, city, town or township office;

3. An attorney at law, or the clerk, secretary or stenographer of an attorney at law;

4. A minister of the gospel, or a priest of any denomination following his profession;

5. A teacher in a university, college, academy, or school;

6. A practicing physician, or druggist, actually engaged in the business of dispensing medicines;

7. An officer, keeper or attendant of an almshouse, hospital, asylum, or other charitable institution;

8. Engaged in the performance of duty as officer or attendant of the state prison or of a county jail;

9. Employed on board of a vessel navigating the waters of this state;

10. An express agent, mail-carrier, or a superintendent, employee, or operator of a telegraph or telephone company doing a general telegraph or telephone business in this state, or keeper of a public ferry or toll-gate;

11. An active member of the national guard of California, or an active member of a paid fire department of any city and county, city, town, or village in this state, or an exempt member of a duly authorized fire company;

12. A superintendent, engineer, fireman, brakeman, motorman, or conductor on a railroad; or,

13. A person drawn as a juror in any court of record in this state, upon a regular panel, who has served as such within a year or a person drawn or summoned as a juror in any such court who has been discharged as a juror within a year as hereinafter provided; provided, however, that in counties having less than five thousand population the exemption provided by this subdivision shall not apply.

Exemption, how claimed. Post, § 202.

Subd. 11. Exempt fireman. Pol. Code, §§ 3337–3339.

Members of national guard. See Pol. Code, § 2098.

Legislation § 200. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1853, p. 59; Stats. 1862, p. 375; Stats. 1863, p. 630; Stats. 1865–66, p. 30), and then read: "A person is exempt from liability to act as a juror if he be: 1. A judicial, civil, or military officer of the United States, or of the state of California; 2. A person holding a county office; 3. An attorney and counselor at law; 4. A minister of the gospel or a priest of any denomination; 5. A teacher in a college, academy, or school; 6. A practicing physician; 7. An officer, keeper, or attendant of an almshouse, hospital, asylum, or other charitable institution; 8. Engaged in the performance of duty as officer or attendant of a county jail or the state prison; 9. Employed on board of a vessel navigating the waters of this state; 10. An express agent, mail-carrier, telegraph-operator, or keeper of a public ferry or toll-gate; 11. An active member of the fire department of any city, town, or village in this state, or an exempt member by reason of five years active service; 12. A superintendent, engineer, or conductor on a railroad."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 285, (1) in subd. 3, changing "An attorney" to "A practicing attorney"; (2) adding, at the end of subd. 4, the words "following his profession"; (3) adding, at the end of subd. 6, the words "or dentist"; (4) in subd. 10, substituting for "telegraph-operator" the words "superintendent, employee, or operator of a telegraph line doing a general telegraph business in this state"; and (5) adding subd. 13, "An editor or local reporter of a newspaper."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 86, (1) changing subd. 3 to "An attorney at law"; (2) striking out the words "or dentist" from end of subd. 6; (3) changing subd. 11 to read, "An active member of a fire department of any city, town, or village in the state, or an exempt member of a duly organized fire company, who has become exempt from jury duty before the passage of this act"; (4) changing subd. 13 to read, "A person who served as a juror in any court of record in this state, for a term thereof which has expired within a year; but this exemption shall not extend to a person who is summoned as a juror for the trial of a particular case."

4. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 45, (1) at end of subd. 1, changing "the state of California" to "this state"; (2) changing subd. 2, after "county," to read, "city and county, or township office"; (3) in subd. 5, adding "university" before "college"; (4) adding, after "physician," in subd. 6, "or druggist, actually engaged in the business of dispensing medicines"; (5) changing, after "attendant of," in subd. 8, to read, "the state prison, or of a county jail, or the state prison"; (6) changing subd. 11 to read, "An active member of the national guard of California, or an active member of a fire department of any city and county, city, town, or village in this state, or an exempt member of a duly organized fire company who had become exempt from jury duty before the passage of this act"; and (7) changing subd. 13 to read: "A person drawn as a juror in any court of record in this state, upon a regular panel, who has served as such within a year; but this exemption shall not extend to a person who is summoned as a juror for the trial of a particular case."

5. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 185, striking from end of subd. 11, "who had become exempt from jury duty before the passage of this act."

6. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 71, the text then being the same as at present (1915), except for the subsequent changes noted.

7. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 885, (1) in subd. 11, substituting "authorized" for "organized," before "fire company"; (2) in subd. 13, adding the proviso.

8. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 1080, adding "fireman" in subd. 12.

Exemption. Exemption is a privilege, and not a ground of challenge. People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482; 56 Pac. 251.

Constitutionality of laws exempting certain classes of persons. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 783.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630; Stats. 1853, p. 59; Stats. 1866, p. 30; Stats. 1862, p. 362. Subdivision 12, is new.

§ 201. Who may be excused. A juror shall not be excused by a court for slight or trivial cause, or for hardship or inconvenience to his business, but only when material injury or destruction to his property, or of property intrusted to him, is threatened, or when his own health, or the sickness or death of a member of his family, requires his absence.

Legislation § 201. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 630.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 45, (1) changing the first words of the section from "A juror cannot be excused by the court"; (2) omitting a comma after "hardship"; and (3) changing "or of property intrusted" from "or that of the public intrusted."

Court may excuse. The court may, of its own motion, for any good reason, excuse a qualified juror from sitting on the panel in a criminal case. People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

Rejecting or excusing juror without challenge. See note 1 Am. St. Rep. 519.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630. It has been held that the court may, for a good reason, on its own motion, excuse or set aside a juror who is free from any statutory disability, and possesses the legal qualifications of a juror. Montague v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 767. And "even if a juror has been set aside by the court for an insufficient cause, it is not a matter of error, if the trial has been by a jury duly sworn and impaneled and above all exceptions. Neither the prisoner nor the government in such a case has suffered injury." United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 91; Fed. Cas.

No. 14868; Tatum v. Young, 1 Port. (Ala.) 298; Commonwealth v. Hayden, 4 Gray, 19. Where a court willfully and arbitrarily rejects a juror not disqualified under the provisions of the statute, and without a reasonable ground upon which to base its actions, perhaps it might be error. See People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

§ 202. Affidavit of claim to exemption. If a person, exempt from liability to act as a juror as provided in section two hundred, be summoned as a juror, he may make and transmit his affidavit to the clerk of the court for which he is summoned, stating his office, occupation, or employment; and such affidavit shall be delivered by the clerk to the judge of the court where the name of such person is called, and if sufficient in substance, shall be received as an excuse for non-attendance in person. The affidavit shall then be filed by the clerk.

Legislation § 202. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 286.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 46, (1) changing "If a" from "If any," in first line; (2) changing "where" from "when," before "the name."

ARTICLE III.

OF SELECTING AND RETURNING JURORS FOR COURTS OF RECORD.

§ 204. Jury-lists, by whom and when to be made.
§ 205. Selection and listing of persons suitable and competent to serve as jurors.
§ 206. Lists to contain how many names.
§ 207. Person who served as juror during preceding year not to be selected. [Repealed.]
§ 208. Certified list to be filed with clerk of superior court.
§ 209. Duty of clerk. Jury-boxes.
§ 210. Regular jurors to serve one year.
§ 211. Jurors to be drawn from boxes.

§ 204. Jury-lists, by whom and when to be made. In the month of January in each year it shall be the duty of the superior court in each of the counties of this state to make an order designating the estimated number of grand jurors, and also the number of trial jurors, that will, in the opinion of said court, be required for the transaction of the business of the court, and the trial of causes therein, during the ensuing year; and immediately after said order designating the estimated number of grand jurors shall be made, the court shall select and list the grand jurors required by said order to serve as grand jurors in said superior court during the ensuing year, or until new lists of jurors shall be provided, and said selections and listings shall be made of persons suitable and competent to serve as jurors, as set forth and required in sections two hundred and five and two hundred and six of this code, which list of persons so selected shall at once be placed in the possession of the county clerk; and immediately after said order designating the estimated number of trial jurors shall be made, the board of supervisors shall select, as provided in sections two hundred and five and two hundred and six of this code, a list of persons to serve as trial jurors in the superior court of said county during the ensuing year, or until a new list of jurors shall be provided. In counties, and cities and counties having a population of one hundred thousand inhabitants or over, such selection shall be made by a majority of the judges of the superior courts.

Legislation § 204. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The board of supervisors of each county must, at their first regular meeting in each year, or at any other meeting if neglected at the first, make a list of persons to serve as jurors in courts of record for the ensuing year."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 286, to read: "The district judges of the several districts within or embracing part of the city and county of San Francisco, and the county judge of the county, and the judge of the municipal criminal court of San Francisco, or a majority of such judges, must meet in San Francisco in the month of December of each year, at the time and place designated by the county judge, and make a list of persons to serve as jurors in the courts of record, held in said city and county, for the ensuing year. And the board of supervisors of each of the other counties of the state must, at its first regular meeting in each year, or at any other meeting, if neglected at the first, make a list of persons to serve as jurors in the courts of record in their respective counties until a new list is provided."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 86, to read: "The district judges of the several judicial districts within or embracing part of the city and county of San Francisco, and the county judge, probate judge, and judge of the municipal criminal court of said city and county, or a majority of such judges, must meet in said city and county in the month of December of each year, at the time and place designated by the county judge, and select a list of persons to serve as grand jurors in the county court, and another list of persons to serve as trial jurors in the courts of record held in said city and county for the ensuing year. And the board of supervisors of each of the other counties of the state must, at its first regular meeting in each year, or at any other meeting, if neglected at the first, make a list of persons to serve as jurors in the courts of record, in their respective counties, until a new list is provided."

4. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 46, to read: "Within thirty days after the passage of this act the superior court in each of the counties of this state shall make an order designating the number of grand jurors, and also the number of trial jurors that, in the opinion of said court, will be required for the transaction of the business of said court during the year ending on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-one; and thereafter, in the month of January in each year, it shall be the duty of said court to make an order designating the estimated number of grand jurors, and also the number of trial jurors, that will, in the opinion of said court, be required for the transaction of the business of the court, and the court and the trial of causes therein, during the ensuing year. And immediately after said order shall be made, the board of supervisors shall select, as provided in the next section, a list of persons to serve as grand jurors and trial jurors in the superior court of said county during the ensuing year, or until a new list of jurors shall be provided. In cities and counties having over one hundred thousand inhabitants such selection shall be made by the judges of the superior court."

5. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 69, to read: "In the month of January in each year, it shall be the duty of the superior court in each of the counties of this state to make an order designating the estimated number of grand jurors, and also the number of trial jurors, that will, in the opinion of said court, be required for the transaction of the business of the court, and the trial of causes therein, during the ensuing year; and immediately after said order shall be made, the board of supervisors shall select, as provided in the next section, a list of persons to serve as grand jurors, and also a list of persons to serve as trial jurors, in the superior court of said county, during the ensuing year, or until new lists of jurors shall be provided. In cities and counties having over one hundred thousand inhabitants, such selection shall be made by the judges of the superior court, or a majority of them if all do not attend."

6. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 297.

Designating number of jurors. There is no distinction, in the matter of selection of grand jurors and trial jurors: the names of all the jurors to be selected are placed in the same box, and the court designates separately the number of each class. People v. Crowey, 56 Cal. 36. Until the new list has been certified and filed with the clerk, a trial jury may be selected from the number returned for the preceding year. People v. Richards, 1 Cal. App. 566; 82 Pac. 691.

Order designating number. The order designating the number of jurors for the ensuing year need not be signed; being made in open court, its entry in the minutes is sufficient. People v. Baldwin, 117 Cal. 244; 49 Pac. 186.

Selection by board of supervisors. A failure to show the selection, as the jury was in fact selected, or the selection of fewer than required by order of the court, is not a material departure from the forms prescribed in respect to the drawing of a jury. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292; 78 Pac. 717. The board may select the jurors at either a regular or an adjourned meeting, or at a special meeting called for that purpose. People v. Baldwin, 117 Cal. 244; 49 Pac. 186.

Selection by judges. In cities and counties having a population of more than one hundred thousand, jurors are selected in January by the judges of the superior court, instead of by the supervisors. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341; People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75. Where the minutes kept by the secretary of the judges are incomplete, and do not show the true facts as to the selection of jurors, the presiding judge may order the minutes amended, so that they may accurately show what occurred (People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75; People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292; 78 Pac. 717), under the inherent power of a court to amend the record of its transactions and proceedings, as to clerical matters, so as to make it speak the truth. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75; Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393.

Obtaining of jurors. See note 53 Am. Dec. 101.

§ 205. Selection and listing of persons suitable and competent to serve as jurors. The selections and listings shall be made of persons suitable and competent to serve as jurors, and in making such selections they shall take the names of such only as are not exempt from serving, who are in the possession of their natural faculties, and not infirm or decrepit, of fair character and approved integrity, and of sound judgment.

Legislation § 205. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "They must proceed to select and list from those assessed on the assessment-roll of the previous year, suitable persons, competent to serve as jurors; and in making such selection, they must take the names of such only as are not exempt from serving, who are in possession of their natural faculties, and not infirm or decrepit, of fair character, of approved integrity, and of sound judgment."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 46, substituting "last preceding assessment-roll of such county, or city and county," for "assessment-roll of the previous year."

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 70, the first sentence (stricken out in 1893), reading, "They shall proceed to select and list the grand jurors required by said order of the superior court, and then select and list the trial jurors required by said order"; the remainder of the section being the same as the present text, except for the subsequent changes, noted infra.

4. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 298.
5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 826, striking out, after "serve as jurors," the clause, "who are assessed on the last preceding assessment-roll of such county, or city and county."

Effect of summoning persons on panel challenged. That a few persons summoned on a second venire of jurors had also been summoned on the first, is no basis for a challenge to the entire panel. People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425; 30 Pac. 581.

§ 206. Lists to contain how many names. The lists of jurors, to be made as provided in the preceding section, shall contain the number of persons which shall have been designated by the court in its order. The names for such lists shall be selected from the different wards or townships of the respective counties in proportion to the number of inhabitants therein, as nearly as the same can be estimated by the persons making said lists; and said lists shall be kept separate and distinct one from the other.

Legislation § 206. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Such lists must contain not less than one for every hundred inhabitants of each township or ward, having regard to the population of the county, so that the whole number of jurors selected in the county shall amount, at least, to one hundred, and not exceed one thousand."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 87, to read: "The lists to be made by the board of supervisors shall contain not less than one hundred names and not more than one thousand names, and the grand-jury list for the city and county of San Francisco shall contain not less than one hundred and fifty names and not more than one hundred and eighty names, and the trial-jury list for said city and county shall contain not less than eight hundred names and not more than twelve hundred names; and within the limits above prescribed, the said lists shall contain the names of as many persons as will, in the judgment of the judges, or the board of supervisors, be required as jurors in the county during the year next ensuing. The names for all such lists shall be selected from the different wards or townships of the respective counties, in proportion to the number of inhabitants therein, as nearly as the same can be estimated by the persons making such lists."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 46, to read: "The list to be made shall contain the number of persons which shall have been designated by the court. The names for such list shall be selected from the different wards or townships of the respective counties in proportion to the number of inhabitants therein, as nearly as the same can be estimated by the persons making such list."

4. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 70.

Construction of section. The provisions of this section are directory, and the action of the judges will not be disturbed, except for an abuse of discretion. People v. Danford, 14 Cal. App. 442; 112 Pac. 474.

Number designated. Where the court orders a number of jurors to be drawn, but, through inadvertence or mistake, an omission to draw two of the numbers on the list does not constitute a material and substantial departure from the law. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292; 78 Pac. 717. The supervisors are at liberty to select, from the names left in the box at the end of the year, the names of such persons as possess the necessary qualifications of jurors, and who have not served the previous year, and make them part of the list for the current year. People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240; 63 Pac. 351; People v. Richards, 1 Cal. App. 566; 82 Pac. 691.

Proportionate selection. The list is to be composed of names of persons from wards or townships in proportion to the inhabitants, but, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed, where none are selected from a certain township, that there are no qualified jurors therein. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292; 78 Pac. 717. The population may be estimated from the number of votes cast. People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240; 63 Pac. 351.

List to be kept separate and distinct. A failure to keep a separate list of jurors selected from each township is not a material departure from the law. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292; 78 Pac. 717.

§ 207. [Person who served as juror during preceding year not to be selected. Repealed.]

Legislation § 207. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 87.

§ 208. Certified list to be filed with clerk of superior court. A certified list of the persons selected to serve as trial jurors shall at once be placed in the possession of and filed with the clerk of the superior court.

Legislation § 208. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Certified lists of the persons selected to serve as jurors must at once be placed in the possession of the county clerk."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 46, changing "must" to "shall."

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 70, to read: "Certified lists of the persons so selected to serve as grand jurors and as trial jurors shall at once be placed in possession of the county clerk."

4. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 298.

Certification of list. Where the list has been regularly drawn under the order of the court, and the clerk of the board of supervisors is the same person as the clerk of the superior court, it is unnecessary to certify to the list; the clerk may, by testimony, identify the list at the time of trial. People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8; 41 Pac. 281.

§ 209. Duty of clerk. Jury-boxes. On receiving such lists the county clerk shall file the same in his office, and write down the names contained thereon on separate pieces of paper, of the same size and appearance, and fold each piece so as to conceal the name thereon. He shall deposit the pieces of paper having on them the names of the persons selected to serve as grand jurors in a box to be called the "grand-jury box," and those having on them the names of the persons selected to serve as trial jurors in a box to be called the "trial-jury box."

Legislation § 209. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "On receiving such lists, the clerk must file the same in his office, and write down the names contained therein on separate pieces of paper, of the same size and appearance, and fold each piece so as to conceal the name thereon, and deposit them in a box to be called the 'jury-box.'"

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 87, to read: "On receiving such lists, the clerk must file the same in his office, and write down the names contained therein on separate pieces of paper, of the same size and appearance, and fold each piece so as to conceal the name thereon; and, in the city and county of San Francisco, he shall deposit the pieces having on them the names of persons selected to serve as grand jurors, in a box to be called the 'grand-jury box,' and those having on them the names of persons selected to serve as trial jurors, in a box to be called the 'trial-jury box,' and in the other counties of the state he shall deposit the said pieces in a box to be called the 'jury-box.'"

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47, changing the first sentence to read as at present, and the second sentence to read, "He shall deposit the pieces of paper having on them the names of the persons selected in a box, to be called the 'jury-box.'"

4. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 70.

§ 210. Regular jurors to serve one year. The persons whose names are so returned shall be known as regular jurors, and shall serve for one year and until other persons are selected and returned.

Legislation § 210. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47, changing (1) "are known" to "shall be known," and (2) "must serve" to "shall serve."

Term of service. This section only limits the time in which the persons selected shall serve for the purpose of the drawing and impanelment of the jury, and imposes no limitations whatever upon the life of a jury, either grand or trial, once drawn and impaneled, and the mere selection, listing, and returning of the grand jurors for the succeeding year does not, of itself, by operation of law, discharge a grand jury then in existence. Halsey v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 71; 91 Pac. 987. The term of service is one year, and until other persons are selected and returned. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541; 11 Pac. 240; Jacobs v. Elliott, 104 Cal. 318; 37 Pac. 942. The action of a grand jury may be considered valid until the body is discharged by the court or by operation of law: the mere expiration of the year does not effect a discharge by operation of law. People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302; 39 Pac. 617.

Service of juror. Serving on a jury is the only way in which a juror can serve, within the meaning of this section (Halsey v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 71, 84; 91 Pac. 987), which is applicable both to grand and to trial jurors. People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302; 39 Pac. 617. The order of a trial court discharging a jury upon reaching a verdict in any given case does not prove that the individual jurors are thereby relieved from future jury duty. People v. Gilmore, 17 Cal. App. 737; 121 Pac. 697.

§ 211. Jurors to be drawn from boxes. The names of persons drawn for grand jurors shall be drawn from the "grand-jury box," and the names of persons for trial jurors shall be drawn from the "trial-jury box"; and if, at the end of the year, there shall be the names of persons in either of the said jury-boxes who may not have been drawn during the year to serve, and have not served as jurors, the names of such persons may be placed on the list of jurors drawn for the succeeding year.

Legislation § 211. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 87, and then read: "In the city and county of San Francisco, the names of persons for grand jurors shall be drawn from the 'grand-jury box,' and the names of persons for trial jurors shall be drawn from the 'trial-jury box,' and in the other counties of the state, the names of persons, whether for grand jurors or trial jurors, shall be drawn from the 'jury-box.'"

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47, to read: "The names of persons, whether for grand or trial jurors, shall be drawn from the 'jury-box'; and if, at the end of the year, there shall be the names of persons in the 'jury-box' who may not have been drawn during the year to serve as jurors, the names of such persons may be placed upon the lists of jurors drawn for the succeeding year."

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 70.

ARTICLE IV.

OF DRAWING JURORS FOR COURTS OF RECORD.

§ 214. Order of judge or judges for drawing of jury.
§ 215. When clerk shall draw.
§ 216. Sheriff and judge to witness drawing. [Repealed.]
§ 217. Drawing, when to be adjourned. [Repealed.]
§ 218. Shall proceed, when. [Repealed.]
§ 219. Drawing, how conducted.
§ 220. Preservation of ballots drawn.
§ 221. Copy of list to be furnished by clerk. [Repealed.]

§ 214. Order of judge or judges for drawing of jury. Whenever the business of the superior court shall require the attendance of a trial jury for the trial of criminal cases, or where a trial jury shall have been demanded in any cause or causes at issue in said court, and no jury is in attendance, the court may make an order directing a trial jury to be drawn, and summoned to attend before said court. Such order shall specify the number of jurors to be drawn, and the time at which the jurors are required to attend. And the court may direct that such causes, either criminal or civil, in which a jury may be required, or in which a jury may have been demanded, be continued, and fixed for trial when a jury shall be in attendance.

Summoning jury. See post, § 226.

Legislation § 214. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Not less than ten nor more than thirty days before the commencement of any term of court, the judge thereof, if a jury will be required therefor, must make and file with the county clerk an order that one be drawn. The number to be drawn must be fixed in the order; if to form a grand jury, it must be twenty-four, and if a trial jury, such number as the judge may direct."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 287, to read: "Before the commencement of any term of court, the judge thereof, if a jury will be required therefor, must make and file with the county clerk, an order that one be drawn. The number to be drawn must be named in the order; if to form a grand jury, it must be twenty-four, and if a trial jury, such number as the judge may direct; and the time must be designated at which the drawing will take place."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 88, changing the last sentence, down to the word "direct," to read: "If to form a grand jury, it must be not less than twenty-five and not more than thirty; and if to form a trial jury, such number as the judge may direct."

4. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47.

Order directing drawing. The judge is required to make an order for the drawing from the "regular jurors" (Halsey v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 71; 91 Pac. 987), specifying the number of jurors to be drawn. Jackson v. Baehr, 138 Cal. 266; 71 Pac. 167. An order changing the hour for the drawing, fixed by the presiding judge, does not invalidate the drawing. Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272. An order directing the clerk to draw the names of a designated number of good and lawful men to be drawn from the county, is a sufficient order. People v. Wheeler, 65 Cal. 77; 2 Pac. 892. A judge, disqualified to try a particular cause, may order and superintend the drawing of jurors for the ensuing term. People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A substantial compliance with the time of drawing jurors, as prescribed by this chapter, is perhaps sufficient. See People v. Rodriguez, 10 Cal. 50; People v. Stuart, 4 Cal. 218; Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 537; see also note to § 225, post.

§ 215. When clerk shall draw. Immediately upon the order mentioned in the preceding section being made, the clerk shall, in the presence of the court, proceed to draw the jurors from the "trial-jury box."

Legislation § 215. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, in substance, in §§ 215, 216, 217, 218, which then read: "215. At least one day before the drawing, the clerk must notify the sheriff and county judge of the time when such drawing will take place, which time must not be more than three days after the receipt by him of the order for such drawing." "216. At the time so appointed, the sheriff, in person or by deputy, and the county judge, must attend at the county clerk's office to witness such drawing, and if they do so, the clerk must, in their presence, proceed to draw the jurors." "217. If the officers so notified do not appear, the clerk must adjourn the drawing until the next day, and, by written notice, require two electors of the county to attend such drawing on the adjourned day." "218. If, at the adjourned day, the sheriff, county judge, and electors, or any two of such persons, appear, the clerk must in their presence proceed to draw the jurors."

2. By Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 287, §§ 215 and 217 were amended to read: "215. Before the drawing, the clerk must notify the sheriff and county judge of the time appointed for such drawing." "217. If the officers named do not appear, the clerk must adjourn the drawing till the next day, and, by written notice, require two electors of the county to attend such drawing on the adjourned day."

3. By Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47, § 215 was amended to read as at present, except that the word "trial" was omitted before "jury-box."

4. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 71.

In the presence of the court. The original section required the clerk to notify the sheriff and the judge of the drawing; but if they were present, although not notified, the drawing was valid. People v. Gallagher, 55 Cal. 462.

§ 216. [Sheriff and judge to witness drawing. Repealed.]

Legislation § 216. See ante, Legislation § 215.

§ 217. [Drawing, when to be adjourned. Repealed.]

Legislation § 217. See ante, Legislation § 215.

§ 218. [Shall proceed, when. Repealed.]

Legislation § 218. See ante, Legislation § 215.

§ 219. Drawing, how conducted. The clerk must conduct said drawing as follows:

1. He must shake the box containing the names of the trial jurors so as to mix the slips of paper upon which such names are written as well as possible; he must then draw from said box as many slips of paper as are ordered by the court.

2. A minute of the drawing shall be entered in the minutes of the court, which must show the name on each slip of paper so drawn from said jury-box.

3. If the name of any person is drawn from said box who is deceased or insane, or who may have permanently removed from the county, or who is exempt from jury service, and the fact shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court, the name of such person shall be omitted from the list, and the slip of paper having such name on it shall be destroyed and another juror drawn in his place, and the fact shall be entered upon the minutes of the court. The same proceeding shall be had as often as may be necessary until the whole number of jurors required be drawn. After the drawing shall be completed, the clerk shall make a copy of the list of names of the persons so drawn, and certify the same. In his certificate he shall state the date of the order, and of the drawing, and the number of the jurors drawn, and the time when, and the place where such jurors are required to appear. Such certificate and list shall be delivered to the sheriff for service.

Legislation § 219. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The clerk must conduct such drawing as follows: 1. He must shake the box containing the names of jurors returned to him, from which jurors are required to be drawn, so as to mix the slips of paper upon which such names were written, as much as possible; 2. He must then publicly draw out of the box as many such slips of paper as are ordered by the judge; 3. A minute of the drawing must be kept by one of the attending officers, in which must be entered the name contained on every slip of paper so drawn, before any other slip is drawn; 4. If, after drawing the whole number required, the name of any person has been drawn who is dead or insane, or who has permanently removed from the county, to the knowledge of the clerk or any other attending officer, an entry of such fact must be made in the minute of the drawing, and the slip of paper containing such name must be destroyed; 5. Another name must then be drawn, in place of that contained on the slip of paper so destroyed, which must, in like manner, be entered in the minutes of the drawing; 6. The same proceedings must be had as often as may be necessary, until the whole number of jurors required are drawn; 7. The minute of the drawing must then be signed by the clerk and the attending officers or persons, and filed in the clerk's office; 8. Separate lists of the names of the persons so drawn for trial jurors, and of those drawn for grand jurors, with their places of residence, and specifying for what court they were drawn, must be made and certified by the clerk and the attending officers or persons, and delivered to the sheriff of the county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 47, to read the same as at present, except that (1) in subd. 1 (a) the words "the trial" were omitted before the word "jurors," and (b) the word "said" was changed from "the"; (2) in subd. 2, after the word "name," the phraseology was changed from "contained on every slip of paper so drawn from the 'jury-box' "; (3) in subd. 3, (a) in first line, "said" was changed from "the," (b) words "having such name on it shall be" were changed from "containing such name be," (c) word "be," between "required" and "drawn," was changed from "are," and (d) word "the" omitted in words "number of the jurors."

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 71.

Certification of order. The purpose of requiring the clerk to certify to the date of the order and of the drawing is merely for identification; an order otherwise identified is sufficient. People v. Iams, 57 Cal. 115.

§ 220. Preservation of ballots drawn. After a drawing of persons to serve as jurors, the clerk shall preserve the ballots drawn, and at the close of the session or sessions for which the drawing was had, he shall replace in the proper box from which they were taken all ballots which have on them the names of persons who did not serve as jurors for the session or sessions aforesaid, and who were not exempt or incompetent.

Legislation § 220. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "After the adjournment of any court at which jurors have been returned, as herein provided, the clerk must inclose the ballots containing the names of those who attended and served as jurors in an envelope, under seal, and the ballots of those who did not attend and serve must be returned to the jury-box. The ballots sealed in envelopes must not be returned to the jury-box until all the ballots therein have been exhausted."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 88, to read: "After a drawing of persons to serve as jurors, the clerk must preserve the ballots drawn; and at the close of the term of the court for which the drawing was had, must replace in the box from which they were taken, all ballots which have on them the names of persons who did not serve as jurors for the term, and who were not excused because they were exempt or incompetent."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 48.

§ 221. [Copy of list to be furnished by clerk. Repealed.]

Legislation § 221. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

ARTICLE V.

OF SUMMONING JURORS FOR COURTS OF RECORD.

§ 225. Sheriff to summon jurors, how.
§ 226. Of drawing and summoning jurors to attend forthwith.
§ 227. Of summoning jurors to complete a panel.
§ 228. Compensation of elisor.

§ 225. Sheriff to summon jurors, how. The sheriff, as soon as he receives the list or lists of jurors drawn, shall summon the persons named therein to attend the court at the opening of the regular session thereof, or at such session or time as the court may order, by giving personal notice to that effect to each of them, or by leaving a written notice to that effect at his place of residence, with some person of proper age, or by mailing such notice by registered mail, and shall return the list to the court at the opening of the regular session thereof, or at such session or time as the jurors may be ordered to attend, specifying the names of those who were summoned, and the manner in which each person was notified.

Legislation § 225. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "As soon as he receives the list of jurors drawn, the sheriff must summon the persons named therein to attend, by giving personal notice to each, or by leaving a written notice at his place of residence, with some person of proper age, and must return the list to the court at the opening thereof, specifying the names of those who were summoned and the manner in which each person was notified."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 48.

3. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 931, adding "or by mailing such notice by registered mail."

Duty of sheriff. Whether a drawn or a special panel, the sheriff must, in the first instance, execute the order of court in serving the summons; where he was disqualified, the venire, at common law, was directed to the coroner. People v. Vasquez, 9 Cal. App. 545; 99 Pac. 982.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The alleged disqualification of one of the jurors consists in the fact that his name was not on the venire returned by the sheriff. It appears, however, that he had been summoned at the commencement of the term, and that his name was entered on the minutes, and placed in the box, and drawn for the trial, in the same manner as the other jurors were drawn. The objection, if it had any validity, should have been urged at the trial; it comes too late after verdict. The object of the law is to secure honest and intelligent men for the trial, and it is of no practical consequence in what order or at what time during the term they are summoned. It would be productive of great hardship to permit a second trial upon a ground so technical and unsubstantial. Unless the irregularity complained of in the formation of the jury goes to the merits of the trial, or leads to the inference of improper influence upon their conduct, their verdict should not be disturbed. King v. Hart, 4 Barn. & Ald. 430; United States v. Gilbert, 2 Sum. 19; Fed. Cas. No. 15204; People v. Ransom, 7 Wend. 417; Amherst v. Hadley, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 38; Commonwealth v. Justices of Court of Sessions, 5 Mass. 435. In Page v. Inhabitants of Danvers, 7 Met. (Mass.) 327, it was objected that certain of the jurors who sat in the case were not selected in conformity with law, and were not qualified to act, and this fact the parties had for the first time learned since the trial and decision; but the court, per Shaw, C. J., said: "If there was any irregularity in the manner of selecting the jury, and if this would have been good ground of exception, if seasonably taken, still it came too late, after proceeding to trial. The ground is, not that the jurors were interested or prejudiced, or otherwise personally improper, but that there was a mere irregularity, not apparently affecting the merits. Such an objection, if available at all, must be seasonably taken. This results from strong considerations of policy and expediency, rendering it an imperative rule of practice." Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 537.

§ 226. Of drawing and summoning jurors to attend forthwith. Whenever jurors are not drawn or summoned to attend any court of record or session thereof, or a sufficient number of jurors fail to appear, such court may order a sufficient number to be forthwith drawn and summoned to attend the court, or it may, by an order entered in its minutes, direct the sheriff, or an elisor chosen by the court, forthwith to summon so many good and lawful men of the county, or city and county, to serve as jurors, as may be required, and in either case such jurors must be summoned in the manner provided in the preceding section.

Elisor. Appointment of, on foreclosure of mortgage. See post, § 726.

Legislation § 226. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Whenever jurors are not drawn and summoned to attend any court of record, or a sufficient number of jurors fail to appear, such court may, in its discretion, order a sufficient number to be forthwith drawn and summoned to attend such court; or it may, by an order entered on its minutes, direct the sheriff of the county forthwith to summon so many good and lawful men of his county to serve as jurors as the case may require. And in either case such jurors must be summoned in the manner provided by the preceding section."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 288, (1) changing the word "such" to "the," in the words "attend the court"; (2) adding the words "an elisor selected by the court, or," before "the sheriff"; and (3) changing the word "his" to "the," in words "men of the county."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 48.

Elisor. An elisor is a person appointed to serve process or return a jury, when the sheriff and the coroner are incompetent (Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341); but, unless both are disqualified, the court has no power to appoint an elisor (Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 362; People v. Fellows, 122 Cal. 233; 54 Pac. 830; People v. Vasquez, 9 Cal. App. 545; 99 Pac. 982); and before appointing an elisor, the court should require a showing that both are disqualified (Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341; People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 494; 20 Pac. 56; People v. Yeaton, 75 Cal. 415; 17 Pac. 544); but if it is admitted that the sheriff is disqualified, and the coroner has acted on the jury of inquest, an elisor must be appointed (People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495); and also where the sheriff is an interested party and there is no coroner (Pacheco v. Hunsacker, 14 Cal. 120), and also where the coroner is unable to act by reason of sickness. People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652; 40 L. R. A. 269; 49 Pac. 1049. The sheriff being disqualified, his deputies are likewise disqualified. People v. Le Doux, 155 Cal. 535; 102 Pac. 517.

Special venire. Where a sufficient number of jurors fail to appear, of those summoned and returned according to law, the court may fill the panel, by special venire, from the body of the county (Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272; People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425; 30 Pac. 581; People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80; 45 Pac. 175; People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495); and it is immaterial whether the order for the special venire is made before or after the commencement of the sitting of the court (People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344; People v. Ah Chung, 54 Cal. 398); and any objection to the order directing the jury to be summoned must be made by challenge to the panel. People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 355. The court has discretion to order a jury drawn from the box, or to issue a special venire (Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272; People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302; 39 Pac. 617; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495), and it is no ground of objection that the regular jury was not exhausted. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495. While the better practice would be to fill the panel from the jury-box in such cases (Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272; People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354; 75 Pac. 1093), yet it is not even an irregularity to order a special venire. Leahy v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 150; 3 Pac. 622; People v. Prather, 134 Cal. 436; 66 Pac. 589, 863. The court also has power to direct a special venire, where the jurors, though drawn, have not been summoned (People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 45; People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495), and where no list of persons to serve during the year has been made by the board of supervisors. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179; 48 Pac. 75; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495; People v. Prather, 134 Cal. 436; 66 Pac. 589, 863. As the matter of excusing jurors is largely in the discretion of the court, too great liberality in excusing them does not affect the regularity of the special venire. People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80; 45 Pac. 175.

§ 227. Of summoning jurors to complete a panel. When there are not competent jurors enough present to form a panel the court may direct the sheriff, or an elisor chosen by the court, to summon a sufficient number of persons having the qualifications of jurors to complete the panel from the body of the county, or city and county, and not from the bystanders; and the sheriff or elisor shall summon the number so ordered accordingly and return the names to the court.

Legislation § 227. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 589), and then read: "When there are not competent jurors enough present to form a panel, the court may direct the sheriff or other proper officer to summon a sufficient number of persons, having the qualification of jurors, to complete the panel, from the body of the county and not from the bystanders, and the sheriff must summon the number so ordered, accordingly, and return the names to the court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 288, (1) changing the words "or other proper officer" to "or an elisor selected by the court," and (2) adding the words "or elisor" before "must summon."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 48.

Special venire to complete panel. See note ante, § 226.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See notes to §§ 214 and 225, ante.

§ 228. Compensation of elisor. An elisor who shall, by order of a court of record, summon persons to serve as jurors, shall be entitled to a reasonable compensation for his services, which must be fixed by the court and paid out of the county, or city and county treasury, and out of the general fund thereof.

Legislation § 228. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 88, and read as at present, except that (1) the word "the" was used before "order," and (2) the section ended with the words "paid out of the county treasury."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49.

ARTICLE VI.

OF SUMMONING JURORS FOR COURTS NOT OF RECORD.

§ 230. Jurors for justices' or police courts.
§ 231. How to be summoned.
§ 232. Officer's return.

§ 230. Jurors for justices' or police courts. When jurors are required in any of the justices' courts, or in any police or other inferior court, they shall, upon order of the justice, or any one of the justices where there is more than one, or of the judge thereof, be summoned by the sheriff, constable, marshal, or policeman of the jurisdiction.

Legislation § 230. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "When jurors are required in any police or justice's court, they must, upon the order of the judge or justice thereof, be summoned by the sheriff, marshal, policeman, or constable of the jurisdiction."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49, to read as at present, except that (1) it had the word "the" before "order," and (2) the word "of" was printed "if" before the words "the judge."

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 680; the code commissioner saying in his note, "The amendment consists in changing the word 'if' to 'of' to correct an error."

By whom summoned. It is the duty of the justice or judge ordering the jury to say, in the first instance, by whom it shall be summoned; and any error therein is not jurisdictional. Wittman v. Police Court, 145 Cal. 474; 78 Pac. 1052.

§ 231. How to be summoned. Such jurors must be summoned from the persons competent to serve as jurors, residents of the city and county, township, city, or town in which such court has jurisdiction, by notifying them orally that they are summoned, and of the time and place at which their attendance is required.

Legislation § 231. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Such jurors must be summoned from the persons resident of the city or township, competent to serve as jurors, by notifying them orally that they are so summoned, and of the time and place at which their attendance is required."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49.

§ 232. Officer's return. The officer summoning such jurors shall, at the time fixed in the order for their appearance, return it to the court with a list of the persons summoned indorsed thereon.

Legislation § 232. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The officer summoning such jurors must, at the time fixed in the order for their appearance, return it, with a list of the persons summoned indorsed thereon."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49.

ARTICLE VII.

OF SUMMONING JURIES OF INQUEST.

§ 235. How to be summoned.

§ 235. How to be summoned. Juries of inquest shall be summoned by the officer before whom the proceedings in which they are to sit are to be had, or by any sheriff, constable, or policeman, from the persons competent to serve as jurors, resident of the county, or city and county, by notifying them orally that they are so summoned, and of the time and place at which their attendance is required.

Legislation § 235. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Juries of inquest must be summoned by the officer before whom the proceedings are had, or any sheriff, policeman, or constable, from the persons resident of the county competent to serve as jurors, by notifying them orally that they are so summoned, and of the time and place at which their attendance is required."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49.

ARTICLE VIII.

OBEDIENCE TO SUMMONS, HOW ENFORCED.

§ 238. Attachment and fine.

§ 238. Attachment and fine. Any juror summoned, who willfully and without reasonable excuse fails to attend, may be attached and compelled to attend; and the court may also impose a fine not exceeding fifty dollars, upon which execution may issue. If the juror was not personally served, the fine must not be imposed until upon an order to show cause an opportunity has been offered the juror to be heard.

Legislation § 238. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 630.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 49, changing the words "one hundred dollars" to "fifty dollars."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 630.

ARTICLE IX.

OF IMPANELING GRAND JURIES.

§ 241. Grand juries, when and by whom impaneled.
§ 242. How constituted.
§ 243. Manner of impaneling prescribed in Penal Code.

§ 241. Grand juries, when and by whom impaneled. Every superior court, whenever in the opinion of the court the public interest requires it, must make and file with the county clerk, an order directing a jury to be drawn, and designate the number, which, in case of a grand jury, shall not be less than twenty-five nor more than thirty. In all counties there shall be at least one grand jury drawn and impaneled in each year. Such order must designate the time at which the drawing will take place. The names of such jurors shall be drawn, the list of names certified and summoned, as provided for drawing and summoning trial jurors; and the names of any persons drawn, who may not be impaneled upon the grand jury, may be again placed in the grand-jury box.

Summoning grand jury. Const., art. i, § 8.

Legislation § 241. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "At the opening of each regular term of the county court (unless otherwise directed by the judge), and as often thereafter as to the judge may seem proper, a grand jury may be impaneled."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 50, to read: "Every superior court, whenever in the opinion of the court the public interests may require it, must make and file with the county clerk of their respective counties an order directing a jury to be drawn, and designating the number which, in case of a grand jury, shall not be less than twenty-five nor more than thirty. In all counties having less than three superior judges there shall be one grand jury drawn and impaneled in each year, and in all counties having three or more superior judges there shall be two grand juries drawn and impaneled in each year. Such order must designate the time at which the drawing will take place. The names of such jurors shall be drawn, the list of names certified and summoned as provided for drawing and summoning trial jurors; and the names of any persons drawn who may not be impaneled upon the grand jury may be again placed in the 'jury-box.'"

3. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 71, (1) transposing the words "may" and "must" in the second line, thus changing the words to "must require it, may make" (sic); (2) inserting "court" between the words "superior judges," in both instances; and (3) inserting "grand" before "jury-box," in last line.

4. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 122; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 139.

Impanelment. A grand jury impaneled in accordance with this section and § 226, ante, is valid. People v. McDonnell, 47 Cal. 134; Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272. The grand jury was formerly a part of the old county court system. Halsey v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 71; 91 Pac. 987.

Time of drawing, and official existence. The time of drawing and of the official existence of the grand jury is not fixed. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541, 545; 11 Pac. 240. A grand jury, regularly impaneled and organized, does not become discharged, by operation of law, by the mere selection, listing, and returning of the grand jurors for the succeeding year. Halsey v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 71; 91 Pac. 987.

§ 242. How constituted. When, of the persons summoned as grand jurors and not excused, nineteen are present, they shall constitute the grand jury. If more than nineteen of such persons are present, the clerk shall write their names on separate ballots, which he must fold so that the names cannot be seen, place them in a box, and draw out nineteen of them, and the persons whose names are on the ballots so drawn shall constitute the grand jury. If less than nineteen of such persons are present, the panel may be filled as provided in section two hundred and twenty-six of this code. And whenever, of the persons summoned to complete a grand jury, more shall attend than are required, the requisite number shall be obtained by writing the names of those summoned and not excused on ballots, depositing them in a box, and drawing as above provided.

Legislation § 242. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 634), and then read: "When, of the jurors summoned, not less than thirteen nor more than fifteen attend, they shall constitute the grand jury. If more than fifteen attend, the clerk must call over the list summoned, and the fifteen first answering shall constitute the grand jury. If less than thirteen attend, the panel may be filled to fifteen as provided in section two hundred and twenty-six."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 88, to read as at present, except that (1) in the first line the word "persons" was changed from "jurors," and the words "as grand jurors" were added after "summoned"; (2) the words "clerk shall" were changed from "clerk must"; and (3) the words "of this code" were added after "section two hundred and twenty-six."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 50.

Special venire to complete panel. For any defect in the original panel, a special venire may be ordered (Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; 10 Pac. 272); and where the impanelment differs only in form from the requirements of the statute, it will not vitiate a panel as made up finally from a special venire. People v. Prather, 134 Cal. 436; 66 Pac. 589, 863; People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302; 39 Pac. 617.

Number of grand jurors. Where nineteen persons are present, they constitute a grand jury, and should the number be less, the panel may be filled by special venire. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341. The number of grand jurors, prior to the amendment of this section in 1876, was not less than thirteen nor more than fifteen. People v. Hunter, 54 Cal. 65.

§ 243. Manner of impaneling prescribed in Penal Code. Thereafter such proceedings shall be had in impaneling the grand jury as are prescribed in part two of the Penal Code.

Formation of grand jury. See Pen. Code, §§ 894–901.

Legislation § 243. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 50, in amending Part I.

ARTICLE X.

OF IMPANELING TRIAL JURIES IN COURTS OF RECORD.

§ 246. Clerk to call list of jurors summoned.
§ 247. Manner of impaneling prescribed in part two.
§ 248. Counties having more than one judge.

§ 246. Clerk to call list of jurors summoned. At the opening of court on the day trial jurors have been summoned to appear, the clerk shall call the names of those summoned, and the court may then hear the excuses of jurors summoned. The clerk shall then write the names of the jurors present and not excused upon separate slips or ballots of paper, and fold such slips so that the names are concealed, and there, in the presence of the court, deposit the slips or ballots in a box, which must be kept sealed or locked until ordered by the court to be opened.

Legislation § 246. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and read as at present, except that (1) the word "shall," after "clerk," was changed from "must," in both instances; (2) the words "there," before "in the presence," was changed from "then"; and (3) it did not contain the words "or locked," after the word "sealed."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 50.

All names must be placed in the jury-box. The names of all jurors must be put in the jury-box at the beginning of the impanelment of the jury, unless some of the jurors are actually engaged in deliberating upon a verdict at the time; and when discharged from that verdict, it is the duty of the clerk to return their names to the jury-box, and if this is not done, it is the duty of the court to discharge those jurors who have already been sworn on such latter jury and commence the impanelment anew. People v. Edwards, 101 Cal. 543; 36 Pac. 7.

§ 247. Manner of impaneling prescribed in part two. Whenever thereafter a civil action is called by the court for trial, and a jury is required, such proceedings shall be had in impaneling the trial jury as are prescribed in part two of this code. If the action be a criminal one, the jury shall be impaneled as prescribed in the Penal Code.

Formation of jury.
1. In civil action. See post, §§ 600–604.
2. Criminal cases. See Pen. Code, §§ 1055–1089.

Legislation § 247. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "When thereafter an action is called for trial by the court, such proceedings shall be had in impaneling the trial jury as are prescribed in Part II of this code."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51.

General examination of jurors. See note ante, § 198.

§ 248. Counties having more than one judge. In any county having two or more judges of the superior court, a separate panel of jurors may be drawn, summoned and impaneled for each judge, or one panel may be drawn, summoned and impaneled by any one of the judges for use in the trial of cases before any two or more of the judges, as occasion may require. In such counties, when a panel of jurors is in attendance for service before one or more of the judges, whether impaneled for common use or not, the whole or any number of the jurors from such panel may be required to attend and serve in the trial of cases, or to complete a panel, or jury, before any other of the judges. If one of the judges has a separate panel of jurors, no part thereof shall, without his consent, be taken to serve before another judge.

Legislation § 248. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 680; the code commissioner saying, "A new section settling the practice with reference to panels of jurors in the superior court in counties having two or more judges of that court."

Box must be full. A defendant in a criminal case is entitled to have the jury-box full before exercising his peremptory challenges; and the panel, if incomplete, may be completed from the trial-jury panel summoned in another department of the same superior court. People v. Loomer, 13 Cal. App. 654; 110 Pac. 466.

ARTICLE XI.

OF IMPANELING TRIAL JURIES IN COURTS NOT OF RECORD.

§ 250. Proceedings in forming jury.
§ 251. Manner of impaneling.

§ 250. Proceedings in forming jury. At the time appointed for a jury trial in justices', police, or other inferior courts, the list of jurors summoned must be called, and the names of those attending and not excused must be written upon separate slips of paper, folded so as to conceal the names, and placed in a box, from which the trial jury must be drawn.

Legislation § 250. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 588), and then read: "At the time appointed for a jury trial, in police or justices' courts, the list of jurors summoned must be called, and the names of those attending must be written upon separate slips of paper, folded so as to conceal the names, and placed in a box, from which the trial jury may be drawn."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51.

§ 251. Manner of impaneling. Thereafter, if the action is a criminal one, the jury must be impaneled as provided in the Penal Code; if a civil one, as provided in part two of this code.

Similar provision. See ante, § 247.

Legislation § 251. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51, in amending Part I.

ARTICLE XII.

OF IMPANELING JURIES OF INQUEST.

§ 254. Manner of impaneling.

§ 254. Manner of impaneling. The manner of impaneling juries of inquest is prescribed in the provisions of the different codes relating to such inquests.

Legislation § 254. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The mode and manner of impaneling juries of inquest are provided for in the provisions of the different codes relating to such inquests."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The commissioners reported the preceding chapter as a substitute for the then existing statutes on the same subject. We had a jury law applicable to thirty-three counties; another, entirely different in its provisions, applicable to sixteen counties; and still another, differing from both, applicable to San Francisco alone (Stats. 1861, p. 573; Stats. 1863, p. 630; Stats. 1864, p. 524); and various statutes of local application.

CHAPTER II.

COURT COMMISSIONERS.

§ 258. Appointment and qualifications.
§ 259. Powers of court commissioners.

§ 258. Appointment and qualifications. The superior court of every city and county in the state may appoint six commissioners, to be designated each as "court commissioner" of such city and county; and the superior court of every other county in the state may appoint one commissioner, to be designated as "court commissioner" of such county. Such commissioners shall be citizens of the United States, and residents of the city and county, or county, in which they are appointed, and hold offices during the pleasure of the courts appointing them.

Court commissioners. See Const., art. vi, § 14.

Legislation § 258. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 338; Stats. 1864, p. 229), and then read: "The district courts may appoint, for each county of their respective districts, a commissioner, to be designated as 'court commissioner' of the county. If portions of a single county are assigned to different districts, then a commissioner may be appointed to reside in each portion of the county thus assigned."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51.

§ 259. Powers of court commissioners. Every court commissioner shall have power:

1. To hear and determine ex parte motions for orders and writs, except orders or writs of injunction in the superior court of the county, or city and county, for which he is appointed; provided, that he shall have power to hear and determine such motions only in the absence or inability to act of the judge or judges of the superior court of the county, or city and county;

2. To take proof and report his conclusions thereon as to any matter of fact other than an issue of fact raised by the pleadings, upon which information is required by the court; but any party to the proceedings may except to such report within five days after written notice that the same has been filed, and may argue his exceptions before the court on giving notice of motion for that purpose;

3. To take and approve bonds and undertakings whenever the same may be required in actions or proceedings in such superior courts, and to examine the sureties thereon when an exception has been taken to their sufficiency, and to administer oaths and affirmations, and take affidavits and depositions in any action or proceeding in any of the courts of this state; or in any matter or proceeding whatever, and to take acknowledgments and proof of deeds, mortgages, and other instruments requiring proof or acknowledgment for any purpose under the laws of this state;

4. To charge and collect the same fees for the performance of official acts as are now or may hereafter be allowed by law to notaries public in this state for like services; provided, that this subdivision shall not apply to any services of such commissioner, the compensation for which is expressly fixed by law;

5. To provide an official seal, upon which must be engraved the words "court commissioner" and the name of the county, or city and county, in which said commissioner resides;

6. To authenticate with his official seal his official acts.

Judicial powers, persons having, order enforced before. Ante, § 128, subd. 2.

References and trials by referees. See post, §§ 638 et seq.

Subd. 4. Fees of notaries public. See Pol. Code, § 798.

Justices of the peace and court commissioners are the only judicial officers authorized to receive fees. Const., art. vi, § 15.

Subd. 5. Official seals, defined. See ante, § 14.

Legislation § 259. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863, p. 338; Stats. 1864, p. 229), and then read: "Every such commissioner has power: 1. To hear and determine ex parte motions for orders and writs (except orders or writs of injunction) in the district and county courts of the county for which he is appointed; 2. To take proof and report his conclusions thereon, as to any matter of fact (other than an issue of fact raised in the pleadings), upon which information is required by the court; but any party to the proceedings may except to such report within four days after written notice that the same has been filed, and may argue his exceptions before the court, on giving notice of motion for that purpose; 3. To take and approve bonds and undertakings whenever the same may be required in actions or proceedings in such district and county courts, and to examine the sureties thereon when an exception has been taken to their sufficiency, and to administer oaths and affirmations, and take affidavits and depositions in any action or proceeding in any of the courts of this state, or in any matter or proceeding whatever."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 98, to read as at present, except that (1) the introductory paragraph, "Every court commissioner shall have power," evidently through some error, was omitted; (2) in subd. 1, (a) the words "superior court" were then printed "district and county courts," (b) and the words "or city and county," before "for which," had not then been added; (3) in subd. 2, the words "five days" were printed "four days"; (4) in subd. 3, the words "superior courts" were then printed "district and county courts"; (5) in subd. 4, the word "now" was not used before "expressly"; and (6) subd. 5 then read: "5. To provide, at the expense of the proper county, an official seal, upon which must be engraved the arms of this state, the words 'court commissioner,' and the name of the county in which such commissioner resides."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 51.

Power of court commissioner. The power of a court commissioner cannot be enlarged by consent. Jackson v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 123 Cal. 97; 55 Pac. 788.

Ex parte motions. The court commissioner has no power to hear a motion (Quiggle v. Trumbo, 56 Cal. 626), or to make an order in reference to the dissolution of an injunction, unless the court refers such motion to him. Stone v. Bunker Hill Copper etc. Mining Co., 28 Cal. 497.

Trial of issue. The court commissioner, as such, has no authority to try an issue of fact raised in the proceedings (Jackson v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 123 Cal. 97; 55 Pac. 788); but the taking of an account by reference in an action for an accounting, where the issue is the plaintiff's right to an accounting, is not a trial of an issue, within the meaning of the code. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393.

Approval of bonds. The court commissioner has no power to approve the bond of a receiver, whom he was without jurisdiction to appoint. Quiggle v. Trumbo, 56 Cal. 626.

Administration of oaths. This is a general authority given to executive and judicial officers, and cannot be limited by judicial construction to particular kinds of oaths. Haile v. Smith, 128 Cal. 415; 60 Pac. 1032.

Acknowledgments. Acknowledgments may be taken before the commissioner. Malone v. Bosch, 104 Cal. 680; 38 Pac. 516; People v. Pacific Improvement Co., 130 Cal. 442; 62 Pac. 739.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 338; Stats. 1864, p. 229.

Subd. 1. "Except orders, or writs of injunction," the court commissioner has no jurisdiction to hear motions relative to the dissolution of an injunction. Stone v. Bunker Hill Copper etc. Mining Co., 28 Cal. 497. Whether an appeal may be taken from an order of a court commissioner dissolving an injunction, without first applying to the district court to correct the error, was a question stated by the court, but not decided. Id. It was held, that under the Practice Act, § 195, as it existed before the code (compare § 661 of this code), the court commissioner was authorized to extend the time for filing the statement on motion for new trial, twenty days in addition to the five or ten days given by statute.

Commissioners in equity were purposely omitted by the legislature.

TITLE IV.

MINISTERIAL OFFICERS OF COURTS OF JUSTICE.

Chapter I. Of Ministerial Officers Generally. § 262.
II. Secretaries and Bailiffs of the Supreme Court. §§ 265, 266.
III. Phonographic Reporters. §§ 268–274b.

SECRETARIES AND BAILIFFS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

§ 265. Appointment.
§ 266. Tenure of office, and duties.

§ 265. Appointment. The justices of the supreme court may appoint two secretaries and two bailiffs, who shall be citizens of the United States and of this state.

Legislation § 265. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The justices of the supreme court may appoint a secretary and bailiff."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 53.

§ 266. Tenure of office, and duties. The secretaries and bailiffs shall hold their offices at the pleasure of the justices, and shall perform such duties as may be required of them by the court or any justice thereof.

Legislation § 266. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and as then enacted the words "secretaries and bailiffs shall hold" read "secretary and bailiff hold," and "shall perform" read "must perform."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 53.

CHAPTER III.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

§ 268. Phonographic reporters for supreme court, where provided for.

§ 274. Fees.
§ 274a. Transcribing of opinions and instructions, a county charge.
§ 274b. Fees and compensation of phonographic reporter.

§ 268. Phonographic reporters for supreme court, where provided for. Phonographic reporters for the supreme court are provided for in part three of the Political Code.

Phonographic reporters of supreme court.
1. Salary. See Pol. Code, § 739.
2. Appointment. See Pol. Code, § 769.
3. Duty. See Pol. Code, § 770.

Legislation § 268. Added by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 53, in amending Part I.

§ 269. Phonographic reporters for superior courts, their appointment, and duties. The judge or judges of any superior court in the state may appoint a competent phonographic reporter, or as many such reporters as there are judges, to be known as official reporter or reporters of such court, and to hold office during the pleasure of the judge or judges appointing them. Such reporter, or any one of them, where there are two or more, must, at the request of either party, or of the court in a civil action or proceeding, and on the order of the court, the district attorney, or the attorney for defendant in a criminal action or proceeding, take down in shorthand all the testimony, the objections made, the rulings of the court, the exceptions taken, all arraignments, pleas and sentences of defendants in criminal cases, the arguments of the prosecuting attorney to the jury, and all statements and remarks made and oral instructions given by the judge; and if directed by the court, or requested by either party, must, within such reasonable time after the trial of such case as the court may designate, write out the same, or such specific portions thereof as may be requested, in plain and legible longhand, or by typewriter, or other printing-machine, and certify to the same as being correctly reported and transcribed, and when directed by the court, file the same with the clerk of the court.

Legislation § 269. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1865–66, p. 232), and then read: "The judge of each judicial district, and each county judge, may appoint a competent shorthand reporter, to hold office during the pleasure of the judge, and who must, at the request of either party, or in the discretion of the court, in a civil action or proceeding, or criminal action or proceeding, on the order of the court, the district attorney, or the counsel for the defendant, take down in shorthand all the testimony, the rulings of the court, the exceptions taken, and oral instructions given, and must, within five days, or such reasonable time after the trial of such case as the court may designate, write out the same in plain, legible, longhand writing, verify and file it, together with the original shorthand writing, with the clerk of the court in which the case was tried. The reporter of the county court of the city and county of San Francisco is ex officio reporter of the probate and municipal criminal court of such city and county."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 288, to read: "The judge of each court of record may appoint a competent shorthand reporter, to hold office during the pleasure of the judge. Such reporter must, at the request of either party, or of the court, in a civil action or proceeding, and on the order of the court, the district attorney, or the counsel for the defendant in a criminal action or proceeding, take down in shorthand all the testimony, the objections made, the rulings of the court, the exceptions taken, and oral instructions given, and if directed by the court, or requested by either party, must within such reasonable time after the trial of such case as the court may designate, write out the same in plain legible longhand, and verify and file it with the clerk of the court in which the case was tried."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 53, to read: "The judge or judges of any superior court in the state may appoint a competent phonographic reporter, or as many such reporters as there are judges, to be known as official reporter or reporters of such court, and to hold office during the pleasure of the judge or judges appointing them. Such reporter, or any one of them, where there are two or more, shall, at the request of either party, or of the court in a civil action or proceeding, and on the order of the court, the district attorney, or the attorney for defendant in a criminal action or proceeding, take down in shorthand all the testimony, the objections made, the rulings of the court, the exceptions taken, and oral instructions given, and if directed by the court, or requested by either party, shall, within such reasonable time after the trial of such case as the court may designate, write out the same in plain, legible longhand, and verify and file it with the clerk of the court in which the case was tried."

5. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 234.

Transcription of notes. The reporter is not required by this section to transcribe or file his notes, until his proper fees therefor have been paid or tendered (Richards v. Superior Court, 145 Cal. 38; 78 Pac. 244); but on an appeal taken under §§ 953a and 953b, post, it is his duty to make the transcript within twenty days after notice of appeal has been given, and to file such transcript with the clerk; he cannot refuse to file it because his fees are unpaid, as he has recourse against the sureties on the undertaking given to secure the payment of such fees. Gjurich v. Fieg, 160 Cal. 331; 116 Pac. 745. The official stenographer need not report the arguments of counsel. Koyer v. Willmon, 12 Cal. App. 87; 106 Pac. 599.

Stenographer for grand jury. The grand jury is authorized to appoint, as stenographic reporter, any competent stenographer; the one selected need not be the official reporter of the superior court, appointed under this section and §§ 270, 271, post. People v. Delhantie, 163 Cal. 461; 125 Pac. 1066.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1866, p. 232. See Stats. 1871–72, p. 400, "An act providing for the appointment of a reporter in the first judicial district of this state," approved March 16, 1872.

§ 270. Qualifications and test of competency. Pro tempore reporters. No person shall be appointed to the position of official reporter of any court in this state, except upon satisfactory evidence of good moral character, and without being first examined as to his competency by at least three members of the bar practicing in said court, such members to be designated by the judge or judges of said court. The committee of members of the bar so designated shall, upon the request of the judge or judges of said court, examine any person as to his qualifications whom said judge or judges may wish to appoint as official reporter; and no person shall be appointed to such position upon whose qualifications such committee shall not have reported favorably. The test of competency before such committee shall be as follows: the party examined must write in the presence of said committee at the rate of at least one hundred and fifty words per minute, for five consecutive minutes, upon matter not previously written by or known to him, immediately read the same back to the committee, and transcribe the same into longhand writing, plainly and with accuracy. If he pass such test satisfactorily, the committee shall furnish him with a written certificate of that fact, signed by at least a majority of the members of the committee, which certificate shall be filed among the records of the court. No official reporter of any court or official reporter pro tempore shall be competent to act as official reporter in any court of the state who shall have failed and neglected to transcribe any notes in a criminal proceeding or action on appeal and which notes are required by law to be by him transcribed until he shall have fully completed and filed all transcription of his notes in any criminal case on appeal required by law to be by him transcribed.

Legislation § 270. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 402, as § 272, and then read: "No person shall be appointed to, or be retained in the position of official reporter of any court in this state, without being first examined as to his competency by at least three members of the bar practicing in said court, such members to be designated by the judge of said court. The committee so selected shall, upon the request of the judge of said court, examine any person as to his qualifications whom said judge may wish to appoint or retain as official reporter, and no person shall be appointed to, or retained in such position, whose qualifications said committee shall not have reported favorably. The test of competency before such committee shall be as follows: The party examined must write, in the presence of said committee, at the rate of at least one hundred and forty words per minute for five consecutive minutes, upon matter not previously written by him, and transcribe the same into longhand writing with accuracy. If he pass said test satisfactorily, the committee shall furnish him with a written certificate of that fact, signed by at least a majority of the members of the committee, which certificate shall be filed in the records of the court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 53, and renumbered § 270, and then read as amendment of 1909, except for the addition made in that year.

3. Amended by Stats. 1909, c. 708, adding the final sentence, beginning "No official reporter."

The original § 270 (now § 273, post) made the transcript of the evidence by the reporter prima facie evidence of its correctness.

Qualifications of reporter. This section relates exclusively to the official reporter of superior courts, and has no application to reporters appointed by magistrates at preliminary examination; in that case the only provision is, that he be competent. People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423; 59 Pac. 779; People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441; 76 Pac. 45.

Stenographer for grand jury. See note ante, § 269.

§ 271. Attention to duties. Reporters pro tempore. The official reporter of any superior court shall attend to the duties of his office in person, except when excused for good and sufficient reason by order of the court, which order shall be entered upon the minutes of the court. Employment in his professional capacity elsewhere shall not be deemed a good and sufficient reason for such excuse. When the official reporter of any court has been excused in the manner provided in this section, the court may appoint an official reporter pro tempore, who shall perform the same duties and receive the same compensation during the term of his employment as the official reporter.

Legislation § 271. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 401, as § 273.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 54, and (1) renumbered § 271; (2) in the first line, the words "superior court shall" changed from "district court must"; (3) the article "a" omitted before "good and"; (4) the words "judge of said" omitted before "court may appoint"; and (5) the phraseology after the word "compensation" changed from "as the official reporter, and whose report shall have the same legal effect as the report of the official reporter."

The original § 271 (now § 274, post) was based on Stats. 1868, p. 45, and provided for compensation of reporters, and was repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 21, in amending Part I.

Duties of reporter. The only duties devolving upon an official reporter are prescribed by this section. People v. Lon Me, 49 Cal. 353; Charnock v. Rose, 70 Cal. 189; 11 Pac. 625.

Application of section. See note ante, § 270.

§ 272. Oath of office. The official reporter of any court, or official reporter pro tempore, shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take and subscribe the constitutional oath of office.

Legislation § 272. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 403, as § 274, and then read: "The official reporter of any court, or official reporter pro tem., must, before entering on the duties of his office, take and subscribe the following oath: 'I do swear (or affirm) that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of official reporter (or official reporter pro tem.) of the —— court, according to the best of my ability.'"

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 54, and renumbered § 272.

The original § 272 (now § 270, ante) provided for examination of official reporters.

Application of section. This section has no application to a reporter appointed by a magistrate at a preliminary examination. People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441; 76 Pac. 45.

Oath of office. The official reporter is an officer of the court, and is required to take the oath of office (Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806); which oath is for all cases, and not for a particular case, in which he may take, transcribe, and certify the testimony and proceedings. Reid v. Reid, 73 Cal. 206; 14 Pac. 781.

§ 273. Reports prima facie correct statements. The report of the official reporter, or official reporter pro tempore, of any court, duly appointed and sworn, when transcribed and certified as being a correct transcript of the testimony and proceedings in the case, is prima facie evidence of such testimony and proceedings.

Legislation § 273. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 270 (based on Stats. 1865–66, p. 232), and read: "His report, written out in longhand writing, is prima facie a correct statement of the evidence and proceedings."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 400, to read: "The report of the official reporter, when appointed and acting in accordance with the provisions of sections two hundred and seventy-two and two hundred and seventy-three of this code, and not otherwise, written out in longhand writing, and certified as being a correct transcript of the testimony and proceedings in the case, shall be prima facie a correct statement of such testimony and proceedings."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 54, renumbered § 273, and then read: "The report of the official reporter, or official reporter pro tempore, of any court, duly appointed and sworn, when written out in longhand writing and certified as being a correct transcript of the testimony and proceedings in the case, shall be prima facie a correct statement of such testimony and proceedings."

5. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 234.

Transcription is evidence. Prior to the amendment of this section, the reporter's notes were not prima facie evidence of the testimony, but only "prima facie a correct statement" of the evidence. Reid v. Reid, 73 Cal. 206; 14 Pac. 781; Estate of Benton, 131 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 775. Before the enactment of the code, by Stats. 1867–68, p. 425, the reporter's notes were made prima facie evidence in felony cases, in certain counties; it was, however, held that such notes were only prima facie evidence in the court where taken, and could not be considered in the supreme court. People v. Woods, 43 Cal. 176; People v. Armstrong, 44 Cal. 326. In criminal actions, a transcript of the reporter's notes, certified and filed as provided by law for the authentication of the testimony of witnesses at preliminary examinations, is placed upon the same footing as depositions, and is admissible in like cases. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301; 17 Pac. 214; Mattingly v. Nichols, 133 Cal. 332; 65 Pac. 748. In the settlement of a bill of exceptions, the judge may insert therein the instructions to the jury as actually given by him, if the reporter's transcription thereof is incorrect, as such transcription is only prima facie evidence. People v. Cox, 76 Cal. 281; 18 Pac. 332; People v. Leary, 105 Cal. 486; 39 Pac. 24. No further identification is required, where it is admitted that the transcript contains a correct statement of the testimony. Carpenter v. Ashley, 15 Cal. App. 461; 115 Pac. 268.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1866, p. 232.

§ 274. Fees. For his services, the official reporter shall receive the following fees, except in counties where a statute provides otherwise:

For reporting testimony and proceedings, ten dollars per day, which amount, when more than one case is reported in one day, must be apportioned by the court between the several cases;

For transcription, for one copy, twenty cents per hundred words; for two copies made at one time, fifteen cents each per hundred words; for three copies made at one time, eleven cents each per hundred words; for four copies made at one time, nine cents each per hundred words; and for five or more copies made at one time, eight cents each per hundred words.

In criminal cases, the fees for reporting and for transcripts ordered by the court to be made must be paid out of the county treasury upon the order of the court; provided, that when there is no official reporter in attendance, and a reporter pro tempore is appointed, his reasonable expenses for traveling and detention must be fixed and allowed by the court and paid in like manner.

In civil cases, the fees for reporting and for transcripts ordered by the court to be made must be paid by the parties in equal proportions, and either party may, at his option, pay the whole thereof; and, in either case, all amounts so paid by the party to whom costs are awarded must be taxed as costs in the case. The fees for transcripts and copies ordered by the parties must be paid by the party ordering the same. No reporter must be required to perform any service in a civil case until his fees therefor have been paid to him or deposited with the clerk of the court.

Legislation § 274. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, as § 271 (based on Stats. 1867–68, p. 455), and then read: "He shall receive, as compensation for his services, not exceeding ten dollars per day for taking notes, and not exceeding twenty cents per folio for transcription, to be paid by the party in whose favor judgment is rendered, and be taxed up by the clerk of the court as costs against the party against whom judgment is rendered. In case of failure of a jury to agree, the plaintiff must pay the reporter's fees accrued to that time. In cases where a transcript may be required by the court, the expense thereof must be paid equally by the respective parties to the action, or either of them, in the discretion of the court; and no verdict or judgment can be entered up, except the court shall otherwise order, until the reporter's fees are paid, or a sum equivalent thereto deposited with the clerk of the court. In no case shall the transcript be paid for unless specially ordered by either plaintiff or defendant, or by the court; nor shall the reporter be required, in any civil case, to transcribe his notes until the compensation per folio therefor be tendered to him or deposited in court for that purpose. In criminal cases, when the testimony has been taken down by order of the court, the compensation of the reporter must be fixed by the court and paid out of the treasury of the county in which the case is tried, upon the order of the court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 400, to read: "The official reporter shall receive as compensation for his services in civil proceedings, not exceeding ten dollars per day for taking notes, and not exceeding twenty cents per hundred words for transcription. The shorthand notes so taken shall, immediately after the cause is submitted, be filed with the clerk; but, for the purpose of writing out said notes, the reporter may withdraw the same for a reasonable time. The reporter's fees for taking notes in civil cases shall be paid by the party in whose favor judgment is rendered, and shall be taxed up by the clerk of the court as costs against the party against whom judgment is rendered. In case of the failure of a jury to agree, the plaintiff must pay the reporter's fees, for per diem, and for transcription ordered by plaintiff, which have accrued up to the time of the discharge of the jury. In cases where a transcript has been ordered by the court, the expense thereof must be paid equally by the respective parties to the action, or either of them, in the discretion of the court; and no verdict or judgment can be entered up, except the court shall otherwise order, until the reporter's fees are paid, or a sum equivalent thereto deposited with the clerk of the court. In no case shall a transcript be paid for, unless ordered by either the plaintiff or defendant, or by the court, nor shall the reporter be required, in any civil case, to transcribe his notes, until the compensation therefor be tendered him, or deposited in court for that purpose. The party ordering the reporter to transcribe any portion of the testimony or proceedings, shall pay the fees of the reporter therefor. In criminal cases, when the testimony has been taken down upon the order of the court, the compensation of the reporter must be fixed by the court, and paid out of the treasury of the county in which the case is tried, upon the order of the court."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 54, renumbered § 274, and then read: "The official reporter shall receive, as compensation for his services in civil actions and proceedings for taking notes, a sum, to be fixed by the court or a judge thereof, not exceeding ten dollars per day, and for transcription a sum to be in like manner fixed not exceeding twenty cents per hundred words; provided, that when said reporter performs services in taking notes in more than one cause on the same day, the court or judge thereof shall apportion to per diem allowed between the several actions or proceedings in which such notes are taken. The shorthand notes so taken shall immediately after the cause is submitted be filed with the clerk, but for the purpose of writing out said notes the reporter may withdraw the same for a reasonable time. The reporter's fees for taking notes in civil cases shall be paid by the party in whose favor judgment is rendered, and shall be taxed up by the clerk of the court as costs against the party against whom judgment is rendered. In case of the failure of a jury to agree, the plaintiff must pay the reporter's fees for time employed, and for transcription ordered by plaintiff which have accrued up to the time of the discharge of the jury. In cases where a transcript has been ordered by the court, the fees for transcription must be paid by the respective parties to the action in equal proportions, or by such of them and in such proportions as the court, in its discretion, may order; and no verdict or judgment shall be entered up, except the court shall otherwise order, until the reporter's fees are paid, or a sum equivalent thereto deposited with the clerk of the court therefor. In no case shall a transcript be paid for unless ordered either by the plaintiff or defendant, or by the court; nor shall the reporter be required in any civil case to transcribe his notes until the fees therefor be tendered him, or a sufficient amount to cover the same be deposited in court for that purpose. The party ordering the reporter to transcribe any portion of the testimony or proceedings, must pay the fees of the reporter therefor. In criminal cases, when the testimony has been taken down or transcribed upon the order of the court, the fees of the reporter shall be certified by the court, and paid out of the treasury of the county, or city and county, in which the case is tried, upon the order of the court."

4. Amended by Stats. 1885, p. 218, to read: "The official reporter shall receive as compensation for his services a monthly salary, to be fixed by the judge by an order duly entered on the minutes of the court, which salary shall be paid out of the treasury of the county in the same manner and at the same time as the salaries of county officers; provided, that said monthly salary for each superior court, or department thereof, shall not exceed the following maximum: In counties having a population of one hundred thousand and over, three hundred dollars; in counties having a population less than one hundred thousand and exceeding fifty thousand, two hundred and seventy-five dollars; in counties having a population less than fifty thousand and exceeding thirty thousand, two hundred and fifty dollars; in counties having a population less than thirty thousand and exceeding twenty thousand, two hundred and twenty-five dollars; in counties having a population less than twenty thousand and exceeding fifteen thousand, two hundred dollars; in counties having a population less than fifteen thousand and exceeding twelve thousand five hundred, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; in counties having a population less than twelve thousand five hundred and exceeding ten thousand, one hundred and fifty dollars; in counties having a population less than ten thousand and exceeding seven thousand five hundred, one hundred and twenty-five dollars; in counties having a population less than seven thousand five hundred and exceeding five thousand, one hundred dollars; and in counties having a population less than five thousand, seventy-five dollars; and, further provided, that where both parties to a civil action, or either, require the testimony therein to be written out in full as the trial progresses, the official reporter shall be allowed the extra expense occasioned, to be audited by the judge, and paid by the party or parties ordering the same; provided further, that in departments of superior courts devoted exclusively to the trial of criminal cases, the judge of the court shall, in addition, fix and allow a reasonable compensation for the transcription of testimony, to be paid out of the county, or city and county, treasury, upon the order of the judge. In civil cases in which the testimony is taken down by the official reporter, each party shall pay a per diem of two dollars and fifty cents before judgment or verdict therein is entered; and where the testimony is transcribed, the party or parties ordering it shall pay ten cents per folio for such transcription on delivery thereof; said per diem and transcription fees to be paid to the clerk of the court, and by him paid into the treasury of the county, and such portion as shall be paid by the prevailing party may be taxed as costs in the case. Where there is no regular official reporter, and one is appointed temporarily by the court, he shall receive for his services and expenses of attendance, in lieu of the salary provided in this section, such compensation as the court may deem reasonable; to be paid, if a civil case, by both parties, or either of them, as the judge shall direct; and, if a criminal case, to be paid out of the treasury of the county on the order of the court."

6. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 234.

Compensation of reporters. The amendment of 1885 provided that the compensation of a reporter should be by monthly salary, fixed by the judge; but this was declared unconstitutional, as imposing legislative functions upon the judiciary. Smith v. Strother, 68 Cal. 194; 8 Pac. 852; McAllister v. Hamlin, 83 Cal. 361; 23 Pac. 357; Dwyer v. Parker, 115 Cal. 544; 47 Pac. 372; Taylor v. McConigle, 120 Cal. 123; 52 Pac. 159; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597; 57 Pac. 585; Stevens v. Truman, 127 Cal. 155; 59 Pac. 397. The provision in the County Government Act, fixing the salary of official reporters, is invalid, for the reason that it is not germane to the title of the act, which was to create a "uniform system of county government." Pratt v. Browne, 135 Cal. 649; 67 Pac. 1082.

Official reporters. The term "official reporters" means, only reporters appointed by the superior court, and acting under their oath of office. Fox v. Lindley, 57 Cal. 650.

Transcription ordered by court. Where the transcript is ordered by the court, it must be paid for by the losing party, and becomes a necessary part of the disbursements of the successful party. Barkly v. Copeland, 86 Cal. 483; 25 Pac. 1, 405. Money paid to the reporter for a transcript of the evidence is not recoverable as costs, unless made under an order directing the transcription. Blair v. Brownstone Oil etc. Co., 20 Cal. App. 316; 128 Pac. 1022.

Transcription in criminal cases. The compensation for transcribing in criminal actions is to be fixed by the court, and is a charge against the county. Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806; Boys' and Girls' Aid Society v. Reis, 71 Cal. 627; 12 Pac. 796; McAllister v. Hamlin, 83 Cal. 361; 23 Pac. 357; Ex parte Widber, 91 Cal. 367; 27 Pac. 733. The superior court has power to fix and order paid the compensation of a reporter in criminal actions (Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806), and to compel the treasurer, by mandamus, to pay the same, wherever funds are applicable to the payment thereof (Stevens v. Truman, 127 Cal. 155; 59 Pac. 397; Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 233; 30 Pac. 806; Boys' and Girls' Aid Society v. Reis, 71 Cal. 627; 12 Pac. 796; Ex parte Widber, 91 Cal. 367; 27 Pac. 733); and if, in a proper case, the treasurer refuses to pay, he is guilty of contempt (Ex parte Truman, 124 Cal. 387; 57 Pac. 223); but this section does not authorize the payment of traveling expenses of the reporter.

Irrgang v. Ott, 9 Cal. App. 440; 99 Pac. 528. A statute authorizing a stenographer, in counties of the twenty-seventh class, to be appointed by the judge of the superior court to report the proceedings at preliminary examinations and coroner's inquests, at a salary of one hundred dollars per month, to be paid out of the county treasury, is unconstitutional. Payne v. Murphy, 18 Cal. App. 446; 123 Pac. 350. The power of the legislature to classify counties by population is a power to be exercised for the limited purpose of enabling the compensation of the various officers to be fixed and adjusted. Id.

Transcription ordered by district attorney. This section is not a limitation on the power of the district attorney to order a transcript of the testimony in criminal cases at the expense of the county. Yolo County v. Joyce, 156 Cal. 429; 105 Pac. 125.

Transcription ordered by party. Where the transcription is ordered by a party, and furnished at an agreed rate of compensation, it cannot be taxed as costs (Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597; 57 Pac. 585; and see Blair v. Brownstone Oil etc. Co., 20 Cal. App. 316; 128 Pac. 1022); nor has the court power to tax, as costs, fees for the transcription of testimony, where the judgment was reversed on appeal upon the judgment roll, without such transcription having been used, and where the appeal from the order denying a motion for a new trial was not perfected. Bank of Woodland v. Hiatt, 59 Cal. 580.

Fee for transcription. See note ante, § 269.

Per diem of reporters. The court has no power, by rule, to require the per diem of reporters to be paid, one half by each of the parties, before the witnesses are examined (Meacham v. Bear Valley Irrigation Co., 145 Cal. 606; 68 L. R. A. 600; 79 Pac. 281); nor, prior to the amendment of 1903, where the reporter voluntarily took the testimony without requiring a deposit, had the judge power, after judgment entered, to refuse to settle the case until the reporter's fees were paid. James v. McCann, 93 Cal. 513; 29 Pac. 49.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 455.

§ 274a. Transcribing of opinions and instructions, a county charge. Judges of the superior court may have any opinion given or rendered by such judge in the trial of any action or proceeding, pending in such court, or any instructions to be given by such court to the jury, or any necessary order, petition, citation, commitment or judgment in any insanity proceeding, probate proceeding, proceeding concerning new or additional bonds of county officials, or juvenile court proceeding, taken down in shorthand and transcribed by the official reporter of such court; but if there be no official reporter for such court, then by any competent stenographer or typewriter, the cost thereof to be a legal charge against the county, payable out of the general fund in the county treasury in the same manner as any other claims against the county, when properly approved by the said judge so ordering the same.

Legislation § 274a. 1. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 15.

2. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 499, adding in the first clause, after "given by such court to the jury," "or any necessary order, petition, citation, commitment or judgment in any insanity proceeding, probate proceeding, proceeding concerning new or additional bonds of county officials, or juvenile court proceeding."

§ 274b. Fees and compensation of phonographic reporter. The phonographic reporter shall receive for making an original and three carbon copies of the portion of his notes ordered transcribed, or transcribed in any criminal case after sentence, the sum of thirty cents per folio; provided, however, that he shall receive no compensation for transcribing any notes unless the same shall have been transcribed by him within the time provided by law.

Legislation § 274b. Added by Stats. 1909, c. 708.

TITLE V.

PERSONS SPECIALLY INVESTED WITH MINISTERIAL POWERS RELATING TO COURTS OF JUSTICE.

Chapter I. Attorneys and Counselors at Law. §§ 275–299.

§ 297. Trial.
§ 298. Reference to take depositions.
§ 299. Judgment.

§ 275. Who may be admitted as attorneys. Any citizen or person resident of this state, who has bona fide declared his or her intention to become a citizen in the manner required by law, of the age of twenty-one years, of good moral character, and who possesses the necessary qualifications of learning and ability, is entitled to admission as attorney and counselor in all the courts of this state. All persons are attorneys of the supreme court who were on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, entitled to practice in the court superseded thereby.

Attorneys.
1. Admission of. See sections immediately following.
2. Judges must have been admitted to practice. See ante, §§ 156, 157.
3. Removal of. See post, § 287.

Judicial and ministerial officers.
1. Not to practice. See Pol. Code, § 4121; ante, § 171.
2. Nor to have a partner. Ante, § 172.

Legislation § 275. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1851, p. 48), and then read: "Any white male citizen, or white male person, resident of this state, who has bona fide declared his intention to become a citizen in the manner required by law, of the age of twenty-one years, of good moral character, and who possesses the necessary qualifications of learning and ability, is entitled to admission as attorney and counselor in all courts of this state."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 99, to read as at present, except that the last sentence was not then added.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 55, adding the last sentence.

Citizenship. An alien, by filing his declaration of intention, does not thereby become a citizen (Orosco v. Gagliardó, 22 Cal. 83); but a bona fide declaration of intention entitles a person to be admitted to practice law (Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846), provided such person is eligible to citizenship. In re Hong Yen Chang, 84 Cal. 163; 24 Pac. 156. Females are now entitled to be admitted as attorneys, upon the same terms as males. Foltz v. Hoge, 54 Cal. 28.

Right to practice law. The right to practice law is not a natural or a constitutional right, but a statutory privilege, subject to legislative control (Application of Guerrero, 69 Cal. 88; 10 Pac. 261; Ex parte Fraser, 54 Cal. 94; Ex parte Johnson, 62 Cal. 263); neither is it a contract, nor a property right, within the meaning of the constitution. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293; Ex parte Yale, 24 Cal. 241; 85 Am. Dec. 62.

Admission to the bar. The authority to admit to practice in all courts of the state is placed wholly within the jurisdiction of the district courts of appeal, and the supreme court has no authority to admit attorneys to practice. Application of Mock, 146 Cal. 378; 80 Pac. 64. The terms "attorney," "counselor," "attorney at law," are synonymous. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699. Licenses granted to attorneys, under this section and § 276, post, are not affected by the failure of the legislature to define the qualifications that they must possess. (Obiter.) Ex parte McManus, 151 Cal. 331; 90 Pac. 702.

Residence as affecting right to admission to bar. See note 17 Ann. Cas. 878.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1851, p. 48. An attorney at law is not a person holding an office of public trust, within the prohibitory clause of § 3, art. ii, of the constitution. The right to practice law is a statutory privilege, subject to the control of the legislature. The right to practice law is not "property" nor a "contract," within the meaning of the constitution. The state may exclude from its courts those who are disloyal to the Federal as well as to the state government. An oath may be required by the legislature of the state from an attorney purging himself of certain imputed crimes. See Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293; Ex parte Yale, 24 Cal. 241; 85 Am. Dec. 62.

§ 276. Qualifications. Every applicant for admission as an attorney and counselor must produce satisfactory testimonials of a good moral character and undergo a strict examination in open court as to his qualifications by the justices of one of the district courts of appeal.

Examination of candidates. See supreme court rule 1.

Legislation § 276. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Every applicant for admission as attorney and counselor must produce satisfactory testimonials of good moral character, and undergo a strict examination, in open court, as to his qualifications, by the justices of the supreme court."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, (1) p. 404 (March 18, 1874), (a) adding the article "an" before "attorney," in the first line, (b) omitting the commas before and after the words "in open court," and (c) adding "provided, that the several county and district courts of this state may admit applicants to practice as attorneys and counselors in their respective courts"; (2) again amended, p. 289 (March 24, 1874), (a) omitting the article "an" before "attorney," (b) adding the words "except as provided in section two hundred and seventy-nine" before the word "undergo," and (c) striking out the proviso; (3) again amended, p. 404 (March 30, 1874), making the section read exactly as amended March 18, 1874.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 55, (a) omitting the commas before and after the words "in open court," (b) adding, after "supreme court," the words "or by the justices sitting and holding one of the departments thereof," and (c) making the proviso read, "provided, that the several superior courts of this state may admit applicants to practice as attorneys and counselors in their respective courts, but not elsewhere, upon strict examination in open court, and not otherwise, and upon satisfactory testimonials of good moral character."

4. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 56, (1) adding "a" before "good moral"; (2) striking out the proviso added in 1880, and substituting therefor, "or by not less than three of the supreme court commissioners, to be designated and appointed by the chief justice of the supreme court to conduct publicly the examination; such commissioners to report the results of the examination to the supreme court for final action."

5. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 5.

Application of section. See note ante, § 275.

Legislative or judicial power to determine qualifications for admission to bar. See note 10 Ann. Cas. 198.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to preceding section.

§ 277. Certificate of admission and license. If, upon examination, he is found qualified, the district court of appeal, before which he is examined, shall admit him as an attorney and counselor in all the courts of this state, and shall direct an order to be entered to that effect upon its records, and that a certificate of such record be given to him by the clerk of the court, which certificate shall be his license. Every person admitted to practice by a district court of appeal, either upon examination, or upon the production of a license from another state, as provided in section two hundred and seventy-nine of this code, may practice as an attorney in all of the courts of this state, including the supreme court; and every person now entitled to practice in the supreme court of this state may practice as an attorney in any district court of appeal.

Disbarment. See post, §§ 287 et seq.

Legislation § 277. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If, upon examination, he is found qualified, the court must admit him as attorney and counselor in all the courts of this state, and shall direct an order to be entered to that effect upon its records, and that a certificate of such record be given to him by the clerk of the court, which certificate is his license."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56, (1) changing the words between "qualified" and "and counselor" to read, "the supreme court, or department thereof before which he is examined, shall admit him as an attorney," and (2) changing the word "is," in last line, to "shall be."

3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 5.

Admission and license. The district courts of appeal have exclusive power to admit attorneys of other states and countries to practice in all the courts of this state. Application of Mock, 146 Cal. 378; 80 Pac. 64.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Section 4 of the Statute of 1861, p. 40, was as follows:

"Sec. 4. The district court and county courts of this state are authorized to admit, as attorney and counselor in their respective courts, any white male citizen, or white male person, who has bona fide declared his intention to become a citizen, of the age of twenty-one years, and of good moral character, who possesses the requisite qualifications, on similar testimonials and like examinations as are required by the preceding section for admission by the supreme court, and may direct their clerks to give a certificate of such admission, which certificate shall be a license to practice in such courts."

The intended effect of the omission of this section from the code was to prevent district and county courts from admitting persons as attorneys and counselors in those courts. The supreme court is alone vested with power to admit attorneys and counselors to practice in any court of this state.

§ 278. Oath. Every person on his admission must take an oath to support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of California, and to faithfully discharge the duties of an attorney and counselor at law to the best of his knowledge and ability. A certificate of such oath must be indorsed upon the license.

Duties. See post, § 282.

Legislation § 278. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Every person, on his admission, must take an oath to support the constitution of the United States and of this state, and to discharge the duties of attorney and counselor to the best of his knowledge and ability. A certificate of such oath must be indorsed on the license."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56.

Oath of attorney. The taking of an oath is a prerequisite for admission to practice as an attorney and counselor at law, and a violation of such oath is cause for disbarment (Disbarment of Cowdery, 69 Cal. 32; 58 Am. Rep. 545; 10 Pac. 47); and by this section it is incumbent upon an attorney to take an oath to support the constitution of the United States and of this state. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846; Sears v. Starbird, 75 Cal. 91; 7 Am. St. Rep. 123; 16 Pac. 531. The payment of the Federal license tax does not entitle an attorney to practice without the oath prescribed by statute. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293; Ex parte Yale, 24 Cal. 241; 85 Am. Dec. 62.

§ 279. Attorneys of other states. Every citizen of the United States, or person resident of this state, who has, bona fide, declared his intention to become a citizen in the manner required by law, who has been admitted to practice law in the highest court of a sister state, or of a foreign country, where the common law of England constitutes the basis of jurisprudence, may be admitted to practice in all the courts of this state, by any district court of appeal, upon the production of his or her license, and satisfactory evidence of good moral character; but the court may examine the applicant as to his or her qualifications.

"State" and "United States," defined. Ante, § 17, subd. 7.

Legislation § 279. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Every white male citizen of the United States, who has been admitted to practice law in the highest court of a sister state, may be admitted to practice in the courts of this state, upon the production of his license and satisfactory evidence of good moral character; but the court may examine the applicant as to his qualifications."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 99, to read: "Every citizen of the United States who has been admitted to practice law in the highest court of a sister state, may be admitted to practice in the courts of this state, upon the production of their license, and satisfactory evidence of good moral character, but the court may examine the applicant as to their qualifications."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56, to read as at present, except that (1) commas were not used before and after the words "bona fide," nor (2) the word "all," before "the courts," nor (3) the words "by any district court of appeal."

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 6.

Admission of attorneys from other jurisdictions. The admission of an attorney, duly admitted to practice in another state, may be made on motion (Case of Lowenthal, 61 Cal. 122); but his personal presence is necessary in court. Ex parte Snelling, 44 Cal. 553. A Mongolian, not being entitled to become a naturalized citizen under the laws of the United States, cannot be admitted to practice in this state, although holding a certificate of admission from another state. In re Hong Yen Chang, 84 Cal. 163; 24 Pac. 156. A practitioner from another state may be examined as to his qualifications, although he has been admitted to practice in the supreme court of the United States, or in the courts of a sister state. Ex parte Snelling, 44 Cal. 553. As a matter of comity, an attorney admitted to practice in another state may be, by the supreme court, permitted to present arguments to it in a particular case, although it has no power to admit him to practice (Application of Mock, 146 Cal. 378; 80 Pac. 64); and a lawyer, duly admitted to practice in another state, who has been accustomed to practice here as a member of the bar, is a de facto officer of the court, and the validity of his acts as such cannot be collaterally attacked. Garrison v. McGowan, 48 Cal. 592.

Evidence of good moral character. Although an attorney was admitted to practice in another state, yet he must furnish to the court, upon his application for admission to practice in this state, satisfactory evidence of his good moral character. Case of Lowenthal, 61 Cal. 122.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. [The entire opinion in the case of Ex parte Snelling, 44 Cal. 553.]

§ 280. Roll of attorneys. Every clerk of a district court of appeal shall keep a roll of attorneys and counselors admitted to practice by the court of which he is clerk, which roll must be signed by the person admitted before he receives his license. Every clerk shall, each month, certify to the clerk of the supreme court a list of the persons so admitted during the preceding month, with such other information as appears in regard thereto on his roll, and the clerk of the supreme court shall keep a general roll of all the attorneys admitted to practice.

Attorneys of supreme court. Ante, § 275.

Legislation § 280. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "Each clerk must keep a roll of attorneys and counselors admitted to practice by the court of which he is clerk, which roll must be signed by the person admitted before he receives his license."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56, changing "Each clerk must" to "Each clerk shall."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 123; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 6.

§ 280a. Effect of diploma granted by Hastings College of the Law. Nothing in this chapter contained shall be construed as a repeal or modification of any existing provision of law relative to the effect of a diploma granted by the Hastings College of the Law.

Legislation § 280a. Added by Stats. 1905, p. 6.

§ 280b. Admission to practice law on diplomas from certain universities. Any person producing a diploma of graduation from the college of law of the University of Southern California, the Young Men's Christian Association Law College of San Francisco, or the San Francisco Law School, or evidence of having satisfactorily completed the three years' course of study prescribed by the department of law of Leland Stanford Junior University, or the department of jurisprudence of the University of California, or the institute of law of the University of Santa Clara, or the college of law of Saint Ignatius University shall be entitled to a license to practice law in all the courts of this state, subject to the right of the chief justice of the supreme court of the state to order an examination, as in ordinary cases of applicants without such diploma or other evidence.

Legislation § 280b. 1. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 804, and then read: "The diploma of the students of the University of Southern California College of Law shall entitle the students to whom it is issued to a license to practice in all the courts of this state, without undergoing the examination required by section two hundred and seventy-six of this code."

2. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 541, recasting the section.

3. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 88, inserting "or the institute of law of the University of Santa Clara."

4. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 660, (1) inserting "the Young Men's Christian Association Law College of San Francisco, or the San Francisco Law School"; (2) striking out "law" from the phrase "course of law study prescribed"; (3) inserting "or the college of law of Saint Ignatius University."

§ 281. Penalty for practicing without license. If any person shall practice law in any court, except a justices' court or police court, without having received a license as attorney and counselor, he shall be guilty of a contempt of court.

Contempt. Post, §§ 1209 et seq.
Justice's court practitioners. Ante, § 96.

Legislation § 281. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56, (1) adding the word "court" after "justice's," and (2) changing "is" to "shall be" before "guilty."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 123; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Any person may engage in the profession of law. The profession is open to all, and it is simply the right to practice in court which is not permitted, except to those duly qualified. Woods' Case, 1 Hopk. Ch. 7; Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 313.

§ 282. Duties. It is the duty of an attorney and counselor:

1. To support the constitution and laws of the United States and of this state;

2. To maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers;

3. To counsel or maintain such actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to him legal or just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense;

4. To employ, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to him, such means only as are consistent with truth, and never seek to mislead the judge or any judicial officer by an artifice or false statement of fact or law;

5. To maintain inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself, to preserve the secrets of his client;

6. To abstain from all offensive personality, and to advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which he is charged;

7. Not to encourage either the commencement or the continuance of an action or proceeding from any corrupt motive of passion or interest;

8. Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed.

Subd. 1. Oath. Ante, § 278.
Subd. 3. Offender, public, defense of. See Pen. Code, § 987.
Subd. 5. Privileged communications. See post, § 1881.

Legislation § 282. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 56, (1) in subd. 4 omitting "to" before "seek," and substituting for "judges" the words "judge or any judicial officer," and (2) in subd. 7 adding the word "corrupt" before "motive."

To maintain respect due courts. It is made the duty of an attorney to maintain the respect due to courts and judicial officers. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846; Sears v. Starbird, 75 Cal. 91; 7 Am. St. Rep. 123; 16 Pac. 531. To impugn the motive or purity of a trial judge, in a brief filed in the supreme court on an appeal, is a grave breach of professional propriety, and will be treated by the supreme court as a contempt of the latter court. Sears v. Starbird, 75 Cal. 91; 7 Am. St. Rep. 123; 16 Pac. 531; Disbarment of Philbrook, 105 Cal. 471; 45 Am. St. Rep. 59; 38 Pac. 511, 884; First Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 12 Cal. App. 335, 349; 107 Pac. 322. To say that the action of the court was "a most covetous and wholly unwarranted usurpation of power," and to characterize it also as "opera bouffe," is highly disrespectful to the court and the judge. First Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 12 Cal. App. 335; 107 Pac. 322; In re Shay, 160 Cal. 399; 117 Pac. 442. An attorney who contumaciously insists upon maintaining a pleading asserting a claim after he has knowledge that his client has been restrained from so doing, is guilty of a contempt of court. Lake v. Superior Court, 165 Cal. 182; 131 Pac. 371. It is a violation of the oath of counsel, maliciously to invite and procure the publication of false charges against the judge, for the purpose of improperly influencing him or unjustly discrediting his action in a case, and it is a cause for disbarment (In re Collins, 147 Cal. 8; 81 Pac. 220); and it is a violation of his duty, and a contempt of court, to answer as a guardian ad litem in an action, without an order appointing him as such. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. It is also a contempt of court to send accusatory, threatening, or insulting letters to a grand jury, relating to matters which are the subject of their investigations. In re Tyler, 64 Cal. 434; 1 Pac. 884.

Misconduct of attorney as contempt of court. See note post, § 1209.

To maintain only just and legal actions. It is a violation of the duties of an attorney to counsel or maintain such actions or proceedings as do not appear to him to be just and legal. Disbarment of Stephens, 84 Cal. 77; 24 Pac. 46.

To employ only such means as are consistent with the truth. An attorney is bound to employ, for the purpose of maintaining such causes as are confided to him, only such means as are consistent with the truth, and never to seek to mislead the judge, or any other judicial officer, by artifice or false statements of fact or of law. In re Tyler, 64 Cal. 434; 1 Pac. 884; Guardianship of Danneker, 67 Cal. 643; 8 Pac. 514. He is therefore bound to admit the fault of the record, where it is due to a clerical error. Grand Grove v. Garibaldi Grove, 130 Cal. 116; 80 Am. St. Rep. 80; 62 Pac. 486.

To maintain confidence of client. The confidence reposed in an attorney is to be maintained inviolate; this obligation is a very high and stringent one, never to be relaxed, except under very exceptional circumstances; fidelity to his client, under all circumstances, is one of the principal obligations of an attorney. Disbarment of Cowdery, 69 Cal. 32; 58 Am. Rep. 545; 10 Pac. 47. An attorney, in dealing with his client, is bound to the utmost good faith, and the burden of showing that the transaction was fair and reasonable is upon him. Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387; Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425; 91 Am. Dec. 644; Felton v. Le Breton, 92 Cal. 457; 28 Pac. 490; Cox v. Delmas, 99 Cal. 104; 33 Pac. 836; Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425, 429; 108 Pac. 322; Cooley v. Miller & Lux, 156 Cal. 510, 523; 105 Pac. 981. An attorney dealing with a client for his own benefit, in regard to property the subject of his employment, is in a hostile attitude to his client; but he is still bound to the exercise of the utmost good faith, and the burden is upon him to rebut the presumption of undue influence. Beach v. Riley, 20 Cal. App. 199; 128 Pac. 764. The mere fact that the relation of attorney and client existed, and that a claim by the attorney ought to be looked upon with suspicion, will not warrant the appellate court in saying that a verdict sustaining the claim was not justified, where there is strong evidence that there was a consideration therefor. Cousins v. Partridge, 79 Cal. 224; 21 Pac. 745. It is the duty of an attorney, employed to prosecute or defend an action, to communicate to his client any and all information he may acquire in relation to the subject-matter of the suit; he will be presumed to have performed this duty, and any knowledge or notice which comes to him regarding such subject-matter, while acting in such capacity, will be regarded as constructive notice to his client. Bierce v. Red Bluff Hotel Co., 31 Cal. 160; Wittenbrock v. Parker, 102 Cal. 93; 41 Am. St. Rep. 172; 24 L. R. A. 197; 36 Pac. 374; Donald v. Beals, 57 Cal. 399. An attorney, having acted as such for one party to a suit, and having had opportunities to know the facts of his client's cause, cannot go over to the adverse side and render assistance (Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387; Disbarment of Cowdery, 69 Cal. 32; 58 Am. Rep. 545; 10 Pac. 47; De Celis v. Brunson, 53 Cal. 372); and having acted as attorney for one side on a former trial, the court will not permit him to act on the other side, on a subsequent trial of the same cause. Weidekind v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 74 Cal. 386; 5 Am. St. Rep. 445; 19 Pac. 173. Where an attorney has merely been consulted, without any retainer, as to his charges for the commencement and prosecution of an action, and his terms have not been accepted by the party, the relation of attorney and client does not exist, and the attorney is at liberty to accept a retainer from the other side (Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305; 49 Pac. 189); nor does the relation of attorney and client exist, where one, acting as an agent, employs an attorney for another. Porter v. Peckham, 44 Cal. 204.

To preserve secrets. The secrets of the client are to be preserved inviolate by an attorney, where communicated to him in his professional capacity. Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387; Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331; 83 Am. Dec. 114; Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425; 91 Am. Dec. 644; People v. Atkinson, 40 Cal. 284.

To abstain from offensive personalities. It is the duty of an attorney to abstain from offensive personalities (In re Tyler, 64 Cal. 434; 1 Pac. 884), and to be a paragon of candor, fairness, honor, and fidelity in all his dealings with those who place their trust in his ability and integrity; and he will be held to the full measure of what he ought to be. Sanguinetti v. Rossen, 12 Cal. App. 623, 630; 107 Pac. 560.

To maintain honor or reputation of party or witness. It is the duty of an attorney to advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of his cause. In re Tyler, 64 Cal. 434; 1 Pac. 884.

To observe good faith in commencement of actions. An attorney should not encourage the commencement of an action from any corrupt motive, or from passion or interest. Disbarment of Stephens, 84 Cal. 77; 24 Pac. 46.

Defend the cause of the oppressed. An attorney is an officer of the court, and takes his office with all its burdens, as well as with all its rights and privileges; and among the burdens thus assumed is the duty to render professional services, without compensation, to persons accused of crime, who are destitute of means, upon the appointment of the court; and as such services are no charge against a county, the attorney must look to the possible future ability of the parties to compensate him. Rowe v. Yuba County, 17 Cal. 61.

May have interest in result when. A contract for a contingent fee is not contrary to good morals, and is valid (Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Ballard v. Carr, 48 Cal. 74; Howard v. Throckmorton, 48 Cal. 482; Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140; 21 Pac. 527, 855; King v. Gildersleeve, 79 Cal. 504; 21 Pac. 961; Calanchini v. Branstetter, 84 Cal. 249; 24 Pac. 149; Thurber v. Meves, 119 Cal. 35; 50 Pac. 1063; 51 Pac. 536); but it is otherwise where a third party, not an attorney, contracts with an attorney that he shall be employed as counsel in a case, in consideration that the third party shall be paid part of the compensation received by such attorney for his services. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846.

Contracts for services. Inducing a client to pay him a fee for services which he knows he is not in a position to perform, is a breach of the obligation of fidelity by an attorney. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425. The confidential relation does not exist, however, until the contract for services is made. Cooley v. Miller & Lux, 156 Cal. 510, 524; 105 Pac. 981.

Outlays and expenses. In the absence of a special agreement, a client is bound to repay his attorney for all outlays made by him in the payment of the expenses of carrying on the litigation, and an attorney is bound to bear his own personal and traveling expenses. Cooley v. Miller & Lux, 156 Cal. 510; 105 Pac. 981.

Action for services. An attorney may, in proving the value of legal services, include therein the amount of a reasonable retaining fee, though not mentioned in his complaint. Aydelotte v. Bloom, 13 Cal. App. 56; 108 Pac. 877.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Duties of attorneys and counselors. The provisions of this section are taken substantially from the oath prescribed to advocates by the laws of Geneva. The oath is as follows:

"I swear before God,

"To be faithful to the republic and the canton of Geneva;

"Never to depart from the respect due to the tribunals and authorities;

"Never to counsel or maintain a cause which does not appear to be just or equitable, unless it be the defense of an accused person;

"Never to employ knowingly, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to me, any means contrary to truth, and never to seek to mislead the judges by any artifice or false statement of fact or law;

"To abstain from all offensive personality, and to advance no fact contrary to the honor or reputation of the parties, if it be not indispensable to the cause with which I may be charged;

"Not to encourage either the commencement or the continuance of a suit from any motive of passion or interest;

"Not to reject, for any considerations personal to myself, the cause of the weak, the stranger, or the oppressed."

[The remainder of this portion of the note, being the report of the New York code commissioners, is omitted, and in place thereof is substituted the Canons of Ethics of the American Bar Association. This code of professional ethics was adopted by the American Bar Association at Seattle, Washington, August, 1908.]

"I. Preamble. In America, where the stability of courts and of all departments of government rests upon the approval of the people, it is peculiarly essential that the system for establishing and dispensing justice be developed to a high point of efficiency, and so maintained that the public shall have absolute confidence in the integrity and impartiality of its administration. The future of the republic, to a great extent, depends upon our maintenance of justice, pure and unsullied. It cannot be so maintained unless the conduct and the motives of the members of our profession are such as to merit the approval of all just men.

"II. The canon of ethics. No code or set of rules can be framed which will particularize all the duties of the lawyer in the varying phases of litigation or in all the relations of professional life. The following canons of ethics are adopted by the American Bar Association as a general guide, yet the enumeration of particular duties should not be construed as a denial of the existence of others equally imperative, though not specifically mentioned.

"1. The duty of the lawyer to the courts. It is the duty of the lawyer to maintain towards the courts a respectful attitude, not for the sake of the temporary incumbent of the judicial office, but for the maintenance of its supreme importance. Judges, not being wholly free to defend themselves, are peculiarly entitled to receive the support of the bar against unjust criticism and clamor. Whenever there is proper ground for serious complaint of a judicial officer, it is the right and duty of the lawyer to submit his grievances to the proper authorities. In such cases, but not otherwise, such charges should be encouraged and the person making them should be protected.

"2. The selection of judges. It is the duty of the bar to endeavor to prevent political considerations from outweighing judicial fitness in the selection of judges. It should protest earnestly and actively against the appointment or election of those who are unsuitable for the bench; and it should strive to have elevated thereto only those willing to forego other employments, whether of a business, political, or other character, which may embarrass their free and fair consideration of questions before them for decision. The aspiration of lawyers for judicial position should be governed by an impartial estimate of their ability to add honor to the office, and not by a desire for the distinction the position may bring to themselves.

"3. Attempts to exert personal influence on the court. Marked attention and unusual hospitality on the part of a lawyer to a judge, uncalled for by the personal relations of the parties, subject both the judge and the lawyer to misconstructions of motive, and should be avoided. A lawyer should not communicate or argue privately with the judge as to the merits of a pending cause, and he deserves rebuke and denunciation for any device or attempt to gain from a judge special personal consideration or favor. A self-respecting independence in the discharge of professional duty, without denial or diminution of the courtesy and respect due the judge's station, is the only proper foundation for cordial, personal, and official relations between bench and bar.

"4. When counsel for an indigent prisoner. A lawyer assigned as counsel for an indigent prisoner ought not to ask to be excused for any trivial reason, and should always exert his best efforts in his behalf.

"5. The defense or prosecution of those accused of crime. It is the right of the lawyer to undertake the defense of a person accused of crime, regardless of his personal opinion as to the guilt of the accused; otherwise innocent persons, victims only of suspicious circumstances, might be denied proper defense. Having undertaken such defense, the lawyer is bound by all fair and honorable means, to present every defense that the law of the land permits, to the end that no person may be deprived of life or liberty, but by due process of law. The primary duty of a lawyer engaged in public prosecution is not to convict, but to see that justice is done. The suppression of facts or the secreting of witnesses capable of establishing the innocence of the accused is highly reprehensible.

"6. Adverse influences and conflicting interests. It is the duty of a lawyer, at the time of retainer, to disclose to the client all the circumstances of his relations to the parties, and any interest in or connection with the controversy, which might influence the client in the selection of counsel. It is unprofessional to represent conflicting interests, except by express consent of all concerned given after a full disclosure of the facts. Within the meaning of this canon, a lawyer represents conflicting interests when, in behalf of one client, it is his duty to contend for that which duty to another client requires him to oppose. The obligation to represent the client with undivided fidelity, and not to divulge his secrets or confidences, forbids also the subsequent acceptance of retainers or employment from others in matters adversely affecting any interest of the client with respect to which confidence has been reposed.

"7. Professional colleagues, and conflicts of opinion. A client's proffer of assistance of additional counsel should not be regarded as evidence of want of confidence, but the matter should be left to the determination of the client. A lawyer should decline association as colleague if it is objectionable to the original counsel, but if the lawyer first retained is relieved, another may come into the case. When lawyers jointly associated in a cause cannot agree as to any matter vital to the interest of the client, the conflict of opinion should be frankly stated to him for his final determination. His decision should be accepted, unless the nature of the difference makes it impracticable for the lawyer whose judgment has been overruled to co-operate effectively. In this event it is his duty to ask the client to relieve him. Efforts, direct or indirect, in any way to encroach upon the business of another lawyer, are unworthy of those who should be brethren at the bar; but, nevertheless, it is the right of any lawyer, without fear or favor, to give proper advice to those seeking relief against unfaithful or neglectful counsel, generally after communication with the lawyer of whom the complaint is made.

"8. Advising upon the merits of a client's cause. A lawyer should endeavor to obtain full knowledge of his client's cause before advising thereon, and he is bound to give a candid opinion of the merits and probable result of pending or contemplated litigation. The miscarriages to which justice is subject, by reason of surprises and disappointments in evidence and witnesses, and through mistakes of juries and errors of courts, even though only occasional, admonish lawyers to beware of bold and confident assurances to clients, especially where the employment may depend upon such assurance. Whenever the controversy will admit of fair adjustment, the client should be advised to avoid or to end the litigation.

"9. Negotiations with opposite party. A lawyer should not in any way communicate upon the subject of controversy with a party represented by counsel; much less should he undertake to negotiate or compromise the matter with him, but should deal only with his counsel. It is incumbent upon the lawyer most particularly to avoid everything that may tend to mislead a party not represented by counsel, and he should not undertake to advise him as to the law.

"10. Acquiring interest in litigation. The lawyer should not purchase any interest in the subject-matter of the litigation which he is conducting.

"11. Dealing with trust property. Money of the client or other trust property coming into the possession of the lawyer should be reported promptly, and except with the client's knowledge and consent should not be commingled with his private property or be used by him.

"12. Fixing the amount of the fee. In fixing fees, lawyers should avoid charges which overestimate their advice and services, as well as those which undervalue them. A client's ability to pay cannot justify a charge in excess of the value of the service, though his poverty may require a less charge, or even none at all. The reasonable request of brother lawyers, and of their widows and orphans without ample means, should receive special and kindly consideration. In determining the amount of the fee, it is proper to consider: 1. The time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite properly to conduct the cause; 2. Whether the acceptance of employment in the particular case will preclude the lawyer's appearance for others in cases likely to arise out of the transaction, and in which there is a reasonable expectation that otherwise he would be employed, or will involve the loss of other business while employed in the particular case or antagonisms with other clients; 3. The customary charges of the bar for similar services; 4. The amount involved in the controversy, and the benefits resulting to the client from the services; 5. The contingency, or the certainty of the compensation; and 6. The character of the employment, whether casual or for an established and constant client. No one of these considerations, in itself, is controlling. They are mere guides in ascertaining the real value of the service. In fixing fees it should never be forgotten that the profession is a branch of the administration of justice, and not of mere money-getting trade.

"13. Contingent fees. Contingent fees lead to many abuses, and where sanctioned by law should be under the supervision of the court.

"14. Suing a client for a fee. Controversies with clients concerning compensation are to be avoided by the lawyer, so far as shall be compatible with his self-respect and with his right to receive reasonable recompense for his services; and lawsuits with clients should be resorted to only to prevent injustice, imposition, or fraud.

"15. How far a lawyer may go in supporting a client's cause. Nothing operates more certainly to create or to foster popular prejudice against lawyers as a class, and to deprive the profession of the full measure of public esteem and confidence which belongs to the proper discharge of its duties, than does the false claim, often set up by the unscrupulous in defense of questionable transactions, that it is the duty of the lawyer to do whatever may enable him to succeed in winning his client's cause. It is improper for a lawyer to assert in argument his personal belief in his client's innocence or in the justice of his cause. The lawyer owes 'entire devotion to the interest of the client, warm zeal in the maintenance and defense of his rights, and the exertion of his utmost learning and ability,' to the end that nothing be taken or be withheld from him, save by the rules of law, legally applied. No fear of judicial disfavor or public unpopularity should restrain him from the full discharge of his duty. In the judicial forum the client is entitled to the benefit of any and every remedy and defense that is authorized by the law of the land, and he may expect his lawyer to assert every such remedy or defense. But it is steadfastly to be borne in mind that the great trust of the lawyer is to be performed within, and not without, the bounds of the law. The office of attorney does not permit, much less does it demand of him for any client, violation of law or any manner of fraud or chicane. He must obey his own conscience, and not that of his client.

"16. Restraining clients from improprieties. A lawyer should use his best efforts to restrain and to prevent his clients from doing those things which the lawyer himself ought not to do, particularly with reference to their conduct towards courts, judicial officers, jurors, witnesses, and suitors. If a client persists in such wrong-doing the lawyer should terminate their relation.

"17. Ill-feeling and personalities between advocates. Clients, not lawyers, are the litigants. Whatever may be the ill-feeling existing between clients, it should not be allowed to influence counsel in their conduct and demeanor toward each other or toward suitors in the case. All personalities between counsel should be scrupulously avoided. In the trial of a cause it is indecent to allude to the personal history or the personal peculiarities and idiosyncrasies of counsel on the other side. Personal colloquies between counsel, which cause delay and promote unseemly wrangling should also be carefully avoided.

"18. Treatment of witnesses and litigants. A lawyer should always treat adverse witnesses and suitors with fairness and due consideration, and he should never minister to the malevolence or prejudices of a client in the trial or conduct of a cause. The client cannot be made the keeper of the lawyer's conscience in professional matters. He has no right to demand that his counsel shall abuse the opposite party, or indulge in offensive personalities. Improper speech is not excusable on the ground that it is what the client would say if speaking in his own behalf.

"19. Appearance of lawyer as witness for his client. When a lawyer is a witness for his client, except as to merely formal matters, such as the attestation or custody of an instrument, and the like, he should leave the trial of the case to other counsel. Except when essential to the ends of justice, a lawyer should avoid testifying in court in behalf of his client.

"20. Newspaper discussion of pending litigation. Newspaper publications, by a lawyer, as to pending or anticipated litigation, may interfere with a fair trial in the courts, and otherwise prejudice the due administration of justice. Generally they are to be condemned. If the extreme circumstances of a particular case justify a statement to the public, it is unprofessional to make it anonymously. An ex parte reference to the facts should not go beyond quotation from the records and papers on file in the court; but even in extreme cases it is better to avoid any ex parte statement.

"21. Punctuality and expedition. It is the duty of the lawyer not only to his client, but also to the courts and to the public, to be punctual in attendance, and to be concise and direct in the trial and disposition of causes.

"22. Candor and fairness. The conduct of the lawyer before the court and with other lawyers should be characterized by candor and fairness. It is not candid or fair for the lawyer knowingly to misquote the contents of a paper, the testimony of a witness, the language or the argument of opposing counsel, or the language of a decision or a text-book; or with knowledge of its invalidity, to cite as authority a decision that has been overruled, or a statute that has been repealed; or in argument to assert as a fact that which has not been proved; or, in those jurisdictions where a side has the opening and closing arguments, to mislead his opponent by concealing or withholding positions in his opening argument upon which his side then intends to rely. It is unprofessional and dishonorable to deal other than candidly with the facts in taking the statements of witnesses, in drawing affidavits and other documents, and in the presentation of causes. A lawyer should not offer evidence, which he knows the court should reject, in order to get the same before the jury by argument for its admissibility, nor should he address to the judge arguments upon any point not properly calling for determination by him. Neither should he introduce into an argument, addressed to the court, remarks or statements intended to influence the jury or bystanders. These and all kindred practices are unprofessional and unworthy of an officer of the law, charged, as is the lawyer, with the duty of aiding in the administration of justice.

"23. Attitude toward jury. All attempts to curry favor with juries by fawning, flattery, or pretended solicitude for their personal comfort, are unprofessional. Suggestions of counsel, looking to the comfort or convenience of jurors, and propositions to dispense with argument, should be made to the court out of the jury's hearing. A lawyer must never converse privately with jurors about the case; and both before and during the trial he should avoid communicating with them, even as to matters foreign to the cause.

"24. Right of lawyer to control the incidents of the trial. As to incidental matters pending the trial, not affecting the merits of the cause or working substantial prejudice to the rights of the client, such as forcing the opposite lawyer to trial when he is under affliction or bereavement, forcing the trial on a particular day, to the injury of the opposite lawyer, when no harm will result from a trial at a different time; agreeing to an extension of time for signing a bill of exceptions, cross-interrogatories, and the like, the lawyer must be allowed to judge. In such matters no client has a right to demand that his counsel shall be illiberal, or that he do anything therein repugnant to his own sense of honor and propriety.

"25. Taking technical advantage of opposite counsel. Agreements with him. A lawyer should not ignore known customs or practice of the bar or of a particular court, even when the law permits, without giving timely notice to the opposing counsel. As far as possible, important agreements affecting the rights of clients, should be reduced to writing; but it is dishonorable to avoid performance of an agreement fairly made because it is not reduced to writing as required by rules of court.

"26. Professional advocacy other than before courts. A lawyer, openly, and in his true character, may render professional services before legislative or other bodies, regarding proposed legislation, and in advocacy of claims before departments of government, upon the same principles of ethics which justify his appearance before the courts; but it is unprofessional for a lawyer so engaged to conceal his attorneyship, or to employ secret personal solicitations, or to use means, other than those addressed to the reason and understanding, to influence action.

"27. Advertising, direct or indirect. The most worthy and effective advertisement possible, even for a young lawyer, and especially with his brother lawyers, is the establishment of a well-merited reputation for professional capacity and fidelity to trust. This cannot be forced, but must be the outcome of character and conduct. The publication or circulation of ordinary, simple business cards, being a matter of personal taste or local custom, and sometimes of convenience, is not, per se, improper. But solicitation of business by circulars or advertisements, or by personal communications or interviews, not warranted by personal relations, is unprofessional. It is equally unprofessional to procure business by indirection, through touters of any kind, whether allied real estate firms or trust companies advertising to secure the drawing of deeds or wills, or offering retainers in exchange for executorships or trusteeships to be influenced by the lawyer. Indirect advertisement for business, by furnishing or inspiring newspaper comments concerning causes in which the lawyer has been or is engaged, or concerning the manner of their conduct, the magnitude of the interests involved, the importance of the lawyer's position, and all other like self-laudation, defy the traditions and lower the tone of our high calling, and are intolerable.

"28. Stirring up litigation, directly or through agents. It is unprofessional for a lawyer to volunteer advice to bring a lawsuit except in rare cases, where ties of blood, relationship, or trust make it his duty to do so. Stirring up strife and litigation is not only unprofessional, but it is indictable at common law. It is disreputable to hunt up defects in titles or other causes of action and inform thereof, in order to be employed to bring suit, or to breed litigation by seeking out those with claims for personal injuries or those having any other grounds of action, in order to secure them as clients, or to employ agents or runners for like purposes, or to pay or reward, directly or indirectly, those who bring or influence the bringing of such cases to his office, or to remunerate policemen, court or prison officials, physicians, hospital attaches, or others who may succeed, under the guise of giving disinterested friendly advice, in influencing the criminal, the sick, and the injured, the ignorant, or others, to seek his professional services. A duty to the public and to the profession devolves upon every member of the bar, having knowledge of such practices upon the part of any practitioner, immediately to inform thereof, to the end that the offender may be disbarred.

"29. Upholding the honor of the profession. Lawyers should expose without fear or favor, before the proper tribunals, corrupt or dishonest conduct in the profession, and should accept without hesitation, employment against a member of the bar who has wronged his client. The counsel upon the trial of a cause in which perjury has been committed owe it to the profession and to the public to bring the matter to the knowledge of the prosecuting authorities. The lawyer should aid in guarding the bar against the admission to the profession of candidates unfit or unqualified, because deficient in either moral character or education. He should strive at all times to uphold the honor and to maintain the dignity of the profession, and to improve not only the law, but the administration of justice.

"30. Justifiable and unjustifiable litigations. The lawyer must decline to conduct a civil cause or to make a defense when convinced that it is intended merely to harass or to injure the opposite party or to work oppression or wrong. But otherwise it is his right, and, having accepted retainer, it becomes his duty to insist upon the judgment of the court as to the legal merits of his client's claim. His appearance in court should be deemed equivalent to an assertion on his honor that, in his opinion, his client's case is one proper for judicial determination.

"31. Responsibility for litigation. No lawyer is obliged to act either as adviser or advocate for every person who may wish to become his client. He has the right to decline employment. Every lawyer, upon his own responsibility, must decide what business he will accept as counsel, what causes he will bring into court for plaintiffs, what causes he will contest in court for defendants. The responsibility for advising questionable transactions, for bringing questionable suits, for urging questionable defenses, is the lawyer's responsibility. He cannot escape it by urging as an excuse that he is only following his client's instructions.

"32. The lawyer's duty in its last analysis. No client, corporate or individual, however powerful, nor any cause, civil or political, however important, is entitled to receive, nor should any lawyer render, any service or advice involving disloyalty to the law, whose ministers we are, or disrespect of the judicial office, which we are bound to uphold, or corruption of any person or persons exercising a public office or private trust, or deception or betrayal of the public. When rendering any such improper service or advice, the lawyer invites and merits stern and just condemnation. Correspondingly, he advances the honor of his profession and the best interests of his client when he renders service or gives advice tending to impress upon the client and his undertaking exact compliance with the strictest principles of moral law. He must also observe and advise his client to observe the statute law, though until a statute shall have been construed and interpreted by competent adjudication, he is free, and is entitled to advise as to its validity, and as to what he conscientiously believes to be its just meaning and extent. But, above all, a lawyer will find his highest honor in a deserved reputation for fidelity to private trust and to public duty, as an honest man and as a patriotic and loyal citizen."

2. General rights of attorney and client. Counsel fees, etc. An attorney has a lien for his costs upon a judgment recovered by him, which may be enforced, upon giving notice to the adverse party not to pay the judgment until the amount of the costs be paid; and in some cases, where there has been collusion between the parties to cheat the attorney, the court has required the client to satisfy them. But this practice is confined to some certain and fixed amount allowed to an attorney by statute, and is not extended to cases where an attorney or counselor claims a quantum meruit compensation for his services. In this state we have no statute giving costs to attorneys, and they must consequently recover for their services in the ordinary mode. Ex parte Kyle, 1 Cal. 331. And as to compensation of attorneys, see further, Mansfield v. Dorland, 2 Cal. 507; Carriere v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 435.

3. Retaining fee in advance. An attorney is entitled to his retaining fee in advance, unless he stipulates to the contrary. Cavillaud v. Yale, 3 Cal. 108; 59 Am. Dec. 388. In a suit for compensation, as attorney in a certain proceeding, it is not competent to prove the value of the attorney's services in another proceeding. A person who is not a lawyer is an incompetent witness to prove the value of legal services. Hart v. Vidal, 6 Cal. 56. How receivers, authorized to appoint and retain counsel, and to stipulate that the compensation of such counsel shall be left to the discretion of the court, shall provide for the payment of such compensation. See Adams v. Wood, 8 Cal. 306. In suits by attorneys to recover compensation for legal services, unskillful or negligent conduct or the skill employed in the case is an important inquiry. A suit may be won, and yet the attorney be guilty of great negligence, etc. Bridges v. Paige, 13 Cal. 642.

[3a.] Negligence of or mismanagement by attorney. What must be shown to establish negligence on part of attorney. Hastings v. Halleck, 13 Cal. 203. Where, through the fault of an attorney, judgment is rendered against the client, the latter has a remedy against the attorney, but the judgment remains undisturbed, unless some fraud or collusion, etc., on the part of the attorney is shown. Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 210, and cases therein cited. As to bargains by an attorney with a client, of advantage to the former, protection of the client in such matters, see Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425; 91 Am. Dec. 644. For instances of gross mismanagement by an attorney, see Drais v. Hogan, 50 Cal. 121.

4. Employing only truthful means. Seeking to mislead judges. See case of Fletcher v. Daingerfield, 20 Cal. 427.

5. Must preserve the secrets of his client. Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387; Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331; 83 Am. Dec. 114; Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425; 91 Am. Dec. 644; People v. Atkinson, 40 Cal. 284. What are not privileged communications. Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47; Satterlee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489.

6. Espouse the cause of the defenseless. Defend persons accused of crime. It is part of the general duty of counsel to render their professional services to persons accused of crime, who are destitute of means, upon the appointment of the court, when not inconsistent with their obligations to others; and for compensation they must trust to the possible future ability of the parties. Counsel are not considered at liberty to reject, under circumstances of such character, the cause of the defenseless because no provision for their compensation is made by law. Rowe v. Yuba County, 17 Cal. 61.

§ 283. Authority. An attorney and counselor shall have authority:

1. To bind his client in any of the steps of an action or proceeding by his agreement filed with the clerk, or entered upon the minutes of the court, and not otherwise;

2. To receive money claimed by his client in an action or proceeding during the pendency thereof, or after judgment, unless a revocation of his authority is filed, and upon the payment thereof, and not otherwise, to discharge the claim or acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment.

Legislation § 283. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57, changing "counselor shall have" from "counselor has."

General authority. The nature of the relation of attorney and client is that of principal and agent; the attorney is the agent of his client for all purposes of conducting the particular litigation (Carter v. Green Mountain Gold Mining Co., 83 Cal. 222; 23 Pac. 317); but his authority is broader than that of an ordinary agent; and because of the particular nature of his duties, he is vested with discretionary power of decision in the management and conduct of the litigation, and may bind his client by consenting to a judgment against him, in the absence of fraud or collusion or insolvency on his own part (Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191; Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200); but the attorney cannot compromise an action, in defiance of the protest of his client in open court. Preston v. Hill, 50 Cal. 43; 19 Am. Rep. 647. An authority peculiar to his character as attorney, in the discharge of his duties and functions, is conferred by this section. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846. This section refers only to the "steps of an action" after it has been instituted, and pertaining to its conduct; it has no application to a contract made before the commencement of the action. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 149 Cal. 222; 86 Pac. 507. So long as the attorney remains of record, his right to manage and control the action cannot be questioned by the client (Wylie v. Sierra Gold Co., 120 Cal. 485; 52 Pac. 809), and of course the opposite party cannot question it. Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164. An attorney appears in a cause and participates in the proceedings therein by the license of the court, of which he is an officer. Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534. An attorney in fact, who is also an attorney at law, however, has no right to sign a complaint as plaintiff's attorney. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570. A person's authority to enter into a stipulation does not follow from his general retainer as an attorney. Teich v. San José Safe Deposit Bank, 8 Cal. App. 397; 97 Pac. 167. An attorney employed by a person whose property has been stolen, to assist the district attorney in the prosecution of several cases against the alleged thieves, with authority to take such measures as he deems expedient, has power to bind his client by the employment of a detective to seek and obtain evidence in furtherance of the prosecution. Kast v. Miller & Lux, 159 Cal. 723; 115 Pac. 932. In this title and chapter, the term "attorney," "counselor," "attorney at law," are used synonymously. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699.

Manner of exercising authority. The object of this section is, that, whenever an attorney shall enter into an agreement for the purpose of binding his client, there shall be such a record thereof as will preclude any question concerning its character or effect, and that the extent of the agreement may be ascertained by the record; if oral, that it shall be entered in the minutes, and if written, that it shall be filed with the clerk; it is not intended to enlarge or abridge the authority of the attorney, but only to prescribe the manner of its exercise (Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529; Preston v. Hill, 50 Cal. 43; 19 Am. Rep. 647; Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074); but it is not intended that every admission or agreement made during the course of the trial shall either be in writing or entered in the minutes; such a literal construction might lead to absurd consequences. Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Woolf, 12 Cal. App. 725; 108 Pac. 729.

Verbal stipulations. A verbal stipulation by an attorney, made during the progress of a trial, and not entered in the minutes, does not bind the client (Merritt v. Wilcox, 52 Cal. 238); but when entered in the minutes it is binding, and is a part of the judgment roll. Kent v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 130 Cal. 401; 62 Pac. 620. A verbal stipulation, not entered in the minutes nor filed with the clerk, cannot be regarded, except so far as it is admitted by the parties against whom it is sought to be enforced, or has been wholly or in part executed (McLaughlin v. Clausen, 116 Cal. 487; 48 Pac. 487); but a verbal stipulation may be taken into consideration by the court, in the exercise of its discretion, upon a motion to set aside a default, even though it is not entered in the minutes. McGowan v. Kreling, 117 Cal. 31; 48 Pac. 980. "This section does not require the construction, that in no instance shall an agreement, which the attorney may make in behalf of his client, be binding, unless entered in the minutes of the court or filed with the clerk; its provisions have reference to executory agreements, and not to those which have been wholly or in part executed; and it was with reference to oral agreements of an executory character that the court said, in its opinion in Borkheim v. North British etc. Ins. Co., 38 Cal. 623, 'of such agreements, therefore, there can be no specific performance'; if, under the terms of a mutual stipulation which was only verbal, one party has received the advantage for which he entered into it, or the other party has, at his instance, given up some right or lost some advantage, so that it would be inequitable for him to insist that the stipulation was invalid, he will not be permitted to repudiate the obligation of his own agreement upon the ground that it had not been entered in the minutes of the court (Himmelmann v. Sullivan, 40 Cal. 125; Hawes v. Clark, 84 Cal. 272; 24 Pac. 116); if the party admits that he made such verbal stipulation, it will be as binding upon him as if it had been entered in the minutes of the court." Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305; Johnson v. Sweeney, 95 Cal. 304; 30 Pac. 540; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074; McLaughlin v. Clausen, 116 Cal. 487; 48 Pac. 487; Crane v. Crane, 121 Cal. 99; 53 Pac. 433; Coonan v. Loewenthal, 129 Cal. 197; 61 Pac. 940; Daneri v. Gazzola, 139 Cal. 416; 73 Pac. 179. An unauthorized stipulation may be enforced, even if it does not comply with the terms of this section, if it is not forbidden by some other statute or by some principle of law. Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27; 62 Pac. 386. Courts refuse to settle disputes in regard to verbal agreements, or to try collateral issues for the purpose of determining whether any agreement has been made. Johnson v. Sweeney, 95 Cal. 304; 30 Pac. 540; Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; McLaughlin v. Clausen, 116 Cal. 487; 48 Pac. 487; McGowan v. Kreling, 117 Cal. 31; 48 Pac. 980. Where admissions or stipulations of an attorney in behalf of his client, being yet executory, are denied, the only proof of their validity rests upon a compliance with the code provision, and no other proof can be received (Hearne v. De Young, 11 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108); but if the record shows the admission of a fact which makes the stipulation unnecessary, and that the court acted upon such admission, and embodied it in the bill of exceptions, the fact cannot be traversed upon appeal. Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305; Himmelmann v. Sullivan, 40 Cal. 125; Hawes v. Clark, 84 Cal. 272; 24 Pac. 116; Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529. An admission of counsel, in open court, as to immoral conduct of his client, even though in excess of his authority under the above section, is not a ground of reversal, where it clearly appears that the defendant was not injured thereby. Queirolo v. Queirolo, 129 Cal. 686; 62 Pac. 315.

Written agreement not filed. The same principles are applicable to the enforcement of a written agreement not filed, as govern a verbal agreement not entered in the minutes of the court. Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529.

Authority to appear for party. An attorney's license is prima facie evidence of his authority to appear for the person he professes to represent (Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534; People v. Mariposa County, 39 Cal. 683); and it will be presumed, where an attorney signs a paper, that he was authorized so to do. Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636. The unauthorized appearance of an attorney, where there is no fraud and no allegation of insolvency on the part of the attorney, does not give the party a right to assail the judgment on that ground. Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191. The unauthorized appearance of an attorney may be set aside (Garrison v. McGowan, 48 Cal. 592); but a default judgment entered against a defendant will not be vacated, where he was informed of the fact of the unauthorized appearance, but took no steps to set it aside. Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668. A party cannot repudiate an unauthorized appearance after three years, for the purpose of obtaining a dismissal on the ground that the summons was not returned within the time prescribed by law. Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 410; 74 Pac. 352; and see also Baker v. O'Riordan, 65 Cal. 368; 4 Pac. 232; Hill v. City Cab etc. Co., 79 Cal. 188; 21 Pac. 728; Hunter v. Bryant, 98 Cal. 247; 33 Pac. 51. A parol agreement of employment is sufficient; it is not necessary for an attorney to show his authority, unless questioned by a proper plea. Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191; Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431; Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51; Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Garrison v. McGowan, 48 Cal. 592; Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485; 8 Pac. 22. The adverse party or his attorney, upon a mere suggestion at the bar, cannot deny the right of a party to appear by the attorney of record, nor deny that the attorney so appearing has full authority to prosecute the suit; the proper procedure is a motion to dismiss, founded upon affidavit of want of authority, made by the party whom the attorney assumes to represent. Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431; Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534; People v. Mariposa County, 39 Cal. 683. Where there are several parties, each having separate attorneys, one of the attorneys cannot act for a party he does not represent (Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485); but where he does so act for another defendant, it will be presumed that he has done so with the authority of the attorney for such party. McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284. Where an attorney appears for two or more persons, and signs as "attorney for defendants," such appearance will be limited to the defendants for whom he expressly appears. Spangel v. Dellinger, 42 Cal. 148.

Extent of authority to bind client. An attorney may acknowledge the service of papers; but such an acknowledgment does not carry an admission of the things recited therein (Estate of More, 143 Cal. 493; 77 Pac. 407); nor is it a waiver of the objection that the service was too late. Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650. The right of an attorney to sign pleadings binding his client will be presumed. Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 23; 21 Pac. 359; Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513; 12 Pac. 570; Kamm v. Bank of California, 74 Cal. 191; 15 Pac. 765. He may stipulate that one action shall abide and be determined by the result of another action, and that final judgment may be entered upon such determination (Gilmore v. American Central Ins. Co., 67 Cal. 366; 7 Pac. 781; Hills v. Sherwood, 33 Cal. 474); and he may enter a judgment of retraxit against his client (Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542; Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164); and he may agree that the court may find additional facts to cover all the questions raised by the pleadings (Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217); that damages may be assessed in currency (Dreyfous v. Adams, 48 Cal. 131); that a deposition may be read in evidence (Robinson v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 263; 3 Pac. 878), and with the same force and effect, and subject to the same exceptions, as if taken in the case on trial (Brooks v. Crosby, 22 Cal. 42; King v. Haney, 46 Cal. 560; 13 Am. Rep. 217); and he has power to extend the time for giving notice of appeal (Simpson v. Budd, 91 Cal. 488; 27 Pac. 758), and of a motion for a new trial (Simpson v. Budd, 91 Cal. 488; 27 Pac. 758; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Gray v. Nunan, 63 Cal. 220; Patrick v. Morse, 64 Cal. 462; 2 Pac. 49; Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316); and to agree to the facts upon which the cause shall be determined (Hess v. Bolinger, 48 Cal. 349), such an agreement being like an admission in the pleadings as to the facts thus stipulated (Muller v. Rowell, 110 Cal. 318; 42 Pac. 804); and he has power to agree that a motion for a new trial may be denied (Meerholz v. Sessions, 9 Cal. 277; Brotherton v. Hart, 11 Cal. 405; Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154; San Francisco v. Certain Real Estate, 42 Cal. 513; Erlanger v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 109 Cal. 395; 42 Pac. 31; Reay v. Butler, 118 Cal. 113; 50 Pac. 375); but where the agreement for the denial of a motion for a new trial is merely for the purpose of facilitating the appeal, the court will review the question upon appeal. Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154. He has power to agree to the time of service of statement on motion for a new trial (Mills v. Dearborn, 82 Cal. 51; 22 Pac. 1114); and to stipulate as to a transcript on appeal (McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 246), and that the same is true and correct (Weil v. Paul, 22 Cal. 492; Godchaux v. Mulford, 26 Cal. 316; 85 Am. Dec. 178); but such a stipulation merely obviates the necessity of a certificate by the clerk (Todd v. Winants, 36 Cal. 129; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012), and is a substitute for the clerk's certificate to the correctness of the transcript (Wetherbee v. Carroll, 33 Cal. 549); it does not waive the record required by law (Siebe v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 86 Cal. 390; 25 Pac. 14; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1102). He also has power to waive findings of fact (Dougherty v. Friermuth, 68 Cal. 240; 9 Pac. 98; Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529); to waive all errors in the record, after service of notice of appeal (Glotzback v. Foster, 11 Cal. 37), and to waive the signature of the judge to the bill of exceptions. Sarver v. Garcia, 49 Cal. 218; and see Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617. But an attorney has no authority to instruct a sheriff to conduct a business attached, and thereby bind his client for expenses incurred (Alexander v. Denaveaux, 53 Cal. 663; affirmed, 59 Cal. 476), or to compromise an action he is employed to prosecute or defend (Ambrose v. McDonald, 53 Cal. 28; Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. American Central Ins. Co., 68 Cal. 430; 9 Pac. 712; Trope v. Kerns, 83 Cal. 553; 23 Pac. 691; Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529; Knowlton v. Mackenzie, 110 Cal. 183; 42 Pac. 580; Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074), or, under his general employment, to submit a client's cause to arbitration (Bates v. Visher, 2 Cal. 355), or to stipulate for the dismissal of an action, where the party he represents has parted with his interest to another, who prosecutes in his name (Walker v. Felt, 54 Cal. 386; Mastick v. Thorp, 29 Cal. 444; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765); nor can he, against the objection of his client, compromise an action, and consent to judgment against him (Preston v. Hill, 50 Cal. 43; 19 Am. Rep. 647); nor has he authority to convey the title to his client's land. Ryan v. Tomlinson, 31 Cal. 11.

Termination of authority. Under a general retainer, the authority of an attorney terminates with the entry of final judgment, except for the purpose of enforcing it. Knowlton v. Mackenzie, 110 Cal. 183; 42 Pac. 580. He has authority to take out execution, and procure a levy thereof, and receive and collect money thereunder. Jones v. Spear, 56 Cal. 163. The death of the client also terminates the employment and authority of the attorney, and no subsequent steps can be taken in the case under the employment. Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463; Moyle v. Landers, 78 Cal. 99; 12 Am. St. Rep. 22; 20 Pac. 241. But where, upon the death of the party, pending an appeal, the attorney becomes the attorney for his executors, he may move to dismiss the appeal without a formal substitution, if no substitution be made before the hearing of the motion. Whartenby v. Reay, 92 Cal. 74; 28 Pac. 56. Upon the death of one member of a firm of attorneys, the client has the right to terminate the employment. Little v. Caldwell, 101 Cal. 553; 40 Am. St. Rep. 89; 36 Pac. 107.

Presumption in favor of authority of attorney. See note 16 Am. Dec. 98.

Power of client over attorney. See note 87 Am. Dec. 166.

Authority of attorney to accept as payment a sum less than due. See notes 41 Am. Rep. 847; 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 523.

Extent of client's control of cause. See note 93 Am. St. Rep. 170.

Implied authority of attorney. See note 132 Am. St. Rep. 149.

Implied authority of attorney to prosecute proceedings for review. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 928.

Right of attorney to employ associate counsel or assistants at expense of client. See note 15 Ann. Cas. 1180.

Authority of attorney to incur expenses incident to suit for client. See notes Ann. Cas. 1912D, 313; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 702.

Power of attorney to withdraw answer or appearance and permit a default judgment. See note 33 L. R. A. 515.

Authority of attorney to discontinue suit. See note 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 244.

Authority of attorney to enter retraxit. See note 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1313.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Extent of attorney's authority. As to the extent of an attorney's authority, and when it is presumed, see Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431; Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51; Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636; Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; People v. Mariposa County, 39 Cal. 683.

2. Attorney in fact, but not attorney at law. An attorney in fact, who is not an attorney at law, is not authorized to sign for his principal a complaint as "plaintiff's attorney." An action so instituted is void, as if commenced by an entire stranger without authority. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

3. Power to bind client. Hart v. Spalding, 1 Cal. 213; Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191. The agreement of an attorney to bind a client in proceedings at law must be in writing, and filed with the clerk, or entered on the minutes. Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92. An agreement of counsel for a continuance, not reduced to writing, will be disregarded by the court. Peralta v. Mariea. 3

Cal. 185. An attorney for a party in a proceeding to determine conflicting claims to town lots cannot, after the board of trustees of the town have awarded the lot to his client, pass the client's right by a stipulation in the case for the entry of a void judgment. Ryan v. Tomlinson, 31 Cal. 11. A client cannot dismiss a suit if his attorney of record oppose it. Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164. If a party to a suit dies after judgment, his attorney has no power to further act for him, and could not even give notice of a new trial. Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463.

4. Notice to attorney is notice to client. A client charged with notice of all errors of misconduct in the course of the trial, etc., which were known to his attorney. Hoogs v. Morse, 31 Cal. 129. Notice to an attorney is notice to the client, and he is bound thereby. Bierce v. Red Bluff Hotel Co., 31 Cal. 160.

§ 284. Change of attorney. The attorney in an action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before or after judgment or final determination, as follows:

1. Upon consent of both client and attorney, filed with the clerk, or entered upon the minutes;

2. Upon the order of the court, upon the application of either client or attorney, after notice from one to the other.

Notice of substitution. See infra, § 285.

Legislation § 284. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The attorney in an action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before judgment or final determination, as follows: 1. Upon his own consent, filed with the clerk or entered upon the minutes; 2. Upon the order of the court or judge thereof, upon the application of the client."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 289, adding at the end of subd. 2 the words "after notice to the attorney."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57.

Change of attorney. The change or substitution of attorneys is regulated by this section (Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370); but it has no application to criminal cases. Ex parte Clarke, 62 Cal. 490; People v. Garnett, 9 Cal. App. 194; 98 Pac. 247. An order associating a new attorney with the attorney of record, is not authorized by the practice prescribed by this section. Prescott v. Salthouse, 53 Cal. 221. The substitution of attorneys does not relieve a party from an obligation created by his attorney while of record. Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279; 30 Pac. 529. Service on an attorney who has not been formally substituted, but who has repeatedly appeared in the proceedings, is sufficient to bind the client. Golden Gate Cons. etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628. A notice of motion for a new trial cannot be signed by one who is not the attorney of record (McMahon v. Thomas, 114 Cal. 588; 46 Pac. 732; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Prescott v. Salthouse, 53 Cal. 221; Whittle v. Renner, 55 Cal. 395), but a notice of appeal may. McDonald v. McConkey, 54 Cal. 143.

By consent. The consent of the attorney and the client makes the change complete (Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370); and the authority of the substituted attorney cannot be inquired into by the attorney for the adverse party. Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370. Such adverse attorney waives objection to the service of papers from the substituted attorney by accepting service thereof. McDonald v. McConkey, 54 Cal. 143. If he intends to rely upon a want of proper substitution, it is his duty to refuse to receive papers from the substituted attorney, and abstain from joining in stipulations with him. Livermore v. Webb, 56 Cal. 489.

By order of court. Absent heirs and legatees have the absolute right to have an attorney selected by themselves substituted for one appointed by the court (Lee v. Superior Court, 112 Cal. 354; 44 Pac. 666); but an order of the court substituting a new attorney does not authorize a guardian to make a contract with the new attorney, affecting the property of the minor. McKee v. Hunt, 142 Cal. 526; 77 Pac. 1103. The notice of application to substitute must be in writing (Rundberg v. Belcher, 118 Cal. 589; 50 Pac. 670); and mandamus will lie to compel the court to make an order substituting an attorney of record for another, upon application of the client. People v. Norton, 16 Cal. 436; Lee v. Superior Court, 112 Cal. 354; Rundberg v. Belcher, 118 Cal. 589; 50 Pac. 670. The interest of the client is superior to that of the attorney, and he has a right to employ such attorney as he will (Gage v. Atwater, 136 Cal. 170; 68 Pac. 581; People v. Norton, 16 Cal. 436; Theilman v. Superior Court, 95 Cal. 224; 30 Pac. 193; Faulkner v. Hendy, 99 Cal. 172; 33 Pac. 899; People's Home Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 104 Cal. 649; 43 Am. St. Rep. 147; 29 L. R. A. 844; 38 Pac. 452; Lee v. Superior Court, 112 Cal. 354; 44 Pac. 666); and the fact that the client is indebted to the attorney, who has rendered him valuable services, does not deprive the client of this right. Gage v. Atwater, 136 Cal. 170; 68 Pac. 581. A new board of directors of a corporation may likewise, on proper application, substitute an attorney for one employed by the former board. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 104 Cal. 649; 43 Am. St. Rep. 147; 29 L. R. A. 844; 38 Pac. 452. It is only necessary for the party to prefer a request therefor, to justify the court in making such change. Woodbury v. Nevada Southern Ry. Co., 121 Cal. 165; 53 Pac. 450; People v. Norton, 16 Cal. 436; Board of Commissioners

v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164; Lee v. Superior Court, 112 Cal. 354; 44 Pac. 666.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Authority of attorney to act. Power of court to pass upon their authority. In the case of Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147, 87 Am. Dec. 164, the commissioners had retained counsel to bring the action. A trial had been had, resulting in favor of the commissioners, and a new trial granted. At that stage of the case, the commissioners, without substituting another attorney of record, and without the knowledge of their attorney of record, compromised the action, and authorized the attorney of defendant, in writing, to appear for them and dismiss the action, which he did; but the motion was resisted by the commissioners' attorney of record, upon the ground, among others, that he was still the attorney of record of the commissioners, and, as such, entitled to manage and control the case until displaced and another substituted of record. The court, nevertheless, dismissed the action, and the supreme court reversed the judgment, holding, in effect, that where a party retains an attorney to bring or defend an action, the attorney has the right to control and manage the case until he has been superseded by another in the manner dictated by the tenth section of the statute in relation to attorneys and counselors, which provides that an attorney in an action or special proceedings may be changed at any time before final judgment: First, upon his consent, filed with the clerk or entered upon the minutes; second, upon the order of the court, or judge thereof, on the application of the client. The question there was, whether the court was bound to recognize the attorney of record as possessing the right to manage the case, or could, at pleasure, ignore him altogether, and recognize another as having that right. But the question here is, whether the court has the power to inquire as to the retainer of the attorney, upon the suggestion of the client that he has abused the license of the court, and brought the action without any authority. Upon such a question we have no doubt as to the power. Attorneys are the officers of the court, and answerable to it for the proper performance of their professional duties. They appear and participate in its proceedings, only by the license of the court, and if they undertake to appear without authority from the party whom they profess to represent, the act is an abuse of the license of the court, which, upon the application of the supposed client, the court has the power to inquire into and correct summarily. Otherwise the very fountain of justice might become polluted, and a license to stir its waters become a license to defile them. An attorney's license is prima facie evidence of his authority to appear for any person whom he professes to represent, but if the supposed client denies his authority, the court may require him to produce the evidence of his retainer under the supervisory power which it has over its process and the acts of its officers, and that, too, in the mode which was adopted in this case, as was suggested in Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431. It has also been held that the court may require an attorney to show special authority upon the application of the opposite party, when justice requires it. McKiernan v. Patrick, was an action by McKiernan and Anderson as the indorsees of two promissory notes. The defendants held a set-off against McKiernan, and made a motion for an order upon the plaintiffs' attorneys to produce their authority for using the name of Anderson, which motion was supported by an affidavit to the effect that the notes in suit were the exclusive property of McKiernan, against whom they held a set-off, that Anderson was a myth, or if not, his name had been fraudulently used, without authority, for the purpose of avoiding the defendants' set-off as a defense to the action. The plaintiffs' attorneys showed cause, and informed the court that they received the notes from McKiernan, with instructions to sue as had been done; that they had no communication with Anderson, and had no personal knowledge of him, but they understood that he was a friend and near neighbor of McKiernan in Alabama; that, since the motion was made, they had written to both the plaintiffs for information, but had received no answers. The court denied the defendants' motion. Subsequently, judgment passed for the plaintiffs, and the defendants appealed, and specified as error the overruling of their motion for a rule upon the plaintiffs' attorneys to show by what authority they prosecuted the suit in the name of Anderson; and the appellate court reversed the judgment, with instructions to retry the rule, and if the plaintiffs' attorneys failed to produce satisfactory authority for bringing the action in the name of Anderson, to dismiss it. McKiernan v. Patrick, 4 How. (Miss.) 333: Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 538.

Subd. 2. See People v. Norton, 16 Cal. 436.

§ 285. Notice of change. When an attorney is changed, as provided in the last section, written notice of the change and of the substitution of a new attorney, or of the appearance of the party in person, must be given to the adverse party. Until then he must recognize the former attorney.

Legislation § 285. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57, (1) changing the period after "adverse party" from a semicolon, and (2) omitting a comma after "Until then."

Construction of section. This section does not apply to criminal cases; no formal substitution of attorneys is required therein. People v. Garnett, 9 Cal. App. 194; 98 Pac. 247.

Notice of change. Where attorneys are changed, written notice must be served on the adverse party (Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370; Grant v. White, 6 Cal. 55; Prescott v. Salthouse, 53 Cal. 221); and until such written notice is served, the original attorney must be recognized, and all papers served upon him (Grant v. White, 6 Cal. 55; Abrahms v. Stokes, 39 Cal. 150; Prescott v. Salthouse, 53 Cal. 221; Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370; Livermore v. Webb, 56 Cal. 489; Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060); but, after a proper notice of substitution has been duly served, the adverse party has no right to recognize any other attorney than the substituted one. Preston v. Eureka Artificial Stone Co., 54 Cal. 198. The requirement of written notice is for the protection of the adverse party. Livermore v. Webb, 56 Cal. 489.

Construction of section. See note ante, § 284.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Attorneys of record. If attorneys are changed in action, and there is no regular substitution of attorneys, according to the provisions of the statute, notices may be served on the attorney of record. Grant v. White, 6 Cal. 55.

2. Notice of substitution of attorneys. Where, at different stages of the suit, different attorneys have acted for one of the parties, and no notice of substitution appears, service of notice upon the attorney last acting and recognized by the court, is sufficient to bind client. Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208.

§ 286. Death or removal of attorney. When an attorney dies, or is removed or suspended, or ceases to act as such, a party to an action, for whom he was acting as attorney, must, before any further proceedings are had against him, be required by the adverse party, by written notice, to appoint another attorney, or to appear in person.

Legislation § 286. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57, (1) adding a comma after "action," after "as attorney," and after "another attorney."

Notice to appoint another attorney. The written notice to appoint another attorney in place of one deceased is not necessary, where an attorney is appointed without such notice. Nicol v. San Francisco, 130 Cal. 288; 62 Pac. 513; Troy Laundry etc. Co. v. Drivers' Ind. Laundry Co., 13 Cal. App. 115; 109 Pac. 36. All proceedings are suspended from the date of the death of the attorney until the appearance or appointment of another. Troy Laundry etc. Co. v. Drivers' Ind. Laundry Co., 13 Cal. App. 115; 109 Pac. 36.

§ 287. Causes for which court may remove attorney. An attorney and counselor may be removed or suspended by the supreme court, or any department thereof, or by any district court of appeal, or by any superior court of the state, for either of the following causes, arising after his admission to practice:

1. His conviction of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, in which case the record of conviction shall be conclusive evidence;

2. Willful disobedience or violation of an order of the court requiring him to do or forbear an act connected with, or in the course of his profession, which he ought in good faith to do or forbear, and any violation of the oath taken by him, or of his duties as such attorney and counselor;

3. Corruptly or willfully and without authority appearing as attorney for a party to an action or proceeding;

4. Lending his name to be used as attorney and counselor by another person who is not an attorney and counselor;

5. For the commission of any act involving moral turpitude, dishonesty or corruption, whether the same be committed in the course of his relations as an attorney or counselor at law, or otherwise, and whether the same shall constitute a felony or misdemeanor or not; and in the event that such act shall constitute a felony or misdemeanor, conviction thereof in a criminal proceeding shall not be a condition precedent to disbarment or suspension from practice therefor.

In all cases where an attorney is removed or suspended by a superior court, the judgment or order of removal or suspension may be reviewed on appeal by the supreme court.

Attorney has right to make a defense. See post, §§ 292 et seq.

Attorney defending prosecution instituted by himself or partner forfeits license. See Pen. Code, § 162.

Legislation § 287. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 289, (1) adding subd. 4; (2) changing the last paragraph, after "suspended by a," from "district court he may appeal to the supreme court, and the judgment or order of the district court is subject, on such appeal, to review, as in civil actions," to read as at present, except the word "district."
3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57, (1) changing the words in the introductory paragraph, after "supreme court," from "and by the district courts of the state," to read as at present; (2) in subd. 1, substituting "shall be" for "is"; (3) in subd. 2, after "profession," adding "which he ought in good faith to do or forbear"; (4) in subd. 3, adding "or willfully," after "corruptly"; (5) in last paragraph, substituting "superior" for "district."
4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 124; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
5. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 848, (1) in introductory paragraph, adding "or by any district court of appeal"; (2) in subdivision 4, substituting a semicolon for a period; (3) adding subdivision 5.

Power to remove or suspend. Every court having power to admit attorneys to practice has inherent power to disbar or suspend them, whenever their conduct shows them to be unfitted for the practice of their profession (People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295); but a justice's court has no such power. Baird v. Justice's Court, 11 Cal. App. 439; 105 Pac.

259. Attorneys are subject to the authority of courts, and may, for causes shown, be suspended or removed, and deprived of the right to pursue their profession, by the supreme court (Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846); and the supreme court may, of its own motion, set aside, for fraud or concealment, an order admitting an attorney to practice. Case of Lowenthal, 61 Cal. 122. While the supreme court has both original and appellate jurisdiction in proceedings to disbar attorneys, it will not exercise original jurisdiction, except where the prosecution has been instituted by a bar association, or other public body, in the public interest. Disbarment of Ashley, 146 Cal 600; 80 Pac. 1030.

Causes of disbarment. The causes are enumerated in this section, and an attorney cannot be disbarred for others than those enumerated. In re Collins, 147 Cal. 8; 81 Pac. 220. Before the adoption of the codes, however, it was held that attorneys might be disbarred for disloyalty to the national government, and for refusal to take the oath of loyalty prescribed by the legislature. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293; Ex parte Yale, 24 Cal. 241; 85 Am. Dec. 62. A court has no power to adjudge any man, whether lawyer or layman, "infamous"; and to incorporate into an order pronouncing an attorney guilty of contempt an adjudication that he is infamous, is without precedent, and wholly illegal. Fletcher v. Daingerfield, 20 Cal. 427. Where an attorney is charged, in disbarment proceedings, with a crime, which charge is denied, the court has no jurisdiction to prosecute, until he has been convicted of such crime (In re Tilden, 3 Cal. Unrep. 383; 25 Pac. 687); but an attorney may be disbarred for a violation of his professional duties, although the charge against him might be made the basis of an indictment or information. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425; 108 Pac. 322. If an attorney is found guilty of acts indicating professional moral depravity, the court cannot, without a previous conviction of a criminal offense, take away his license as such attorney. In re Treadwell, 67 Cal. 353; 7 Pac. 724. It is only when disbarment is sought upon the mere ground that the accused has been guilty of a public offense involving moral turpitude, that a case for disbarment cannot be made until there has been a conviction for the offense. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425; 108 Pac. 322. Conviction of an attempt to commit the crime of extortion is a conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, within the meaning of the first subdivision of this section. Disbarment of Coffey, 123 Cal. 522; 56 Pac. 448. A conviction for felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, is a ground for disbarment, whether the offense was committed in a private or professional relation. Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33. The proceedings of the court are to determine whether the attorney is entitled to continue to practice as such, and not whether he is guilty of the commission of a crime. In re Treadwell, 67 Cal. 353; 7 Pac. 724; Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33; Disbarment of Wharton, 114 Cal. 367; 55 Am. St. Rep. 72; 46 Pac. 172. But in those cases where it is charged in the accusation that the attorney has violated a law of the state in a matter distinct from his professional conduct and obligations, and not by virtue of his office as an attorney, proceedings for his suspension or disbarment will not be entertained by the court until after he has been tried and convicted of the offense charged. Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33; Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425, 428; 108 Pac. 322.

Disobedience of order of court. There is no limit to the power of the court to suspend or disbar an attorney, under the second subdivision, and it is not required to defer its action until after the conviction of the attorney on a criminal charge. Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33.

Violation of oath. There is no ground for disbarment, where an attorney accepts payment for a just claim, in good faith, from an insolvent client, in goods at their fair valuation; and he is not acting in fraud of his client, a creditor of the insolvent, where he, having a claim against the insolvent, who has paid him no retainer, inadvertently as to such client, accepts a retainer from the insolvent, and becomes his attorney. Disbarment of Luce, 83 Cal. 303; 23 Pac. 350. It is ground for disbarment, where he fraudulently induces his client to verify a false complaint (People v. Pearson, 55 Cal. 472); and also where he betrays the confidences of his client, by the conversion of her property (Disbarment of Burris, 101 Cal. 624; 36 Pac. 101); and also where he falsely represents himself as admitted to practice in a certain court, and accepts money to appear and contest an action therein (Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425, 429; 108 Pac. 322); and also where he appears for the prosecution in a criminal action, and afterwards appears for the defense in the same action (Disbarment of Stephens, 77 Cal. 357; 19 Pac. 646); and also where, after having acted on one side of a cause, he takes the other side. Disbarment of Cowdery, 69 Cal. 32; 58 Am. Rep. 545; 10 Pac. 47. The encouragement of unjust litigation, from motives of passion or interest, and for the mere purpose of gain, is also cause for disbarment (Disbarment of Stephens, 77 Cal. 357; 19 Pac. 646); as is also the failure and refusal to pay moneys collected for his client (Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33; Disbarment of Burris, 101 Cal. 624; 36 Pac. 101); and the procurement of a false and fraudulent affidavit of service of summons, and inducing the court to accept such as genuine (Disbarment of Wharton, 114 Cal. 367; 55 Am. St. Rep. 72; 46 Pac.

172); and the procurement and presentation to the court of a straw bond. Disbarment of Tyler, 71 Cal. 353; 12 Pac. 289; 13 Pac. 169.

Appearing without authority. Where an attorney appears as guardian ad litem and answers without an order of appointment, he is guilty of contempt for misbehavior, and subject to a proceeding for removal or suspension. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418.

Lending name as attorney. The lending of his name, to be used as attorney or counselor, to another person, who is not an attorney and counselor, is cause for disbarment. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846.

Judicial officer practicing law. The practicing of law by an attorney holding a judicial position is not ground for disbarment. Baird v. Justice's Court, 11 Cal. App. 439; 105 Pac. 259.

Fraud upon court. An attorney commits a fraud upon the court, and will be disbarred, where he applies to the court for admission in this state, when his application is based upon a certificate from a sister state, which had been canceled and set aside before the application was made in this state. In re Maxey (unreported case No. 1252 Civ., decided by District Court of Appeals, First District, December 3, 1912).

Notice of hearing. The attorney proceeded against must be given notice of the charges against him, and an opportunity to be heard (People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295); and the court has no power to strike an attorney's name from the rolls without affording him an opportunity to be heard. Fletcher v. Daingerfield, 20 Cal. 427.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Attorney entitled to trial before his name is stricken from the roll. The name of an attorney may be stricken from the roll of attorneys, but such act is not to be regarded in the light of a punishment for contempt, and the attorney is entitled to notice of the charges preferred against him, and have an opportunity afforded him for a defense. An appeal lies to the supreme court from the judgment of the district court in such matters. People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; 52 Am. Dec. 295; and see also, where it was held that an attorney could not be suspended by the district court if such attorney had been admitted and licensed by the supreme court, People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 190. An attorney is entitled to a trial before he can be stricken from the rolls. See Fletcher v. Daingerfield, 20 Cal. 427.

2. Exclusion of disloyal persons from practice, etc. Power of legislature. See also the cases of Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 322, and Ex parte Yale, 24 Cal. 241, 85 Am. Dec. 62, wherein are discussed the rights of the legislature to exclude disloyal persons from the bar, and also to require from all attorneys, after their admission, certain test oaths of loyalty to the government, etc.

§ 288. Conviction of felony.

In case of the conviction of an attorney or counselor of a felony or misdemeanor, involving moral turpitude, the clerk of the court in which such conviction is had shall, within thirty days thereafter, transmit to the supreme court a certified copy of the record of conviction.

Legislation § 288. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 57, (1) omitting a comma after "felony," and adding one after "misdemeanor," (2) changing the word "such" from "a," and (3) changing the word "shall" from "must."

Conviction of felony. A proceeding under this section, to revoke a license to practice law, because of the attorney's conviction of crime, cannot be instituted until the judgment of conviction becomes final. McKannay v. Horton, 151 Cal. 711; 121 Am. St. Rep. 146; 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 661; 91 Pac. 598; People v. Treadwell, 66 Cal. 400; 5 Pac. 686.

Appeal from judgment. An appeal from a judgment of conviction of a criminal offense suspends the judgment of the lower court for all purposes. Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212; Woodbury v. Bowman, 13 Cal. 634; People v. Frisbie, 26 Cal. 135; People v. Treadwell, 66 Cal. 400; 5 Pac. 686. It is not necessary that a certification of the transcript of conviction should be filed within thirty days. Disbarment of Coffey, 123 Cal. 522; 56 Pac. 448.

§ 289. Proceedings for removal or suspension. The proceedings to remove or suspend an attorney and counselor, under the first subdivision of section two hundred and eighty-seven, must be taken by the court on the receipt of a certified copy of the record of conviction. The proceedings under the second, third, or fourth subdivision of section two hundred and eighty-seven may be taken by the court for the matters within its knowledge, or may be taken upon the information of another.

Legislation § 289. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, (1) changing "second, third, or fourth subdivisions" from "second subdivisions," and (2) adding the word "the" before "matters."

§ 290. Accusation. If the proceedings are upon the information of another, the accusation must be in writing.

Legislation § 290. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

Accusation. An accusation by another must be on knowledge, in writing, and must state the matters charged; it must also be verified by some person, to the effect that the charges stated are true. Disbarment of Hudson, 102 Cal. 467; 36 Pac. 812. It must be made by some one who has at least some knowledge on which to base his charges; an accusation upon information is clearly insufficient. In re Hotchkiss, 58 Cal. 39. The one who verifies an accusation for the disbarment of an attorney is deemed the accuser, whoever presents the charges. In re Collins, 147 Cal. 8; 81 Pac. 220.

§ 291. Verification. The accusation must state the matters charged, and be verified by the oath of some person to the effect that the charges therein contained are true.

Legislation § 291. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

Verification. The verification cannot be made upon information and belief. In re Hotchkiss, 58 Cal. 39; Disbarment of Hudson, 102 Cal. 467; 36 Pac. 812. It is sufficient, however, if the accusation is verified by some person who swears to the truth of the charge set forth. In re Collins, 147 Cal. 8; 81 Pac. 220.

§ 292. Citation of accused by publication. Upon receiving the accusation, the court shall make an order requiring the accused to appear and answer it at a specified time, and shall cause a copy of the order and of the accusation to be served upon the accused at least five days before the day appointed in the order. If it shall appear by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court or judge that the accused resides out of the state; or has departed from the state; or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state; or conceals himself to avoid the service of the order to show cause, the court or judge may direct the service of a citation to the accused, requiring him to appear and answer the accusation, to be made by publication in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the proceeding is pending for thirty days. Such citation must be directed to the accused, recite the date of the filing of the accusation, the name of the accuser, and the general nature of the charges against him, and require him to appear and answer the accusation at a specified time. On proof of the publication of the citation as herein required the court shall have jurisdiction to proceed to hear the accusation and render judgment with like effect as if an order to show cause and a copy of the accusation had been personally served on the accused.

Legislation § 292. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "After receiving the accusation the court must, if in its opinion the case require it, make an order requiring the accused to appear and answer the accusation at a specified time in the same or subsequent term, and must cause a copy of the order and of the accusation to be served upon the accused within a prescribed time before the day appointed in the order."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, the first sentence of the present amendment then constituting the entire section.

3. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 979.

§ 293. Appearance. The accused must appear at the time appointed in the order, and answer the accusation, unless, for sufficient cause, the court assign another day for that purpose. If he do not appear, the court may proceed and determine the accusation in his absence.

Legislation § 293. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, changing the period after "purpose" from a semicolon.

§ 294. Objections to accusation. The accused may answer to the accusation either by objecting to its sufficiency or denying it.

Legislation § 294. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

§ 295. Demurrer. If he object to the sufficiency of the accusation, the objection must be in writing, but need not be in any specific form, it being sufficient if it presents intelligibly the grounds of the objection. If he deny the accusation, the denial may be oral and without oath, and must be entered upon the minutes.

Legislation § 295. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

§ 296. Answer. If an objection to the sufficiency of the accusation be not sustained, the accused must answer within such time as may be designated by the court.

Legislation § 296. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If an objection to the sufficiency of the accusation is not sustained, the accused must answer forthwith." 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 290, to read as at present. 3. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

§ 297. Trial. If the accused plead guilty, or refuse to answer the accusation, the court shall proceed to judgment of removal or suspension. If he deny the matters charged, the court shall, at such time as it may appoint, proceed to try the accusation.

Legislation § 297. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, changing "shall" from "must" in both instances.

Proceedings on disbarment. Proceedings on disbarment are peculiar to themselves, and are governed by specific code sections; hence, findings are not required, the right to trial by jury is denied, the statute of limitations has no application, and the accuser has no right to an appeal. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425, 430; 108 Pac. 322.

No right to jury trial. This section is constitutional, and the accused attorney is not entitled to a trial by jury. Disbarment of Wharton, 114 Cal. 367; 55 Am. St. Rep. 72; 46 Pac. 172.

Right of attorney to be confronted with witnesses against him in disbarment proceedings. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 582.

Right to jury trial in disbarment proceedings. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1162.

§ 298. Reference to take depositions. The court may, in its discretion, order a reference to a committee to take depositions in the matter.

Legislation § 298. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Re-enacted by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, in amending Part I.

§ 299. Judgment. Upon conviction, in cases arising under the first subdivision of section two hundred and eighty-seven, the judgment of the court must be that the name of the party shall be stricken from the roll of attorneys and counselors of the court, and that he be precluded from practicing as such attorney or counselor in all the courts of this state; and upon conviction in cases under the other subdivisions of that section the judgment of the court may be according to the gravity of the offense charged; deprivation of the right to practice as attorney or counselor in the courts of this state permanently, or for a limited period.

Legislation § 299. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 290, (1) adding the word "that" before "he be precluded," and (2) changing from "second subdivision of section two hundred and eighty-seven" the words "other subdivisions of that section."
3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 58, (1) adding the word "shall" before "be stricken," and (2) substituting a semicolon for a dash after "charged."

Judgment. Unless the court is clearly satisfied of the guilt of the attorney, no judgment should be entered in the proceeding to disbar him, except a judgment of dismissal. Disbarment of Houghton, 67 Cal. 511; 8 Pac. 52. The court has power to render a judgment suspending an attorney from practice for a definite period and until the performance by him of a particular condition. Disbarment of Tyler, 78 Cal. 307; 12 Am. St. Rep. 55; 20 Pac. 674.

Statute of limitations. The bar of the statute of limitations against a civil or criminal proceeding will not be considered by the court in disbarment proceedings. Ex parte Tyler, 107 Cal. 78; 40 Pac. 33.

Appeal. An appeal may be taken from a judgment of disbarment in the superior court. Disbarment of Wharton, 114 Cal. 367; 55 Am. St. Rep. 72; 46 Pac. 172.

CHAPTER II.

OTHER PERSONS INVESTED WITH SUCH POWERS.

§ 304. Receivers, executors, administrators, and guardians.

§ 304. Receivers, executors, administrators, and guardians. The appointment, powers, and duties of receivers, executors, administrators, and guardians are provided for and prescribed in parts two and three of this code.

Receivers. See post, §§ 564–569.
Executors and administrators. See post, Part II, Title XI, §§ 1658–1703½.
Guardians. Post, §§ 1747–1809.

Legislation § 304. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 59, adding the words "executors, administrators."
3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 124; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Limitation on power to appoint. The effect of this section is to confine the power to appoint a receiver to the court, or the judge thereof: an appointment by a court commissioner is void. Quibble v. Trumbo, 56 Cal. 626.

CIVIL ACTIONS.

TITLE I. FORM OF CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 307–309.

II. TIME OF COMMENCING CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 312–363.

III. PARTIES TO CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 367–390.

IV. PLACE OF TRIAL OF CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 392–400.

V. MANNER OF COMMENCING CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 405–416.

VI. PLEADINGS IN CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 420–476.

VII. PROVISIONAL REMEDIES IN CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 478–574.

VIII. TRIAL AND JUDGMENT IN CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 577–680½.

IX. EXECUTION OF JUDGMENT IN CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 681–721.

X. ACTIONS IN PARTICULAR CASES. §§ 726–827.

XI. PROCEEDINGS IN JUSTICES' COURTS. §§ 832–926.

XII. PROCEEDINGS IN CIVIL ACTIONS IN POLICE COURTS. §§ 929–933.

XIII. APPEALS IN CIVIL ACTIONS. §§ 936–980.

XIV. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS. §§ 989–1059.

TITLE I.

FORM OF CIVIL ACTIONS.

§ 307. One form of civil action only.
§ 308. Parties to actions, how designated.
§ 309. Special issues not made by pleadings, how tried.

§ 307. One form of civil action only. There is in this state but one form of civil actions for the enforcement or protection of private rights and the redress or prevention of private wrongs.

Legislation § 307. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 1 (New York Code, § 69), which had (1) "shall be" instead of "is," (2) "action" instead of "actions," and (3) "right" instead of "rights."

But one form of action. There is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of private rights and the redress or prevention of private wrongs (Jones v. Steamship Cortes, 17 Cal. 487; 79 Am. Dec. 142; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673; Hurlbutt v. Spaulding Saw Co., 93 Cal. 57; 28 Pac. 795; Rowe v. Blake, 99 Cal. 167; 37 Am. St. Rep. 45; 33 Pac. 864; Barbour v. Flick, 126 Cal. 628; 59 Pac. 122; Lux v. Higgins, 69 Cal. 255; 4 Pac. 919; 10 Pac. 674; Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 150 Cal. 624; 99 Pac. 599); and any relief may be granted which is consistent with the facts stated in the complaint. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673. The relief asked is not to be denied because it might have been sought under a different form of action. Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 407; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108. The code has reduced all pleading to one common system. Bowen v. Aubrey, 22 Cal. 566; Hurlbutt v. Spaulding Saw Co., 93 Cal. 55; 28 Pac. 795; Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549; Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108; Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752; Cordier v. Schloss, 12 Cal. 143; Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69; Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154. Legal relief and equitable relief are administered in the same forum. Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 520; 99 Am. Dec. 423. The general principles, however, which govern actions are not abolished, but remain the same as before the code. Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 458; 58 Am. Dec. 415. The distinction between law and equity was not intended to be abolished; only the form, not the substance, of actions. De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 4 Pac. 919; 10 Pac. 674. The principles upon which the rights of the parties are to be determined remain. Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437; 22 Am. St. Rep. 314; 13 L. R. A. 137; 26 Pac. 203. The rules of pleading of the old system are applied, where not inconsistent with the spirit of the code. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167. Thus, an action for money had and received may be maintained against one who holds the plaintiff's money without right, and under an implied promise to repay the same. Gray v. Ellis, 164 Cal. 481; 129 Pac. 791.

Word "action," construed. See note post, § 363.

Effect of release of one joint tort-feasor. In an action ex delicto against several wrong-doers, charged with the commission of a joint tort, the release of one of the joint defendants is the release of all, notwithstanding there was an agreement to the contrary. Flynn v. Manson, 19 Cal. App. 400; 126 Pac. 181.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Probate proceedings are not civil actions (Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220), and they are, therefore, placed under the division (Part III) of this code relating to special proceedings.

§ 308. Parties to actions, how designated. In such action the party complaining is known as the plaintiff, and the adverse party as the defendant.

Legislation § 308. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 2 (New York Code, § 70), which had the words "shall be" instead of "is."

Title of proceeding in probate. The correct title of a cause, in which an application is made for letters of administration, is, "In the Matter of the Estate of ——, Deceased." O'Brien v. Nelson, 164 Cal. 573; 129 Pac. 985.

§ 309. Special issues not made by pleadings, how tried. A question of fact not put in issue by the pleadings may be tried by a jury, upon an order for the trial, stating distinctly and plainly the question of fact to be tried; and such order is the only authority necessary for a trial.

Legislation § 309. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 3, which read: "When a question of fact not put in issue by the pleadings is to be tried by a jury, an order for the trial may be made, stating distinctly and plainly the question of fact to be tried; and such order shall be the only authority necessary for a trial."

TITLE II.

TIME OF COMMENCING CIVIL ACTIONS.

Chapter I. Time of Commencing Actions in General. § 312.
II. Time of Commencing Action for Recovery of Real Property. §§ 315–328.
III. Time of Commencing Actions Other than for Recovery of Real Property. §§ 335–349.
IV. General Provisions as to Time of Commencing Actions. §§ 350–363.

CHAPTER I.

TIME OF COMMENCING ACTIONS IN GENERAL.

§ 312. Commencement of civil actions.

§ 312. Commencement of civil actions. Civil actions, without exception, can only be commenced within the periods prescribed in this title, after the cause of action shall have accrued, unless where, in special cases, a different limitation is prescribed by statute.

Legislation § 312. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 16, (1) omitting the words "without exception" after "civil actions," and (2) changing the word "unless" from "except."

Construction of section. When one is under disability, or when from any cause the right of action is not perfect, the statute does not begin to run. Feeney v. Hinckley, 134 Cal. 467; 86 Am. St. Rep. 290; 66 Pac. 580. The only statutory provision prescribing a rule different from that contained in this section seems to be § 359, post, which refers solely to actions against directors or stockholders of corporations. Pryor v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554; 109 Am. St. Rep. 162; 82 Pac. 202. Upon an action against stockholders to enforce their liability, the cause of action accrues with the creation of the debt sought to be enforced (Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335), and the reason for this seems to be, that such an obligation is a creature of statute, and not a contract. Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335. Payment of a corporation note by the sureties creates a new and distinct debt against the corporation and its stockholders, and the statute begins to run against the sureties from the date of the payment of the debt. Ryland v. Commercial etc. Bank, 127 Cal. 525; 59 Pac. 989.

Application of title to actions against directors or stockholders of corporations. See note post, § 359.

Extension of statute. An extension of the period of limitation of an action is valid, when made before the former period of limitation has expired. Weldon v. Rogers, 151 Cal. 432; 90 Pac. 1062.

Cause of action must accrue to set statute in motion. The accrual of a cause of action sets the statute of limitations running (Swamp Land District v. Glide, 112 Cal. 85; 44 Pac. 451; Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 535; 23 Am. St. Rep. 500; 26 Pac. 1097); but this does not imply the existence of a person legally competent to enforce the action. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

When cause of action accrues. The general rule is, that the statute of limitations commences to run within the prescribed period after the cause of action has accrued (Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 614; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; San Diego v. Higgins, 115 Cal. 170; 46 Pac. 923); but this general rule is subject to such different rules as may be prescribed for special cases. Cook v. Ceas, 143 Cal. 222; 77 Pac. 65. Except in cases of fraud, the time of the act, and not the time of the discovery, sets the statute in motion. Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771.

Trustee must repudiate trust. In the case of a trustee, only an unequivocal repudiation of the trust by him, with knowledge of this brought home to the beneficiaries of the trust, can set the statute in motion in favor of the trustee. Elizalde v. Murphy, 163 Cal. 681; 126 Pac. 978.

Judgment must be final. A cause of action upon a judgment does not accrue until the judgment has become final and admissible in evidence; that is, after the lapse of the period within which an appeal might be taken from the judgment, if none is taken therefrom, or after final determination following an appeal so taken. Feeney v. Hinckley, 134 Cal. 467; 86 Am. St. Rep. 290; 66 Pac. 580. Upon a judgment of a probate court for partition of real estate, the cause of action accrues upon entry of judgment. Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011; White v. Clark, 8 Cal. 512, 513.

Action for damages. At law, a cause of action accrues whenever there is an injury for which the law has provided a remedy; but in many cases in equity, such as an action for partition by tenants in common (Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624), and an action to quiet title to real estate, this is not true. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. A cause of action for damages for the breach, by abandonment, of a building contract, accrues at the time of such abandonment. Bacigalupi v. Phœnix Bldg. etc. Co., 14 Cal. App. 632; 112 Pac. 892.

Obligations payable on demand. Upon an agreement to pay money on demand, the cause of action accrues on the date of the delivery of the agreement (Halleck v. Moss, 22 Cal. 266); and upon a note payable upon demand, it accrues upon the execution and delivery of the note. Ziel v. Dukes, 12 Cal. 479; Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378, 79 Am. Dec. 184; Bell v. Sackett, 38 Cal. 407. The same is true of a certificate of deposit. Vrummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; 89 Am. Dec. 61. An action to recover dividends accrues on the refusal of the corporation to pay. Bills v. Silver King Mining Co., 106 Cal. 9; 39 Pac. 43. An interest coupon, attached to a bond, is an independent obligation; and, when detached from the bond and transferred to another than the holder of the bond, the statute begins to run from the time of its maturity. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 272.

Conditional contracts. The cause of action for the breach of a conditional or contingent contract does not accrue until the accomplishment of the condition or the happening of the contingency. Bartlett v. Odd Fellows' Sav. Bank, 79 Cal. 218, 12 Am. St. Rep. 139; 21 Pac. 743. The cause of action upon an agreement to give a mortgage accrues upon the failure to tender the mortgage upon the date agreed. O'Connor v. Dingley, 26 Cal. 11; Jerome v. Stebbins, 14 Cal. 457; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492. An action for commissions for the sale of land accrues only after the sale is consummated, or tender of performance of contract to sell. Dinkelspiel v. Nason, 17 Cal. App. 591; 120 Pac. 789. A promise to pay a debt "when able" is conditional, and no cause of action accrues thereon until the debtor is able to pay; until then the statute does not commence to run. Van Buskirk v. Kuhns, 164 Cal. 472; 129 Pac. 587. Where the breach of a condition is overlooked or waived, and there is no obligation to pay money, the rights of the parties continue as before, without regard to the breach, and the statute does not commence to run. Congregational Church Bldg. Society v. Osborn, 153 Cal. 197; 94 Pac. 881.

Effect on debt of extinguishment of lien. Although the lien of a mortgage is extinguished by the barring of the debt by the statute of limitations, yet the mortgagor cannot, without paying his debt, quiet his title nor maintain ejectment against his mortgagee in possession. Puckhaber v. Henry, 152 Cal. 419; 125 Am. St. Rep. 75; 14 Ann. Cas. 844; 93 Pac. 114.

Presumption of demand. Whenever a demand is necessary to put the adverse party in default, he cannot indefinitely and unnecessarily extend the bar of the statute by deferring such demand. Thomas v. Pacific Beach Company, 115 Cal. 136, 46 Pac. 899; Meherin v. San Francisco Produce Exchange, 117 Cal. 215; 48 Pac. 1074; Wittman v. Board of Police Commissioners, 19 Cal. App. 229; 125 Pac. 265; Vickrey v. Maier, 164 Cal. 384; 129 Pac. 273. Where there is a personal liability imposed upon a devisee, by the will, for the payment of money, the beneficiary is entitled to bring an action to recover the money of the devisee, if not paid within a reasonable time after the liability accrues. Keir v. Keir, 155 Cal. 96; 99 Pac. 487.

Actions on indemnity. The cause of action on an indemnity bond against damages does not begin to run until the indemnified person has actually paid the damages against which he was indemnified (Lott v. Mitchell, 32 Cal. 23; Oaks v. Schiefferly, 74 Cal. 478; 16 Pac. 252); but on a bond against liability for damages, the cause of action accrues as soon as a judgment has been rendered for damages. McBeth v. McIntyre, 57 Cal. 49.

Specific performance. The statute does not begin to run against an action to enforce the specific performance of a contract until a breach thereof (Vickrey v. Maier, 164 Cal. 384; 129 Pac. 273); but it commences to run, in such a case, upon the violation of an implied obligation. Hopkins v. Lewis, 18 Cal. App. 107; 122 Pac. 433.

Warranty and guaranty. An action upon an implied warranty of chattels accrues when the vendee is disturbed in his possession. Gross v. Kierski, 41 Cal. 111. The liability of the guarantor of a note secured by mortgage accrues at the maturity of the note, regardless of the exhaustion of the mortgage security. Woolwine v. Storrs, 148 Cal. 7; 113 Am. St. Rep. 183; 82 Pac. 434.

Action against remainderman. If a charge is imposed upon an estate in remainder, and the liability of the remainderman does not mature until the expiration of a life estate, the statute does not commence to run in his favor until that time (Keir v. Keir, 155 Cal. 96; 99 Pac. 487); and the possession of a tenant cannot be adverse to the remainderman until the termination of the life estate. Pryor

v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554; 109 Am. St. Rep. 162; 82 Pac. 202.

Action on insurance policy. No action can be maintained upon an insurance policy until the expiration of the time after the loss fixed by the policy. Irwin v. Insurance Company, 16 Cal. App. 143; 116 Pac. 294. A condition in an insurance policy, that no recovery can be had unless suit is brought within a given time, is valid, where such time is not, in itself, unreasonable. Tebbets v. Fidelity and Casualty Co., 155 Cal. 137; 99 Pac. 501.

Statute may be waived. The statute of limitations is a statute of repose: it grants a mere personal right, which may be waived either in whole or in part. Tebbets v. Fidelity and Casualty Co., 155 Cal. 137; 99 Pac. 501; Archer v. Harvey, 164 Cal. 274; 128 Pac. 410. No distinction, upon the ground of public policy, exists between the right of a party to waive the plea of the statute of limitations as a defense to an action, and his right to waive a portion of the time granted by the statute for the commencement of an action. Tebbets v. Fidelity and Casualty Co., 155 Cal. 137; 99 Pac. 501.

Pleading the statute. If the complaint shows on its face that the statute has run, the defendant may set up the bar, either by demurrer or answer; but if it does not show on its face that the statute has run, the defendant must plead the defense of the statute by answer. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 272.

Discretion of court. Ignorance of injury will not prevent the running of the statute (Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771); but the court has discretion to permit the statute to be pleaded, and, in its discretion, may permit the plea to be amended, by designating the particular subdivision of the section relied upon. St. Paul Title etc. Co. v. Stensgaard, 162 Cal. 178; 121 Pac. 731.

Estoppel to plead statute. One may, by his conduct, estop himself from pleading the statute. Phillips v. Phillips, 163 Cal. 530; 127 Pac. 346.

Laches may bar remedy. Stale demands will not be aided, where the claimant has slept upon his rights for so long a time and under such circumstances as to make it inequitable to enter upon an inquiry as to the validity thereof; where such is the condition, the demand is, in a court of equity, barred by laches (Suhr v. Lauterbach, 164 Cal. 591; 130 Pac. 2); but laches for a time less than the statutory period is no bar, where the defendant is not prejudiced. Shiels v. Nathan, 12 Cal. App. 604; 108 Pac. 34.

Suit for the death of one caused by wrongful act of another. See note post, § 377.

When the statute commences to run. See note post, § 337.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Statute of limitations not retroactive. Statutes of limitation do not act retrospectively; they do not begin to run until they are passed. Thus an act of April 2, 1855, limiting the time for the commencement of an action on a foreign judgment to two years could not be pleaded in an action brought in 1856 on a foreign judgment obtained in 1847. Nelson v. Nelson, 6 Cal. 430; see particularly Scarborough v. Dugan, 10 Cal. 305; also Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1; Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381.

2. When statute as amended begins to run. By the state constitution the amendment of a statute operates as an absolute repeal of the section amended (Const., art. iv, § 25), notwithstanding the amendment takes nothing away from the old law, but simply re-enacts the section amended, with the addition of a proviso in certain cases. The act of April, 1855, amending § 6 of the statute of limitations of 1850, by re-enacting the section, with the addition of a proviso concerning actions under Spanish or Mexican titles, repeals the section of the law of 1850 in toto. The re-enactment creates anew the rule of action, and even if there was not the slightest difference in the phraseology of the two, the latter alone can be referred to as the law, and the former stands, to all intents, as if absolutely and expressly repealed. Thus it would follow that the act of 1855, in this case, would be the only statute of limitations, and the time fixed therein runs only from the date of that act. Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381; see also Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593.

3. Vested rights. Obligations of contract not impaired. An amendatory act to the statute of limitations does not divest any rights vested under the old law, for statutes of limitation affect the right, and not the remedy. See Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1. But it was held that a right without a remedy is practically no right at all, and that a statute of limitations can only be construed to apply (in the case of foreign judgments) to judgments not in esse at the time of the passage of the act. Scarborough v. Dugan, 10 Cal. 305; see, however, Civ. Code, "Obligation," § 1427.

4. Fraudulent concealment. Statutes of limitation are passed to prevent the production of stale claims when, from the lapse of time, it has become difficult or impossible to furnish the requisite proof to defeat them. They proceed upon the theory that the delay, for a fixed period, to assert one's claim, raises a presumption of settlement, and that a party ought not to be afterwards harassed respecting it. They are not intended to protect a party who has, by fraudulent concealment, delayed the assertion of a right against him until after the expiration of the period limited by the statute. The question, whether a fraudulent concealment of the fact, upon the existence of which the cause of action accrues, would avoid the statute of limitations, has frequently arisen, and in its decision there is much conflict of opinion. In courts of equity it is the settled doctrine that such concealment will prevent the operation of the statute, and it is only in the application of the doctrine to suits at law that the diversity of opinion exists. See cases cited and commented on, Kane v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449. "In this diversity of opinion," say the court, "we are free to adopt the rule which will best tend to advance justice and prevent the perpetration of fraud; and we therefore hold, that in all cases a fraudulent concealment of the fact, upon the existence of which the cause of action accrues, is a good answer to the plea of the statute of limitations. By the system of practice in this state there is no replication to the answer. The fraudulent concealment cannot, therefore, be replied to by pleading, but it may be established by proof on the trial, and will then just as effectually avoid the plea of the statute." Kane v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449.

5. When cause of action accrues. The statute provides that civil actions shall be commenced within certain periods therein prescribed, "after the cause of action shall have accrued." The clause "after the cause of action shall have accrued" does not, in our judgment, imply, in addition, the existence of a person legally competent to enforce it by suit. If it did, why in subsequent parts of the statute provide that the statute shall not run in certain cases specified, which are excepted from the operation of the statute, because the persons in whose favor the cause of action exists are legally incompetent to sue? Obviously, if the term "right of action" implies the existence of a person competent to commence an action, there was no occasion for special provisions relieving persons not competent from the operation of the statute. Nothing further need have been said, for the courts, after having ascertained the existence of a right of action, would have next inquired whether there was any person in existence legally competent to enforce it by suit, and computed the time accordingly. Again, if it was the intention to provide that the statute should run only where there is both a right of action and a person to assert it, why not insert a provision to that effect in general terms, and not take the hazard, by going into details, of omitting cases which ought, on the score of equal equities, to be included? But, again, if we assume that the term "cause of action" contains also a general implication in relation to disabilities, what, in view of the subsequent specification of disabilities, becomes of the settled rule, that general words are limited by special words subsequently employed, or the maxim, Expressio unius est exclusio alterius? The twenty-fourth section provides an exception, where the party entitled to bring an action dies after the cause of action accrued, and before the expiration of the time allowed for commencing the action, and also where the party against whom an action may be brought dies before the expiration of the time allowed, but no provision is made excepting a case where the party who would have been entitled to sue dies before the cause of action has accrued. Nor do we perceive any substantial reason why any exception should be made. If the cause of action does not accrue until after the death of the party who would have been entitled to sue, the persons interested in his estate—his creditors, heirs, and devisees—have the full time allowed by the statute in which to move in the matter to obtain a grant of administration and commence an action. Even if we recognized the doctrine of inherent equity, or implied exception, we are unable, independent of the judicial dogma that the term "cause of action" also implies a person to sue, to perceive that this case falls within the principle. It certainly has less equity than the case where the cause of action has accrued in the lifetime of the party; yet in such a case the statute runs on, according to the cases to which we have referred, even though there may not be forty-eight hours of the limitation remaining at the time of his death. The legislature of this state seems to have considered this latter result of the English statutes as unreasonable, and has therefore provided, as we have seen, that the time allowed to sue shall be extended, if necessary, not to exceed six months from his death, thus affording time to obtain a grant of administration and sue. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 643; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

6. When cause of action accrues, trustee and beneficiary. Where a person holds land in trust for another, and there is an agreement that the trustee shall convey it to the beneficiary upon the payment of the purchase-money, a cause of action does not arise to compel the execution of the trust until such money is paid to the trustee, and the statute of limitations does not commence to run until that time. Millard v. Hathaway, 27 Cal. 120.

7. Contribution, action for, when statute begins to run. In an action for contribution between joint obligors, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until after the payment of the debt by the plaintiff. Sherwood v. Dunbar, 6 Cal. 53.

8. When begins to run against judgment. The statute of limitations commences to run against a judgment only from the time of the final entry thereof. Parke v. Williams, 7 Cal. 247.

9. Action to recover a reward offered by publication, when statute begins to run. In an action to recover a reward offered "for such information as would lead to the arrest and conviction of the offender," the statute of limitations could not begin to run until after trial and conviction. Ryer v. Stockwell, 14 Cal. 134; 73 Am. Dec. 634.

10. Fraud. Limitation of an action to set aside deed fraudulently obtained from a non compos mentis. The statute does not run against a grantor's right to commence an action to set aside a deed obtained by fraud from him when he was insane, until he recovers his reason and discovers what he has done. Crowther v. Rowland-son, 27 Cal. 376.

11. Fraud. In cases of fraud, when the statute of limitations commences to run. See Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540.

12. Actions for relief on ground of fraud. Statute does not begin to run against time for commencing action for relief on ground of fraud until the discovery of the fraud. Currey v. Allen, 34 Cal. 257.

13. Monthly salary, where term is for one year. An officer elected for a term of one year, with a monthly salary, the statute does not commence to run against any portion of his salary until the expiration of his yearly term. Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556.

14. Banker's certificate of deposit. It has been held that the statute runs against a banker's certificate of deposit, payable on demand from the date of the same, and no special demand is necessary. Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; 89 Am. Dec. 61. In this respect a certificate of deposit and a promissory note are the same. Id.

15. When cause of action accrues on promissory note. Payment of interest on note after the note has become due does not prolong time of payment of note so as to affect the statute of limitations. A note payable six months from date, with interest monthly in advance, contained the following clause: "In case said interest, or any part thereof, should become due and remain unpaid after demand, then the mortgage given by me, of even date herewith, to secure the payment of this note, may be foreclosed." The mortgage contained a corresponding provision. The prompt payment of the interest on demand did not prolong the time for the payment of the note beyond the time specified therein; and although the interest was paid until a year before the commencement of the action to foreclose the mortgage, yet more than four years and six months have elapsed since the date of the note; held, that the note was barred by the statute of limitations. Pendleton v. Rowe, 34 Cal. 150.

16. Promissory note. Part payments. A part payment indorsed upon a promissory note, made before or after the expiration of the period fixed by statute of limitations, does not avoid the bar of the statute. Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100.

17. Promissory note payable on failure to pay interest, etc. Upon a note payable six months after date, with interest payable monthly, and further providing that, "in case default be made in any payment of interest when the same shall have become due, then the whole amount of principal and interest to become due and payable immediately upon such default," the cause of action, within the true meaning of the statute of limitations, arises at the expiration of the credit fixed by the note, and not at the time when default is made in the payment of the interest. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 247.

18. Promissory note, with days of grace. In computing the time at which the statute of limitations commences to run on promissory notes, the day on which the note becomes due is excluded in all cases when days of grace are allowed. The statute runs from the last day of grace, excluding the day on which the note falls due. Bell v. Sackett, 38 Cal. 409.

19. Agreement not to sue on a demand. If a party enters into a valid agreement, in writing, with the defendant, not to sue upon a particular demand, which he holds, until the happening of a particular event, the running of the statute is suspended until the event occurs. Smith v. Lawrence, 38 Cal. 24; 99 Am. Dec. 344.

20. Covenant of warranty for quiet enjoyment. Eviction. Where a tenant in possession is evicted, the statute begins to run at the time of the eviction, whether such eviction be actual or constructive. McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360; 2 Am. Rep. 456.

21. No presumption of payment raised by statute. It was formerly held that statutes of limitation proceeded upon a presumption of previous payment, and that the effect of an acknowledgment was to rebut this presumption and place the debt upon its original footing. This view is not exploded, and the statute is universally regarded as one of repose, the benefit of which may be relinquished by the party interested, but cannot be taken from him without his consent. If two or more persons are bound, the same protection is afforded to each, and an acknowledgment by one is not available against the other, unless he had authority to make it. McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 502; 82 Am. Dec. 754.

22. Action to enforce or establish a trust. Where a trust attached to a legal title acquired through a sheriff's deed, the statute does not begin to run until the execution of the deed. Currey v. Allen, 34 Cal. 257.

23. Trusts. Trustee and beneficiary. The statute of limitations does not run against an express continuing trust until the trustee places himself in hostility to the trust. Schroeder v. Jahns, 27 Cal. 274; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335; 99 Am. Dec. 384. As between trustees and cestui que trust, in the case of an express trust, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the trustee repudiates the trust by clear and unequivocal acts or words, and claims thenceforth to hold the estate as his own, not subject to any trust, and such repudiation and claim are brought to the knowledge of the cestui que trust. Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 230; Baker v. Joseph, 16 Cal. 173. See also Ord v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 67.

24. Trustee and beneficiary. Where a party holds the legal title of land as security for money due him by one having the equitable estate, he cannot, by reason of the statute of limitations, be compelled to accept the money and execute a conveyance of the land after four years from the time the money falls due; yet, if he voluntarily receives the money when tendered, after that time he is not discharged by the statute from executing the conveyance and giving a deed to the beneficiary. Millard v. Hathaway, 27 Cal. 120.

25. Trustee and beneficiary. The statute does not run in favor of a trustee as against the beneficiary while the beneficiary is in possession of the estate, and there is no adverse claim made by the trustee. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 548; 6 Am. Rep. 624.

26. Vendor and vendee. The statute does not run against a vendee's right to enforce a specific performance (execution of a deed, etc.), so long as he remains in possession with the acquiescence of the vendor. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 548; 6 Am. Rep. 624.

27. Equitable and legal actions alike barred. The statute of limitations is applicable alike to all causes of actions, whether in equity or at law. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

28. Cases excepted from statute of limitations. It was held "that statutes of limitation are to be strictly construed." In Demarest v. Wynkoop, 3 Johns. Ch. 146, 8 Am. Dec. 467, it was held that the court could make no exception in favor of infants, where the statute had made none. Said Mr. Chancellor Kent (p. 142): "The doctrine of inherent equity creating an exception as to any disability, where the statute of limitations creates none, has been long and uniformly exploded. General words in the statute must receive a general construction; and if there be no express exception, the court can create none." It was agreed, without contradiction, in Stowell v. Zouch, Plowd. 369b, 371c, that the general provision in statute of fines would have barred infants, feme coverts, and the other persons named in the proviso, equally with persons under no disability if they had not been named in the exception or saving clause. So in Dupleix v. De Roven, 2 Vern. 540. The lord keeper thought it very reasonable that the statute of limitations should not run when the debtor was beyond the sea; but there was no saving in the case. He could not resist the plea of the statute. See also Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. Jr. 87; Buckinghamshire v. Drury, Wilmot's Opinions, p. 177, § 194; Hall v. Wybourn, 2 Salk. 420; Aubry v. Fortescue, 10 Mod. 206, where it was held that "though the courts of justice be shut by civil war, so that no original could be sued out, yet the statute of limitations continued to run." Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 640; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

29. Mortgages. Mortgage barred when note is barred. "Where an action upon a note, secured by a mortgage, is barred by the statute of limitations, the mortgagee has no remedy upon the mortgage; and though he can follow distinct remedies upon the note or mortgage, the limitation prescribed is, in both cases, the same. The statute of limitations of this state differs essentially from the statutes of James I, and from the statutes of limitation in force in most of the other states. Those statutes apply in their terms only to particular legal remedies, and courts of equity hold themselves not bound by them, except in cases of concurrent jurisdiction, but act merely by analogy to them. Those statutes, as a general thing, also apply, so far as actions upon written contracts not of record are concerned, only to actions upon simple contracts; that is, contracts not under seal, fixing the limitation at six years, and leaving actions upon specialties to be met by the presumption established by the rule of the common law, that after the lapse of twenty years the claim has been satisfied. In those statutes where specialties are mentioned, the limitation is generally fixed at either fifteen or twenty years. The case is entirely different in this state. Here the statute applies equally to actions at law and to suits in equity. It is directed to the subject-matter, and not to the form of the action, or the forum in which the action is prosecuted. Nor is there any distinction in the limitation prescribed between simple contracts in writing and specialties. Where a note is secured by mortgage upon real property, and subsequently, after the remedy on the note is barred by the statute, the mortgagor executes a second mortgage to a third party, such third party can interpose the plea of the statute of limitations in a suit to foreclose the first mortgage, and thus secure priority for his subsequent mortgage; and this, even though the mortgagor had, after the execution of the second mortgage, and after the note was barred, indorsed on the first note that he renewed, revived, and agreed to pay the same. A mortgagor, after disposing of the mortgaged premises by deed of sale, loses all control over them. His personal liability thereby becomes separated from the ownership of the land, and he can, by no subsequent act, create or revive charges upon the premises. He is, as to the premises, henceforth a mere stranger. And if, instead of selling the premises, he execute a second mortgage upon them, he is equally without power to destroy or impair the efficacy of the lien thus created. As a general rule, the plea of the statute of limitations is a personal privilege of the party, and cannot be set up by a stranger. This is true with respect to personal obligations, which concern only the party himself, or with respect to property which the party possesses the power to charge or dispose of. But with respect to property placed by him beyond his control, or subjected by him to liens, he has no such personal privilege. He cannot, at his pleasure, affect the interests of other parties. Whether, where a party revives a note secured by mortgage upon real estate, after the note is barred, he thereby revives the mortgage, was a question raised, but not decided." See syllabus in Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482, 483; see also McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100; Coster v. Brown, 23 Cal. 142; Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73; Wormouth v. Hatch, 33 Cal. 121; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; see particularly Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361; Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58.

citing Hughes v. Davis, 40 Cal. 117; Siter v. Jewett, 33 Cal. 92. "Where an action upon a promissory note, secured by a mortgage of the same date, upon real property, is barred by our statute of limitations, the remedy upon the mortgage is also barred." McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495, 82 Am. Dec. 754, affirming Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482.

30. Mortgage. A person who purchases property from a mortgagor, subsequent to the execution of a mortgage, may plead the statute of limitations in an action to foreclose the mortgage, commenced after the statute has run against the debt secured by such mortgage. McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754.

31. Renewal of note extends lien of mortgage. A renewal of a note extends the lien of the mortgage given to secure the note, so that the statute of limitations will not run until the expiration of the new note given. See Lent v. Morrill, 25 Cal. 492. And this renewal extends the mortgage, even against innocent purchasers. Id.

32. Joint mortgage debtors. One being absent from state. Three persons executed a joint mortgage to secure their joint and several notes. One of the makers left the state. The note became outlawed as to the two makers living in the state. Held: the lien of the mortgage was barred as to the two in the state, and it can only be enforced against the interest of the one as to whom the note is not barred. Low v. Allen, 26 Cal. 141.

33. Mortgage not always barred when debt for which it is given is barred. A mortgage given to secure the payment of a debt not in writing is a contract "founded upon an instrument in writing," within the meaning of the statute of limitations, and an action for its foreclosure may be maintained at any time within four years from its breach, notwithstanding that the statute has in the mean time barred the original debt. Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

34. Right to redeem. Where the assignee of one note (see facts of case), having the first right to the benefit of the mortgage, forecloses, and the property is sold, such foreclosure and sale extinguish the mortgage. The holders of the other notes secured by the mortgage have a right to redeem, but when not made parties to the action, they must assert this right within four years, or be barred by the statute of limitations. The right to foreclose and the right to redeem are reciprocal, and the statute begins to run against the redemption at the time the right of action accrues on the mortgage. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; and see further, as to right to redeem, De Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58; Siter v. Jewett, 33 Cal. 92; Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722.

35. Pleading. Pleading of the statute of limitations. See Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476; Lick v. Diaz, 30 Cal. 75. The defense of the statute of limitations is a personal privilege of the debtor, which he may assert or waive at his option, but it must be set up in some form, either by demurrer or answer, or it will be deemed to have been waived. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16. It must be pleaded in the first instance, and has no day of grace thereafter. See Cooke v. Spears, 2 Cal. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 348.

36. Statute, how pleaded by demurrer. A defense under the statute of limitations cannot be made by a demurrer which states in general terms that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The statute, in order to be available as a defense, must be distinctly stated in the demurrer. Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; affirmed in Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 106; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

37. Right to use water by adverse use. See American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360.

38. Averment that cause of action accrued more than two years prior, etc. In an action for the value of services rendered, a plea which does not aver that the cause of action accrued more than two years before the commencement of the action, but only that the services contracted to be rendered by the plaintiff were rendered more than two years before action brought, is insufficient as a plea of the statute of limitations. Hartson v. Hardin, 40 Cal. 264.

39. Pleading adverse possession. A plea of the statute of limitations, which states that the plaintiff was not seised of the land within five years before the commencement of the action, is fatally defective in not averring that neither the plaintiff's predecessor or grantor was possessed within that time, and also because no adverse possession by the defendant is alleged for any time anterior to the action. Sharp v. Daughney, 33 Cal. 505.

40. Allegation of adverse possession, etc. The statute is not well pleaded in an answer which states that "if plaintiffs ever had any right or title to their claims, or to any portion thereof, they are barred by the statute of limitations, as the defendants have been in the quiet and peaceable possession of the same, adversely to the plaintiffs, for a period of over five years." The averment that the plaintiff is "barred by the statute of limitations" is merely a conclusion of law. It does not present any issuable fact. Schroeder v. Jahns, 27 Cal. 274; Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569. The "period of over five years," during which it is alleged that defendants were in adverse possession, is not charged as having preceded the commencement of the action. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 31 Cal. 387.

41. Adverse possession by tenant in common, allegation of. A person depending upon an adverse possession, of a sufficient time, of land, owned by himself and the adverse party as tenants in common, must plead facts from which it will affirmatively appear that his possession was of an adverse and hostile character; otherwise his possession of land will be deemed to be according to his right, and in support of the title in common. Lick v. Diaz, 30 Cal. 65. See further, as to adverse possession, Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88.

42. Allegations of facts, not of law, required. A party relying on the statute of limitations should not allege matter of law, but the facts which bring it within the statute. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 44; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

43. Averment of five years covers any less term. An answer averring that the cause of action had not accrued within five years is sufficient for five years, and for any period of limitation less than five years. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 44; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

44. Items of account. Where the complaint states a cause of action for goods sold and delivered, and a bill of items is annexed to the same as an exhibit, with the date of each item, an answer which refers to the exhibit, and avers that the last item, only, is within two years previous to the commencement of the action, and that, except as to the last item, "no right has accrued to said plaintiff by reason of the matter mentioned and set forth in said complaint at any time within two years next preceding this action," is a good answer of the statute of limitations to all the items, except the last. The words "preceding the commencement of this action," in such answer, are equivalent to the words "preceding the filing of the complaint." Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122.

45. Assumpsit. A count in a complaint in the old form of assumpsit, for money had and received, in which the promise is laid of a day more than two years prior to the commencement of the action, is demurrable, on the ground that it shows the demand to be barred by the statute of limitations. Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78.

46. Pleading by demurrer. On demurrer to a complaint founded upon the statute of limitations, if the complaint fails to show whether the contract in suit was verbal or in writing, it will be presumed to have been in writing, for all the purposes of the demurrer. Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335; 99 Am. Dec. 384.

47. Pleading by demurrer. The defense of the statute of limitations may be presented by demurrer when it appears from the complaint that the period of limitation has elapsed since the cause of action accrued to the plaintiff, and no facts are alleged taking the demand out of the operation of the statute. Mason v. Cronise, 20 Cal. 211, affirming Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476, and Barringer v. Warden, 12 Cal. 311. But the bar of the statute must clearly appear on the face of complaint. Ord v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 68.

48. By answer. But where the demand is in truth barred, but the fact does not appear upon the face of the complaint, the defense of the statute must be made by answer. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

49. New promise. A complaint upon a note barred by the statute is sufficient, if it alleges that the defendant has within four years of the day when the suit was commenced, "in writing, acknowledged and promised to pay the note." Such allegation imports that the defendant signed the writing. Porter v. Elam, 25 Cal. 291; 85 Am. Dec. 132. The defendant's signature to the new promise was necessary, and the new promise must be in writing. Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142. See also, on this point, Barringer v. Warden, 12 Cal. 311.

50. New promise. It is sufficient, where the complaint alleged an express promise to pay a debt which was barred by the statute, to prove an acknowledgment of the debt from which a promise to pay is implied. See further facts concerning burden of proof, etc., Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187.

51. New promise. Where a creditor sues after the statute has run upon the original contract, his cause of action is not the original contract, for his action thereupon is barred, but it is the new promise, the moral obligation arising from the original contract binding in foro conscientiæ, notwithstanding the bar of the statute being the consideration for the new promise. For authorities upon new promise, see Angell on Limitations, pp. 218 et seq. And the action must be brought on the new promise within four years. See McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 184; 95 Am. Dec. 170, and authorities therein cited. See further, as to new promise, Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

52. Pleading new promise. For payment of debt outlawed, etc. See Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

53. Ejectment. In ejectment, a plea of the statute of limitations of two years, under the settler's act is no defense. Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625.

CHAPTER II.

TIME OF COMMENCING ACTIONS FOR RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY.

§ 315. When the people will not sue.
§ 316. When action cannot be brought by grantee from the state.
§ 317. When actions by the people or their grantees are to be brought within five years.
§ 318. Seisin within five years, when necessary in action for real property.
§ 319. Such seisin, when necessary in action or defense arising out of title to or rents of real property.
§ 320. Entry on real estate.
§ 321. Possession, when presumed. Occupation deemed under legal title, unless adverse.
§ 322. Occupation under written instrument or judgment, when deemed adverse.
§ 323. What constitutes adverse possession under written instrument or judgment.
§ 324. Premises actually occupied under claim of title deemed to be held adversely.
§ 325. What constitutes adverse possession under claim of title not written.
§ 326. Relation of landlord and tenant as affecting adverse possession.
§ 327. Right of possession not affected by descent cast.
§ 328. Certain disabilities excluded from time to commence actions.

§ 315. When the people will not sue. The people of this state will not sue any person for or in respect to any real property, or the issues or profits thereof, by reason of the right or title of the people to the same, unless—

1. Such right or title shall have accrued within ten years before any action or other proceeding for the same is commenced; or,

2. The people, or those from whom they claim, shall have received the rents and profits of such real property, or of some part thereof, within the space of ten years.

Title by occupancy. Civ. Code, § 1007.

Legislation § 315. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Statute of limitations not applicable as against the state. The state is not bound by its statute of limitations, except by express words or by necessary implication (Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386; Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695; 49 Pac. 1043); nor is the statute applicable to property held in trust by a state institution or a public agency for a public use (Sixth District Agricultural Ass'n v. Wright, 154 Cal. 119; 97 Pac. 144); neither is the Federal government bound by the state statute of limitations. Mathews v. Ferrea, 45 Cal. 51; Doran v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 24 Cal. 245; Gardiner v. Miller, 47 Cal. 570; Jatunn v. Smith, 95 Cal. 154; 30 Pac. 200.

Accrual of title within ten years. This section is construed to mean, that the people of the state will not sue "for or in respect to real property," except where the cause of action has accrued within ten years. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481.

With respect to real property. The state may maintain an action with respect to real property at any time within ten years; but no cause of action can be brought to recover possession until the state has been deprived of possession. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481. The state can never be disseised of its lands by the adverse occupancy of another (Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386); and no title by adverse possession can be acquired, as against the state, to lands held in trust by it for the people, unless there has been an abandonment of such public use by competent authority. People v. Kerber, 152 Cal. 731; 125 Am. St. Rep. 93; 93 Pac. 878. As against the public, no one can acquire, by adverse occupancy, the right to obstruct a street dedicated to public use, and thus prevent its use as a highway. Hoadley v. San Francisco, 50 Cal. 265; People v. Pope, 53 Cal. 437. The title to tide-lands cannot properly be said to have "accrued" to the state, in the sense in which that term is employed in this section (Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33); and it is doubtful whether this section is applicable at all to suits to recover possession of such tide-lands. People v. Kerber, 152 Cal. 731, 738; 125 Am. St. Rep. 93; 93 Pac. 878. A suit by the attorney-general, in behalf of the people, for the recovery of state lands, may be maintained without express statutory authority. People v. Stratton, 25 Cal. 242; People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481. This section has no application to an action by an individual holding under a state patent. Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 286.

Statute must be pleaded. The bar of the statute must be specifically pleaded, to be availed of. Osment v. McElrath, 68 Cal. 466; 58 Am. Rep. 17; 9 Pac. 731; Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386; Dougall v. Schulenberg, 101 Cal. 154; 35 Pac. 635.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343. See Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33; Hall v. Dowling, 18 Cal. 619.

§ 316. When action cannot be brought by grantee from the state. No action can be brought for or in respect to real property by any person claiming under letters patent or grants from this state, unless the same might have been commenced by the people as herein specified, in case such patent had not been issued or grant made.

Legislation § 316. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Persons claiming from state. An individual, claiming under a patent from the state, can maintain his action to recover the property, or the mesne profits thereof, at any time within the five years prescribed by the statute. Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386. In an action involving the use of water, the statute runs from the date of the grant if the water was appropriated before the grant, or from the date of the appropriation if it was made after the grant, and not from the date of the issuance of the patent to the land. Jatunn v. Smith, 95 Cal. 154; 30 Pac. 200; and see Fremont v. Seals, 18 Cal. 433; Gardiner v. Miller, 47 Cal. 570; Nessler v. Bigelow, 60 Cal. 98.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 317. When actions by the people or their grantees are to be brought within five years. When letters patent or grants of real property issued or made by the people of this state, are declared void by the determination of a competent court, an action for the recovery of the property so conveyed may be brought, either by the people of the state, or by any subsequent patentee or grantee of the property, his heirs or assigns, within five years after such determination, but not after that period.

Legislation § 317. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 291, (1) omitting, after "competent court," the clause, "rendered upon an allegation of a fraudulent suggestion, or concealment, or forfeiture, or mistake, or ignorance of a material fact, or wrongful detaining, or defective title, in such case"; (2) changing the word "the" from "this," in the words "people of the state"; and (3) omitting the word "same" before "property," in the words "grantee of the property."

Acquisition of title by prescription against public. See note 26 L. R. A. 451.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 318. Seisin within five years, when necessary in action for real property. No action for the recovery of real property, or for the recovery of the possession thereof, can be maintained, unless it appear that the plaintiff, his ancestor, predecessor, or grantor, was seised or possessed of the property in question, within five years before the commencement of the action.

Adverse possession. Post, §§ 321 et seq.

Trespass upon real property, action for, must be brought within three years. Post, § 338.

Possession, presumptive evidence of ownership. See post, § 1963, subd. 11.

Action includes special proceeding of civil nature. Post, § 363.

Application of section. This section applies to an action to set aside a conveyance as obtained by fraud and undue influence, and to recover an interest in the property (Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820, reversing Murphy v. Crowley, 7 Cal. Unrep. 49; 70 Pac. 1024; Page v. Garver, 146 Cal. 577; 80 Pac. 860); and is to be construed with § 338, post; and must govern, where, though the principal ground for relief is on account of fraud, still, in the action, the party seeks the recovery of real property on the ground of such fraud. Unkel v. Robinson, 163 Cal. 648; 126 Pac. 485. An action to establish involuntary and resulting trusts in land, to enforce a conveyance of the legal title, and to recover the possession thereof, is subject wholly to this section, and not to § 343, post. Bradley v. Bradley, 20 Cal. App. 1; 127 Pac. 1044.

Recovery of real property, or possession. An action to acquire title to a right of way is within this section (Schmidt v. Klotz, 130 Cal. 223; 62 Pac. 470); as is also an action to compel a conveyance of land and correct a mistake in the deeds (Goodnow v. Parker, 112 Cal. 437; 44 Pac. 738; Union Ice Co. v. Doyle, 6 Cal. App. 284; 92 Pac. 112); and an action to recover real property and cancel a deed (Daniels v. Dean, 2 Cal. App. 421; 84 Pac. 332), and an action to cancel a patent by the United States (Curtner v. United States, 149 U. S. 662; 37 L. Ed. 890; 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985); and an action to determine title to water, even where the defense pleaded is fraud and mistake, whereby the legal title was obtained, is also within this section (South Tule etc. Ditch Co. v. King, 144 Cal. 455; 77 Pac. 1032); as is also an action to be let into possession as tenant in common to land, possession of which was obtained from an ancestor by undue influence (Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820); but not an action which does not seek to recover real property, but merely to reform a deed upon the ground of mutual mistake. Hart v. Walton, 9 Cal. App. 502; 99 Pac. 719. In an action to quiet title under the so-called McEnerney Act, proof of the actual possession by the plaintiff of the land in question at the time the action was commenced and when the affidavit accompanying it was made, is necessary to the rendition of a judgment for the plaintiff. Vanderbilt v. All Persons, 163 Cal. 507; 126 Pac. 158.

Possession required of one who invokes McEnerney Act. See note post, § 323.

Possession by one tenant in common. As between tenants in common, the possession of one is the possession of all; in order to set the statute running in favor of one tenant against his co-tenant, it is necessary that there shall be an adverse possession (Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 500; 24 Pac. 172; 25 Pac. 64; and see Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100); and where such possession is adverse for the required time, it will operate in favor of a tenant in common against his co-tenant (Tully v. Tully, 71 Cal. 338; 12 Pac. 246); as where they hold in hostility to each other and in severalty. Casserly v. Alameda County, 153 Cal. 170; 94 Pac. 765; Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364. The exercise of unequivocal, overt, and notorious acts of ownership, by a tenant in common in possession, imparts notice that disseisin is intended (Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1; 38 Pac. 521); and an open and notorious possession, and claim of ownership, continued for more than five years, constitutes an ouster of co-tenants, and the bar of the statute intervenes (Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; Bath v. Valdez, 70 Cal. 350; 11 Pac. 724; Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658); but where the possession of one tenant in common has not been disturbed by his co-tenants, and there have been no acts of exclusion equivalent to an ouster, the statute does not run as against his right or title (McCauley v. Harvey, 49 Cal. 497); in other words, there must be a repudiation of the trust, and a notice thereof brought home to the co-tenant, before any adverse possession can arise. Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 500; 24 Pac. 172; 25 Pac. 64. The question of whether a person entered into possession claiming ownership of the whole, or whether he acknowledged a co-tenancy, is one of fact. Alvarado v. Nordholt, 95 Cal. 116; 30 Pac. 211. A valid decree in partition severs the unity of possession, and is conclusive as to all rights in other parts of the land, irrespective of the adverse possession by those to whom they were allotted. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

Adverse possession. Adverse possession is merely possession hostile as against a particular claim, to which it is opposed in proof (McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7); but it is of the very essence of adverse possession, that the holder claim the right to his possession, not under, but in opposition to, the title to which his possession is alleged to be adverse. Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33. The statute does not begin to run against a remainderman until the termination of the life estate, when he becomes entitled to the possession. Pryor v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554; 109 Am. St. Rep. 162; 82 Pac. 202. And, although complete and exclusive, it must also continue for the full period. Baum v. Reay, 96 Cal. 462; 29 Pac. 117; 31 Pac. 561; Watts v. Gallagher, 97 Cal. 47; 31 Pac. 626. Adverse possession does not ripen into title, unless it is continued uninterruptedly for five years (Hayes v. Martin, 45 Cal. 559); and, to effect a bar, the possession must be continuous and exclusive for the full period. Hagar v. Spect, 48 Cal. 406. It must also be actual and complete, as well as continuous. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408; Kockemann v. Bickel, 92 Cal. 665; 28 Pac. 686; Miller v. Bensinger, 3

Cal. Unrep. 704; 31 Pac. 578. The possession of a part, only, will not prevent the bar of the statute as to that not in possession. Weed v. Snook, 144 Cal. 439; 77 Pac. 1023. Title by adverse possession may be acquired, though commenced under a mistake. Steckter v. Ewing, 6 Cal. App. 761; 93 Pac. 286.

Adverse possession must continue for five years. The occupation of land adversely for five years continuously, without interruption, and in compliance with all the requirements of the law, vests absolute title in the occupant, as much as any written conveyance, which is known as title by prescription (Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7; Morris v. De Celis, 51 Cal. 55; Langford v. Poppe, 56 Cal. 73; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroup, 63 Cal. 150; Johnson v. Brown, 63 Cal. 391; Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456; 12 Pac. 491); and is sufficient not only to bar a claimant under a legal title, but also to create a title. Owsley v. Matson, 156 Cal. 401, 104 Pac. 983.

When possession is not adverse. The possession of an administrator is the possession of the heir. Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738; Brenham v. Storey, 39 Cal. 179. In case of a trustee, there must be an open and unequivocal repudiation of the trust by the trustee, and actual knowledge thereof by the cestui que trust, to set the statute running against an action to enforce the trust (Luco v. De Toro, 91 Cal. 405; 27 Pac. 1082; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335; 99 Am. Dec. 384; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624; Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 230; Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Janes v. Throckmorton, 57 Cal. 368), as the possession of a trustee is the possession of the cestui que trust. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Pac. 624. The possession of one, gained by a partial distribution, while the estate remains unclosed, is the possession of all the distributees. Estate of Grider, 81 Cal. 571; 22 Pac. 908. A party holding in one capacity cannot claim adversely in another. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Shipman, 79 Cal. 288; 21 Pac. 830. The conveyance of title by the party in possession makes him the tenant of the grantee (Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 366); but where he remains in adverse possession for a period of five years, he acquires a title as against his grantee. Dorland v. Magilton, 47 Cal. 485. An adverse possession, taken after a deed, and held the time required by statute, is good as against the grantee. Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175; 87 Am. Dec. 111. As between a landlord and a tenant in possession, the statute does not run against the landlord in favor of the tenant (Doolan v. McCauley, 66 Cal. 476; 6 Pac. 130; Ouoto v. Restano, 89 Cal. 63; 26 Pac. 788); and the same rule applies to a subtenant. Standley v. Stephens, 66 Cal. 541; 6 Pac. 420; Millett v. Lagomarsino, 107 Cal. 102; 40 Pac. 25. This is under the general rule, that a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title. Tewksbury v. Magraff, 33 Cal. 237; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. As between a mortgagee in possession and the mortgagor, unless there has been some breach of condition of the mortgage, the possession of the mortgagee is not adverse to the mortgagor. Husheon v. Husheon, 71 Cal. 407; 12 Pac. 410; Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874. The same rule applies as between a pledgee and the pledgor (Cross v. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co., 73 Cal. 302; 2 Am. St. Rep. 808; 14 Pac. 885); and also as between a vendee and the vendor, under a contract of purchase, unless there is some hostility, manifested by some unequivocal acts brought to the knowledge of the vendor (Kerns v. Dean, 77 Cal. 555; 19 Pac. 817); but a grantee's entry under purchase is adverse to the grantor, and he may set up an adverse title from an independent source. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120. When the grantor remains in possession after a sale, or subsequently takes repossession, and holds adversely to the grantee, he may acquire adverse title. Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175; 87 Am. Dec. 111; Dorland v. Magilton, 47 Cal. 485; Lord v. Sawyer, 57 Cal. 65; Garabaldi v. Shattuck, 70 Cal. 511; 11 Pac. 778. The statute does not commence to run against a remainderman until the death of the tenant, as he is not entitled to possession during the life of the tenant (Pryor v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554; 109 Am. St. Rep. 162; 82 Pac. 202); nor against an infant until he attains his majority (Burton v. Robinson, 51 Cal. 186); nor does it run as against the certificate of purchase of swamp or overflowed lands, but commences to run on the date of the issuance of the patent thereon. Manly v. Howlett, 55 Cal. 94; Easton v. O'Reilly, 63 Cal. 305; Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386; Riverside Land etc. Co. v. Jansen, 66 Cal. 300; 5 Pac. 486; O'Connor v. Fogle, 63 Cal. 9; Reed v. Ybarra, 50 Cal. 465. The statute commences to run against a purchaser at a sheriff's sale on the date of the delivery of the sheriff's deed. Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 535; 23 Am. St. Rep. 500; 26 Pac. 1097. An action to compel the conveyance of property is not barred, so long as the purchaser is in possession of the property agreed to be conveyed (Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440); and where the vendee has performed his part of the contract, the statute does not commence to run against his right to specific performance, so long as he remains in possession (Fleishman v. Woods, 135 Cal. 256; 67 Pac. 276); and where the distributee of an estate has held the same adversely for more than five years, and has paid all taxes, an action to recover the estate is barred. Gavin v. Phillips, 12 Cal. App. 34; 106 Pac. 424.

Possession by predecessor. Under this section, the grantee may tack to his own possession the possession of his grantor, for the purpose of working out a bar against the holder of the legal title (Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175; 87 Am. Dec. 111); but where the predecessor is barred by the statute, one claiming under him is barred also. Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88. An heir has only such right as the ancestor might have. Page v. Page, 143 Cal. 602; 77 Pac. 452.

Legal title not aided by adverse possession. Possession held under legal title cannot gain anything from adverse possession. Howell v. Slausen, 83 Cal. 539; 23 Pac. 692.

Possession under permission. No prescriptive title can be acquired, where occupancy of the land is under permission of the owner of the title. Feliz v. Los Angeles, 58 Cal. 73; Ball v. Kehl, 95 Cal. 606; 30 Pac. 780; Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713.

No adverse possession against public. There can be no adverse user, against the public (Hoadley v. San Francisco, 50 Cal. 265; People v. Pope, 53 Cal. 437; Visalia v. Jacob, 65 Cal. 434; 52 Am. Rep. 303; 4 Pac. 433; San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 170; 13 Pac. 405; Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623; 26 Pac. 1106; Oreña v. Santa Barbara, 91 Cal. 621; 28 Pac. 268), of land dedicated to a public use (San Francisco v. Bradbury, 92 Cal. 414; 28 Pac. 803; Yolo County v. Barney, 79 Cal. 375; 12 Am. St. Rep. 152; 21 Pac. 833; Board of Education v. Martin, 92 Cal. 209; 28 Pac. 799); nor can title to a public street be acquired by adverse user, except where the land has ceased to be a public street, and is held by the city merely as a proprietary interest. Red Bluff v. Walbridge, 15 Cal. App. 770; 116 Pac. 77. This section applies to adverse possession of squares by a town, city, and county. Casserly v. Alameda County, 153 Cal. 170; 94 Pac. 765.

Payment of taxes. Where it is necessary to pay taxes to secure a good title by adverse possession, such title is defeated by a failure to pay the taxes for a single year. Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713. There is no adverse possession, under the occupation of land, where the occupier fails to pay the taxes. O'Connor v. Fogle, 63 Cal. 9; Berniaud v. Beecher, 71 Cal. 38; 11 Pac. 802; Gavin v. Phillips, 12 Cal. App. 34; 106 Pac. 424. The payment of taxes by a third person, merely as the result of an erroneous assessment, does not affect the title to land occupied by the owner, nor debar him of his right to have it quieted. Vanderbilt v. All Persons, 163 Cal. 507; 126 Pac. 158. The proof of the payment of taxes is admissible to show claim of title, and that it had not been abandoned. Baum v. Reay, 96 Cal. 462; 29 Pac. 117; 31 Pac. 561; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Whittaker, 109 Cal. 268; 41 Pac. 1083.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 325.

1. Real property. Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540; Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275; Fremont v. Seals, 18 Cal. 433; Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 596; Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 383; Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 3. For a digest of the above-cited decisions on the several points involved, see note to § 312, ante, where these cases are discussed.

2. Division lines. Fences. As to division lines between adjacent lands, acquiescence for the time prescribed by the statute of limitations concerning real property may fix the division line as to the owners, etc. Sneed v. Osborn, 25 Cal. 626, and authorities cited.

3. Right to use running water. Adverse enjoyment. To acquire a right to the use of a running stream by adverse enjoyment or prescription, it is necessary that such adverse enjoyment or prescription should have continued for a period corresponding to the time fixed by the statute of limitations as a bar to an entry on land, viz., five years. Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 144; Davis v. Gale, 32 Cal. 26; 91 Am. Dec. 554.

4. Adverse possessor allowing others below to use water. If one taking adverse possession of water, as against a prior appropriator, suffers a portion of the same to flow down to accommodate miners working below, this does not prejudice his adverse possession so as to prevent the running of the statute of limitations. Davis v. Gale, 32 Cal. 26; 91 Am. Dec. 554.

5. Water rights acquired by adverse possession. The right to the use of a watercourse in the public mineral lands, and the right to divert and use the water taken therefrom, is acquired by appropriation and use, the person first appropriating it being deemed to have the title, as against all the world, except the United States and persons claiming under them, to the extent that he thus appropriated it before the rights of others attached. The rights thus acquired may be held, granted, abandoned, or lost by the same means as a right of the same character issuing out of lands to which a private title exists. The right of the first appropriator may be lost, in whole or in some limited portions, by the adverse possession of another. And when such person has had the continued, uninterrupted, and adverse enjoyment of the watercourse, or of some certain portion of it, during the period limited by the statute of limitations for entry upon lands, the law will presume a grant of the right so held and enjoyed by him. Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208; Balston v. Buested, 1 Camp. 463; Ricard v. Williams, 7 Wheat. 59, 5 L. Ed. 398; Williams v. Nelson, 23 Pick. 141, 34 Am. Dec. 45; Colvin v. Burnet, 17 Wend. 564; Hammond v. Zehner, 23 Barb. 473; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 509; 85 Am. Dec. 145.

6. Right to water by adverse use, by prescription. Burden of proof, etc. The general and established doctrine is, that an exclusive and uninterrupted enjoyment of water, in any particular way, for a period corresponding to the time limited by statute within which an action must be commenced for the recovery of the property or of the assumed right held and enjoyed adversely, becomes an adverse enjoyment sufficient to raise a presumption of title as against a right in any other person which might have been but was not asserted. 3 Kent's Com., pp. 441–446; Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 214; Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. 236; Johns v. Stevens, 3 Vt. 316; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 504; 85 Am.

Dec. 145. The right which the defendants claim under the grant, which they assumed to exist, as evidenced by their adverse use and enjoyment of the water for five years, they denominate an easement. An easement or servitude may be created by grant or prescription, and when created it will pass by conveyance with the dominant estate (that is, with the estate to which it is appurtenant, as an incorporeal hereditament) attached to the servient estate, subjecting the latter to the benefit of the former. But the owner of the easement or servitude has no general property in nor seisin of the servient estate, though he may, by holding a fee in the dominant estate, have an estate of inheritance in the easement or servitude. Washburn on Easements, ch. i, § 1; Ersk. Inst., p. 352; Wolfe v. Frost, 4 Sandf. Ch. 89. A grant of an estate in lands, whether corporeal or incorporeal, may be presumed from an adverse enjoyment for the period corresponding to the statute of limitations within which an action might have been maintained against the person holding and enjoying adversely. But what must be the circumstances under which such presumption may arise? In order that the enjoyment of an easement in another's land may be conclusive of the right claimed, it must have been adverse in the legal sense of the term; that is, the right must have been asserted under a claim of title, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the land, and uninterrupted. The burden of proving this is on the party claiming the easement. If he leaves it doubtful whether the enjoyment was adverse, known to the owner and uninterrupted, it is not conclusive in his favor. 2 Greenleaf on Evidence, § 539; Greenleaf's Cruise, tit. 31, ch. i, note 1 to § 21, and cases therein cited. According to the common-law system of pleading, a defendant could not give in evidence under the general issue, in excuse or justification of an alleged trespass, a right of common, or a public or private right of way, or a right to an easement, nor any interest in land short of property or right of possession. Saunders v. Wilson, 15 Wend. 338; Babcock v. Lamb, 1 Cow. 239; Rouse v. Bardin, 1 H. Bl. 352; 2 Saund. Pl. & Ev., p. 856; 1 Chitty's Pleading, p. 505. A defense of the kind mentioned had to be pleaded specially. The reason of the rule was to prevent surprise. Demick v. Chapman, 11 Johns. 132. The rule of the common law here referred to has not been changed so as to obviate the necessity of pleading specially such defense. By the law of this state the defendants are bound to interpose their alleged right by answer as well as by evidence, provided it be conceded that plaintiff had the prior right and title to the waters of the creek. American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 366, 367.

7. Generally. See note to § 320, post.

§ 319. Such seisin, when necessary in action or defense arising out of title to or rents of real property. No cause of action, or defense to an action, arising out of the title to real property, or to rents or profits out of the same, can be effectual, unless it appear that the person prosecuting the action, or making the defense, or under whose title the action is prosecuted, or the defense is made, or the ancestor, predecessor, or grantor of such person was seised or possessed of the premises in question within five years before the commencement of the act in respect to which such action is prosecuted or defense made.

Action includes special proceeding of civil nature. Post, § 363.

Defense of actions concerning real estate. The preceding section relates to actions for the recovery of real property, while this relates to the defense thereof (Richardson v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 289); but it does not apply to actions involving mere easements in land (Woodruff v. North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Co., 18 Fed. 753; 9 Sawy. 441), nor to actions to quiet title (Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284), nor to cases where the defendant was never in the actual possession, and never paid any taxes assessed against the property (Bernaud v. Beecher, 71 Cal. 38; 11 Pac. 802): it applies to personal actions, founded upon title to real property, such as actions to recover damages to real property, rents, etc. Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305; Richardson v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 289. It does not bar the right of a mortgagor to redeem, as against the mortgagee in possession, unless the mortgagee has had continuous adverse possession for five years after the breach of condition in the mortgage. Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874; Cohen v. Mitchell, 2 Cal. Unrep. 629; 9 Pac. 649.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 325.

1. Rents or profits. See Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 159, affirming Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574.

2. In an action to recover lands, the plaintiff can recover the rents and profits for three years only, prior to the commencement of the action, if the defendant pleads the statute of limitations as to them. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330, and authorities cited therein; affirming, also, Richardson v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 289; see also § 312, ante; see note to next section.

§ 320. Entry on real estate. No entry upon real estate is deemed sufficient or valid as a claim, unless an action be commenced thereupon within one year after making such entry, and within five years from the time when the right to make it descended or accrued.

Legislation § 320. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 325.

Effect of amendment of statute. Where the statute of limitations is amended, the time fixed therein runs only from the date of the passage of the amendatory act. Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381; Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1; Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275; Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 325.

1. Mexican grants. This chapter embodies the provisions of statutes existing prior to the adoption of the code relative to the time of commencing actions for the recovery of real property. They have been carefully revised and placed in logical order, but no substantial changes have been made. Section 6 of the act of 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 325) provides, among other things, that "any person claiming real property, or the possession thereof, or any right or interest therein, under the title derived from the Spanish or Mexican governments, or the authorities thereof, which shall not have been fully confirmed by the government of the United States, or its legally constituted authorities, more than five years before the passage of this act, may have five years after the passage of this act in which to commence his action for the recovery of such real property, or the possession thereof, or any right or interest therein, or for rents or profits out of the same, or to make his defense to an action founded upon the title thereto; and provided further, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to extend or enlarge the time for commencing actions for the recovery of real estate or the possession thereof, under title derived from Spanish or Mexican governments, in a case where final confirmation has already been had, other than is now allowed under the act to which this act is amendatory." As the time fixed in this statute has expired, and all rights that have accrued under it are preserved by the saving clause in the preliminary part of this code (see § 8, ante; and see Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381), it was thought unnecessary to insert any provisions excepting lands within those grants from the operation of the general rule relating to real actions. For decisions respecting these grants, see Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381; Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1; Dominguez v. Dominguez, 7 Cal. 424. Statute does not begin to run until after issuance of patent. Reed v. Spicer, 27 Cal. 58; Figg v. Mayo, 39 Cal. 262; Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87; Judson v. Malloy, 40 Cal. 300; Johnson v. Van Dyke, 20 Cal. 225; Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114. But see the elaborate opinion of Justice Field in Montgomery v. Bevans, 1 Sawy. 653; Fed. Cas. No. 9735; also Palmer v. Low, opinion by Sawyer, J., 2 Sawy. 248; Fed. Cas. No. 10693; 4 Pac. Law Rep. No. 20.

2. Pleadings. Anderson v. Fisk 36 Cal. 625; Ord v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 67; Richardson v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 289; Vassault v. Seitz, 31 Cal. 228; Beach v. Gabriel, 29 Cal. 584; Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23; 85 Am. Dec. 157; Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 33 Cal. 448. See note to § 312, ante.

§ 321. Possession, when presumed. Occupation deemed under legal title, unless adverse. In every action for the recovery of real property, or the possession thereof, the person establishing a legal title to the property is presumed to have been possessed thereof within the time required by law, and the occupation of the property by any other person is deemed to have been under and in subordination to the legal title, unless it appear that the property has been held and possessed adversely to such legal title, for five years before the commencement of the action.

Adverse possession. Post, §§ 322–325.
Forcible entry, one year. Post, § 1172.
Payment of taxes. See post, § 325.

Legislation § 321. Enacted March 11; 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Kinds of adverse possession. Adverse possession is of different kinds: 1. Where the possession is taken by bow and spear, without color of title, but with the intent to claim the fee, exclusive of any other right, and to hold it against all comers; and 2. Where the possession is taken under a claim of title, founded upon a written instrument, as a conveyance, or upon the decree or judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. The first is sufficient to put the statute of limitations in motion, and, at the expiration of five years, vests in the usurper a right, under the statute, which is equivalent to title; but, until the statute has run, he is, as to the true owner, a mere intruder without right. It cannot be said, in any just sense, that, as between him and the true owner, a case of conflicting title is presented until the statute has run; or that, until then, there can be, as between them, any substantial contest as to the title; but as to the other or second kind of adverse possession, the case is otherwise: there, the possession is accompanied by at least a colorable title, and an actual and substantial contest as to the title must arise whenever the party out of possession undertakes to assert his rights in any kind of action, for they occupy the position of conflicting claimants as to the true title, and not as to possession only. Where the defendant is in possession as a naked trespasser, and his right rests only upon a bald assertion, which merely suffices to put the statute of limitations in motion, he is not in a position to contest the title of the plaintiff, in such a sense as to defeat a personal action; for notwithstanding he may have alleged title in himself, it turns out to be false, and at the outcome it is made clear that title, although apparently a fact in issue, is so in no just sense, but only in seeming, and is in fact only exhibited by the plaintiff collaterally for the purpose of proving his right to the property in the suit. Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574.

Possession, when adverse. To constitute adverse possession, and set the statute of limitations running, terminating in a bar, there must be present, and proved, five distinct elements: 1. The possession must be actual, exclusive, open, and notorious, and not clandestine; 2. It must be hostile to the plaintiff's title; 3. It must be under a claim of title, exclusive of any other right, as one's own; 4. It must be continuous and uninterrupted for five years prior to the commencement of the action, not necessarily next preceding that event; 5. The taxes must have been paid for five years by the occupant. Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal.

586; 49 Am. Rep. 100. When so existing, it not only bars the remedy, but extinguishes the right of the holder of the title. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278. By adverse enjoyment, water flowing through a natural channel may ripen into title (Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 136); as also may the use of a ditch constructed for conveying water. Campbell v. West, 44 Cal. 646. It is sufficient to constitute adverse possession of public lands, that the defendant claims the right against all the world, except the United States: it is not necessary that it be under color of title. Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605; Hayes v. Martin, 45 Cal. 559; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7. A parol gift of land, followed by possession by the donee, is a sufficient basis for the acquisition of title by adverse possession (Baldwin v. Temple, 101 Cal. 396; 35 Pac. 1008), and the rule operates in favor of the grantee of such parol donee (Bakersfield Town Hall Ass'n v. Chester, 55 Cal. 98); but a mere trespasser cannot invoke this rule. Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605.

Open and notorious. The possession must be actual, open, exclusive, and notorious (Thompson v. Pioche, 44 Cal. 508; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360; Lick v. Diaz, 30 Cal. 65; Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216; Ball v. Kehl, 95 Cal. 606; 30 Pac. 780); and the claim must be absolute, that is, not dependable on any contingency, and must continue without interruption for the statutory period. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Gernon v. Sissons, 21 Cal. App. 123; 131 Pac. 85. The possession must be of such a character as to operate as notice to the holder of the legal title that possession is held under right (Mauldin v. Cox, 67 Cal. 387; 7 Pac. 804); that is, it must be sufficiently open and notorious to notify a prudent and ordinary owner of its existence and of its hostile character (De Frieze v. Quint, 94 Cal. 653; 28 Am. St. Rep. 151; 30 Pac. 1; Smith v. Yule, 31 Cal. 180; 89 Am. Dec. 167; Thompson v. Pioche, 44 Cal. 508; Thompson v. Felton, 54 Cal. 547; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456; 12 Pac. 491); and it must be of such a character as to give a right of action to the real owner. Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303; 10 Am. Rep. 299; Anaheim Water Co. v. Semi-Tropic Water Co., 64 Cal. 185; 30 Pac. 623; Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Crane, 80 Cal. 181; 22 Pac. 76; Alta Land etc. Co. v. Hancock, 85 Cal. 219; 20 Am. St. Rep. 217; 24 Pac. 645; Sullivan v. Zeiner, 98 Cal. 346; 20 L. R. A. 730; 33 Pac. 209. Such possession will charge another, dealing with the owner in relation thereto. Stafford v. Lick, 7 Cal. 479; Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363; 73 Am. Dec. 543; Woodson v. McCune, 17 Cal. 298; Havens v. Dale, 18 Cal. 359; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Daubenspeck v. Platt, 22 Cal. 330; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393; Fair v. Stevenot, 29 Cal. 486; Killey v. Wilson, 33 Cal. 690; Pell v. McElroy, 36 Cal. 268; O'Rourke v. O'Connor, 39 Cal. 442; Moss v. Atkinson, 44 Cal. 3; Hellman v. Levy, 55 Cal. 117; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroupe, 63 Cal. 150. Neither the cases nor the text-writers agree in their classification of notices. In most cases, all descriptions of notices, except positive,—those in which the knowledge of the deed is brought directly home to the party,—are held to be included among constructive notices; but in others, all notices that are not deduced as conclusive presumptions of law arising from a given state of facts, are considered to fall within the class of actual notices. Fair v. Stevenot, 29 Cal. 486. In this state, constructive notice of title is founded upon the recordation of the instrument. Mesick v. Sunderland, 6 Cal. 297; Stafford v. Lick, 7 Cal. 479. Actual possession of land, with the exercise of the usual acts of ownership and dominion over it, operates, in law, as constructive notice to all the world of the claim of title under which the possessor holds. Talbert v. Singleton, 42 Cal. 390; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroupe, 63 Cal. 150.

Must be hostile. The possession must also be hostile to the plaintiff's title. Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100. The essence of adverse title is, that the holder claims the right to his possession, not under, but in opposition to, the title to which his title is alleged to be adverse (McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7); and where the occupancy of land is by acquiescence or permission of the owner, it is not adverse to the title of the owner. Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; Ball v. Kehl, 95 Cal. 606; 30 Pac. 780. Hostility to a particular claim of another party in the action is sufficient to raise the bar of the statute between them (McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7), and this does not depend on whether or not the occupant had knowledge of his interference with the rights of the other party (Grimm v. Curley, 43 Cal. 250), that being only a circumstance tending to establish more strongly the good faith and exclusiveness of the occupant's claim. Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136. Holding possession under another is not adverse (Von Glahn v. Brennan, 81 Cal. 261; 22 Pac. 596); for it is in subordination to the owner's title. Frink v. Alsip, 49 Cal. 103; Gernon v. Sisson, 21 Cal. App. 123; 131 Pac. 85. Thus, the possession of a vendee, under a contract of sale, after rescission, is not adverse to that of the vendor (Frisbie v. Price, 27 Cal. 253; Simpson v. Applegate, 75 Cal. 342; 17 Pac. 237), unless the vendee denies the relation of landlord and tenant, existing in such case. Smith v. Shaw, 16 Cal. 88; Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224; 83 Am. Dec. 61; Bolton v. Landers, 27 Cal. 104; Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507; Simpson v. Applegate, 75 Cal. 342; 17 Pac. 237. This is so, where a vendee, through fraud and mistake, enters upon a different tract, belonging to the same vendor. Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7; Thompson v. Felton, 54 Cal. 547. A lease of land interrupts the running of the statute in favor of the lessee. Abbey Homestead Ass'n v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614. The general rule is, that the tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title, either during the term of the lease or during his occupancy under such entry (see Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Tewksbury v. Magraff, 33 Cal. 237; Franklin v. Merida, 35 Cal. 558; 95 Am. Dec. 129); but where the lessee is deceived or imposed upon by the lessor, the rule is otherwise. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroup, 63 Cal. 150. The acceptance, by the owner, of the possession of his land from another, does not destroy his title (Baldwin v. Temple, 101 Cal. 396; 35 Pac. 1008); and an offer, after title has been acquired by adverse possession, to purchase of the holder of the paper title whatever interest he may have, for the purpose of quieting title, does not give effect to such paper title, nor render invalid the title of the party making the offer. Furlong v. Cooney, 72 Cal. 322; 14 Pac. 12; Frick v. Simon, 75 Cal. 337; 7 Am. St. Rep. 177; 17 Pac. 439; Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. While an offer to purchase or rent property, and not merely to purchase an outstanding or adverse claim or title to quiet possession or protect from litigation, amounts to a recognition of title (Lovell v. Frost, 44 Cal. 471; Abbey Homestead Ass'n v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Mead, 63 Cal. 112), yet the purchase of the outstanding title, by one in actual adverse possession, does not affect the character of that adverse possession (Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658), nor estop him from setting up the statute of limitations. Schuhman v. Garratt, 16 Cal. 100; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; Lovell v. Frost, 44 Cal. 471. In a mutual contract for the exchange of land, the time for performance not being specified, where one party performs, the statute runs from the date of the delivery of the deed. Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7; Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 486; Hill v. Grigsby, 35 Cal. 656; Gernon v. Sisson, 21 Cal. App. 123; 131 Pac. 85.

Under claim of title. The possession must also be under a claim of title, exclusive of any other, as one's own. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Kile v. Tubbs, 23 Cal. 431; Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154; Garrison v. McGlockley, 38 Cal. 78; Lovell v. Frost, 44 Cal. 471; Thompson v. Pioche, 44 Cal. 508; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100. The person must not only have possession adverse to the true owner, but he must claim title as against him during the statutory period. Lovell v. Frost, 44 Cal. 471; Rix v. Horstmann, 93 Cal. 502; 29 Pac. 120; Gillespie v. Jones, 47 Cal. 259. The entry with color of title, where the occupation is of a broad nature, will be held to be coextensive with the deed. Gunn v. Bates, 6 Cal. 263; Rose v. Davis, 11 Cal. 133; Baldwin v. Simpson, 12 Cal. 560; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574; Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37; 76 Am. Dec. 567; Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291; 82 Am. Dec. 738; Kile v. Tubbs, 23 Cal. 431, 432; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122; 85 Am. Dec. 103; Hoag v. Pierce, 28 Cal. 187; Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630; Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481. But this rule is not applicable where one conveys a large tract, with no color of title beyond the possession of a limited portion thereof, as the right of possession cannot be so extended (Kile v. Tubbs, 23 Cal. 431), so that the actual entry and occupation of a part of a tract, under a deed, by one claiming the whole, gives adverse title only to the extent of his actual, as distinguished from his constructive, possession. Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630. Acquiescence in and adoption of ambiguous calls in a deed are conclusive upon the parties and their privies (Hastings v. Stark, 36 Cal. 122); but where the parties are ignorant of the true boundary line, and agree upon a boundary line until the true line can be ascertained, the possession of neither is adverse to the other. Irvine v. Adler, 44 Cal. 559; Quinn v. Windmiller, 67 Cal. 461; 8 Pac. 14; White v. Spreckels, 75 Cal. 610; 17 Pac. 715; Helm v. Wilson, 76 Cal. 476; 18 Pac. 604; Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136; Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781; Peters v. Gracia, 110 Cal. 89; 42 Pac. 455. There must be a recognition of and an acquiescence in the boundary line as the true line, before there is any estoppel as to either party (Sneed v. Osborn, 25 Cal. 619; Columbet v. Pacheco, 48 Cal. 395; Moyle v. Connolly, 50 Cal. 295; Biggins v. Champlin, 59 Cal. 113; Cooper v. Vierra, 59 Cal. 282; Johnson v. Brown, 63 Cal. 391; Quinn v. Windmiller, 67 Cal. 461; 8 Pac. 14); but an actual dispute as to the boundary line is not necessary as the basis for an agreed boundary. Helm v. Wilson, 76 Cal. 476; 18 Pac. 604; Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136. Where, however, one coterminous proprietor erects a division-fence, claiming it to be the true boundary line, and holds it adversely for the required time, the other party cannot afterwards question it, although he never acquiesced in such erection, but actually protested against it. Whitman v. Steiger, 46 Cal. 256; Truett v. Adams, 66 Cal. 218; 5 Pac. 96; and see Quinn v. Windmiller, 67 Cal. 461; 8 Pac. 14. Possession of land by mistake has been said to want the essential elements of adverse possession (Sheils v. Haley, 61 Cal. 157); but this doctrine has been criticised and overruled (Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781; Grimm v. Curley, 43 Cal. 250; Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136; Mayor and Common Council v. Trimble, 41 Cal. 536); and a holding, by mistake, adversely, for the time required by the statute, gives a perfect title to the premises. Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; Williams v. Sutton, 43 Cal. 65; Langford v. Poppe, 56 Cal. 73. The court has, however, held, that where the coterminous proprietors are in possession, under mutual mistake as to the division line, such possession is not adverse. Smith v. Robarts, 2 Cal. Unrep. 604; 9 Pac. 104; Irvine v. Adler, 44 Cal. 559; Allen v. Reed, 51 Cal. 362; Sheils v. Haley, 61 Cal. 157. A user, which had its origin in a license or a permission, may ripen into a perfect title by prescription, if exercised under claim of right. Barbour v. Pierce, 42 Cal. 657. Thus, the projection of a house over the land of another may become evidence of a right to continue the same. Gillespie v. Jones, 47 Cal. 259.

Must be continuous and uninterrupted for five years. The adverse user must be under claim of title for the statutory period, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the other party. American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360; Alta Land etc. Co. v. Hancock, 85 Cal. 219; 20 Am. St. Rep. 217; 24 Pac. 645; Faulkner v. Rondini, 104 Cal. 140; 37 Pac. 883. The right to overflow lands may be acquired by adverse user; but there must be an uninterrupted enjoyment for the period of five years (Grigsby v. Clear Lake Water Works Co., 40 Cal. 396), and the possession must also be continuous (San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278; Mayor and Common Council v. Trimble, 41 Cal. 536; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63; 79 Pac. 739), in the party who first became adverse, and his successors in interest. Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 136; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 504; 85 Am. Dec. 145; San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278; Mayor and Common Council v. Trimble, 41 Cal. 536; Bakersfield Town Hall Ass'n v. Chester, 55 Cal. 98; McGrath v. Wallace, 85 Cal. 622; 24 Pac. 793. An interruption of the adverse possession, however slight, within the period, prevents the acquisition by prescription (American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360; Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135; Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456; 12 Pac. 491; Alta Land etc. Co. v. Hancock, 85 Cal. 219; 20 Am. St. Rep. 217; 24 Pac. 645; McGrath v. Wallace, 85 Cal. 622; 24 Pac. 793); and this is so, even where the interruption was by force or fraud (Mayor and City Council v. Trimble, 41 Cal. 536), or by the judgment of a court (McGrath v. Wallace, 85 Cal. 622; 24 Pac. 793), and even against a tenant in possession, although the landlord was not a party. Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738. But the mere commencement of a suit, afterwards abandoned, does not disturb the possession (Breon v. Robrecht, 118 Cal. 469; 62 Am. St. Rep. 247; 50 Pac. 689; 51 Pac. 33), nor is the possession interrupted, where a judgment is not executed; there must be an actual entry under the judgment. Carpenter v. Natoma Water etc. Co., 63 Cal. 616. During the pendency of an action affecting the title to the property, no new right can be acquired, because during that period the right of possession is sub judice. Kirsch v. Kirsch, 113 Cal. 56; 45 Pac. 164; Breon v. Robrecht, 118 Cal. 469; 62 Am. St. Rep. 247; 50 Pac. 689; 51 Pac. 33.

Presumption as to continuance of status. The rule that status, once established, is presumed to continue until the contrary appears, applies to title; and when once shown to exist in a party, he need not show he has not parted with it. Metteer v. Smith, 156 Cal. 572; 105 Pac. 735. It must, however, be shown, where there have been several successive occupants, not only that the occupation was unbroken, but also that there was a privity of estate between such occupants (People v. Klumpke, 41 Cal. 263; San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278); but it need not be for the five years next preceding the commencement of the action, for, when title is once acquired, it exists until lost by another adverse possession. Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431. This is on the theory that adverse possession for the period prescribed in the statute operates to convey a complete title to a party, as much so as any written conveyance; and such a title is not only an interest in the land, but it is a title of the highest character, the absolute dominion over it, and the appropriate mode of conveying it is by deed. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; Owsley v. Matson, 156 Cal. 401; 104 Pac. 983.

Taxes must have been paid. It is also essential that the taxes assessed against the property shall have been paid by the occupant. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Adverse possession not presumed. Possession is presumed to be in subordination to the legal title, unless it be admitted by the opposing party, or found as a fact that the possession was adverse. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 506. See note to § 312, ante.

§ 322. Occupation under written instrument or judgment, when deemed adverse. When it appears that the occupant, or those under whom he claims, entered into the possession of the property under claim of title, exclusive of other right, founding such claim upon a written instrument, as being a conveyance of the property in question, or upon the decree or judgment of a competent court, and that there has been a continued occupation and possession of the property included in such instrument, decree, or judgment, or of some part of the property, under such claim, for five years, the property so included is deemed to have been held adversely, except that when it consists of a tract divided into lots, the possession of one lot is not deemed a possession of any other lot of the same tract.

Entry not under written instrument. See post, § 325.

Possession, defined. Actual possession means possession accompanied by real and effectual enjoyment of the property; that possession which follows subjection of the property to the will and dominion of the claimant, to the exclusion of others; and it must be evidenced by occupation or cultivation, or other appropriate use, according to the locality and character of the particular premises. Wolf v. Baldwin, 19 Cal. 306; Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630; Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15. Occupancy under a claim of right must be deemed adverse. Knight v. Cohen, 7 Cal. App. 43; 93 Pac. 396.

Entry under color of title. While this section does not make a written instrument evidence of adverse possession, yet it extends the adverse possession of a part to the whole of the land embraced in the instrument (Christy v. Spring Valley Water Works, 97 Cal. 21; 31 Pac. 1110); but an entry under color of title by deed does not extend the actual possession, by construction of law, beyond the limits of the tract described in the deed. Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630. Color of title is that which in appearance is title, but which in reality is not (Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123; 8 Pac. 818); and to give color of title, the conveyance must be good in form, must contain a description of the property and profess to convey the title, and be duly executed; containing these elements or requirements, it will give color of title, although in fact invalid and insufficient to pass title, or actually void or voidable (Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123; 8 Pac. 818; Reynolds v. Lincoln, 73 Cal. 191; 14 Pac. 674; Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136; Kockemann v. Bickel, 92 Cal. 665; 28 Pac. 686); but the document should not be void on its face (Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481; Wolfskill v. Malajowich, 39 Cal. 276); for actual knowledge that the instrument is void, under which the entry is made and possession held, will vitiate the claim. Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66. Good faith in the occupant, an actual belief that he has a good right to the premises, an intent to hold the same against all the world, are necessary to constitute occupancy under color of title. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Cannon v. Union Lumber Co., 38 Cal. 672.

Possession founded on written instrument. An executory contract, the consideration having been paid, is a sufficient basis of a claim under color of title (Spect v. Hagar, 65 Cal. 443; 4 Pac. 419); and where a person in possession is an intruder, but is permitted to remain in possession under written contract of sale, the nature of his possession is thereby changed, and he holds under claim of title. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624. A vendee's actual possession of the land, and the exercise by him of the usual acts of ownership, are, in law, constructive notice of his claim of title, although the instrument under which he claims title is not recorded (Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Talbert v. Singleton, 42 Cal. 390; Moss v. Atkinson, 44 Cal. 3; Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroup, 63 Cal. 150); and the subsequent execution of a conveyance by deed relates back to the date of the contract, and conveys an absolute title, notwithstanding the fact that the grantor, subject to the contract, and before the conveyance, mortgaged the premises by an absolute deed to a third party. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Stroup, 63 Cal. 150; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 48 Cal. 7; Morris v. De Celis, 51 Cal. 55. A deed, which gives color of title, is the measure of the wrongful possession, and, when adverse possession ripens into title, it fixes the extent of the right acquired. Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123; 8 Pac. 818. A deed, void for uncertainty of description, gives right of title to one occupying under it in good faith (Tryon v. Huntoon, 67 Cal. 325; 7 Pac. 741); but a deed executed in a representative capacity, without authority, does not (McNeil v. First Congregational Society, 66 Cal. 105; 4 Pac. 1096); nor does a deed by partners, to a copartner, of the copartnership lands, as such conveyance does not change the nature of the possession. Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713. A tax deed, invalid as a conveyance of title, is sufficient to give color of title (Kockemann v. Bickel, 92 Cal. 665; 28 Pac. 686; Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66), and, although void on its face, is a written instrument, within the meaning of this section. Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66. A tax deed is void on its face, where it contains a recital that land was "assessed to A. B., and all owners and claimants known and unknown." Grimm v. O'Connell, 54 Cal. 522; Hearst v. Egglestone, 55 Cal. 365; Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66. A swamp-land certificate, where entry is made under it in good faith, gives color of title, and entry is under color of title. Goodwin v. McCabe, 75 Cal. 584; 17 Pac. 705. The actual possession essential, under this section and § 323, post, to sustain title by adverse possession, when such title is founded upon a written instrument, is required of one invoking the benefit of the McEnerney Act. Lofstad v. Murasky, 152 Cal. 64; 91 Pac. 1008.

Possession founded on judgment of court. "The decree or judgment of a competent court," mentioned in this section, is a decree or judgment adjudging that a party, or his grantor, was the owner or seised of some estate in the lands. Packard v. Johnson, 2 Cal. Unrep. 365; 4 Pac. 632. A void judgment is not sufficient to establish a claim of title (King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318); but a sheriff's deed, under a void judgment, may give color of title. Packard v. Johnson, 2 Cal. Unrep. 365; 4 Pac. 632; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123; 8 Pac. 818; contra, Bernal v. Gleim, 33 Cal. 668. A sheriff's deed, under judgment regular on its face, is color of title, within this statute. Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123; 8 Pac. 818; Russell v. Harris, 38 Cal. 426; 99 Am. Dec. 421; Jones v. Gillis, 45 Cal. 541. One who enters in good faith, under a sheriff's deed, not void upon its face, made in pursuance of a judgment of the superior court, and regular in form, does so under color of title. Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431.

When adverse possession of part treated as of whole. See notes 12 Am. Dec. 357; 125 Am. St. Rep. 302.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Entering under claim of title. The object of this section is to define accurately under what conditions a possession shall be deemed adverse when the party enters under a claim of title founded upon a written instrument, judgment, or decree. The person relying upon this section, in aid of his possession, must show that he entered not only under a claim of title, but that it was exclusive of any other right. Figg v. Mayo, 39 Cal. 262.

2. Adverse possession of predecessor. Possession to be continuous. An adverse possession for five years must be continuous in the party who is the first adverse possessor, or in him and his grantees, in order to acquire a perfect title. And an adverse possessor cannot add to his own possession that of the one who preceded him, when he did not enter into possession under or through the one who preceded. Adverse possession must be actual, not an assertion of possession by words or an action, and if the continuity is broken, either by fraud or by a wrongful entry, the protection afforded by the statute of limitations is destroyed. San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278.

3. Adverse possession may be at any time prior to action, not for five years next preceding action. The purchase of an outstanding adverse claim for the purpose of quieting title to land by one in possession claiming adversely to all others, does not estop the purchaser from setting up the statute against a third party. An adverse possessor for five years acquires a fee-simple title to the land so held. Adverse possession need not be for the five years next preceding the action; an adverse continuous possession for five years at any time prior to the commencement of the action being sufficient. A title once acquired by adverse possession for five years continues perfect until conveyed by the possessor, or until lost by another adverse possession for five years. Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205. See also, as to adverse possession, Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722.

4. Effect of creation of easement on adverse possession. The creation of an easement upon land does not prevent the statute from being set in motion and running in favor of a party entering upon and claiming the soil upon which the easement has been imposed, adversely to the grantor of the easement. San Francisco v. Calderwood, 31 Cal. 585; 91 Am. Dec. 542.

5. Adverse possession. Case. A was in possession of land five years, under claim of title. B and C, and their grantors, during this time, had a perfect title to the land. They sued D and others to recover possession of it, but did not make A a party to the action. B and C, and their assigns, recovered judgment, and, after five years had run, the sheriff turned A out of possession under a writ of restitution, issued on the judgment, and placed B and C in possession. The court held that the title of A, by adverse possession, was not impaired by this entry of B and C. See Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 230; 89 Am. Dec. 88.

6. Adverse entry upon constructive possession. Adverse possession may be acquired to part of a tract of land while the owner of the true title is in the actual possession of the other part. Actual possession of a part, with constructive possession of the rest, will not prevent the statute of limitations from running in favor of one who enters adversely upon the constructive possession. Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630.

7. Adverse possession of grantor against grantee. When a grantor takes adverse possession of land granted by him, and holds continuous adverse possession for the statutory period, he may set up the statute of limitations against the grantee. Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175; 87 Am. Dec. 111.

8. Division lines. As to location of division lines, adverse possession may establish a division boundary between adjacent owners, although it may not be the boundary specified in the deeds, if the owners have acquiesced therein for the length of time prescribed by the statute of limitations as a bar to the right of entry upon real property. Sneed v. Osborn, 25 Cal. 619.

9. Purchase at irregular sale. From lapse of time and acquiescence in the possession of the purchaser, the regularity of a sale under a power may be inferred, and a presumption indulged in, that due notice thereof, as required by the power, was given. Perfect title may be acquired by adverse possession for the statutory time. Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580.

10. Adverse possession under claim of title. It was held that the statute of limitations runs only in favor of parties in possession claiming title adversely to the whole world, and not in favor of those who assert the title to be in others. If it, therefore, never runs in favor of the plaintiff, his grantees are in no better position. To render possession adverse, so as to set in motion the statute of limitations, it must be accompanied with a claim of title, and this title, when founded "upon a written instrument as being a conveyance of the premises," must be asserted by the occupant in good faith, in the belief that he has good right to the premises against all the world. The claim must be absolute, not dependent upon any contingencies, and must be "exclusive of any other right." And to render the adverse possession thus commenced effectual as a bar to a recovery by the true owner, the possession must continue uninterrupted for five years, under such claim. When parties assert, either by declaration or by conduct, the title to property to be in others, the statute, of course, cannot run in their favor. Their possession, under such circumstances, is not adverse. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 635.

11. Adverse possession under a claim of title. It was held, to constitute a prescription by Spanish law, or a foundation for adverse possession at common law, the instrument under which the occupant entered and claims the premises must purport in its terms to transfer the title,—must be such as would, in fact, pass the title had it been executed by the true owner, and in proper form, with the exception, perhaps, of a contract to convey after payment of the consideration; and the occupant must have entered under it in good faith, in the belief that he had a right to the premises, and with the intention to hold them against the world. The possession must have been adverse in its inception, and during its continuance. Nieto v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 490.

12. Two kinds of adverse possession. Adverse possession is of different kinds: 1. Where the possession is taken by the bow and spear, without color of title, but with the intent to claim the fee, exclusive of any other right, and hold it against all comers. 2. Where the possession is taken under a claim of title founded upon a written instrument, as a conveyance or judgment of a court, etc. Either of these kinds of adverse possession is sufficient to set the statute in motion. See the differences between the rights acquired under them, discussed in the opinion of the court. Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154.

13. Persons excepted from provisions of the statute. Strict construction of the statute of limitations formerly required, etc. See note to § 312, ante, case of Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 635; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

14. Generally. See note to § 312, ante.

§ 323. What constitutes adverse possession under written instrument or judgment. For the purpose of constituting an adverse possession by any person claiming a title founded upon a written instrument, or a judgment or decree, land is deemed to have been possessed and occupied in the following cases:

1. Where it has been usually cultivated or improved;

2. Where it has been protected by a substantial inclosure;

3. Where, although not inclosed, it has been used for the supply of fuel, or of fencing-timber for the purposes of husbandry, or for pasturage, or for the ordinary use of the occupant;

4. Where a known farm or single lot has been partly improved, the portion of such farm or lot that may have been left not cleared, or not inclosed according to the usual course and custom of the adjoining country, shall be deemed to have been occupied for the same length of time as the part improved and cultivated.

Legislation § 323. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 344.

What constitutes adverse possession under written instrument. This section defines adverse possession, but it does not, in itself, define the consequences. Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305. A conveyance, by a partnership in possession, to one of the copartners, does not change the character of the possession (Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713); and a married woman, without color of title, and not living separate and apart from her husband, cannot acquire real property as her separate estate by adverse possession. Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295. An entry under a deed from the party in possession, is strong evidence of adverse possession (Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78; 65 Pac. 320; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100); and an entry under a conveyance from a purchaser at a tax sale, although the tax deed has not issued, brings the party within the provisions of this section, if possession is retained for five years. Millett v. Lagomarsino, 107 Cal. 102; 40 Pac. 25. A void tax deed, while not proof of adverse title, is admissible in evidence, under this section. Simmons v. McCarthy, 128 Cal. 455; 60 Pac. 1037. One conveying by quitclaim deed, and thereafter taking possession, which he holds adversely for five years, becomes the absolute owner of the title. Baker v. Clark, 128 Cal. 181; 60 Pac. 677. One taking possession under a deed and decree of distribution holds under color of title (Owsley v. Matson, 156 Cal. 401; 104 Pac. 983); as does also one taking under a deed from his wife, to property belonging to her, but impressed with the homestead character; and such title, by adverse possession, may extinguish the homestead. Donnelly v. Tregaskis, 154 Cal. 261; 97 Pac. 421. A mere knowledge of a defect in the title, or an offer to buy an outstanding title, after title has been acquired by adverse possession, does not break the continuity of the adverse possession. Montgomery & Mullen Lumber Co. v. Quimby, 164 Cal. 250; 128 Pac. 402. To invoke the benefit of the McEnerney Act, the actual possession required is the same as that required to sustain title by adverse possession, when such title is founded upon a written instrument. Lofstad v. Murasky, 152 Cal. 64; 91 Pac. 1008.

Cultivation and improvement. Residence upon the property is not necessary. Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90; Goodrich v. Van Landigham, 46 Cal. 601; Kelly v. Mack, 49 Cal. 523; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78; 65 Pac. 320.

Protecting inclosures. An inclosure is not necessary, where the land is held in subjection to the will and domination of the claimant, manifested in an appropriate manner (Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122; 85 Am. Dec. 103; McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 246; Sheldon v. Mull, 67 Cal. 299; 7 Pac. 710; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78; 65 Pac. 320); but, unless there is some act manifested to show the domination of the claimant, a mere claim will not constitute adverse possession. De Frieze v. Quint, 94 Cal. 653; 28 Am. St. Rep. 151; 30 Pac. 1. Where the inclosure is the only evidence of adverse possession to countervail the legal title, there must be a real and substantial inclosure and actual occupancy. Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15; Wolf v. Baldwin, 19 Cal. 306; Garrison v. Sampson, 15 Cal. 93; Jones v. Hodges, 146 Cal. 160; 79 Pac. 869; Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295. Whether natural barriers are sufficient to serve as a part of the inclosure, is a question of fact for the jury. Goodwin v. McCabe, 75 Cal. 584; 17 Pac. 705; Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24; Southmayd v. Hanley, 45 Cal. 101; Pierce v. Stuart, 45 Cal. 280. Where land is fenced in connection with other land owned by the claimant, continuous occupancy may ripen into an adverse claim (Packard v. Johnson, 2 Cal. Unrep. 365; 4 Pac. 632); and also where two adjoining owners in severalty, by mutual consent, include both tracts, with a fence around the exterior boundaries. Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206; 30 Pac. 208. The protecting inclosure need not be separately confined, but the land may be contained in an inclosure with other lands. Botsford v. Eyraud, 148 Cal. 431; 83 Pac. 1008.

Use for fuel-supply. An inclosure is not required, where the land is in some way subject to the will of the occupant claiming; thus, the use of land for firewood, and the like, is, by this section, evidence of possession; but the mere cutting up of dead timber, or the cutting down of trees, and the removal thereof from the land, does not, of itself, establish adverse possession. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408.

Use for pasturage. In a grazing country, herding sheep upon the land is a use in the ordinary and appropriate way, according to the particular locality and the quality of the property (Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78; 65 Pac. 320; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431); and pasturage, without inclosure, may constitute adverse possession (Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431), even where this use is only during the grazing season. (Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567; Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24; English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574; Montgomery & Mullen Lumber Co. v. Quimby, 164 Cal. 250; 128 Pac. 402); but it must be used continuously and uninterruptedly during the pasturing season, at least substantially. Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295.

Ordinary use. A use in the ordinary and appropriate way is sufficient adverse possession. Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567; English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574; Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Kockemann v. Bickel, 92 Cal. 665; 28 Pac. 686. The use of a town lot in the "ordinary way," although not fenced with a substantial inclosure, is sufficient, under the third subdivision of this section (Kockemann v. Bickel, 92 Cal. 665; 28 Pac. 686); and the cultivation of a town lot, which has been fenced in the usual manner, and shade-trees planted along the fence, is not necessary to create title by adverse possession. Gray v. Collins, 42 Cal. 152. The cutting of grass upon lands theretofore inclosed, and in the possession of another, is not, of itself, evidence of possession of the land on which it grows. Page v. Fowler, 37 Cal. 100.

Occupancy of part of tract. The actual possession of part of a tract of land, by a party who entered under color of title, in good faith, claiming the whole under a deed or written instrument, or a decree or judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, describing the land by metes and bounds, or other certain and definite description, is not limited to that portion in his actual possession, but his possession is extended by construction to the entire tract, where the unoccupied portion is not in the actual possession of another party at the time of entry (Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122; 85 Am. Dec. 103; and see Plume v. Seward, 4 Cal. 94; 60 Am. Dec. 599; Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37; 76 Am. Dec. 567; 76 Am. Dec. 567; English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574; Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291; 82 Am. Dec. 738; Russell v. Harris, 38 Cal. 426; 99 Am. Dec. 421); but where a party enters under a deed from one in the actual possession of only a small portion of the land, and he knows that his grantor has no title or claim of title to the remainder, he does not thereby acquire constructive possession of anything but that which was in the possession of his grantor. Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481; Cannon v. Union Lumber Co., 38 Cal. 672. Where, however, the entry is made in good faith by the grantee, who believes that he has acquired a valid title to the whole tract, he establishes a possession co-extensive with the boundaries of the deed, except as to others in actual possession. Wolfskill v. Malajowich, 39 Cal. 276.

Constructive possession. Good faith is a necessary element to obtain constructive possession and entry under color of title (Kile v. Tubbs, 23 Cal. 431; Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481; Cannon v. Union Lumber Co., 38 Cal. 672; Wolfskill v. Malajowich, 39 Cal. 276; Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66); so that where a party knows the instrument to be absolutely void, he cannot found a claim under color of title upon it, and claim constructive possession. Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; 11 Am. St. Rep. 299; 20 Pac. 66. The statute distinguishes between an entry made without any right, and one made under color or claim of title. Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481. There can be no constructive possession without color of title. Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295. As between a mere naked trespasser and the actual owner of the title, who afterwards enters on a tract, claiming the whole thereof, the constructive possession acquired by the trespasser is overcome by that of the true owner. Semple v. Cook, 50 Cal. 26. The actual ouster of the true owner from some part of the land is necessary, in order that an intruder may obtain actual possession. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408; Labory v. Los Angeles Orphan Asylum, 97 Cal. 270; 32 Pac. 231. An entry under a sheriff's deed which is regular on its face, and possession thereunder, with actual occupancy of a part of the land, extends the possession of the grantee to the bounds of his deeds (Russell v. Harris, 38 Cal. 426; 99 Am. Dec. 421); and the actual possession by an heir, of the estate of his ancestor, claiming the whole estate, extends his possession, by construction, to the boundaries of the estate (Dougherty v. Miles, 97 Cal. 568; 32 Pac. 597); but a party claiming, under title, two tracts of land, cannot establish constructive possession of both by proving possession of a portion of one. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408.

What is a sufficient plea. This section need not be pleaded; it is only necessary to plead the section which establishes the limitation, and the facts which show adverse holding may be given in evidence under the plea. Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431.

Evidence of possession. In an action to quiet title, evidence of plaintiff's actual possession for any period, under claim of ownership, is sufficient evidence of his title as against a trespasser. Morris v. Clarkin, 156 Cal. 16; 103 Pac. 180.

Adverse possession by tenant in common. See note 109 Am. St. Rep. 609.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343. A pretended possession of land by an inclosure which is not substantial, without actual occupancy of any portion of it, cannot constitute an adverse possession. Borel v. Rollins, 30 Cal. 408. See, for adverse possession, Vassault v. Seitz, 31 Cal. 225, and notes to §§ 312, 322, ante.

§ 324. Premises actually occupied under claim of title deemed to be held adversely. Where it appears that there has been an actual continued occupation of land, under a claim of title, exclusive of any other right, but not founded upon a written instrument, judgment, or decree, the land so actually occupied, and no other, is deemed to have been held adversely.

Prescription, title by. Civ. Code, § 1007.

Continual occupation, not under claim of title. The assertion of the right of possession, whether by words or by an action, is not the equivalent of possession in fact, for the purpose of the statute of limitations; it makes no difference, in respect to the operation of the statute, whether the adverse possession commenced or terminated either peaceably or forcibly; and as the adverse possession, when continued during the whole period of the statute, ripens into a title or constitutes a perfect defense, though it was initiated by force or fraud, so such possession may be interrupted by the same means as those by which it was acquired. San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278. No claim of title, without actual and exclusive possession for the period prescribed by statute, creates title by prescription. Howell v. Slauson, 83 Cal. 539; 23 Pac. 692; People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481; Berniaud v. Beecher, 71 Cal. 38; 11 Pac. 802. While residence is not indispensable to possession, yet the mere sowing of an abandoned road with grain and grass, and the grazing of cattle thereon, does not give adverse possession of the roadway. Watkins v. Lynch, 71 Cal. 21; 11 Pac. 808. The adverse possession under this and the succeeding section is different from that required of one who claims under a written instrument. Cassin v. Nicholson, 154 Cal. 497; 98 Pac. 190. It is not necessary that the prescriptive right should have its origin in a grant from the owners of the land, or by agreement with them. Bashore v. Mooney, 4 Cal. App. 276; 87 Pac. 553. Under the McEnerney Act, to prove actual and peaceable possession it is not necessary to show the acquisition of title by adverse possession, under § 323, ante. Larsen v. All Persons, 165 Cal. 407; 132 Pac. 751.

Occupancy under claim of title. Actual occupancy, adversely, under claim of title, for the period prescribed by this section, gives absolute authority, and bars the right of recovery (Baker v. Clark, 128 Cal. 181; 60 Pac. 677; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; McCormack v. Silsby, 82 Cal. 72; 22 Pac. 874; McGovern v. Mowry, 91 Cal. 383; 27 Pac. 746), of such portion as is actually occupied (Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295), and the title vests in the party who first becomes the adverse possessor, or his grantees and successors in interest. San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349; 99 Am. Dec. 278.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 344. See notes to §§ 312, 322, 323, ante.

§ 325. What constitutes adverse possession under claim of title not written. For the purpose of constituting an adverse possession by a person claiming title, not founded upon a written instrument, judgment, or decree, land is deemed to have been possessed and occupied in the following cases only:

1. Where it has been protected by a substantial inclosure.
2. Where it has been usually cultivated or improved.

Provided, however, that in no case shall adverse possession be considered established under the provisions of any section or sections of this code, unless it shall be shown that the land has been occupied and claimed for the period of five years continuously, and the party or persons, their predecessors and grantors, have paid all the taxes, state, county, or municipal, which have been levied and assessed upon such land.

Adverse possession. See ante, § 321.

Legislation § 325. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 345.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 99, adding the proviso after subd. 2.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 124; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Adverse possession under claim of title not written. The adverse possession required under this and the preceding section is different from that required of one who claims under a written instrument. Cassin v. Nicholson, 154 Cal. 497; 98 Pac. 190. This section applies only in cases where there is a contest between the holder of the legal title and a party claiming to have been in possession for five years adversely to such legal title; it does not apply where the claimant is merely protecting his possession against one who entered thereon without right of title. Shanahan v. Tomlinson, 103 Cal. 89; 36 Pac. 1009. Under this section, the land must have been protected by a substantial inclosure, or usually cultivated or improved. Los Angeles Interurban Ry. Co. v. Montijo, 153 Cal. 15; 94 Pac. 97. There are no equities in favor of a person seeking by adverse possession to acquire title to the property of another. Glowner v. De Alvarez, 10 Cal. App. 194; 101 Pac. 432. The right to take water from a stream, as against riparian owners, may be acquired by prescription. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Baldwin, 155 Cal. 280; 100 Pac. 874. The actual possession of property required to be had to give the court jurisdiction under the McEnerney Act, must be such as is necessary to sustain title by adverse possession, if maintained and continued for the period required. Lofstad v. Murasky, 152 Cal. 64; 91 Pac. 1008. See also Larsen v. All Persons, 165 Cal. 407; 132 Pac. 751. If a claim is made to land by virtue of an adverse possession under a claim of title not written, no other land than that actually occupied is deemed to have been held adversely. Los Angeles Interurban Ry. Co. v. Montijo, 153 Cal. 15; 94 Pac. 97. To constitute actual possession of land, it is not necessary that actual physical occupancy by the owner or by a tenant be shown in all cases. Vanderbilt v. All Persons, 163 Cal. 507; 126 Pac. 158. The tacking of possessions is not permitted in proving title by adverse possession. Messer v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 149 Cal. 122; 84 Pac. 835. The possession for the requisite time must have been peaceable and undisputed; and such is not its nature where the title and the right of possession are then being actually litigated; the period of such litigation cannot be included in adverse possession. Estate of Richards, 154 Cal. 478; 98 Pac. 528. The adverse possession of community property by a divorced wife does not begin to become prescriptive, as to the divorced husband or his heirs, in the absence of a notice, either actual or constructive, imparting knowledge of the hostility of her possession. Tabler v. Peverill, 4 Cal. App. 671; 88 Pac. 994. A title acquired by prescription is good until extinguished, conveyed, or lost. Strong v. Baldwin, 154 Cal. 150; 129 Am. St. Rep. 149; 97 Pac. 178.

Protection by substantial inclosures. Protection by a substantial inclosure, either by itself or with other lands, for the period of five years, is necessary to give a title by adverse possession (Sanchez v. Grace M. E. Church, 114 Cal. 295; 46 Pac. 2); for, where there is neither title nor color of title, there is no presumption of possession (Mattes v. Hall, 21 Cal. App. 552; 132 Pac. 295); but where land thus inclosed is rented by the claimant, to a tenant who subsequently attorns, without the knowledge of the claimant, to a party to whom patent has issued, and the patentee has no knowledge of the pretensions or possession of the latter, although making due inquiry, the subsequent possession by such tenant is not adverse to the patentee. Thompson v. Felton, 54 Cal. 547. There can be no adverse possession, where land has not been protected by a substantial inclosure, and not cultivated exclusively by the claimant, and taxes not paid by him, although he erected improvements thereon. O'Connor v. Fogle, 63 Cal. 9. That property is protected by a substantial inclosure, and that one claims to be the owner, is sufficient to support a conclusion of actual possession. Davis v. Crump, 162 Cal. 513; 123 Pac. 294.

Usually cultivated or improved. The lands claimed must have been usually cultivated or improved for the period of five years, in order to give title by adverse possession. Sanchez v. Grace M. E. Church, 114 Cal. 295; 46 Pac. 2; O'Connor v. Fogle, 63 Cal. 9. The lands may be said to be usually improved, where they are improved as similar property is improved. Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332; 52 Pac. 828; Gray v. Walker, 157 Cal. 381; 108 Pac. 278. If land has been improved as contemplated by this section, it is not necessary that it be either cultivated or inclosed. Gray v. Walker, 157 Cal. 381; 108 Pac. 278.

Payment of taxes. The payment, by the claimant, of the taxes assessed, if any, against the land, must be shown, since the passage of the amendment of 1878. O'Connor v. Fogle, 63 Cal. 9; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; Unger v. Mooney, 63 Cal. 586; 49 Am. Rep. 100; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113; Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713. The provision for the payment of taxes is not retroactive, and did not affect the holdings prior to that amendment (Sharp v. Blankenship, 59 Cal. 288; Johnson v. Brown, 63 Cal. 391; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 376; 14 Pac. 24; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 140; 48 Pac. 1025; Lucas v. Provines, 130 Cal. 270; 62 Pac. 509; Strong v. Baldwin, 154 Cal. 150; 129 Am. St. Rep. 149; 97 Pac. 178), which introduced a new element in the holding of land, in order to create adverse possession (Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 140; 48 Pac. 1025); but this element did not affect a title which had ripened under a former law (Sharp v. Blankenship, 59 Cal. 288; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781; Lucas v. Provines, 130 Cal. 270; 62 Pac. 509), as the legislature could not take away such title. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535; 95 Am. Dec. 205; Langford v. Poppe, 56 Cal. 73; Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 140; 48 Pac. 1025. Payment of taxes for five years continuously is essential to title by adverse possession; title by prescription cannot be established, if the owner pays the taxes for the fifth year. Glowner v. De Alvarez, 10 Cal. App. 194; 101 Pac. 432; People's Water Co. v. Lewis, 19 Cal. App. 622; 127 Pac. 506; Stanton v. Freeman, 19 Cal. App. 464; 126 Pac. 377. Title by prescription, turning upon the payment of taxes, is not made out, where there has been an interruption in the payment of taxes for the prescribed time. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Schlitz, 6 Cal. App. 174; 91 Pac. 750. When there is no tax on the land, by reason of the fact that it is mortgaged for more than its value, and no tax was paid by any one, there is no interruption of the adverse possession. Frederick v. Dickey, 91 Cal. 358; 27 Pac. 742. This section requires only the payment of taxes which have been levied and assessed, and, nothing to the contrary appearing, it will be presumed that the value of an easement on or over land was included in the taxes assessed against the land. Smith v. Smith, 21 Cal. App. 378; 131 Pac. 890. It is not enough for the claimant to prove that he paid all the taxes on land owned by him, for the defense of the statute of limitations, by adverse possession, admits that he does not own the land (Ross v. Evans, 65 Cal. 439; 4 Pac. 443); nor is it sufficient that the party thought or supposed that he was paying taxes upon the claimed land. Reynolds v. Willard, 80 Cal. 605; 22 Pac. 262; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113. Reliance upon another, who agreed to pay the taxes, but failed to do so, will not relieve the claimant of his obligation. Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 670; 41 Pac. 806. It may be, if such taxes were paid by someone else, that the adverse claimant would only be called on to prove that fact. Ross v. Evans, 65 Cal. 439; 4 Pac. 443. Payment by the mortgagee of the claimant in possession, is payment by the claimant. Brown v. Clark, 89 Cal. 196; 26 Pac. 801. It is not intended, however, that the taxes for any one year should be paid more than once; where the land claimed is assessed both to the claimant and to the owner, payment by the claimant protects his title. Cavanaugh v. Jackson, 99 Cal. 672; 34 Pac. 509. If they are paid by the legal owner, the subsequent repayment by the claimant occupying the land cannot serve to ground or maintain adverse possession. Carpenter v. Lewis, 119 Cal. 18; 50 Pac. 925; and see Cavanaugh v. Jackson, 99 Cal. 672; 34 Pac. 509. Where the adverse claimant pays all the taxes, it is immaterial that the possessor of the legal title also paid them. Owsley v. Matson, 156 Cal. 401; 104 Pac. 983. The payment of taxes by the owner, who has procured the property to be assessed to himself also, does not stop the running of the statute in favor of the claimant. Cavanaugh v. Jackson, 99 Cal. 672; 34 Pac. 509. The failure to pay the taxes is conclusive against the claimant (Martin v. Ward, 69 Cal. 129; 10 Pac. 276); but, after possession and the payment of the taxes for the time required by statute, non-payment of the taxes thereafter will not defeat the title so acquired. Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431. When the fee has been once acquired by five years' adverse possession, the failure of the adverse possessor to pay subsequent taxes assessed on the land does not divest nor in any way affect his title. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Whitaker, 109 Cal. 268; 41 Pac. 1083. The payment of taxes on a designated tract is not effectual to complete a prescriptive right to land not included within that designation. Eberhardt v. Coyne, 114 Cal. 283; 46 Pac. 84; McDonald v. Drew, 97 Cal. 266; 32 Pac. 173; Baldwin v. Temple, 101 Cal. 396; 35 Pac. 1008; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113.

Levied and assessed. The word "levy" refers to the act of the supervisors in making the levy, and the word "assessed" refers to the act of the assessor in making the assessment. Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332; 52 Pac. 828. It is immaterial to whom the lands are assessed, whether to the claimant or another, but the claimant must show that he or his grantors have paid the taxes (Ross v. Evans, 65 Cal. 439; 4 Pac. 443); and he is not relieved from the obligation to pay, by the fact that the land was not assessed separately, and he was obliged to pay taxes assessed against other lands. McNoble v. Justiniano, 70 Cal. 395; 11 Pac. 742. Payment by the owner adds nothing to his title, but it excludes any presumption that any taxes were assessed or paid by the adverse claimant. Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113. The redemption from a tax sale, by the claimant, cannot take the place of the payment of taxes levied and assessed (McDonald v. McCoy, 121 Cal. 55; 53 Pac. 421); but the fact that a portion of the property was jointly assessed to the claimant and another, to whom the claimant gave the money to pay such tax, but which was not paid, and the claimant subsequently redeemed the land from the tax sale, does not show a failure to pay. Gray v. Walker, 157 Cal. 381; 108 Pac. 278. The burden of showing payment of taxes is on the claimant, where he relies upon adverse possession under the statute of limitations, and he must either prove that no taxes were levied upon the land claimed, or that he paid all the taxes levied and assessed thereon. Ball v. Nichols, 73 Cal. 193; 14 Pac. 831; Reynolds v. Willard, 80 Cal. 605; 22 Pac. 262; Oneto v. Restano, 78 Cal. 374, 375; 20 Pac. 743; McGrath v. Wallace, 85 Cal. 622; 24 Pac. 793; Baldwin v. Temple, 101 Cal. 396; 35 Pac. 1008; Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 690; 40 Pac. 18; Eberhardt v. Coyne, 114 Cal. 283; 46 Pac. 84; Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332; 52 Pac. 828; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115, 123; 64 Pac. 113; Glowner v. De Alvarez, 10 Cal. App. 194; 101 Pac. 432; Allen v. Allen, 159 Cal. 197; 113 Pac. 160. If it does not appear that any taxes were assessed against the property, a failure to find that claimant paid all the taxes is immaterial (Heilbron v. Last Chance Water Ditch Co., 75 Cal. 117; 17 Pac. 65; Oneto v. Restano, 78 Cal. 374; 20 Pac. 743; Spargur v. Heard, 90 Cal. 221; 27 Pac. 198), as the party is not excluded from the benefit of the statute of limitations, unless the property which he claims to hold adversely was actually assessed; it is the duty of the occupant to pay all the taxes levied and assessed. Brown v. Clark, 89 Cal. 196; 26 Pac. 801; Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332; 52 Pac. 828; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113. There may be adverse possession of public property that has never been assessed for the payment of taxes. Casserly v. Alameda County, 153 Cal. 170; 94 Pac. 765.

"Upon such land." It is doubtful if the word "land," as used in this section, was intended to have any other than its real meaning; in some legal connections, it is, no doubt, used co-extensively with "real property," but, primarily, it means the soil or the earth's crust; it is not at all clear, therefore, that the section was intended to apply to mere easements or appurtenant rights; a private ditch and water right, used for domestic purposes, to water livestock, and to irrigate a definite tract of land, appurtenant to and passing with a conveyance of the land, is not required to be separately listed and taxed, but should be considered as included in the assessment of the land (Coonradt v. Hill, 79 Cal. 587; 21 Pac. 1099; Frederick v. Dickey, 91 Cal. 358; 27 Pac. 742), and, nothing to the contrary appearing, it will be presumed that it was so included in the assessment of the land. Smith v. Smith, 21 Cal. App. 378; 131 Cal. 890.

Occupied and claimed. See notes ante, §§ 321, 322, 323.

Support of findings by the evidence. See note post, § 633.

Inclosure of land as essential to adverse possession. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 750.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 344.

Subd. 1. See note to § 323, ante. It is only necessary to show that the land was held in adverse possession by a substantial inclosure, and the occupation, cultivation, or use of the land need not be proved. Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15; see also notes to §§ 312, 322, ante.

§ 326. Relation of landlord and tenant as affecting adverse possession. When the relation of landlord and tenant has existed between any persons, the possession of the tenant is deemed the possession of the landlord until the expiration of five years from the termination of the tenancy, or, where there has been no written lease, until the expiration of five years from the time of the last payment of rent, notwithstanding that such tenant may have acquired another title, or may have claimed to hold adversely to his landlord. But such presumptions cannot be made after the periods herein limited.

Tenant denying landlord's title. Post, § 1962, subd. 4.

Legislation § 326. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 344.

Possession of tenant deemed possession of landlord. The possession of a mere tenant could not, under any circumstances, be held to be adverse, until the expiration of five years from the last payment of the rent. Raynor v. Drew, 72 Cal. 307; 13 Pac. 866. A tenant in possession under a parol lease for more than one year, the conditions of which are fully performed, is presumed to hold in subordination to the title of his landlord. Doolan v. McCauley, 66 Cal. 476; 6 Pac. 130. A party is presumed to know that the possession of the tenant is deemed the possession of the landlord (Mauldin v. Cox, 67 Cal. 387; 7 Pac. 804); but the presumption that the tenant holds in subordination of his landlord ceases upon the expiration of the term of five years after the expiration of the lease. Millett v. Lagomarsino, 4 Cal. Unrep. 883; 38 Pac. 308. Possession under an agreement to purchase is not adverse. Dresser v. Allen, 17 Cal. App. 508, 510; 120 Pac. 65. An estoppel against the tenant, in favor of the landlord's title, does not endure longer than the tenant's possession under the lease; and after possession has been restored to the landlord, the tenant is released from the estoppel, and if he has paramount title, he may bring it forward (Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192); and where the relation of landlord and tenant never existed, of course this section does not apply. Millett v. Lagomarsino, 107 Cal. 102; 40 Pac. 25.

Estoppel of tenant to deny title of landlord. See note 13 Am. Dec. 68.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 344. A tenant cannot set up title against his landlord, without first surrendering possession. Tewksbury v. Magraff, 33 Cal. 237, and cases cited therein. A tenant may not be estopped, where, in taking the lease, he was imposed upon by the lessor. Gleim v. Rise, 6 Watts (Pa.), 44. So if the tenant has been ousted by title paramount, he may plead it (Haynes v. Maltby, 3 Term Rep. 441); also, that the landlord's title has ceased, or has become extinguished (Jackson v. Rowland, 6 Wend. 666, 22 Am. Dec. 557); or that he has acquired his landlord's title by purchase from him, or at a judicial sale, or by a redemption. And if the action is brought by a vendee of the landlord, the tenant may dispute the derivative title. Phillips v. Pierce, 5 B. & C. 433; Reay v. Cotter, 29 Cal. 168. So if tenant did not take possession under the lease, but was in possession at the time he took the lease, he may dispute the landlord's title without first surrendering the possession; for, not having received the possession from him, he is under no moral or legal obligation to restore it before adopting a hostile attitude, and he may have attorned by mistake to one who had no title. Cornish v. Searell, 8 B. & C. 471. To these exceptions may be added, possibly, the case where it appears affirmatively that both parties have acted under a mutual mistake as to the law in regard to the title of the lessor. Glen v. Gibson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 638; Tewksbury v. Magraff, 33 Cal. 245.

§ 327. Right of possession not affected by descent cast. The right of a person to the possession of real property is not impaired or affected by a descent cast in consequence of the death of a person in possession of such property.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 344.

§ 328. Certain disabilities excluded from time to commence actions. If a person entitled to commence an action for the recovery of real property, or for the recovery of the possession thereof, or to make any entry or defense founded on the title to real property, or to rents or services out of the same, is, at the time such title first descends or accrues, either:

1. Under the age of majority;

2. Insane;

3. Imprisoned on a criminal charge, or in execution upon conviction of a criminal offense, for a term less than life;

The time, not exceeding twenty years, during which such disability continues is not deemed any portion of the time in this chapter limited for the commencement of such action, or the making of such entry or defense, but such action may be commenced, or entry or defense made, within the period of five years after such disability shall cease, or after the death of the person entitled, who shall die under such disability; but such action shall not be commenced, or entry or defense made, after that period.

War. Post, § 354.
Absence from state. See post, § 351.
Disabilities.
1. Successive. See post, § 358.
2. Effect of, in action to recover escheated property. See post, § 1272.

Legislation § 328. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 325.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 124; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 177, (1) changing, in the first paragraph, the word "is" from "be"; (2) changing subd. 1 from "1. Within the age of majority; or"; (3) in subd. 2, omitting "or" after "Insane"; (4) in subd. 3, omitting (a) "for" before "life" and (b) "or" at end of subdivision; (5) omitting subd. 4, which read: "4. A married woman, and her husband be a necessary party with her in commencing such action or making such entry or defense"; and (6) in first line of last paragraph, adding the words "not exceeding twenty years."

Effect of disabilities. The provisions of this section are an exception to the general rule, that actions for the recovery of real property must be brought within five years after the cause of action has arisen (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Whitaker, 109 Cal. 268; 41 Pac. 1083); but where the statute of limitations has commenced to run, no subsequent disability will stop it. Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557. This section will not protect an heir not under disability, where the disability exists as to a coheir. Burton v. Robinson, 51 Cal. 186.

Infancy. Where a cause of action accrues during infancy, the action must be commenced at any time within five years after attaining majority. Burton v. Robinson, 51 Cal. 186; Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557; Gates v. Lindley, 104 Cal. 451; 38 Pac. 311. When an infant's property is in the hands of an executor, trustee, or guardian, and they are barred, the infant is also barred, notwithstanding his minority. Patchett v. Pacific Coast Ry. Co., 100 Cal. 505; 35 Pac. 73; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574; Cunningham v. Ashley, 45 Cal. 485; McLeran v. Benton, 75 Cal. 329; 2 Am. St. Rep. 814; 14 Pac. 879; but see contra, Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557; Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658. The statute is not suspended in favor of a minor claiming under an ancestor who died after his possession had been invaded and the statute of limitations set in motion (Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557; McLeran v. Benton, 73 Cal. 329; 2 Am. St. Rep. 814; 14 Pac. 879; Alvarado v. Nordholt, 95 Cal. 116; 30 Pac. 211; Castro v. Geil, 110 Cal. 292; 52 Am. St. Rep. 84; 42 Pac. 804); but where the ancestor died before his rights were invaded, the minor may commence his action five years after attaining majority. Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557; McNeil v. First Congregational Society, 66 Cal. 105; 4 Pac. 1096. An ouster, and notice thereof, are not suspended by the infancy of the disseised, but the effect of his knowledge thereof is suspended until his majority, and he has five years after that date within which to bring the action to recover the land. Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658. Prior to the statute of 1863, there was no saving clause in favor of infants. McLeran v. Benton, 73 Cal. 329; 2 Am. St. Rep. 814; 14 Pac. 879.

Disabilities which interrupt operation of statute of limitations. See note 36 Am. Dec. 68.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 325.

CHAPTER III.

TIME OF COMMENCING ACTIONS OTHER THAN FOR RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY.

§ 335. Periods of limitation prescribed.
§ 336. Within five years.
§ 337. Within four years.
§ 338. Within three years.
§ 339. Within two years.
§ 340. Within one year.
§ 341. Within six months.
§ 342. Same.
§ 343. Actions for relief not hereinbefore provided for.
§ 344. Where cause of action accrues on mutual account.
§ 345. Actions by the people subject to the limitations of this chapter.
§ 346. Action to redeem mortgage.
§ 347. Same, when some of mortgagors are not entitled to redeem.
§ 348. No limitations where money deposited in bank.
§ 349. Time for commencing actions under "local improvement act of 1901."

§ 335. Periods of limitation prescribed. The periods prescribed for the commencement of actions other than for the recovery of real property, are as follows:

Legislation § 335. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Limitations prescribed. This section, as well as the title of this chapter, clearly shows that the limitations therein fixed do not apply to actions, where the effect would be to cut off any portion of the limitation of five years. Goodnow v. Parker, 112 Cal. 437; 44 Pac. 738. The nature of the right sued upon, and not the form of the action or the relief demanded, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889. As the statute of limitations is applicable both to actions at law and to suits in equity, there can be no laches in the delay to bring an action, where brought within the period of limitation, unless there are some facts or circumstances attending the delay that have operated to defendant's injury. Meigs v. Pinkham, 159 Cal. 104; 112 Pac. 883. This section has no relation to an equitable proceeding to set aside a fraudulent deed to real estate, where the effect of it would be to restore the possession of the premises to the defrauded party; such proceeding is substantially one for the recovery of real property. Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540. Where a party is entitled to a performance upon the part of another, only a tender or offer to perform can work a breach, and put the statute in motion. Vickrey v. Maier, 164 Cal. 384; 129 Pac. 273. In the absence of any provision to the contrary, interest coupons of bonds are independent obligations, and the statute begins to run from the date of their maturity, where they have been detached from the bonds and transferred to another. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys etc. Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; 112 Pac. 274. Neither the creditor's ignorance of nor his inability to discover the presence of the judgment debtor will prevent the running of the statute in the latter's favor. St. Paul Title etc. Co. v. Stensgaard, 162 Cal. 178; 121 Pac. 731. The burden of proof is on the defendant; he must show the date on which the statute began to run. Whitcomb v. McClintock, 1 West Coast Rep. 876; Norton v. Zellerbach, 2 Cal. Unrep. 181; 11 Pac. Coast L. J. 356. Where the bar of the statute is raised, the court should expressly find whether the action is barred by the statute, and not merely facts from which it may be inferred that the bar has or has not risen. Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513; 12 Pac. 570; Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563.

Pleading the statute of limitations. See note post, § 458.

§ 336. Within five years. Within five years:

1. An action upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States or of any state within the United States.

2. An action for mesne profits of real property.

Foreign statute of limitations, effect of. Post, § 361.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 291, (1) numbering the second paragraph as subd. 1, and (2) adding subd. 2.

Actions upon judgments. This section is not applicable to the procedure contemplated by § 685, post (Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330); nor does it control or affect the operation of § 708, post, nor the remedy given by it. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337. All domestic judgments are embraced within its terms (Mason v. Cronise, 20 Cal. 211; Rowe v. Blake, 99 Cal. 167; 37 Am. St. Rep. 45; 33 Pac. 864; John Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Cal. App. 80; 84 Pac. 443; Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596); and also judgments of a sister state (St. Paul Title etc. v. Stensgaard, 162 Cal. 178; 121 Pac. 731); but foreign judgments are not, being provided for by § 343, post. Dore v. Thornburgh, 90 Cal.

64; 25 Am. St. Rep. 100; 27 Pac. 30. Under § 351, post, the statute does not commence to run against an action on a judgment of a sister state, against a nonresident, until the judgment debtor comes into this state, and the period of his absence subsequent to his coming here is deducted from the statutory period. Chappel v. Thompson, 21 Cal. App. 136; 131 Pac. 82. A decree for alimony is embraced within this section (De Uprey v. De Uprey, 23 Cal. 352); and for maintenance (Simpson v. Simpson, 21 Cal. App. 150; 131 Pac. 99); so also are foreclosure decrees and deficiency judgments. Stout v. Macy, 22 Cal. 647; Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621. The docketing of a deficiency judgment is not a new and independent judgment; it is governed by the decree. Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621. The statute is set in motion only by a final judgment (Condee v. Barton, 62 Cal. 1); and the time is to be computed from the date on which the judgment is entered of record, not from the date on which the court finds the party is entitled to judgment. Parke v. Williams, 7 Cal. 247; Franklin v. Merida, 50 Cal. 289; Trenouth v. Farrington, 54 Cal. 273; Condee v. Barton, 62 Cal. 1; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Rowe v. Blake, 99 Cal. 167; 37 Am. St. Rep. 45; 33 Pac. 864; Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218; Herrlich v. McDonald, 104 Cal. 551; 38 Pac. 360. A final judgment does not exist until the time for the appeal therefrom has elapsed. Feeney v. Hinckley, 134 Cal. 467; 86 Am. St. Rep. 290; 66 Pac. 580; Estate of Wood, 137 Cal. 129; 69 Pac. 900. The clerk's entry in the minutes, at the end of the trial, of the decision of the judge, does not constitute a judgment. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. A defendant against whom a judgment is rendered, if he wishes to set the statute running, may cause the judgment to be entered at any time. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218. The statute runs from the date of the making of a decree of distribution. Wheeler v. Bolton, 54 Cal. 302. Where a judgment is made payable in installments, the statute begins to run on each installment from the day it becomes payable under the judgment. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 23 Cal. 352. A judgment for costs on appeal is barred within five years after the judgment is entered. Reay v. Heazelton, 128 Cal. 335; 60 Pac. 977. In an action against a garnishee to recover the debt due the judgment debtor, the plea of the statute can be made whenever it would be good as against the judgment debtor, but the liability created by the garnishment is never barred. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242. A failure to sue within five years does not satisfy the judgment; it only bars the right to enforce its satisfaction. San Diego v. Higgins, 115 Cal. 170; 46 Pac. 923. In an action against the administrator of a judgment creditor, the personal privilege of the statute is not waived by its not being pleaded. Reay v. Heazelton, 128 Cal. 335; 60 Pac. 977. A defendant sued on a judgment recovered in another state may plead the bar of the statute, although living in this state under an assumed name. St. Paul Title etc. Co. v. Stensgaard, 162 Cal. 178; 121 Pac. 731.

Action to recover mesne profits. In an action for trespass, rents and profits are not governed by this section. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330. A patentee of land may bring an action for the recovery of rents at any time within five years (Wilhoit v. Tubbs, 83 Cal. 279; 23 Pac. 386); and an amended complaint filed within that time authorizes the recovery of all rents received within the same period. Pottkamp v. Buss, 5 Cal. Unrep. 462; 46 Pac. 169.

Time limit on enforcement of judgments. See note 133 Am. St. Rep. 61.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Domestic judgments. The statute runs as well against judgments rendered in this state as against foreign judgments. Mason v. Cronise, 20 Cal. 218.

2. Foreign judgment. A foreign judgment is not "a contract, obligation, or liability founded upon an instrument in writing," within the meaning of § 337, post. Patten v. Ray, 4 Cal. 287.

3. A judgment payable in installments. The statute begins to run on a judgment payable in installments from the period fixed for the payment of each installment, as it becomes due. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 23 Cal. 352.

4. Judgment against intestate, obtained during his life. By common law, when the limitation began to run, a subsequent disability, as death of the party bound, etc., did not stop it. But this doctrine does not apply where a judgment is obtained against an intestate in his lifetime, and no execution levied. In such case, the judgment creditor being prevented by law from suing after the death of the debtor, the statute of limitations ceases to run until presentation of the claim to the administrator. Quivey v. Hall, 19 Cal. 98.

5. Five-year limit on foreign judgment. Cavender v. Guild, 4 Cal. 250. Statute begins to run, only from the time of final entry of judgment. Parke v. Williams, 7 Cal. 247.

§ 337. Within four years. Within four years:

1. An action upon any contract, obligation or liability founded upon an instrument in writing executed within this state; provided, that wherever the time within which any such action must be so commenced would in any case expire by the terms of this section after the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and six and before the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and seven, such action may be commenced at any time before the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and seven, with the same force and effect as if commenced within four years as in this section provided.

2. An action to recover a balance due upon a mutual, open and current account or upon an open book-account.

Four-years limitation, where no other provision. Post, § 343.

Legislation § 337. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1850, p. 345), and then read: "Within four years: An action upon any contract, obligation, or liability founded upon an instrument in writing."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 291, adding the words "executed in this state" at end of section.

3. Amended by Stats. 1906, p. 5, (1) changing the word "in" to "within," in the second line, and (2) adding the proviso.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 599, (1) numbering the second paragraph as subd. 1, and (2) adding subd. 2.

General rule. The statute states the general rule, that actions founded upon an instrument in writing are barred after four years. Priet v. De la Montanya, 3 Cal. Unrep. 122; 22 Pac. 171; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; People v. Weineke, 122 Cal. 535; 55 Pac. 579; Coyle v. Lamb, 123 Cal. 264; 55 Pac. 901; Newhall v. Sherman, 124 Cal. 509; 57 Pac. 387; Harrigan v. Home Life Ins. Co., 128 Cal. 531; 58 Pac. 180; 61 Pac. 99; Vandall v. Teague, 142 Cal. 471; 76 Pac. 35. A finding that the action was barred by the statute, and that the security was over forty years past due before the action was commenced, is sufficient to show that the action was barred. Marshutz v. Seltzor, 5 Cal. App. 140; 89 Pac. 877.

Actions founded upon instruments in writing. Actions on bills and notes are governed by this section (Rogers v. Byers, 1 Cal. App. 284; 81 Pac. 1123; Hewel v. Hogin, 3 Cal. App. 248; 84 Pac. 1002; Du Brutz v. Bank of Visalia, 4 Cal. App. 201, 87 Pac. 467, 469; Marshutz v. Seltzor, 5 Cal. App. 140; 89 Pac. 877; Ball v. Lowe, 1 Cal. App. 228; 81 Pac. 1113; Palmtag v. Roadhouse, 4 Cal. Unrep. 205; 34 Pac. 111); but the obligation of the principal to repay the surety is not "founded upon a written instrument" (Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 130; approved in McCarthy v. Mount Tecarte Land etc. Co., 111 Cal. 328, 43 Pac. 956, holding that a resolution of a corporation appointing a director as manager does not give the manager a right of action for salary based upon an obligation in writing); but an action to enforce contribution on a bond is within this section. Hewlett v. Beede, 2 Cal. App. 561; 83 Pac. 1086. A resolution of a board of directors, fixing the salary of an officer, is a contract in writing (Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556); but a resolution adopting plans and specifications is not. Todd v. Board of Education, 122 Cal. 106; 54 Pac. 527; Foorman v. Wallace, 75 Cal. 552; 17 Pac. 680; McCarthy v. Mount Tecarte Land etc. Co., 111 Cal. 328; 43 Pac. 956; Thomas v. Pacific Beach Co., 115 Cal. 136; 46 Pac. 899. An action against a county auditor for receiving moneys collected for license taxes, is not within this section. San Luis Obispo County v. Farnum, 108 Cal. 567; 41 Pac. 447; Best v. Johnson, 78 Cal. 217; 12 Am. St. Rep. 41; 3 L. R. A. 168; 20 Pac. 415. An action upon a note, praying subrogation, is barred in four years after the maturity of the note. Campbell v. Campbell, 133 Cal. 33; 65 Pac. 134; Clausen v. Meister, 93 Cal. 555; 29 Pac. 232. The section applies to an action to enforce a mortgage executed by a guardian (Banks v. Stockton, 149 Cal. 599; 87 Pac. 83), to an action to quiet title (Burns v. Hiatt, 149 Cal. 617; 117 Am. St. Rep. 157; 87 Pac. 196), to an action between a beneficiary and his trustee (Marston v. Kuhland, 151 Cal. 102; 90 Pac. 188), to an action to recover the price of a levee built on the defendant's land (Fabian v. Lammers, 3 Cal. App. 109; 84 Pac. 432), and to an action for goods sold under a contract in writing. Brackett v. Martens, 4 Cal. App. 249; 87 Pac. 410. An action on an implied warranty of an article, manufactured, on a written order, for a specific purpose, is founded on an instrument in writing, and is also within this section (Bancroft v. San Francisco Tool Co., 120 Cal. 228; 52 Pac. 496); as is also an action to recover rents due under a lease (Coyle v. Lamb, 123 Cal. 264; 55 Pac. 901), and an action to foreclose a mortgage. Newhall v. Sherman, 124 Cal. 509; 57 Pac. 387; Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616; California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Miller, 3 Cal. App. 54; 84 Pac. 453. An action against a city and county treasurer and his sureties, for misappropriation of funds, is within this section (Priet v. De la Montanya, 85 Cal. 148; 24 Pac. 612); but where the primary obligation of the officer is barred, the sureties are relieved. Sonoma County v. Hall, 132 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 257, 312; 65 Pac. 12, 459. A promise, merely implied by law, and not supported by any express terms in the written instrument, does not come within the statute. Thomas v. Pacific Beach Co., 115 Cal. 136; 46 Pac. 899. An action to recover on a contract for street improvements in front of a government reservation in a city, is based either on a contract founded on an instrument in writing, or on an obligation or liability arising out of an assessment made in writing, and is within this section. Onderdonk v. San Francisco, 75

Cal. 534; 17 Pac. 678. A naked receipt for money, not being a contract, does not import a promise or obligation (Ashley v. Vischer, 24 Cal. 322; 85 Am. Dec. 65; Scrivner v. Woodward, 139 Cal. 314; 73 Pac. 863), unless it expresses a promise. Ashley v. Vischer, 24 Cal. 322; 85 Am. Dec. 65. Where lands, upon the death of a person, are impressed with the qualities of a resulting trust, such trust may be enforced at any time within four years after such death. Keefe v. Keefe, 19 Cal. App. 310; 125 Pac. 929. The four-years limitation prescribed in this section is applicable to an action to recover a proportionate part of the expense of reclaiming land under a written agreement (Fabian v. Lammers, 3 Cal. App. 109; 84 Pac. 432), and to actions on interest coupons attached to bonds. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274. This section applies to an action to recover damages for the breach of a written contract: such action is founded upon a written instrument. Ahlers v. Smiley, 163 Cal. 200; 124 Pac. 827.

Action upon account. Action on an account stated is barred, unless brought within four years. Visher v. Wilbur, 5 Cal. App. 562; 90 Pac. 1065; 91 Pac. 412.

Commencement of running of statute. A surety's liability is not discharged until four years after his liability has become fixed (Dussol v. Bruguiere, 50 Cal. 456); and the statute commences to run from the date of the affirmance of the judgment against him. Clark v. Smith, 66 Cal. 645; 4 Pac. 689; 6 Pac. 732. The statutory bar intervenes in four years from the date when the cause of action accrues. Banks v. Marshall, 23 Cal. 223; Pendleton v. Rowe, 34 Cal. 149; Hathaway v. Patterson, 45 Cal. 294; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. O'Grady, 47 Cal. 479. A demand note is due immediately upon delivery, and the statute commences to run from the date thereof, without demand. Jones v. Nicholl, 82 Cal. 32; 22 Pac. 878; Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; 89 Am. Dec. 61; Bell v. Sackett, 38 Cal. 407; Collins v. Driscoll, 69 Cal. 550; 11 Pac. 244; O'Neil v. Magner, 81 Cal. 631; 15 Am. St. Rep. 88; 22 Pac. 876. The date of the delivery, and not the date of the note, fixes the period from which the statute runs against the action on the note. Collins v. Driscoll, 69 Cal. 550; 11 Pac. 244. An absolute and unconditional guaranty of the payment of a note is broken when the note matures and remains unpaid; the statute runs from that date. Pierce v. Merrill, 128 Cal. 464; 79 Am. St. Rep. 56; 61 Pac. 64; Coburn v. Brooks, 78 Cal. 443; 21 Pac. 2; First Nat. Bank v. Babcock, 94 Cal. 96; 28 Am. St. Rep. 94; 29 Pac. 415; London etc. Bank v. Smith, 101 Cal. 415; 35 Pac. 1027; Adams v. Wallace, 119 Cal. 67; 51 Pac. 14. The action against a surety on the bond of a public officer does not accrue until the expiration of the term of office (People v. Van Ness, 76 Cal. 121; 18 Pac. 139; People v. Burkhart, 76 Cal. 606; 18 Pac. 776), and the statute commences to run on the expiration of his term of office. San Francisco v. Heynemann, 71 Cal. 153; 11 Pac. 870; People v. Weineke, 122 Cal. 535; 55 Pac. 579 (holding that the statute begins to run from the date of the delinquency). A devise to one for life, to go, upon the death of the devisee, to others, charged with the payment of a certain sum, does not cause the obligation of payment to mature until the death of the devisee. Keir v. Keir, 155 Cal. 96; 99 Pac. 487. The statute does not commence to run against a cause of action to enforce specifically, against the distributee of the estate of a deceased person, a written agreement of the deceased to convey to an attorney an interest in a water right, in consideration of his services, to be performed in appealing a case, involving such right, to the supreme court, until the final judgment of that court on the appeal. Archer v. Harvey, 164 Cal. 274; 128 Pac. 410. It is a general rule, that the statute does not begin to run, when no administration exists on the decedent's estate at the time the cause of action accrues. Estate of Bullard, 116 Cal. 355; 48 Pac. 219; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boland, 145 Cal. 626; 79 Pac. 365; Heeser v. Taylor, 1 Cal. App. 619; 82 Pac. 977. Where a mortgagor dies after the statute has commenced to run, an action, brought more than four years after the maturity of a note, and more than one year after administration is awarded, is barred (McMillan v. Hayward, 94 Cal. 357; 29 Pac. 774); it may not be barred as against the estate, yet barred as to subsequent grantees made parties as claiming an interest in the premises. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Farnham, 153 Cal. 578, 583; 126 Am. St. Rep. 129; 96 Pac. 9. Where a note and mortgage are not mature at the date of the death of the mortgagor, the statute does not commence to run until letters of administration are issued on the decedent's estate, regardless of the lapse of time prior thereto. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Farnham, 153 Cal. 578; 126 Am. St. Rep. 129; 96 Pac. 9; Estate of Bullard, 116 Cal. 355; 48 Pac. 219; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Herbert, 53 Cal. 375; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Conlin, 67 Cal. 178; 7 Pac. 477; Danglada v. De la Guerra, 10 Cal. 386; Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85. A mortgage by a third person, to secure the note of another, may be foreclosed within the statutory period, although the mortgagee has lost his right to enforce the note, by failure to present it to the administrator of the deceased maker. Sichel v. De Carrillo, 42 Cal. 493. The death of one mortgagor before the note is barred does not affect the bar of the statute as to his co-mortgagor. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Wackenreuder, 99 Cal. 503; 34 Pac. 219. The statute does not run on a promissory note from the date of its presentation to the executor or administrator, but from the date of its rejection by the judge. Nally v. McDonald, 66 Cal. 530; 6 Pac. 390. The cause of action to foreclose a mortgage accrues on the maturity of the note secured thereby (Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242; Mason v. Luce, 116 Cal. 232; 48 Pac. 72; Richards v. Daley, 116 Cal. 336; 48 Pac. 220), notwithstanding a stipulation that, on default of the payment of interest, the same should become due and payable. Mason v. Luce, 116 Cal. 232; 48 Pac. 72; Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242. Where an action on a note secured by mortgage is barred, an action to foreclose the mortgage is also barred (Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100; Booth v. Hoskins, 75 Cal. 271; 17 Pac. 225); and an assignee of the mortgagor may plead the statute. McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16. No time being specified for payment in a mortgage or deed, the presumption is, that it is due immediately, and an action is barred in four years from the delivery thereof. Holmes v. West, 17 Cal. 623; Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58; Estate of Galvin, 51 Cal. 215; Dorland v. Dorland, 66 Cal. 189; 5 Pac. 77; Newhall v. Sherman, 124 Cal. 509; 57 Pac. 387. A mortgage to secure a debt, not evidenced by a written instrument, is also within the statute. Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620; Sargent v. Wilson, 5 Cal. 504; Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296; Mabury v. Ruiz, 58 Cal. 11. Where several notes, secured by the same mortgage, fall due on different dates, the statute begins to run from the date of maturity of each note. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Herbert, 53 Cal. 375. Coupons on municipal bonds are not barred until the bonds to which they belong are barred (Meyer v. Porter, 65 Cal. 67; 2 Pac. 884); but, in the absence of any promise to the contrary, the rule is, that the coupons are independent obligations, at least when detached and transferred; and the statute runs from the maturity of each (California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274); and where the interest on a note is payable periodically, and on default the whole becomes due and payable, the statute commences to run on the maturity of the note. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242. An action for money, lost by depositing it in a bank that failed, is within the statute, which begins to run from the date of the failure. San Diego County v. Dauer, 131 Cal. 199; 63 Pac. 338; and see People v. Van Ness, 79 Cal. 84; 12 Am. St. Rep. 134; 21 Pac. 554; Mason v. Luce, 116 Cal. 232; 48 Pac. 72; People v. Weineke, 122 Cal. 535; 55 Pac. 579. On a certificate of deposit issued by a bank, payable on demand, the statute begins to run from the date of issuance. Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; 89 Am. Dec. 61. The statute does not begin to run, in the case of an express trust, until there is brought home to the plaintiff a knowledge of the repudiation of the trust, or violation of its terms by defendant. Allsopp v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 5 Cal. App. 228; 90 Pac. 39. In an action on a conditional or contingent contract, the cause of action accrues when the condition occurs. Wolf v. Marsh, 54 Cal. 228. An action on an independent covenant to pay the purchase-money for land, without any date fixed for the delivery of the deed, is barred in four years from the date on which payment was to be made. Donovan v. Judson, 81 Cal. 334; 6 L. R. A. 591; 22 Pac. 682. Where a contract for the delivery of water fixes no time for delivery, but there is an admission that it was to be made on a certain date, the statute begins to run on the day thus fixed, where there is a failure to perform. Richter v. Union Land etc. Co., 129 Cal. 367; 62 Pac. 39. The cause of action on an indemnity bond against damages accrues when the one indemnified has paid. Oaks v. Scheifferly, 74 Cal. 478; 16 Pac. 252. If an action, as shown by the record, is not for an accounting, but for the breach of a contract to pay a sum when a sale was made, and the record is silent as to the date when the sale was made and the purchase-money paid, it shows no statutory bar of the cause of action. Parker v. Herndon, 19 Cal. App. 451; 126 Pac. 183.

Interruption of running of statute. A distinction must be made between a new promise made before an action upon an original contract is barred, and one made thereafter; when it is made before, the debtor merely continues his liability for a longer term, and the action is based upon the original promise; in other words, he merely waives so much of the period of limitation as has run in his favor. Concannon v. Smith, 143 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40; Southern Pacific Co. v. Presser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145. An amended complaint setting up a new cause of action, where the bar has intervened after the commencement of the action, and before the filing of the amended complaint, is barred (Campbell v. Campbell, 133 Cal. 33; 65 Pac. 134; Anderson v. Mayers, 50 Cal. 525; Meeks v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 513; 38 Am. Rep. 67; Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563; Storer v. Austin, 136 Cal. 588; 69 Pac. 297; Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147); but where the amendment does not set up a new cause of action, it is not. Rauer's Law etc. Co. v. Leffingwell, 11 Cal. App. 494; 105 Pac. 427. The filing of the complaint suspends the running of the statute as to matters arising out of the transaction set forth therein. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278; Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118. In the case of a note secured by a mortgage, the mortgagor cannot, as against subsequent lienholders, or the holder of the equity of redemption, prolong the period of the statute as to an action to foreclose on the security. Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Lent v. Morrill, 25 Cal. 492; Low v. Allen, 26 Cal. 141; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361. The prompt payment of the interest on a note, on demand, when it falls due, does not extend the period within which an action may be brought to foreclose a mortgage given to secure the note (Pendleton v. Rowe, 34 Cal. 149); and where an action was commenced before the death of the maker, the filing of a supplemental complaint is not the commencement of a new action. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Wackenreuder, 99 Cal. 503; 34 Pac. 219. An amendment to a complaint seeking a foreclosure relates back to the filing of the action, as against the original parties (Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 48 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705); and the filing of the complaint suspends the statute as to matters pleaded. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118; McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278. An agreement to pay, made by a third person, in writing and for a valuable consideration, interrupts the running of the statute, and fixes a new date, from which the statute runs as to such third person. Hawk v. Barton, 130 Cal. 654; 63 Pac. 64. A new promise, made before the bar of the statute, removes the bar, and fixes a new period, from which the statute begins to run. Daniels v. Johnson, 129 Cal. 415; 79 Am. St. Rep. 123; 61 Pac. 1107. When an action is commenced within the period of the statute, the substitution of the pledge securing the note is not the substitution of a new cause of action so as to raise the bar of the statute. Merced Bank v. Price, 9 Cal. App. 177; 98 Pac. 383. The renewal of a note secured by mortgage carries with it an extension of the lien of the mortgage. Lent v. Morrill, 25 Cal. 492. The lien is not extinguished by lapse of time, so long as the principal obligation is not barred. Worth v. Worth, 155 Cal. 599; 102 Pac. 663. Where, in an action to quiet title, a mortgage barred by the statute is set up, to which the statute is pleaded, a decree of foreclosure cannot be entered. Marshutz v. Seltzor, 5 Cal. App. 140; 89 Pac. 877. Where the real cause of action is for the recovery of money on a promissory note, a prayer for relief incidental thereto does not remove the bar of the statute. Clausen v. Meister, 93 Cal. 555; 29 Pac. 232. If a note secured by mortgage is presented as a claim against the estate of a deceased mortgagor, but the mortgage is not presented, the statute is not suspended as to the mortgage; and if not presented within the time prescribed, it is barred. Regents of University v. Turner, 159 Cal. 541; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1162; 114 Pac. 842. The grantee of a mortgagor may avail himself of the bar of the statute, although the running thereof against the mortgagor has been interrupted by his death or by his absence from the state. California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Miller, 3 Cal. App. 54; 84 Pac. 453. A sufficient acknowledgment, in writing, of the indebtedness takes it out of the operation of the statute. Worth v. Worth, 155 Cal. 599; 102 Pac. 663. An acknowledgment or promise, made while the original obligation is in force, is an original obligation, and lifts the bar of the statute. McCormack v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180, 95 Am. Dec. 170; Chaffee v. Browne, 109 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 1028; London etc. Bank v. Bandemann, 120 Cal. 220; 65 Am. St. Rep. 179; 52 Pac. 583; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42; Pierce v. Merrill, 128 Cal. 473; 79 Am. St. Rep. 63; 61 Pac. 67; Daniels v. Johnson, 129 Cal. 415; 79 Am. St. Rep. 123; 61 Pac. 1107; Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40; Newhall v. Hatch, 134 Cal. 269; 55 L. R. A. 673; 66 Pac. 266. If an unconditional acknowledgment or promise is made after the original obligation is barred, the action is upon the implied promise raised by law from the new acknowledgment, or on the new express promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434; Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; Lambert v. Schmalz, 118 Cal. 33; 50 Pac. 13; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42; Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40; Dearborn v. Grand Lodge, 138 Cal. 658; 72 Pac. 154. The death of a mortgagor, pending an action to foreclose, does not abate the action, but it may be prosecuted against his representatives. Union Sav. Bank v. Barrett, 132 Cal. 453; 64 Pac. 713, 1071.

Pleading. A party who assumes the payment of a mortgage debt cannot plead the statute: all defenses against the mortgage, other than payment, are expressly waived. Davis v. Davis, 19 Cal. App. 797; 127 Pac. 1051. A party sued under a fictitious name cannot set up the intervention of the statute, subsequently to the commencement of the action, by a disclosure of his true name. Hoffman v. Keeton, 132 Cal. 195; 64 Pac. 264; Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118;

Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705. The bar of the statute cannot be raised by demurrer, unless it clearly appears on the face of the complaint. Lloyd v. Davis, 123 Cal. 348; 55 Pac. 1003. Where the new promise made is coupled with a condition, the substituted conditional promise must be pleaded on an action brought after the bar has intervened on the original obligation. Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 748; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42.

Actions that must be brought within four years. See note post, § 343.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Construction of section. This section has been held to refer to contracts, obligations, and liabilities resting in or growing out of written instruments, not remotely or ultimately, but immediately. Thus, where two persons executed a note, one as principal, and the other as surety, and a judgment obtained upon the note is paid by the surety, the obligation of the principal to pay the surety is not "founded upon a written instrument" within the meaning of this section. Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 131.

2. What is a contract in writing. An order entered on the books of a corporation. A person acted for two years as president of a corporation, with an understanding that he should be paid, but with no agreement to that effect, or as to compensation. Having been re-elected for the third year, the trustees made an order as follows: "Ordered that the compensation of the president be established at fifty dollars per month." And the person continued to serve for two years longer. Held: that such order was a contract to pay past as well as future services at the rate of fifty dollars per month and that the order was a contract in writing, within the meaning of the statute of limitations, both for past as well as present pay, and that the statute ran only from the date of the order. Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556.

3. Audited accounts. Accounts with the words "audited and approved" and "certified to be correct," written on their face, are instruments in writing, within the meaning of this section. Sannickson v. Brown, 5 Cal. 57. Statute runs from maturity of contract. The right of action upon a contract in writing is not barred until the lapse of four years after maturity. Bagley v. Eaton, 10 Cal. 126.

4. Lost contract. The fact that the contract was in writing, and not the present existence of the writing itself, determines the time within which the action must be brought. Bagley v. Eaton, 10 Cal. 126.

5. Published offer of reward held to be a contract in writing, etc. Ryer v. Stockwell, 14 Cal. 134; 73 Am. Dec. 634.

6. City bonds, and bonds of municipal corporations, to provide for payment of indebtedness, when not barred by statute of limitations. Underhill v. Trustees of City of Sonora, 17 Cal. 173.

7. Actions on promissory notes. Banks v. Marshall, 23 Cal. 223.

8. Certificates of deposit. And of the same nature as promissory notes are certificates of deposit. The statute runs from the date, and no demand is required to set the statute in motion. Brumagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; 89 Am. Dec. 61.

9. Note and mortgage. A note payable six months after date, with interest monthly, in advance, and "in case the said interest or any portion thereof, should become due, and remain unpaid after demand, then the mortgage given by me, of even date herewith, which is given to secure the payment of this note, may be foreclosed," etc.; and the mortgage contained a provision by which the mortgagee was "empowered to foreclose said mortgage, according to the provisions in said note contained." The court held that the prompt payment of the interest on demand, when it fell due, did not, under these clauses in the note and mortgage, prolong the time of payment beyond the time specified in the note, and that a cause of action accrued upon the note, and to foreclose the mortgage, immediately upon the expiration of the six months, although there had been no default in the payment of interest. An action not commenced within four years after the expiration of six months from date of the note, is barred by the statute of limitations. Pendleton v. Rowe, 34 Cal. 149.

10. Mortgage. A mortgage given to secure a payment of a debt, of which there is no written agreement, is yet a contract, "founded upon an instrument in writing"; and an action may be had at any time within four years of the breach of the mortgage, although the original debt has become barred. Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

11. For actions of foreclosure and redemption, etc. See Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73.

12. Generally. See note to § 312, ante, commenting on McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; see Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; see also Pearis v. Covillaud, 6 Cal. 617; 65 Am. Dec. 543; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482, commented on in note to § 312, ante.

§ 338. Within three years. Within three years:

1. An action upon a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture;

2. An action for trespass upon real property;

3. An action for taking, detaining, or injuring any goods or chattels, including actions for the specific recovery of personal property;

4. An action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake. The cause of action in such case not to be deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.

Statutory penalty. See post, § 340, subd. 1.
Executor or administrator. Limitation of actions to set aside sale, three years. Post, § 1573.
Corporations and stockholders, limitation as to. See post, § 359.

Legislation § 338. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Construction of section. This section must be construed with § 318, ante. Unkel v. Robinson, 163 Cal. 648; 126 Pac. 485. Similar statutes of limitation should receive the same construction. Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771.

When section inapplicable. This section does not apply to an action to recover the amount of an assessment levied on the capital stock of a corporation (Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 353; 9 Pac. 420); nor to an action against an innkeeper as the insurer of the goods and property of his guests (Churchill v. Pacific Improvement Co., 96 Cal. 490; 31 Pac. 460); nor to an action to recover a fund based upon a contract between the state and the purchaser of swamp-lands (Miller & Lux v. Batz, 131 Cal. 402; 63 Pac. 680); nor to an action for the actual damages presupposed in the treble damages provided for in § 3344 of the Political Code, for negligently causing loss by fire (Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pacific Lumber Co., 1 Cal. App. 156; 81 Pac. 976); nor to an action for breach of warranty (Brackett v. Martens, 4 Cal. App. 249; 87 Pac. 410; Murphy v. Stelling, 8 Cal. App. 702; 97 Pac. 672); nor to an action against a bank, by one of its depositors, for damages resulting from its refusal to pay checks drawn upon it by the plaintiff. Smith's Cash Store v. First Nat. Bank, 149 Cal. 32; 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 870; 84 Pac. 663.

Liability created by statute. Where the liability of a defendant depends upon the provisions of a statute, and the relief demanded by the plaintiff is derived from the statute, and, but for the statute, would have no existence, the action is upon a liability created by statute, and is therefore barred in three years. Harby v. Board of Education, 2 Cal. App. 418; 83 Pac. 1081; and see Miller & Lux v. Batz, 142 Cal. 447; 76 Pac. 42. The nature, and not the form, of the cause of action, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations. Miller & Lux v. Batz, 131 Cal. 402; 63 Pac. 680. A proceeding in mandamus, to compel the issuance of a warrant for a claim duly audited, is within this section (Barber v. Mulford, 117 Cal. 356; 49 Pac. 206), as is also an action by the secretary of a county board of education to recover for services (Banks v. Yolo County, 104 Cal. 258; 37 Pac. 900); and an action against a recorder for the non-payment of fees (Sonoma County v. Hall, 132 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 257, 312; 65 Pac. 12, 459; Higby v. Calaveras County, 18 Cal. 176; People v. Van Ness, 76 Cal. 121; 18 Pac. 139); and an action by a district attorney for commissions on moneys collected and debts recovered by him for the county (Higby v. Calaveras County, 18 Cal. 176); and an action to recover municipal taxes (Perry v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 318; People v. McCreery, 34 Cal. 432; People v. Hulbert, 71 Cal. 72; 12 Pac. 43; San Francisco v. Luning, 73 Cal. 610; 15 Pac. 311; Lewis v. Rothchild, 92 Cal. 625; 28 Pac. 805; Los Angeles County v. Ballerino, 99 Cal. 593; 32 Pac. 581; 34 Pac. 329; San Diego v. Higgins, 115 Cal. 170; 46 Pac. 923; Dranga v. Rowe, 127 Cal. 506; 49 Pac. 944); and an action against a city to recover for street improvements (Connolly v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. Unrep. 134; 33 Pac. 1109); and an action against the principal on an official surety bond (Sonoma County v. Hall, 132 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 257, 312; 65 Pac. 459; Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 211), but the cause of action is on the misfeasance of the officer, not on the bond. Sonoma County v. Hall, 132 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 257, 312; 65 Pac. 12, 459; Ventura County v. Clay, 114 Cal. 242; 46 Pac. 9. The stating of an account by the controller does not create a new cause of action nor toll the statute. People v. Melone, 73 Cal. 574; 15 Pac. 294; People v. Van Ness, 76 Cal. 121; 18 Pac. 139. An action against a state commissioner to recover for fees unlawfully retained, is barred in three years after the expiration of his term of office. People v. Van Ness, 76 Cal. 121; 18 Pac. 139; San Francisco v. Heynemann, 71 Cal. 153; 11 Pac. 870. In an action on the bond of a county treasurer, the statute begins to run when the loss becomes known to the county, and a failure to pay at the end of his term of office does not create a new cause of action. San Diego County v. Dauer, 131 Cal. 199; 63 Pac. 338. An action on a stockholder's liability for the debts of a corporation is barred in three years from the date when the debt was contracted (Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62; Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 103 Cal. 594; 37 Pac. 499; Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85; Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830; Jones v. Goldtree Bros Co., 142 Cal. 383; 77 Pac. 939), and contributions among stockholders is regulated by the same limitation (Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40); and the giving of a note by stockholders will not toll the liability. Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 103 Cal. 594; 37 Pac. 499; Winona Wagon Co. v. Bull, 108 Cal. 1; 40 Pac. 1077; Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85; Goodall v. Jack, 127 Cal. 258; 59 Pac. 575. An action to enforce the statutory liability imposed by the laws of a sister state upon the stockholders in a banking corporation, for its corporate debts, is barred in three years from the time the cause of action arose. Miller v. Lane, 160 Cal. 90; 116 Pac. 58. An action against a stockholder of a bank, to recover for a deposit made with the bank, is limited to three years from the date of the deposit. Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157; 59 Am. St. Rep. 162; 37 L. R. A. 619; 48 Pac. 1090; Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830. The liability of the stockholders of a corporation for an overdraft is limited to three years after the overdraft, and the subsequent giving of a promissory note for such overdraft cannot toll the statute as to the stockholders' liability. Santa Rosa Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85. An installment paid on an assessment of a reclamation district, without suit, after default, estops the defendant from contending that the statute commenced to run on the date fixed by statute. Reclamation District v. Hall, 131 Cal. 662; 63 Pac. 1000. An action to enforce the assessment of a swamp-land district is barred in three years after the cause of action accrued (People v. Hulbert, 71 Cal. 72; 12 Pac. 43), and mandamus to compel the levy of a tax on the swamp-lands is also barred (Barnes v. Glide, 117 Cal. 1; 59 Am. St. Rep. 153; 48 Pac. 804), as is also an action in mandamus, by a teacher, to secure reinstatement. Harby v. Board of Education, 2 Cal. App. 418; 83 Pac. 1081. An action in quo warranto for the usurpation of a franchise is not subject to the bar of the statute, because a continued use of the franchise without right is renewed usurpation, on which a new cause of action arises each day. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. One claiming fraud in the execution of a deed has actual notice of the contents thereof when the deed is signed, and constructive notice from its recordation. Loeffler v. Wright, 13 Cal. App. 224; 109 Pac. 269. In the case of a trustee of an involuntary or constructive trust, no disaffirmance of the trust is necessary to set the statute of limitations in motion; but the rule is otherwise in voluntary trusts. Earle v. Bryant, 12 Cal. App. 553; 107 Pac. 1018. The first subdivision of this section is not applicable to a proceeding by a ward, after attaining majority, to compel a settlement of accounts by the guardian. Cook v. Ceas, 147 Cal. 614; 82 Pac. 370.

Trespass on real property. This section governs actions to recover damages for depasturing lands (Triscony v. Brandenstein, 66 Cal. 514; 6 Pac. 384; Zumwalt v. Dickey, 92 Cal. 156; 28 Pac. 212), and a statute which gives a remedy, by process in rem, against the cattle themselves, does not take away the remedy to recover damages, where they have not been distrained; but the failure of the proprietor to do, in connection with the land, what the law requires, may be availed of as a defense. Triscony v. Brandenstein, 66 Cal. 514; 6 Pac. 384. This section is not applicable to an action to quiet title, against a deed given by the plaintiff. De Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349. The entire cause of action, for an injury to land or a trespass upon real property, accrues when the injury is inflicted or the trespass committed, and is barred, unless suit is brought within three years. Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 150 Cal. 624; 89 Pac. 599. An action to recover the possession of real property, within the meaning of the five-year statute prescribed by § 318, ante, is not subject to the three-year limitation after discovery of the fraud established by the fourth subdivision of this section. Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820. An action to recover damages for injury to adjoining lands, caused by a bulkhead, is not within this section (Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305; 49 Pac. 189; Zumwalt v. Dickey, 92 Cal. 156; 28 Pac. 212; Conniff v. San Francisco, 67 Cal. 45; 7 Pac. 41); neither is an action to recover damages for the erection of a levee which deflects a river (Daneri v. Southern California Ry. Co., 122 Cal. 507; 55 Pac. 243; De Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610); but an action to recover damages for the construction of a railroad, without condemnation, is within this section (Robinson v. Southern California Ry. Co., 129 Cal. 8; 61 Pac. 947), as is also an injunction to prevent an entry upon land (Smithers v. Fitch, 82 Cal. 153; 22 Pac. 935), and an action for damages quare clausum fregit. Potter v. Ames, 43 Cal. 75. The erection of an embankment across a natural watercourse, in such manner as to obstruct the natural flow, and thereby cause the flooding of lands adjoining, is a continuing trespass (Conniff v. San Francisco, 67 Cal. 45; 7 Pac. 41); but this doctrine applies only where permanent flooding amounts to a taking. Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305; 49 Pac. 189. The statute does not commence to run against the right to maintain an action for flooding lands until actual injury is sustained. Galbreath v. Hopkins, 159 Cal. 297; 113 Pac. 174. Where, in an action of trespass, the complaint is amended to include a parcel of land inadvertently omitted, the filing of the original complaint does not stop the running of the statute against the trespass upon the omitted parcel (Atkinson v. Amador etc. Canal Co., 53 Cal. 102); but subsequent damages, pending the trial of the action, may be recovered without an amended complaint. McLennan v. Ohmen, 75 Cal. 558; 17 Pac. 687; Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305; 49 Pac. 189.

Claim and delivery. An action of claim and delivery must be brought within three years after the conversion by the bailee. Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844. An action for unlawful taking and detaining can be taken at any time within three years. McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382. The third subdivision of this section is applicable to all cases "of unlawful taking or detaining of personal property," whatever the form of action. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889.

Conversion of property. Conversion is any distinct act of dominion wrongfully exercised over the property of another (Horton v. Jack, 4 Cal. Unrep. 758; 37 Pac.

652); and a refusal to surrender property on tender and demand is a wrongful conversion (Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844), an action for which is within this section. Lowe v. Ozmun, 137 Cal. 257; 70 Pac. 87; Allsopp v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 5 Cal. App. 228; 90 Pac. 39. Property deposited for safe-keeping is converted, where there is a demand and a refusal to surrender; the statute commences to run from that time (Doyle v. Callaghan, 67 Cal. 154; 7 Pac. 418); but where property is deposited with another for safekeeping, and he tortiously converts it to his own use, and conveys it to another, the statute commences to run, as against such other person, at the time he acquires possession. Harpending v. Meyer, 55 Cal. 555. An action for collaterals may be maintained at any time within three years after the refusal of demand for their return. Scrivner v. Woodward, 139 Cal. 314; 73 Pac. 863. Money deposited to be kept until demanded constitutes an express trust, and the statute does not commence to run until demand is made. Zuck v. Culp, 59 Cal. 142. An action on the bond of a sheriff, for the conversion of property levied upon and sold under attachment, is within this section (Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 211); as is also any action for trover and conversion. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889.

Relief from fraud. Actions for relief on the ground of fraud must be commenced within three years from the time the cause of action accrued (People v. Blankenship, 52 Cal. 619; Doyle v. Callaghan, 67 Cal. 154; 7 Pac. 418; Croghan v. Spence, 71 Cal. 124; 12 Pac. 719; Gregory v. Spieker, 110 Cal. 150; 52 Am. St. Rep. 70; 42 Pac. 576; Hunter v. Milam, 133 Cal. 601; 65 Pac. 1079); but where fraud is relied upon as a defense, and no affirmative relief is asked, the three-year limitation does not apply. McColgan v. Muirland, 2 Cal. App. 6; 82 Pac. 1113. Where fraud is only an incident to the real cause of action, this section does not apply (Clausen v. Meister, 93 Cal. 555; 29 Pac. 232; Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820; Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540; Stewart v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 260; Goodnow v. Parker, 112 Cal. 437; 44 Pac. 738; Campbell v. Campbell, 133 Cal. 33; 65 Pac. 134; McColgan v. Muirland, 2 Cal. App. 6; 82 Pac. 1113); but the action is controlled by the statute of limitations prescribed in § 318, ante. Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820 (reversing Murphy v. Crowley, 70 Pac. 820); Page v. Garver, 146 Cal. 577; 80 Pac. 860. An action to cancel a patent for land, procured by fraud, must be brought within three years from the time the cause of action accrued (People v. Blankenship, 52 Cal. 619); as also must any other action affecting real property for relief on the ground of fraud (Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513; 12 Pac. 570; Gregory v. Spieker, 110 Cal. 150; 52 Am. St. Rep. 70; 42 Pac. 576; Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820; Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146; Richards v. Farmers' etc. Bank, 7 Cal. App. 387; 94 Pac. 393; People v. Blankenship, 52 Cal. 619); such as actions for the reformation of a deed (Breen v. Donnelly, 74 Cal. 301; 15 Pac. 845), and to quiet title on the ground of fraud. Croghan v. Spence, 71 Cal. 124; 12 Pac. 719. Where the statutory period, from the date of the fraud, has not expired, the right to maintain the action is governed, not by the doctrine of laches, but by the statute of limitations. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 149 Cal. 556; 87 Pac. 19. Where leave to file an amended complaint is denied, and, pending an appeal from such order, the statute has run, upon reversal of the order an amended complaint may be filed as of the date leave was asked. Hutchinson v. Ainsworth, 73 Cal. 452; 2 Am. St. Rep. 823; 15 Pac. 82. An action to enforce a liability against directors, on the ground of fraud, is governed by this section (Fox v. Hale & Norcross etc. Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369; 41 Pac. 308); as is also an action against a board of directors for the fraudulent issuance of stock (Smith v. Martin, 135 Cal. 247; 67 Pac. 779), and an action for the fraudulent sale thereof (Marks v. Evans, 6 Cal. Unrep. 505; 62 Pac. 76), and an action to set aside a deed, on the ground of fraud (Watkins v. Bryant, 91 Cal. 492; 27 Pac. 775; Castro v. Geil, 110 Cal. 292; 52 Am. St. Rep. 84; 42 Pac. 804); and a decree of divorce (Prewett v. Dyer, 107 Cal. 154; 40 Pac. 105); but this section does not apply to actions to quiet title against a deed, where the grantee is charged with a constructive trust in favor of the grantor, or where the deed is procured as a mortgage to pay past and future advances. De Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349. The mere right to commence an action for fraud is not assignable (Archer v. Freeman, 124 Cal. 528; 57 Pac. 474; Sanborn v. Doe, 92 Cal. 152; 27 Am. St. Rep. 101; 28 Pac. 105; Whitney v. Kelley, 94 Cal. 146; 28 Am. St. Rep. 106; 15 L. R. A. 813; 29 Pac. 624; Emmons v. Barton, 109 Cal. 662; 42 Pac. 303); so that the cause of action of a creditor, seeking to have a fraudulent conveyance set aside, accrues, and the statute begins to run, not on the date of the fraudulent conveyance, but on the date on which he recovers judgment against the creditor (Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am. St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433; Forde v. Exempt Fire Co., 50 Cal. 299; Ohm v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 545; 20 Am. St. Rep. 245; 26 Pac. 244); and the cause of action does not accrue on the recovery of the judgment, if the judgment creditor has not discovered the fraud (Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433; Shiels v. Nathan, 12 Cal. App. 604; 108 Pac. 34; Vance v. Supreme Lodge, 15 Cal. App. 178; 114 Pac. 83); but the allegations must show that the acts of fraud were committed under such circumstances that the injured party could not be presumed to have any knowledge of them. Denike v. Santa Clara Valley Society, 9 Cal. App. 228; 98 Pac. 687. The statute commences to run against an action to cancel a fraudulent deed by a judgment creditor, who has received a sheriff's deed to the debtor's land, from the date of the sheriff's deed. Chalmers v. Sheehy, 132 Cal. 459; 84 Am. St. Rep. 62; 64 Pac. 709.

Action on the ground of mistake. An action to correct a mutual mistake is barred in three years from the discovery of the mistake. Eureka v. Gates, 137 Cal. 89; 69 Pac. 850. The limitation of the action is three years from the date of the mistake; after the lapse of three years, the complaint must contain allegations showing that the mistake was discovered within the three years. Smith v. Irving, 3 Cal. Unrep. 121; 22 Pac. 170. Knowledge, by the defendant, of the mistake is immaterial: he still has the right to rely upon the mistake, where action is not brought within three years. Shain v. Sresovich, 104 Cal. 402; 38 Pac. 51. An action to recover an excess payment in redemption of land, sold for taxes, cannot, by a mistake of the auditor, discovered within three years, be presented to a board of supervisors and an allowance made a year after the statute has run. Perrin v. Honeycutt, 144 Cal. 87; 77 Pac. 776. This section is not applicable in an action to compel a conveyance to a corrected division line, agreed upon by adjoining proprietors, the correction of the mistake in the partition deed being merely incidental to the action (Goodnow v. Parker, 112 Cal. 437; 44 Pac. 738); neither does it apply in an action for the breach of an oral contract to cancel a note and to return the collateral (Scrivner v. Woodward, 139 Cal. 314; 73 Pac. 863); nor in an action for the reformation of a trust claim, where the mistake was discovered within three years. Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. The fourth subdivision does not apply in an action to enforce rights under a decree of distribution, as distinguished from an action to obtain relief on the ground of mistake in such decree. Taylor v. McCowen, 154 Cal. 798; 99 Pac. 351. When the bar of the statute has once attached to the enforcement of a claim, incidental equitable rights founded on mistake are lost. Banks v. Stockton, 149 Cal. 599; 87 Pac. 83.

Discovery of fraud or mistake. The discovery of fraud or mistake sets the statute in motion, and it does not begin to run until such discovery. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 142 Cal. 601; 76 Pac. 381; Eureka v. Gates, 137 Cal. 89; 69 Pac. 850; Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771. The complaint must contain averments, however, showing that the fraud was discovered within three years before the commencement of the action. Le Roy v. Mulliken, 59 Cal. 281; Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146; People v. Noyo Lumber Co., 99 Cal. 456; 34 Pac. 96; Castro v. Geil, 110 Cal. 292; 52 Am. St. Rep. 84; 42 Pac. 804. In an action to recover for a trespass in a mine, the plaintiff, to avoid the plea of the statute, may prove the fraudulent concealment of the trespass without pleading it. Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771. An action for relief on the ground of fraud is barred in three years after the discovery thereof. Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423; People v. Blankenship, 52 Cal. 619; Watkins v. Bryant, 91 Cal. 492; 27 Pac. 775. No lapse of time or delay in bringing suit, however long, will defeat the remedy, if the injured party was, during all of the interval, ignorant of concealed fraud; the statute begins to run upon the discovery of the fraud. McMurray v. Bodwell, 16 Cal. App. 574; 117 Pac. 627. An action to charge the defendant with a constructive trust as to certain real property, on the ground that the purchase price thereof was fraudulently procured by the defendant from the plaintiff, is based on fraud as the substantive cause of action, and is barred in three years after the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud. Unkel v. Robinson, 163 Cal. 648; 126 Pac. 485. Only an unequivocal repudiation of the trust by a trustee, with knowledge of this brought home to the beneficiaries, can set the statute in motion in favor of the trustee. Elizalde v. Murphy, 163 Cal. 681; 126 Pac. 978. The policy of the law is, that actions on the ground of fraud should be commenced within three years; but, that innocent parties may not suffer while in ignorance of their rights, the statute excepts them from the limitation until the discovery of the fraud; the last clause of the section must therefore be construed as an exception, merely, to the general provision, and be pleaded as such. Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423; Smith v. Irving, 3 Cal. Unrep. 121; 22 Pac. 170. It is not enough to assert, merely, that the discovery was not sooner made; it must appear that it could not have been made by the exercise of reasonable diligence; and all that reasonable diligence would have disclosed, the plaintiff is presumed to have known, the means of knowledge in such a case being the equivalent of the knowledge which would have been procured. Truett v. Onderdonk, 120 Cal. 581; 53 Pac. 26; Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac.

1086; Lady Washington Consolidated Co. v. Wood, 113 Cal. 482; 45 Pac. 809. "Discovery" and "knowledge' are not convertible terms; and it is not sufficient to make a mere averment of non-discovery or ignorance, but the facts from which the conclusion follows must be pleaded. Lady Washington Consolidated Co. v. Wood, 113 Cal. 482; 45 Pac. 809; Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; Lataillade v. Oreña, 91 Cal. 565; 25 Am. St. Rep. 219; 27 Pac. 924; Archer v. Freeman, 124 Cal. 528; 57 Pac. 474; Lillis v. Silver Creek etc. Water Co., 21 Cal. App. 234; 131 Pac. 344; Davis v. Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc., 21 Cal. App. 444, 132 Pac. 462. The party must show diligence to detect the fraud; and also, if he made any discovery, when and how it was made, and why it was not made sooner. Lataillade v. Oreña, 91 Cal. 565; 25 Am. St. Rep. 219; 27 Pac. 924; Bills v. Silver King Mining Co., 106 Cal. 9; 39 Pac. 43; Tarke v. Bingham, 123 Cal. 163; 55 Pac. 759; Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88; Prewett v. Dyer, 107 Cal. 154; 40 Pac. 105; Archer v. Freeman, 124 Cal. 528; 57 Pac. 474. The means of knowledge are equivalent to knowledge. Lady Washington Consolidated Co. v. Wood, 113 Cal. 482; 45 Pac. 809; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; Bills v. Silver King Mining Co., 106 Cal. 9; 39 Pac. 43; Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086; Lee v. McClelland, 120 Cal. 147; 52 Pac. 300; Archer v. Freeman, 124 Cal. 528; 57 Pac. 474; Simpson v. Dalziel, 135 Cal. 599; 67 Pac. 1080; McMurray v. Bodwell, 16 Cal. App. 574; 117 Pac. 627. The maxim, Vigilantibus non dormientibus, jura subveniunt, applies with aptness (Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88); but where, under the circumstances, a prudent man would not be put upon inquiry, the mere fact that means of knowledge were open to plaintiff, of which he did not avail himself, does not debar him from relief; the circumstances must be such that inquiry becomes a duty, and failure to make it, a negligent omission. Tarke v. Bingham, 123 Cal. 163; 55 Pac. 759; Bank of Mendocia v. Baker, 82 Cal. 114; 6 L. R. A. 833; 22 Pac. 1037; Prouty v. Devlin, 118 Cal. 258; 50 Pac. 380. When a party, against whom a cause of action exists in favor of another, by fraud or concealment prevents such other party from obtaining knowledge thereof, the statute commences to run, only from the time the cause of action is discovered, or might have been discovered by the exercise of diligence. Vance v. Supreme Lodge, 15 Cal. App. 178; 114 Pac. 83. If an administrator seeks to administer upon the estate of a living person, and takes into his possession money belonging to such person, the latter's right of action to recover the money is barred, where more than four years have elapsed since the receipt of the money, and more than three years have elapsed since he had knowledge of the facts. Fay v. Costa, 2 Cal. App. 241; 83 Pac. 275. There must be a discovery of fraud, accomplished secretly, in order to set the statute in motion. Gregory v. Spieker, 110 Cal. 150; 52 Am. St. Rep. 70; 42 Pac. 576. Where an action for relief on the ground of fraud has been commenced in time, and the judgment therein reversed, the party seeking relief has, under § 355, post, one year thereafter in which to commence a new action. Kenney v. Parks, 137 Cal. 527; 70 Pac. 556. An action to recover money, fraudulently obtained, may be commenced within three years from the date of the discovery of the fraud. City Savings Bank v. Enos, 135 Cal. 167; 67 Pac. 52. This section governs actions at law, as well as suits in equity, for relief on the ground of fraud. Christensen v. Jessen, 5 Cal. Unrep. 45; 40 Pac. 747.

Aggrieved party. A relator suing, in the name of the state, to cancel a patent to state lands, is not an aggrieved party, within the meaning of this section. People v. Novo Lumber Co., 99 Cal. 456; 34 Pac. 96.

Limitation of actions for vacating probate sales. See note post, § 1573.

Limitations against directors of corporations. See note post, § 359.

Bar of action against administrator to account. See note post, § 343.

Fraud as preventing operation of statute of limitations. See note 60 Am. Dec. 509.

As to whether action based on fraud is governed by statute applicable to injury to property or injury to person. See note 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 353.

When limitations commences to run against action to recover money paid by mistake. See note 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1191.

Failure to notify other party of mistake made by him as fraud which will toll statute of limitations. See note 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 950.

Effect of public records as notice or evidence of notice which will set statute of limitations running against action based on fraud. See note 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 208.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Liability created by statute. The claim of a district attorney, for his commission on debts recovered for the county, comes within subdivision 1 of this section. Higby v. Calaveras County, 18 Cal. 176.

2. Rents and profits. In an action to recover lands, the plaintiff can recover the rents and profits for three years only, prior to the commencement of the action, if this section is pleaded. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330; see also Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 487.

3. Fraudulent concealment. The statute of limitations is not intended to protect a person who, by fraudulent concealment, has delayed the assertion of a right. See Kane v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449.

4. Allegation of discovery. The fact of the discovery of the fraud must be alleged to have been made within three years. Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423.

5. Constructive, as well as actual, fraud. This section is applicable to constructive as well as actual fraud, and an action grounded upon either may be commenced within three years after discovery. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 20; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

6. When concealment is not fraudulent. Where three persons entered into a partnership agreement, by the terms of which the partnership was to be kept secret, and plaintiff, ignorant of the existence of the partnership, sold goods to one of the firm, individually, in 1854, and afterwards, in 1860, discovering that the partnership existed in 1854, and that the goods went to the uses of the concern, brought suit against the three. Held: that this agreement to keep the partnership secret, and its mere concealment from plaintiff, do not amount to such a fraud as to avoid the statute of limitations. Soule v. Atkinson, 18 Cal. 225; 79 Am. Dec. 174.

7. To what frauds section does not apply. Subdivision 4, it has been held, does not apply to an action to set aside and cancel a conveyance, upon the ground that it is a cloud upon the title of the plaintiff, even if the court is asked to set aside the conveyance because it was made to defraud a creditor. See Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 60; Stewart v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 260.

8. Generally. See Currey v. Allen, 34 Cal. 254.

§ 339. Within two years. Within two years:

1. An action upon a contract, obligation or liability not founded upon an instrument of writing, other than that mentioned in subdivision two of section three hundred thirty-seven of this code; or an action founded upon an instrument or writing executed out of the state; or an action founded upon a contract, obligation or liability, evidenced by a certificate, or abstract or guarantee of title of real property, or by a policy of title insurance; provided, that the cause of action upon a contract, obligation or liability evidenced by a certificate, or abstract or guarantee of title of real property, or policy of title insurance shall not be deemed to have accrued until the discovery of the loss or damage suffered by the aggrieved party thereunder.

2. An action against a sheriff, coroner, or constable upon a liability incurred by the doing of an act in his official capacity and in virtue of his office, or by the omission of an official duty, including the non-payment of money collected upon an execution. But this subdivision does not apply to an action for an escape.

Mutual account. See post, § 344.

Actions for escape. See post, § 340, subd. 4.

Legislation § 339. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (subd. 1 based on Stats. 1850, p. 345, and subd. 2 based on Stats. 1859, p. 306), and then read: "Within two years: 1. An action upon a contract, obligation, or liability, not founded upon an instrument of writing; 2. An action against a sheriff, coroner, or constable, upon the liability incurred by the doing of an act in his official capacity, and in virtue of his office, or by the omission of an official duty, including the non-payment of money collected upon an execution. But this subdivision does not apply to an action for an escape; 3. An action upon a judgment, or upon a contract, obligation, or liability for the payment of money or damages, founded upon an instrument in writing, executed out of this state; 4. An action to recover damages for the death of one caused by the wrongful act of another."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 291, (1) at end of subd. 1, adding "or founded upon an instrument of writing executed out of the state"; (2) in subd. 2, changing "the" to "a," before "liability"; (3) striking out subd. 3; (4) renumbering subd. 4 as subd. 3, and adding thereto the words "or neglect," after "act."

3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 231, striking out subd. 3.

4. Amended by Stats. 1906, p. 5, after subd. 2, adding the paragraph, "Provided, that wherever the time within which any action mentioned in this section must be so commenced would in any case expire by the terms of this section after the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and six, and before the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and seven, such action may be commenced at any time before the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and seven, with the same force and effect as if commenced within two years as in this section provided."

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 599; this amendment differing from the present (1913) as noted infra.

6. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 332, (1) in subd. 1, (a) substituting "instrument or writing" for "instrument of writing," in the second instance (probably a typographical error), (b) adding all the matter in the subdivision from and including the words, "or an action founded upon a contract," to the end thereof.

Obligations other than upon contracts. "Liability" has been defined as "responsibility"; the state of one who is bound, in law and justice, to do something which may be enforced by action; and this liability may arise from contracts express or implied, or in consequence of torts committed. Piller v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 42; Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208. The word "liability" is the most comprehensive of the several terms used in this section, and includes both of the others, inasmuch as it is the condition in which an individual is placed after a breach of his contract, or a violation of any obligation resting upon him (Lattin v. Gillette, 95 Cal. 317; 29 Am. St. Rep. 115; 30 Pac. 545); it also includes responsibility for torts, and is applicable to all actions at law, not specially mentioned in other portions of the statute. Lowe v. Ozmun, 137 Cal. 257; 70 Pac. 87; Piller v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 42; Raynor v. Mintzer, 72 Cal. 585; 18 Pac. 82; McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382; Lattin v. Gillette, 95 Cal. 317; 29 Am. St. Rep. 115; 30 Pac. 545. Liability for surgical and medical attention is limited to two years from the date on which the cause of action accrued (Meeks v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal. 149); as is also the liability for an injury to passengers, occasioned by a railroad company; and the lingering illness of the injured person does not toll the statute. Piller v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 42. An action to recover a proportionate part of the expense of reclaiming land, under a written agreement, is not subject to the two-year limitation prescribed in this section: the four-year limitation prescribed in § 337, ante, applies. Fabian v. Lammers, 3 Cal. App. 109; 84 Pac. 432. This section applies in an action upon a parol warranty of merchantability of goods sold, and the statute begins to run on the date of the breach (Brackett v. Martens, 4 Cal. App. 249; 87 Pac. 410), and it applies in an action against a bank, by one of its depositors, for damages resulting from the refusal of the bank to pay checks drawn upon it by the plaintiff. Smiths' Cash Store v. First Nat. Bank, 149 Cal. 32; 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 870; 84 Pac. 663; and in an action brought after a verbal statement of accounts (Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371), and in an action in favor of a fire-insurance company, for the negligent destruction of insured property by fire. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Pacific Lumber Co., 1 Cal. App. 156; 81 Pac. 976. Under a general retainer, contemplating services in possible distinct matters to be attended to separately, the attorney's right of action, in the absence of any understanding as to time or amount of payment, accrues upon the performance and completion of the service in each matter. Osborn v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 501; Ann. Cas. 1913A, 413; 117 Pac. 519.

Contracts not founded upon written instrument. The following are actions on contract, within the meaning of this section: An action on an account current (Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122); for services as secretary of a corporation, by a stockholder (Fraylor v. Sonora Mining Co., 17 Cal. 594); to recover deposit or purchase-money paid on abandonment, breach, or rescission of contract of sale (Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 130; Lattin v. Gillette, 95 Cal. 317; 29 Am. St. Rep. 115; 30 Pac. 545; Todd v. Board of Education, 122 Cal. 106; 54 Pac. 527; Patterson v. Doe, 130 Cal. 333; 62 Pac. 569); to recover the reasonable value of plans for a building (Todd v. Board of Education, 122 Cal. 106; 54 Pac. 527); in assumpsit, to enforce contribution among co-obligors (Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 130), and by a surety, who has paid the debt of his principal. Bray v. Cohn, 7 Cal. App. 124; 93 Pac. 893. An action to cancel a note cannot be maintained, where the holder of the note has furnished goods or performed services, in value equal to the amount of the note, after the statutory period, during which an action may be brought for goods or services. Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266. There is no breach of a covenant for quiet and peaceable enjoyment, until an eviction by the true owner, or an assertion by him of paramount title, in such manner that the holder of the land is compelled to yield possession or purchase the superior title. McCormick v. Marcy, 165 Cal. 386; 132 Pac. 449.

Action upon instrument executed out of state. A note dated in this state, and signed by two of the makers here, and by another outside of the state, and sent to the payee here, is executed and delivered out of the state (Loud v. Collins, 12 Cal. App. 786; 108 Pac. 880); and where a note is executed in another state, and secured by a mortgage on property here, it is likewise an obligation executed out of the state. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715. An action to foreclose a mortgage given for a pre-existing debt, contracted orally within this state, is barred in two years from the maturity of the debt. Sanford v. Bergin, 156 Cal. 43; 103 Pac. 333. The place of delivery is generally the place of execution: the place of date, signature, and writing does not necessarily fix the place of execution. Loud v. Collins, 12 Cal. App. 786; 108 Pac. 880.

Action against officer. An action to recover fees illegally exacted is within this section. Trower v. San Francisco, 157 Cal. 762; 109 Pac. 617.

Pleading statute. A plea of the statute of limitations, alleging that a cause of action is barred by this section is insufficient, unless it gives the particular subdivision thereof. Wolters v. Thomas, 3 Cal. Unrep. 843; 32 Pac. 565; contra, Mullenary v. Burton, 3 Cal. App. 263; 84 Pac. 159. An objection, however, to the manner of pleading the statute in such cases is waived, unless it is urged in the trial court. Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155; Mullenary v. Burton, 3 Cal. App. 263; 84 Pac. 159. Upon an appeal from a judgment, on the judgment roll, without a bill of exceptions presenting the evidence, a finding against a plea that the action is barred by the statute is conclusive. Murphy v. Stelling, 8 Cal. App. 702; 97 Pac. 672. The statute is not let in by amended pleadings, where the nature of the action is not changed. Atlantic etc. Ry. Co. v. Laird, 164 U. S. 393; 41 L. Ed. 485; 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120. A non-resident mortgagor cannot plead the two-year limitation of this section, if he has not been in the state, but a successor to the interest of the mortgagor stands in a different position. Foster v. Butler, 164 Cal. 623; 130 Pac. 6.

As to when limitations commences to run against action to recover money collected by agent or attorney. See note 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 660.

Running of limitations against cause of action arising in foreign jurisdiction. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 546.

When statute runs as to liability of title abstractor. See note 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 454.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The first and second subdivisions are based upon acts of 1850 and 1859 (Stats. 1850, p. 343; Stats. 1859, p. 306). The third subdivision is a substitute for the numerous provisions relative to the time in which actions may be commenced upon liabilities incurred without the state, and founded upon judgments or written instruments. The fourth subdivision is based upon act of 1862 (Stats. 1862, p. 447).

1. Assumpsit, for money had and received. See Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78.

2. Account. Items of, barred. Where an account is not a mutual one, the statute bars each item two years after its delivery. Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122. Where a party is selling goods from time to time and charging them, and the other pays him money which he credits on the account as a payment, this credit does not make the account a mutual one, within the meaning of the statute of limitations. Id. See also Fraylor v. Sonora Mining Co., 17 Cal. 595; see § 344, post, and note.

3. Claims for recovery of purchase-money at sale made by city. Claims against the city of San Francisco by the bidders at the attempted sale in December, 1853, for the purchase-money paid on such sale, are within the fourth subdivision of the seventeenth section of the limitation act, and are barred by a failure to sue within two years from the date of the receipt of the money by the city. Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351.

4. Receipt for money. A mere naked receipt in writing, acknowledging the delivery of money, is not a contract, and does not import a promise, obligation, or liability, and an action upon it is therefore barred by the statute of limitations in two years. But a receipt or acknowledgment, in writing, for money, which also contains a clause stating that the money received is to be applied to the account of the person from whom received, partakes of the double nature of a receipt and contract, and shows upon its face a liability to account, and an action upon it is not barred by the statute of limitations until four years have expired. Ashley v. Vischer, 24 Cal. 322; 85 Am. Dec. 65.

5. Generally. Note to § 337, ante, referring to Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 130.

§ 340. Within one year. Within one year.

1. An action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture, when the action is given to an individual, or to an individual and the state, except when the statute imposing it prescribes a different limitation.

2. An action upon a statute, or upon an undertaking in a criminal action, for a forfeiture or penalty to the people of this state.

3. An action for libel, slander, assault, battery, false imprisonment, seduction or for injury to or for the death of one caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another or by a depositor against a bank for the payment of a forged or raised check.

4. An action against a sheriff or other officer for the escape of a prisoner arrested or imprisoned on civil process.

5. An action against a municipal corporation for damages or injuries to property caused by a mob or riot.

One year.

1. Against decedent's representatives. Post, § 353.

2. After reversal on appeal. Post, § 355.

3. Entry upon real property. Ante, § 320.

Action against city for injury from riot. See Pol. Code, § 4454.

Legislation § 340. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (first four subdivisions based on Stats. 1850, p. 343), (1) subd. 3 then ending with the words, after "battery" "or false imprisonment," and (2) subd. 5 reading, "5. Upon a contract, obligation, or liability for the payment of money incurred out of this state and not founded upon a written contract."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 292, (1) changing the words after "battery" to "false imprisonment or seduction," and (2) changing subd. 5 to read as at present, except that the word "or," before "injuries," was then printed "for."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 89, (1) adding in subd. 2 the words, after "statute," "or upon an undertaking in a criminal action," and (2) changing the word "or" from "for," before "injuries," in subd. 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 232, omitting the word "or" before "seduction," and adding after that word the rest of the subdivision.

Action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture. A penalty is in the nature of a punishment for the non-performance of an act, or for the performance of an unlawful act, and in the former case it stands in lieu of the act to be performed; a license tax for the sale of liquors is a debt, not a penalty, and an action to recover the tax is not barred, under this section (San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242; 11 Pac. 682); neither is an action to enforce a penalty for delinquent taxes. Los Angeles County v. Ballerino, 99 Cal. 593; 32 Pac. 581; 34 Pac. 329. An action to recover money paid under an unlawful sale of stock, on a margin, is not within this section. Parker v. Otis, 130 Cal. 322; 92 Am. St. Rep. 56; 62 Pac. 571, 927. The first and second subdivisions of this section relate exclusively to actions for a penalty arising under a statute. San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242; 11 Pac. 682.

Action upon undertaking in criminal action. The second subdivision of this section relates to a cause arising in a criminal action. San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242; 11 Pac. 682.

Action for libel. The limitation of actions for libel is one year. Graybill v. De Young, 140 Cal. 323; 73 Pac. 1067.

Action for slander. The limitation of actions for slander is one year. Smullen v. Phillips, 92 Cal. 408; 28 Pac. 442.

Action for false imprisonment. The limitation of actions for false imprisonment is one year, and the statute commences to run against the action on the date of release. Krause v. Spiegel, 94 Cal. 370; 28 Am. St. Rep. 137; 15 L. R. A. 707; 29 Pac. 707.

Action for seduction. The limitation of actions for seduction is one year, and the statute does not commence to run, in the case of a minor, until the seduced minor attains majority. Morrell v. Morgan, 65 Cal. 575; 4 Pac. 580.

Action for injuries to person and character. The fact that counsel failed to note that this section was amended so as to include injuries caused by wrongful act or neglect, is not good ground to allow an amendment setting up the bar of the statute. Rudd v. Byrnes, 156 Cal. 636; 20 Ann. Cas. 124; 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 134; 105 Pac. 957.

Commencement of running of statute of limitations against action for death by wrongful act. See note 17 Ann. Cas. 519.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The first four subdivisions are based upon Stats. 1850, p. 343. The fifth subdivision is new.

§ 341. Within six months. Within six months:

An action against an officer, or officer de facto:

1. To recover any goods, wares, merchandise, or other property, seized by any such officer in his official capacity as tax collector, or to recover the price or value of any goods, wares, merchandise, or other personal property so seized, or for damages for the seizure, detention, sale of, or injury to any goods, wares, merchandise, or other personal property seized, or for damages done to any person or property in making any such seizure.

2. To recover stock sold for a delinquent assessment, as provided in section three hundred and forty-seven of the Civil Code.

Six months.

1. Stock sold for assessment. Civ. Code, § 347.
2. Action for taxes paid under protest. See Pol. Code, § 3819.
3. Against county. Post, § 342; Pol. Code, § 4075.
4. By decedent's representatives. Post, § 353.
5. Suits for penalties for violating highway laws. See Pol. Code, § 2935.

Legislation § 341. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1859, p. 306), and then read: "Within six months: An action against an officer, or officer de facto, engaged in the collection of taxes: 1. For money paid to any such officer under protest, or seized by such officer in his official capacity as a collector of taxes, and which, it is claimed, ought to be refunded; 2. To recover any goods, wares, merchandise, or other property seized by any such officer in his official capacity as tax-collector, or to recover the price or value of any goods, wares, merchandise, or other personal property so seized, or for damages for the seizure, detention, sale of or injury to any goods, wares, merchandise, or other personal property seized, or for damages done to any person or property in making any such seizure."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 292.

Action against an officer to recover property. An action to recover money paid to a tax-collector, under protest, must be commenced within six months. Cameron v. Smith, 50 Cal. 303; Woodham v. Cline, 130 Cal. 497; 62 Pac. 822. In an action for the wrongful conversion of personal property, the statute will not run, after the commencement of the action, to the date of filing an amended complaint, though it superadded immaterial allegations. Woodham v. Cline, 130 Cal. 497; 62 Pac. 822.

Action to recover stock sold for delinquent assessment. The second subdivision of this section has no application in action relating to stock sold under a void assessment (Herbert Kraft Co. Bank v. Bank of Orland, 133 Cal. 64; 65 Pac. 143), and applies only where there has been some irregularity in the assessment, or defect in the sale or notice. Cheney v. Canfield, 158 Cal. 342; 111 Pac. 92.

§ 342. Same. Actions on claims against a county, which have been rejected by the board of supervisors, must be commenced within six months after the first rejection thereof by such board.

Action.

1. For riot. Ante, § 340, subd. 5.
2. Against county on rejected claim. See Pol. Code, § 4078.

Legislation § 342. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 343. Actions for relief not hereinbefore provided for. An action for relief not hereinbefore provided for must be commenced within four years after the cause of action shall have accrued.

Bank deposits, no limitation. Ante, § 348.

Legislation § 343. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Application of section. This section governs the limitations of actions for partnership accounts (West v. Russell, 74 Cal. 544; 16 Pac. 392; Rowe v. Simmons, 113 Cal. 688; 45 Pac. 983); and actions for an accounting generally (Allsopp v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 5 Cal. App. 228; 90 Pac. 39); and all suits in equity, not strictly of concurrent cognizance at law and in equity (Piller v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 42; Dore v. Thornburgh, 90 Cal. 64; 25 Am. St. Rep. 100; 27 Pac. 30); and proceedings for the sale of real property to pay the debts of a decedent's estate (Estate of Crosby, 55 Cal. 574); but where the order of sale is made more than four years before that event, the sale may be based upon such order, and regarded as a continuation of such proceeding (Estate of Montgomery, 60 Cal. 645); and the revival of a judgment in favor of the purchaser at an execution sale, though void for irregularity, is governed by this section (Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337); as is also an action upon a foreign judgment (Patten v. Ray, 4 Cal. 287; Dore v. Thornburgh, 90 Cal. 64; 25 Am. St. Rep. 100; 27 Pac. 30), and mandamus to compel restoration to office. Farrell v. Board of Police Commissioners, 1 Cal. App. 5; 81 Pac. 674. An action to set aside a deed, on the ground of undue influence, comes within this section (Trubody v. Trubody, 137 Cal. 172; 69 Pac. 968), as does also an action to enforce a vendor's lien (California Savings Bank v. Parrish, 116 Cal. 254; 48 Pac. 73), and a refusal to convey according to the terms of the trust (Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 230); and this section applies to suits for equitable relief (Teall v. Schroder, 158 U. S. 172; 39 L. Ed. 938; 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768); but it has no application to the procedure contemplated by § 685, post (Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330); nor does it negative the limitations expressly applicable to actions to annul a void marriage. Stierlen v. Stierlen, 6 Cal. App. 420; 92 Pac. 329. Nor does it govern an action to redeem from a deed absolute in form, given as a mortgage. Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874. An action to recover a personal judgment for delinquent taxes is distinguished from a tax lien, although the bar is not removed. San Francisco v. Luning, 73 Cal. 610; 15 Pac. 311. When a secured debt is barred by the statute, the right of redemption is also barred (Green v. Thornton, 8 Cal. App. 160, 96 Pac. 382); but an action upon the assumption of a mortgage and an agreement to pay is not barred (Roberts v. Fitzallen, 120 Cal. 482; 52 Pac. 818), although an oral contract to convey land is (Dodge v. Clark, 17 Cal. 586; Lowell v. Kier, 50 Cal. 646; Henderson v. Hicks, 58 Cal. 364), especially in those cases where the vendee has been put in possession and holds under a contract of sale and purchase. Calanchini v. Branstetter, 84 Cal. 249; 24 Pac. 149. Mandamus to compel the levy of a tax must be brought within four years (Barnes v. Glide, 117 Cal. 1; 59 Am. St. Rep. 153; 48 Pac. 804); but a lien tax is not extinguished by the statute of limitations; it exists until there is a payment, or a sale of the property for the taxes. Lewis v. Rothchild, 92 Cal. 625; 28 Pac. 805. The duty of an administrator to account is a continuing duty, and does not become barred. Elizalde v. Murphy, 163 Cal. 681; 126 Pac. 978. This section, if any, applies to a proceeding by a ward, after attaining majority, to compel a settlement of accounts by the guardian. Cook v. Ceas, 147 Cal. 614, 619; 82 Pac. 370. It is a residuary clause, which applies only when no other section is applicable. Unkel v. Robinson, 163 Cal. 648; 126 Pac. 485.

Actions involving trusts. Where there is a trust created in land, the statute commences to run only on the date on or from which the trust is openly disavowed, and that fact is clearly and unequivocally made known to the cestui que trust. Luco v. De Toro, 91 Cal. 405; 27 Pac. 1082. The repudiation of the trust must be brought home to the knowledge of the cestui que trust. Hovey v. Bradbury, 112 Cal. 620; 44 Pac. 1077; Norton v. Bassett, 154 Cal.

411; 129 Am. St. Rep. 162; 97 Pac. 894. Where there is a written contract, showing a trust relationship between parties, an action for an accounting based thereon, commenced within four years from the date of the contract, is not barred by the statute. McArthur v. Blaisdell, 159 Cal. 604; 115 Pac. 52. The statute does not commence to run in favor of a trustee holding the legal title to land under a positive voluntary trust resting in parol, until a repudiation of the trust by the trustee, with knowledge of the repudiation brought home to the beneficiaries. Taylor v. Morris, 163 Cal. 717; 127 Pac. 66; MacMullan v. Kelly, 19 Cal. App. 700; 127 Pac. 819. The fund arising in a county treasury, from an accumulation of excessive personal property taxes, constitutes an express continuing trust, against which the statute does not begin to run until such trust, with the knowledge or on the demand of the taxpayer, has been repudiated. MacMullan v. Kelly, 19 Cal. App. 700; 127 Pac. 819. A resulting trust differs from a constructive trust, in that the latter is forced upon the conscience of the trustee against his will, and generally to prevent fraud; while an express trust differs from a resulting trust, only in the manner in which it is proven; but, when proven, the resulting trust is enforced in the same manner as an express trust. Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624. An action to enforce a constructive trust is barred in four years (Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88); but a cause of action on an express trust does not accrue until there has been a repudiation of the same. Broder v. Conklin, 77 Cal. 330; 19 Pac. 513; Sandfoss v. Jones, 35 Cal. 481. The limitation of an action on an implied trust is governed by this section (Piller v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 42; Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88; Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155; 31 Pac. 896; Nougues v. Newlands, 118 Cal. 102; 50 Pac. 386; Kenney v. Parks, 137 Cal. 527; 70 Pac. 556), and a denial or a repudiation of such a trust is not necessary to set the statute running. Hecht v. Slaney, 72 Cal. 363; 14 Pac. 88; Currey v. Allen, 34 Cal. 254. An action to establish involuntary and resulting trusts in certain parcels of land is not subject to the four-year statute provided in this section (Bradley Bros. v. Bradley, 20 Cal. App. 1; 127 Pac. 1044); nor is an action based on fraud as the substantive cause of action. Unkel v. Robinson, 163 Cal. 648; 126 Pac. 485. A grantee who takes a deed from a trustee, with full knowledge that it is executed in violation of the trust, becomes an involuntary trustee of the trust, cast upon him by operation of law. Nougues v. Newlands, 118 Cal. 102; 50 Pac. 386; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141. The solution of questions arising under a plea of the statute, or of laches, in cases where a long period of time has intervened between the origin of the cause and the commencement of an action thereon, depends upon the circumstances peculiar to each particular case. Miller v. Ash, 156 Cal. 544; 105 Pac. 600.

Actions that must be brought within four years. See note ante, § 337.

Limitation of actions for vacating probate sales. See note post, § 1573.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343. In a suit to compel the execution of a deed, plaintiff alleged the property was purchased by him of C., and by an agreement with defendant was conveyed directly to him (defendant) as security for a debt, he to make a deed to the plaintiff upon payment of the debt. The debt was paid, and the deed demanded, but refused. (See facts of case, as to the time the statute was in motion.) It was held that this character of case did not fall under subdivision 1 of § 399, ante, but fell within the terms of this section. Dodge v. Clark, 17 Cal. 586.

§ 344. Where cause of action accrues on mutual account. In an action brought to recover a balance due upon a mutual, open, and current account, where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties, the cause of action is deemed to have accrued from the time of the last item proved in the account on either side.

Account stated, defined. An account stated is a document, a writing, which exhibits the state of accounts between the parties, and the balance owing from one to the other. Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504. The term, "a balance due upon an account," implies an account between the two parties, in which the amount of the items upon one side of the account is deducted from the other side, and the balance thus ascertained; and the term "account" involves the idea of debt and credit, and the balance of an account is the result of the debit and credit sides of the account, which constitutes a debt or claim, for which the party in whose favor it exists has the right of recovery. Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865.

Mutual open and current accounts. Mutual accounts are made up of matters of set-off, where there is an existing debt on the one side, which constitutes a credit on the other, or where there is an express or implied understanding that mutual debts shall be satisfied or set off pro tanto between the parties. Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 126; 89 Am. Dec. 70; Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865. To constitute a mutual open and current account, there must be reciprocal demands between the parties. Fraylor v. Sonora Mining Co., 17 Cal. 594; Flynn v. Seale, 2 Cal. App. 665; 84 Pac. 263. The term "reciprocal demand," in this section, is only a synonym or the equivalent of the term "mutual accounts." Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865. The right to demand an article of property that has been deposited with another, and the right to demand a debt due from the depositor, are not reciprocal; if the depositor has the right to demand the property itself, the other is merely a bailee or depositary, and the foundation of an account is wanting. Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865. General deposits made by a corporation in a bank, to which it is indebted for overdrafts, of sums not greater than the balance of the indebtedness, are presumed to be made as payments thereupon, and do not make the account a mutual open and current one. Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85. A payment, whether of money, or of personal property of a stipulated value, made on an account, and intended as a payment, and not as a set-off pro tanto, does not make the account mutual (Rocca v. Klein, 74 Cal. 526; 16 Pac. 323); nor is the account mutual, where payments were made on an open account for goods sold and delivered, due for more than a year; nor is the case altered by the fact that the party once deposited a lump of gold amalgam to be sold, the proceeds to be applied to payment of the account (Weatherwax v. Cosumnes Valley Mill Co., 17 Cal. 344); nor is the account mutual, unless the parties have dealt with each other in the same relation, and the items upon the different sides of the account are capable of being set off against each other (Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865); nor is there a mutual account where one party is selling the other goods from time to time and charging the same, and the other gives him money which he credits on the account as a payment (Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122); nor is there a mutual account, where the defendant's testator was indebted to the plaintiff for services, and the testator had intrusted to the plaintiff moneys to be expended for the use and benefit of the testator, and at his direction, and the testator died during the continuance of the trust (Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865); nor is the account mutual, where the items of the account are all on one side (Fraylor v. Sonora Mining Co., 17 Cal. 594); and it is immaterial whether the account of these transactions is kept by one or by both of the parties, and the form in which the account is kept is also immaterial. Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865.

Nature and theory of an account stated. The theory upon which a mutual account is taken out of the statute is, that the obligations on the one side are, in law, applied as payments, or offsets, on the other; but if the transaction between the parties does not create a debt, or claim, which may be so applied, such transaction cannot be regarded as a payment, or offset, on the debt, nor be the foundation of a mutual account or reciprocal demand. Millet v. Bradbury, 109 Cal. 170; 41 Pac. 865. An account stated alters the nature of the original indebtedness, and constitutes a new promise or undertaking. Carey v. Philadelphia etc. Petroleum Co., 33 Cal. 694; Hendy v. March, 75 Cal. 566; 17 Pac. 702; and see Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820. The word "settle" has a double meaning, and is used alike to denote an adjustment of a demand and a payment; and evidence is admissible to explain in which sense the word is used, where there is any ambiguity. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. In an action on an account stated, it is not necessary to prove the account, or any of its items: the proof, in such a case, is directed to the fact that the parties have accounted together and have agreed upon the balance due (insimul computassent). Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. Where, after an account stated, a sum is due to either of the parties, which is not paid, but is afterward thrown into a new account, it is again outside of the statute. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. Where there are demands on each side, the striking of a balance converts the set-off into a payment, and from that time the statute of limitations commences running. Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 126; 89 Am. Dec. 70. The statute begins to run when the adjustment is made. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. Where the complaint states a cause of action for goods sold and delivered, and a bill of items is annexed to the same as an exhibit, with the date of each item, an answer referring to the exhibit, and averring that only the last item is within two years previous to the commencement of the action, and that, except as to the last item, "no action has accrued to said plaintiff by reason of the matter mentioned and set forth in said complaint, at any time within two years next preceding the commencement of this action," is a good plea of the statute to all the items, except the last. Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122. The statute, as to an accounting, begins to run from the last item charged on either side. Moss v. Odell, 141 Cal. 335; 74 Pac. 999. Where the account is not mutual, the statute bars each item two years after its delivery. Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122. The balance of a mutual open and current account is assignable. Culver v. Newhart, 18 Cal. App. 614; 123 Pac. 975.

Account stated may be oral or implied. Where an open account is orally stated before the items comprising it are barred, the statute begins to run against the stated account from the date of the statement, and an action may be brought thereon at any time within two years after the statement (Kahn v. Edwards, 75 Cal. 192; 7 Am. St. Rep. 141; 16 Pac. 779; Baird v. Crank, 98 Cal. 293; 33 Pac. 63; and see Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820); but an open account already barred cannot be relieved from the bar of the statute by an oral settlement of such account. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371. The agreement between the parties to an account stated, that all the items therein are true, need not be express, but may be implied from circumstances, such as the sending of the account from one to the other, who makes no objection thereto within a reasonable time. Mayberry v. Cook, 121 Cal. 588; 54 Pac. 95; and see Terry v. Sickles, 13 Cal. 427; Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371; Hendy v. March, 75 Cal. 566; 17 Pac. 702; Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504. Where an account stated is assented to, either expressly or impliedly, it becomes a new contract, and an action upon it is not founded upon the original items, but upon the balance agreed to by the parties. Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504; Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371.

Correcting error in account stated. In an action on a stated account, it is not necessary to prove the items of the original account, nor can they be inquired into or surcharged, except for some fraud, error, or mistake, which must be set forth in the pleadings. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371; Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504; Mayberry v. Cook, 121 Cal. 588; 54 Pac. 95. An account stated may be attacked for mistake, but, as in other contracts, the mistake must be put in issue by the pleadings. Hendy v. March, 75 Cal. 566; 17 Pac. 702. Where the account sued upon is a defective memorandum of account, without dates, or any balance struck or stated, and the answer denies that any account was stated, great latitude is allowed in introducing evidence to disprove it. Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504. An action to recover money paid upon a mistake of fact, where the payment was upon a mutual open and current account, with reciprocal demands between the parties up to within two years of the time when the action was brought, and where the mistake upon which the action was predicated was discovered within one year next before the action was brought, is not barred by the statute. Olmstead v. Dauphiny, 104 Cal. 635; 38 Pac. 505.

What are mutual accounts and the applicability of statutes of limitations thereto. See note 89 Am. Dec. 75.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. Mutual accounts. Where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties, upon a mutual open and current account, the statute of limitations commences running at the time of the last item of the account proved on either side. Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 126; 89 Am. Dec. 70.

2. Mutual accounts. Mutual accounts are made up of matters of set-off, where there is an existing debt on the one side which constitutes a credit on the other, or where there is an express or implied understanding that mutual debts shall be set off pro tanto between the parties. Id.

3. When property received and credited makes account mutual. The defendants, being indebted to the plaintiffs on account, delivered to them an article of personal property, for which the latter gave the former credit at a specified valuation. Held: that thereby the account between the parties became a mutual open and current account, consisting of reciprocal demands between them. Id.

4. Striking of a balance on accounts. Where there are demands on each side, the striking of a balance converts the set-off into a payment, and from that time the statute of limitations commences running. Id.

5. Mutual accounts. Until a balance is struck, a mutual account is open and current. Id.

6. A payment does not make an account mutual. A payment, whether it be made in money or of an article of personal property of a stipulated value, made on an account and intended as a payment, and not as a set-off pro tanto, does not make an account mutual. Id.

7. Payment on an account. Where money is delivered by one party to the other, and credited on account by him who received it, it will be treated as intended as a payment, unless it is shown to have been delivered as a loan; but not so with personal property, even though a value be affixed thereto. Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; 89 Am. Dec. 70; see also Weatherwax v. Cosumnes Valley Mill Co., 17 Cal. 344.

8. Generally. See note to § 339, ante. Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122.

§ 345. Actions by the people subject to the limitations of this chapter. The limitations prescribed in this chapter apply to actions brought in the name of the state or for the benefit of the state, in the same manner as to actions by private parties, except that actions for the recovery of money due on account of the presence of patients at the state hospitals may be commenced at any time within three years after the accrual of the same.

Action by people. Ante, § 315.

Legislation § 345. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1850, p. 343), and then read: "The limitations prescribed in this chapter apply to actions brought in the name of the state, or for the benefit of the state, in the same manner as to actions by private parties."

2. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 487.

Application of section. The rule that the statute of limitations does not apply to the state, according to the maxim, Nullum tempus occurrit regi, has no force, in the face of this section. San Francisco v. Luning, 73 Cal. 610; 15 Pac. 311. The statute of limitations for breach of an official bond does not commence running until the expiration of the official term, and the period thereafter required to effect a bar is four years. People v. Van Ness, 79 Cal. 84; 12

Am. St. Rep. 134; 21 Pac. 554. This section relates to the actions mentioned in this chapter (People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481); and it is applicable in an action to enforce the forfeiture of a corporate franchise on account of nonuser or misuser. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. An action brought by the people, on the relation of the controller, against a former secretary of state, on an account stated by the controller under § 437 of the Political Code, for money alleged to have been received by the defendant in his official capacity, but for which he had failed to account or make any settlement with the controller, is affected by the statute of limitations in the same manner as it would be were the action brought by a private person. People v. Melone, 73 Cal. 574; 15 Pac. 294.

Maxim that "time does not run against the crown." See note 101 Am. St. Rep. 146.

Running of statute of limitations against as dependent upon state being real party in interest. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 702.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 346. Action to redeem mortgage. An action to redeem a mortgage of real property, with or without an account of rents and profits, may be brought by the mortgagor or those claiming under him, against the mortgagee in possession, or those claiming under him, unless he or they have continuously maintained an adverse possession of the mortgaged premises for five years after breach of some condition of the mortgage.

"Action" includes special proceeding of civil nature. Post, § 363.

Legislation § 346. Enacted April 1, 1872.

Action to redeem mortgage of real property. This section expressly relates to suits in equity. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 4 Pac. 919; 10 Pac. 674. It also applies to cases in which there has been no foreclosure of the mortgage and equity of redemption; but such right is lost after the expiration of six months from the sale under foreclosure proceedings, except in those cases in which fraud has intervened, rendering the decree and the sale thereunder voidable. Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. It does not apply where the contract was entered into before the passage of the code (Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213), nor to a conveyance executed prior thereto (Green v. Thornton, 8 Cal. App. 160; 96 Pac. 382); nor does it apply to a case where it would effect a material change in the rights and obligations of the parties. Allen v. Allen, 27 Pac. 30. In actions to redeem a mortgage, the limitations in this section alone control. Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874; De Cazara v. Oreña, 80 Cal. 132; 22 Pac. 74; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. The right to foreclose a mortgage, and the right to redeem therefrom, before the code, were reciprocal, and when one was barred, the other was also barred. Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58. Whenever a debt secured by a deed is barred, the right to redeem is also barred. Hughes v. Davis, 40 Cal. 117; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58. The right to redeem and the right of the creditor to sue are reciprocal; when one is lost, the other cannot be enforced. Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73. He who seeks equity must do equity; and a mortgagor who seeks to quiet title against the mortgagee in possession, must pay the mortgage as a condition of success in his suit. Brandt v. Thompson, 91 Cal. 458; 27 Pac. 763; Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 311; 63 Am. St. Rep. 131; 51 Pac. 536; Booth v. Hoskins, 75 Cal. 271; 17 Pac. 225; De Cazara v. Oreña, 80 Cal. 132; 22 Pac. 74; Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437; 22 Am. St. Rep. 314; 13 L. R. A. 137; 26 Pac. 203. If the mortgagee, in such case, denies that there is any equity to be done between him and the mortgagor, and asserts title in himself, and otherwise manifests adverse holding, the mortgagor, or those claiming in his right, must proceed against the mortgagee in five years, or lose all remedy, whether the debt or obligation secured by the mortgage has been paid or not. Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 311; 63 Am. St. Rep. 131; 51 Pac. 536; Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874. Ejectment cannot be maintained against a mortgagee in possession, by the mortgagor or his assignee, where the debt has been barred by the statute. Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437; 22 Am. St. Rep. 314; 13 L. R. A. 137; 26 Pac. 203; Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 311; 63 Am. St. Rep. 131; 51 Pac. 536.

Adverse possession of premises. Where a party enters under a deed absolute, which is given as security for a debt, and holds thereunder, his possession is not adverse until he gives notice to the grantor that he claims to own the land in fee; and an action to redeem from such deed must be commenced within five years after an adverse claim of title has been made manifest. Frink v. Le Roy, 49 Cal. 314; Warder v. Enslen, 73 Cal. 291; 14 Pac. 874; Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 311; 63 Am. St. Rep. 131; 51 Pac. 536. A deed, absolute in form, constitutes a cloud upon the title of the grantor, which may be removed at any time upon doing equity, by redemption and payment of the amount due, regardless of the possession of the grantee. Hall v. Arnott, 80 Cal. 348; 20 Pac. 200. An action to redeem may be brought at any time, provided there has not been adverse possession for five years. Raynor v. Drew, 72 Cal. 307; 13 Pac. 866.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872 [unpublished].

§ 347. Same, when some of mortgagors are not entitled to redeem. If there is more than one such mortgagor, or more than one person claiming under a mortgagor, some of whom are not entitled to maintain such an action under the provisions of this chapter, any one of them who is entitled to maintain such an action may redeem therein a divided or undivided part of the mortgaged premises, according as his interest may appear and have an accounting, for a part of the rents and profits proportionate to his interest in the mortgaged premises, on payment of a part of the mortgage money, bearing the same proportion to the whole of such money as the value of his divided or undivided interest in the premises bears to the whole of such premises.

Legislation § 347. Enacted April 1, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872 [unpublished].

§ 348. No limitations where money deposited in bank. To actions brought to recover money or other property deposited with any bank, banker, trust company, building and loan association, or savings and loan society there is no limitation.

Legislation § 348. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 293.

2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 684, inserting "building and loan association."

Actions to recover deposits from banks. There is no limitation to an action brought to recover money deposited in a bank. Green v. Odd Fellows' Savings etc. Bank, 65 Cal. 71; 2 Pac. 887; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 28 Pac. 110; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Enright, 127 Cal. 669; 49 L. R. A. 647; 60 Pac. 439. A deposit in a bank, of shares of stock, as collateral security, is not a deposit of money or other property in a bank, within this section. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889. It is uncertain whether there is any limitation to an action against a stockholder of a bank, under this section (Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 28 Pac. 110); but the right cannot accrue against the bank and a stockholder at the same time. Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 28 Pac. 110; Mokelumne Hill Canal etc. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503. The applicability of the statute of limitations is determined by the nature of the right sued upon, not by the form of the action or the relief demanded. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889.

Running of statute of limitations against action to recover deposit of money. See note 4 Ann. Cas. 1146.

§ 349. Time for commencing actions under "local improvement act of 1901." Any action to contest an assessment levied by the legislative body of any municipality under the terms of the "local improvement act of 1901," must be commenced within thirty days after the entry upon the minutes of such legislative body of the resolution provided for in section eight of said "local improvement act of 1901."

Legislation § 349. Added by Stats. 1901, p. 44.

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO TIME OF COMMENCING ACTIONS.

§ 350. When an action is commenced.
§ 351. Exception, where defendant is out of the state.
§ 352. Exception, as to persons under disabilities.
§ 353. Provision where person entitled dies before limitation expires.
§ 354. In suits by aliens, time of war to be deducted.
§ 355. Provision where judgment has been reversed.
§ 356. Provision where action is stayed by injunction.
§ 357. Disability must exist when right of action accrued.
§ 358. When two or more disabilities exist, etc.
§ 359. This title not applicable to actions against directors, etc. Limitations in such cases prescribed.
§ 360. Acknowledgment or new promise must be in writing.
§ 361. Limitation laws of other states, effect of.
§ 362. Existing causes of action not affected.
§ 363. "Action" includes a special proceeding.

§ 350. When an action is commenced. An action is commenced, within the meaning of this title, when the complaint is filed.

Legislation § 350. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

When an action is commenced. An action is commenced, as to the parties named, when the complaint is filed in the proper court, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, and, to prevent the bar, no other proceedings are necessary. Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165; Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147. The issuance of a summons is not necessary to the commencement of an action (Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165); but this section applies only to the statute of limitations, and not to actions which must be commenced by filing a complaint and issuing a summons. Flandreau v. White, 18 Cal. 639; Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577. A new cause of action set out, or a cause of action extended to property not embraced in the original complaint, does not relate back, for the purpose of interrupting the statute of limitations, to the date of filing the original complaint. Anderson v. Mayers, 50 Cal. 525; Meeks v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal. 149. A counterclaim, which is not barred at the commencement of the action, may be set up. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118; Lyon v. Petty, 65 Cal. 322; 4 Pac. 103. Where a supplemental complaint is filed, bringing in new parties, as to such parties the suit is not commenced until the filing of the new pleading (Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147; Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563; Baker v. Baker, 136 Cal. 302; 68 Pac. 971; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361; Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258; Atkinson v. Amador etc. Canal Co., 53 Cal. 102), as it would be unjust to make defendants responsible for proceedings of which they had no notice. Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343. To prevent the bar of the statute of limitations, no other proceeding is necessary, except filing the complaint, when, for all purposes of the statute, the action is commenced. The issuance of summons is not necessary to the commencement of the action. Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577. See also Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 166; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122.

§ 351. Exception, where defendant is out of the state. If, when the cause of action accrues against a person, he is out of the state, the action may be commenced within the term herein limited, after his return to the state, and if, after the cause of action accrues, he departs from the state, the time of his absence is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action.

Absence from the state. When the defendant is absent from the state at the time of the maturity of his obligation, the statute does not commence to run until he returns to the state (Dougall v. Schulenberg, 101 Cal. 154; 35 Pac. 635; Chappell v. Thompson, 21 Cal. App. 136; 131 Pac. 82; McCormick v. Marcy, 165 Cal. 386; 132 Pac. 449), and the time of his absence is to be deducted from the whole time run (Stone v. Hammell, 83 Cal. 547; 17 Am. St. Rep. 272; 8 L. R. A. 425; 23 Pac. 703; Sanford v. Bergin, 156 Cal. 43; 103 Pac. 333; King v. Armstrong, 9 Cal. App. 368; 99 Pac. 527); and successive absences from the state must be deducted from the whole time run since the cause of action accrued. Rogers v. Hatch, 44 Cal. 280; Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91. When the period of limitation has once begun to run, it cannot, except as provided by statute, be postponed, suspended, or interrupted by any subsequent condition. Congregational Church Bldg. Soc. v. Osborn, 153 Cal. 197;

94 Pac. 881. The word "return," in this section, applies to persons coming from abroad, as well as to citizens of this country going abroad, for a temporary purpose, and then returning. Palmer v. Shaw, 16 Cal. 93; Rogers v. Hatch, 44 Cal. 280. A clandestine return to the state, with intent to defraud a creditor, by setting the statute in operation, and then departing, is not such a return as the statute contemplates, and has not the effect of setting the statute in motion. Palmer v. Shaw, 16 Cal. 93; Stewart v. Stewart, 152 Cal. 162; 14 Ann. Cas. 940; 92 Pac. 87. Where a debtor departs from the state, and returns openly, the fact that the creditor did not learn of his presence here is immaterial in determining whether the statute has run. Stewart v. Stewart, 152 Cal. 162; 14 Ann. Cas. 940; 92 Pac. 87. This section does not deprive non-residents of the benefits of the statute of limitations: it merely excludes from computation the time during which any defendant, resident or non-resident, may have been out of the state. Foster v. Butler, 164 Cal. 623; 130 Pac. 6. The absence of a co-surety from the state does not extend the time within which an action may be brought against the principal (Stone v. Hammell, 83 Cal. 547; 17 Am. St. Rep. 272; 8 L. R. A. 425; 23 Pac. 703); and the absence of a mortgagor from the state does not interrupt the running of the statute as to subsequent lienholders, or holders of the equity of redemption. Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91. The mortgagor has no power, by stipulation, to prolong the time of payment, or in any manner to increase the burdens on mortgaged premises. Wood v. Goodfellow, 43 Cal. 185; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; Lent v. Morrill, 25 Cal. 492; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361; Barber v. Babel, 36 Cal. 11; Sichel v. Carrillo, 42 Cal. 493. A corporation, domiciled in another state, with an agent in this state in possession of land for and in behalf of the corporation, is not absent from the state, within the meaning of this section, and is entitled to set up the bar of the statute as a defense (Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258); but a failure to appoint such agent, and prove the fact at the trial, deprives a foreign corporation of the right to plead the statute. O'Brien v. Big Casino Gold Mining Co., 9 Cal. App. 283; 99 Pac. 209. The absence from the state of the trustee of an express trust in land does not relieve the injured party from bringing an action within the limited time (Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 673; 40 Am. St. Rep. 106; 36 Pac. 387), as absence from the state, in such a case, does not deprive the plaintiff of a remedy. Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 580; 21 Am. St. Rep. 67; 25 Pac. 51; Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 673; 40 Am. St. Rep. 106; 36 Pac. 387. The plaintiff must allege absence from the state on the part of the defendant, where such fact is relied upon to take the case out of the statute (Bass v. Berry, 51 Cal. 264; Dougall v. Schulenberg, 101 Cal. 154; 35 Pac. 635); but this general exception does not apply to an action upon a stockholder's liability, which is governed by § 359, post. King v. Armstrong, 9 Cal. App. 368; 99 Pac. 527.

What constitutes absence from state. See note 83 Am. Dec. 644.

Return of debtor to state sufficient to start statute of limitations running. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 941.

What constitutes "residence out of the state" within meaning of statute. See note 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 225.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343. See Palmer v. Shaw, 16 Cal. 93; Nelson v. Nelson, 6 Cal. 430.

§ 352. Exception, as to persons under disabilities. If a person entitled to bring an action, mentioned in chapter three of this title, be, at the time the cause of action accrued, either:

1. Within the age of majority; or,

2. Insane; or,

3. Imprisoned on a criminal charge, or in execution under the sentence of a criminal court for a term less than for life; or,

4. A married woman, and her husband be a necessary party with her in commencing such action:

—The time of such disability is not a part of the time limited for the commencement of the action.

Disabilities stopping running of statute. See ante, § 328.

Legislation § 352. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1863, p. 326.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 125; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Within the age of majority. An infant may bring an action within the statutory time after attaining his majority. Morrell v. Morgan, 65 Cal. 575; 4 Pac. 580; Crosby v. Dowd, 61 Cal. 557.

Disabilities which stop the running of the statute. See ante, § 328, and note.

Disabilities which interrupt operation of statute of limitations. See note 36 Am. Dec. 68.

Interruption of running of statute of limitations on account of infancy of heir, devisee or distributee. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 837.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863, p. 325.

1. Action to set aside deed of insane man. If a person, while insane, is fraudulently induced to execute a conveyance of his property to another, the statute of limitations will not commence running against the grantor's right to commence an action to set aside the deed until he recovers his reason and discovers what he has done. Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376.

2. Married women. The statute runs against a married woman in all those actions to which her husband is not a necessary party with her, in commencing the action the same as other parties. Wilson v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 447; 95 Am. Dec. 194.

3. Separate property. Actions may be brought by the wife, when they concern her separate property, or are against her husband, etc. Wilson v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 447; 95 Am. Dec. 194.

§ 353. Provision where person entitled dies before limitation expires. If a person entitled to bring an action die before the expiration of the time limited for the commencement thereof, and the cause of action survive, an action may be commenced by his representatives, after the expiration of that time, and within six months from his death. If a person against whom an action may be brought die before the expiration of the time limited for the commencement thereof, and the cause of action survive, an action may be commenced against his representatives, after the expiration of that time, and within one year after the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration.

Substitution of parties. See post, § 385.

Survival of actions. See post, §§ 385, 1582, 1584.

"Action" includes special proceeding of civil nature. See post, § 363.

Claim against decedent's estate which has been allowed, not affected by statute. See post, § 1569.

Legislation § 353. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Effect of death on running of statute. This section is applicable only to causes of action against which the statute has commenced to run (Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85); it is imperative, and applies to all claims arising upon a contract (Estate of Hildebrandt, 92 Cal. 433; 28 Pac. 486); and while the first clause may, under some circumstances, prolong the time originally limited, yet it cannot operate, in any case, to shorten it. Lowell v. Kier, 50 Cal. 646; Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85.

Action by representative of deceased. This section does not apply to an action upon a claim against the estate of another deceased person (Morrow v. Barker, 119 Cal. 65; 51 Pac. 12), nor to an action to cancel a deed for fraud and undue influence, and to recover an interest in the real property so obtained. Page v. Garver, 146 Cal. 577; 80 Pac. 860.

Action against representatives of deceased person. The statute does not commence to run, where administration has not been granted on an estate (Danglada v. De la Guerra, 10 Cal. 386; Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85; Estate of Bullard, 16 Cal. 355; 48 Pac. 219; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Herbert, 53 Cal. 375; Casey v. Gibbons, 136 Cal. 368; 68 Pac. 1032); nor on an action to foreclose a mortgage not due at the death of the mortgagor, while there is no administration on the mortgagor's estate (Heeser v. Taylor, 1 Cal. App. 619; 82 Pac. 977); it does not necessarily extend the time for commencing an action against the personal representatives of a deceased person; it only gives the plaintiff one year for the appointment of the representative, where he has not that much time under the statute of limitations (McMillan v. Hayward, 94 Cal. 357; 29 Pac. 774); but the statute is suspended only as to the representative of the deceased person; as to the grantee of the mortgaged premises, the statute commences to run on the death of the party, regardless of the appointment of the administrator. California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Miller, 3 Cal. App. 54; 84 Pac. 453. A mortgage is not required to be presented to the representative of the mortgagor (Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Conlin, 67 Cal. 178; 7 Pac. 477); but other claims must be presented to the administrator. Morrow v. Barker, 119 Cal. 65; 51 Pac. 12; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152; Sichel v. Carrillo, 42 Cal. 493. Where a mortgage is given to secure debts payable in installments, the statute runs against such installment from its maturity. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Herbert, 53 Cal. 375; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. "If a person against whom an action may be brought die," etc. See Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85.

2. Estates of deceased persons. Administration not granted. A note due shortly after the death of the maker, in 1852, letters of administration were issued in 1856, and no notice to creditors having been published, the note was presented to the administrator in 1859 and rejected. Suit was brought on the claim immediately after rejection. Held: the note was not barred by the statute of limitations. Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85. The statute of limitations does not begin to run, when no administration exists on decedent's estate at the time the cause of action accrued. Danglada v. De la Guerra, 10 Cal. 386; Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85; see also Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

§ 354. In suits by aliens, time of war to be deducted. When a person is an alien subject, or citizen of a country at war with the United States, the time of the continuance of the war is not part of the period limited for the commencement of the action.

Legislation § 354. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 355. Provision where judgment has been reversed. If an action is commenced within the time prescribed therefor, and a judgment therein for the plaintiff be reversed on appeal, the plaintiff, or if he die and the cause of action survive, his representatives, may commence a new action within one year after the reversal.

Legislation § 355. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 125; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

New actions. This section permits a new action of any kind, having for its result the same relief as was obtained in the original action. Kenney v. Parks, 137 Cal. 527; 70 Pac. 556. A reversal upon appeal does not include an annulling upon a writ of review. Fay v. Costa, 2 Cal. App. 241; 83 Pac. 275.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 356. Provision where action is stayed by injunction. When the commencement of an action is stayed by injunction or statutory prohibition, the time of the continuance of the injunction or prohibition is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action.

Legislation § 356. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

Action stayed by injunction or statutory prohibition. Where an action is stayed by a proceeding in bankruptcy, the time of such suspension is deducted from the time prescribed by statute (Hoff v. Funkenstein, 54 Cal. 233), and the period from the time on which the claim is presented by the administrator until its rejection by the judge, is not included in computing the running of the statute against the action (Nally v. McDonald, 66 Cal. 530; 6 Pac. 390); but the insolvency of a debtor does not extend the time within which an action must be commenced to foreclose a mechanic's lien. Bradford v. Dorsey, 63 Cal. 122; Barclay v. Blackinton, 127 Cal. 189; 59 Pac. 834. The statute does not commence to run during the pendency of insolvency proceedings. Union Collection Co. v. Soule, 141 Cal. 99; 74 Pac. 549. A statutory prohibition, which is not constitutional, is not within this section, as it cannot operate to suspend the statute. Bates v. Gregory, 89 Cal. 387; 26 Pac. 891. The theory of the statute of limitations is, that the creditor has the full statutory time, whatever it may be, during which he may, of his own volition, commence an action. Hoff v. Funkenstein, 54 Cal. 233.

Suspension of statute by injunction. See notes 4 Ann. Cas. 147; 30 L. R. A. 142; 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1187; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 673.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 357. Disability must exist when right of action accrued. No person can avail himself of a disability, unless it existed when his right of action accrued.

Successive disabilities. See post, § 358; ante, § 328.

Legislation § 357. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 358. When two or more disabilities exist, etc. When two or more disabilities coexist at the time the right of action accrues, the limitation does not attach until they are removed.

Legislation § 358. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 343.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 359. This title not applicable to actions against directors, etc. Limitations in such cases prescribed. This title does not affect actions against directors or stockholders of a corporation, to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed, or to enforce a liability created by law; but such actions must be brought within three years after the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts upon which the penalty or forfeiture attached, or the liability was created.

Director's personal liability. See Civ. Code, § 309.

Actions against directors and stockholders of corporations. An action to enforce the liability of stockholders is within this section (Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469; 92 Pac. 391; King v. Armstrong, 9 Cal. App. 368; 99 Pac. 527); and the giving of a note as evidence of the debt does not extend the time for bringing the action. O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469; 92 Pac. 391. Such an action is also an obligation arising on contract. Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846; London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164. An attempt is not made by this section to relieve a stockholder from his liability (Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85); but it provides that the action must be commenced within three years from the date on which the debt is created, whether the cause of action has matured or not. Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; 15 Pac. 670; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 103 Cal. 594; 37 Pac. 499; Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157; 59 Am. St. Rep. 162; 37 L. R. A. 619; 48 Pac. 1090; Johnson v. Bank of Lake, 125 Cal. 6; 73 Am. St. Rep. 17; 57 Pac. 664; London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164; Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85; Goodall v. Jack, 127 Cal. 258; 59 Pac. 575; Ryland v. Commercial etc. Bank, 127 Cal. 525; 59 Pac. 989; Jones v. Goldtree Bros. Co., 142 Cal. 383; 77 Pac. 939; Cook v. Ceas, 143 Cal. 221; 77 Pac. 65; O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469; 92 Pac. 391. An action against a stockholder to enforce a liability created by law is barred by the lapse of three years after the liability is created, although during a part of the time he was absent from the state. King v. Armstrong, 9 Cal. App. 368; 99 Pac. 527; O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469; 92 Pac. 391. An action to enforce the statutory liability imposed by the laws of a sister state upon the stockholders of a banking corporation is barred in three years after the liability is created. Miller v. Lane, 160 Cal. 90; 116 Pac. 58. A stockholder's responsibility commences with that of the corporation, and continues during the period of the existence of the indebtedness (Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503); but the suspension of the remedy of the corporation does not stop the running of the statute (Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62; O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469; 92 Pac. 391); neither does the extension of the time of payment in favor of the corporation toll the statute to enforce the stockholder's liability. Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62; Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40. The liability of the stockholder is separate and independent, founded and depending upon the original liability of the corporation; and the statute begins to run in favor of the stockholder from the date of the execution of a note, not from its maturity. Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 103 Cal. 594; 37 Pac. 499. The statute does not commence to run against an action to enforce the personal liability of the stockholder, until the accrual of a cause of action against the corporation. Johnson v. Bank of Lake, 125 Cal. 6; 73 Am. St. Rep. 17; 57 Pac. 664; State v. McCauley, 15 Cal. 429; McBean v. Fresno, 112 Cal. 159; 53 Am. St. Rep. 191; 31 L. R. A. 794; 44 Pac. 358. Thus, an action against a stockholder, to recover a deposit with a bank, must be commenced within three years after the date of the deposit (Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830), as the debt was created and the liability incurred at the time of the acceptance of each of the deposits, and at the expiration of three years the stockholder's liability is at an end. Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157; 59 Am. St. Rep. 162; 37 L. R. A. 619; 48 Pac. 1090; Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612; 37 Am. St. Rep. 87; 34 Pac. 335; Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 103 Cal. 594; 37 Pac. 499; Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830. The right of action against the stockholder, on account of his individual responsibility for the debts and liabilities of the corporation, accrues at the same time as the right of action against the corporation, and is not contingent on a recovery against the corporation. Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Stilphen v. Ware, 45 Cal. 110; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62. The payment of a note by the sureties of a corporation creates a new and independent liability on the part of the stockholders for the debt thus paid, which liability accrues on the date on which the note is paid by the sureties, and is barred in three years thereafter (Ryland v. Commercial etc. Bank, 127 Cal. 525; 59 Pac. 989); but a principal debtor is not a surety. Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39

Cal. 646; Neilson v. Crawford, 52 Cal. 248; Sonoma Valley Bank v. Hill, 59 Cal. 107; Morrow v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383; 1 Pac. 354; Hyman v. Colemau, 82 Cal. 650; 16 Am. St. Rep. 178; 23 Pac. 62. Overdrafts create a primary liability as they occur, and the statute runs in favor of the stockholder from the date thereof. Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407; 58 Pac. 85. Where a corporation guarantees the future payment of a note, liability is barred within three years from the date of guaranty. First Nat. Bank v. Consolidated Lumber Co., 16 Cal. App. 267; 116 Pac. 680. All the statutory provisions on the subject of the statute of limitations are to be considered together and construed in view of the presumption that the legislators are acquainted with well-settled principles of law, and that they legislate with reference thereto. Pryor v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554; 109 Am. St. Rep. 162; 82 Pac. 202.

Actions to enforce stockholders' liability. See note ante, § 338.

Limitation of actions against stockholders or corporate officers. See note 96 Am. St. Rep. 973.

Limitation of action to enforce stockholder's statutory liability. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 505.

Accrual of right of action to put statute of limitations into operation as to stockholder's liability for corporate debts. See note 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 897.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

§ 360. Acknowledgment or new promise must be in writing. No acknowledgment or promise is sufficient evidence of a new or continuing contract, by which to take the case out of the operation of this title, unless the same is contained in some writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby.

New or continuing contract. The consideration for a new promise is the original contract, or the moral obligation arising thereon, binding in foro conscientiæ, notwithstanding the bar of the statute (McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434; Wells v. Harter, 56 Cal. 342; Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 748; Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40), and it is this new contract that gives the right to recover. Wells v. Harter, 56 Cal. 342. There is a distinction to be observed, where the acknowledgment or new promise is made after maturity and before the bar of the statute, and where it is made after the bar has intervened; in the former case, the action is upon the original contract, the bar of the statute having been lifted and removed (McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Chaffee v. Browne, 109 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 1028; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42); in the latter case, the action is upon the new promise. Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42; Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40. The action must be brought upon the original promise or contract, where the acknowledgment or new promise is made before the bar of the statute (Southern Pacific Company v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145); but under the new promise, where made after the bar has intervened. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Chaffee v. Browne, 109 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 1028; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42; Sanford v. Bergin, 156 Cal. 43; 103 Pac. 333. The new promise to pay the debt does not revive the lien of the mortgage which secures it, however (Sanford v. Bergin, 156 Cal. 43; 103 Pac. 333), unless the statute has not run before the promise. President and Board of Trustees v. Stephens, 11 Cal. App. 523; 105 Pac. 614. The action upon the new promise must be commenced within four years from the date of the new promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Rodgers v. Byers, 127 Cal. 528; 60 Pac. 42. The new promise, to revive the cause of action, must contain an acknowledgment from which the law will imply a promise to pay, and be a direct and unqualified admission of an existing debt. Visher v. Wilbur, 5 Cal. App. 562; 90 Pac. 1065; 91 Pac. 412; President and Board of Trustees v. Stephens, 11 Cal. App. 523; 105 Pac. 614.

Acknowledgment or new promise must be in writing. To take the debt out of the bar of the statute, or to lift or remove the bar, the acknowledgment must be in writing. Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142; Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100; Porter v. Elam, 25 Cal. 291, 292; 85 Am. Dec. 132; Estate of Galvin, 51 Cal. 215; Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; Booth v. Hoskins, 75 Cal. 271; 17 Pac. 225; Pierce v. Merrill, 128 Cal. 473; 79 Am. St. Rep. 63; 61 Pac. 67; Higgins v. Graham, 143 Cal. 131; 76 Pac. 898. Oral promises are not sufficient to take the case out of the two-year limitation. Rose v. Foord, 3 Cal. Unrep. 438; 28 Pac. 229. A rehearing was denied in Rose v. Foord, 96 Cal. 152, 30 Pac. 1114, holding that no new cause of action arises to recover the purchase-money until demand made, and that the statute does not commence to run until then. To revive a claim barred by the statute, a writing is essential, and it must contain either an express or an implied promise to pay an existing debt; in the absence of an express promise, the acknowledgment must be unequivocal, and must contain a direct and unqualified admission of an existing debt for which the party is liable, and which he is willing to pay. Visher v. Wilbur, 5 Cal. App. 562; 90 Pac. 1065; 91 Pac. 412. A mortgage barred by the statute is not renewed by a renewal of the note (Wells v. Harter, 56 Cal. 342; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374); nor is the oral settlement of an account sufficient to take items out of the statute, where it is already barred. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371; Kahn v. Edwards, 75 Cal. 192; 7 Am. St. Rep. 141; 16 Pac. 779; Baird v. Crank, 98 Cal. 293; 33 Pac. 63. An acknowledgment of a debt operates to start a new period of limitation. Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616. There is that sort of an implied acknowledgment, that may be inferred in the case of every offer or promise, that the amount offered or promised to be paid is or will become due; but it is not the acknowledgment required by the statute, and it is of no avail to the plaintiff, because no promise arises therefrom by implication; it would be illogical to infer from any offer or promise to pay a given sum of money upon the original contract, an acknowledgment, or to infer a promise more comprehensive than that from which the acknowledgment was implied; an offer or promise to pay a certain sum, or to deliver any article of value at a specified time, in satisfaction of the original debt upon which the statute has run, cannot, by this inverse implication, be construed as evidence of a promise to pay the whole debt, without a plain perversion of the meaning and intention of the provision of the statute. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170. An extension of time for the payment of a debt, signed by the payee, raises an estoppel to plead the statute. Quanchi v. Ben Lomond Wine Co., 17 Cal. App. 565; 120 Pac. 427.

Signed by the party to be charged. The writing must be signed by the debtor (Estate of Galvin, 51 Cal. 215; Dorland v. Dorland, 66 Cal. 189; 5 Pac. 77); and it is not sufficient, unless so signed. Baird v. Crank, 98 Cal. 293; 33 Pac. 63. A subscription by the debtor is not necessary, if it is evident, from any part of the instrument or acknowledgment, that the debtor named in it has given to it his assent; and if an attestation appears anywhere upon the face of the writing, it is sufficient, and the party thus attesting is bound as effectually as if he had subscribed his name at the foot (Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371); but the written acknowledgment or new promise must be a distinct, direct, unqualified, and unconditional admission of the existence of the debt for which the party is liable and willing to pay. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170; Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187; Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145; Pierce v. Merrill, 128 Cal. 473; 79 Am. St. Rep. 63; 61 Pac. 67; Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 748. The purpose of this section is, to establish a rule, not with respect to the character of the promise or acknowledgment from which the promise may be inferred, but with respect to the kind of evidence by which the promise or acknowledgment shall be proved. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; Tuggle v. Minor, 76 Cal. 96; 18 Pac. 131. This statute does not purport to make any changes in the effect of acknowledgments or promises, but simply to alter the mode of their proof. Barron v. Kennedy, 17 Cal. 574; Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40. An acknowledgment by one joint obligor is not available to take the debt out of the bar of the statute as to the others, unless made with their authority. McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482. Where there is but one debt or obligation, an acknowledgment and promise, otherwise sufficient, to pay "our indebtedness," is sufficient under this section. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242. A promise to pay is raised by implication of law from an unqualified acknowledgment (Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374); but if the acknowledgment is accompanied by such qualifying expressions or circumstances as repel the idea of a contract to pay, except to the extent or upon the conditions named, no implied promise to pay absolutely is created. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 748. The positive acknowledgment of a pre-existing debt is insufficient, if accompanied by a declaration which is inconsistent with an intention to pay (Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 748; McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170); but a suggestion of a new mode of payment, as in work, not being made as a condition to the acknowledgment, does not have the effect of impairing the effect of the admission. Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145. An agreement not to plead the statute of limitations comes equally within the statute (Wells Fargo & Co. v. Enright, 127 Cal. 669; 49 L. R. A. 647; 60 Pac. 439; State Loan etc. Co. v. Cochran, 130 Cal. 245; 62 Pac. 466, 600); and an agreement not to sue is sufficient consideration to support an agreement not to plead the statute. Smith v. Lawrence, 38 Cal. 24; 99 Am. Dec. 344; Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242; Frey v. Clifford, 44 Cal. 335; Wells Fargo & Co v. Enright, 127 Cal. 669; 49 L. R. A. 647; 60 Pac. 439; State Loan etc. Co. v. Cochran, 130 Cal. 245; 62 Pac. 466, 600. An acknowledgment of the indebtedness need not specify the amount. Curtis v. Sacramento, 70 Cal. 412; 11 Pac. 743. The report of a board of arbitration binds a corporation, the by-laws of which provide for such a body; and it is not necessary that such report be signed by the corporation, to take the debt out of the statute. Dearborn v. Grand Lodge, 138 Cal. 658; 72 Pac. 154. Where a party relies upon an acknowledgment or new promise to take the debt out of the bar of the statute, he must plead it. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476. An allegation that the defendant has acknowledged and has promised to pay is a sufficient allegation of the signature of the defendant. Porter v. Elam, 25 Cal. 291; 85 Am. Dec. 132.

To whom made. When the acknowledgment is made by an agent of a corporation, it does not bind him in his individual capacity (Pierce v. Merrill, 128 Cal. 473; 79 Am. St. Rep. 63; 61 Pac. 67); but an acknowledgment by an executrix, who has a personal interest in the estate of her deceased husband, and who gives her own note for an outlawed debt, is founded upon a sufficient consideration. Mull v. Van Trees, 50 Cal. 547. The acknowledgment or promise must be made to the creditor, and not to a stranger (Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374; President and Board of Trustees v. Stephens, 11 Cal. App. 523; 105 Pac. 614; Rounthwaite v. Rounthwaite, 6 Cal. Unrep. 878; 68 Pac. 304); it may, however, be made to one known to be the agent or legal representative of the creditor (President and Board of Trustees v. Stephens, 11 Cal. App. 523; 105 Pac. 614); and where made to the administrator of the estate of a creditor, it is valid, and inures to the benefit of the estate (Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187); and an indorser of a note, to whom it is afterwards transferred, is entitled to rely upon, and he has the benefit of, the acknowledgment or new promise made to the former holder. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

Form of acknowledgment or promise. The statute does not prescribe any form in which an acknowledgment or promise shall be made; the imperative thing is, that it shall be "contained in some writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby;" this expression clearly indicating that it is not essential that the acknowledgment or promise shall be formal; and it is sufficient if it shows that the writer regards or treats the indebtedness as subsisting (Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40; Worth v. Worth, 155 Cal. 599; 102 Pac. 663); nor need it be made in express words, but it may be implied from any act or statement which necessarily and directly admits or presupposes the existence of and the obligation to pay a debt. Tuggle v. Minor, 76 Cal. 96; 18 Pac. 131.

When made. It may be made either before or after the bar of the statute has intervened; if before, the action is on the original contract; if after, it is on the new promise. President and Board of Trustees v. Stephens, 11 Cal. App. 523; 105 Pac. 614. The effect of the acknowledgment before the bar of the statute, is to continue the liability until the expiration of the statutory time thereafter. National Cycle Mfg. Co. v. San Diego Cycle Co., 9 Cal. App. 111; 98 Pac. 64.

A sufficient acknowledgment. The following have been held sufficient: Letters of a liquidating partner, acknowledging payment of partnership claim, and promising to remit (Osment v. McElrath, 68 Cal. 466; 58 Am. Rep. 17; 9 Pac. 731; Ashley v. Vischer, 24 Cal. 322; 85 Am. Dec. 65; Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187); a letter written to a creditor by his debtor, after maturity of the debt, but before the intervening of the bar of the statute, referring specifically to the debt, and offering to pay in work (Southern Pacific Co. v. Prosser, 122 Cal. 413; 52 Pac. 836; 55 Pac. 145); the payment of interest upon the debt (Barron v. Kennedy, 17 Cal. 574); but a memorandum for the payment of the purchase price of land, signed by the creditor, but not by the debtor, although acted upon by him, is not sufficient, under the statute, not being signed by the party to be charged. Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142. A release, signed by the mortgagee, of a part of the encumbered premises, which refers to the indebtedness, constitutes an acknowledgment, and stops the running of the statute. Chaffee v. Browne, 109 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 1028. The acknowledgment, in a letter, of a mortgage indebtedness, is sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the statute. Worth v. Worth, 155 Cal. 599; 102 Pac. 663.

Effect of request not to sue. By a request for forbearance to sue, the debtor will be estopped to plead the statute. State Loan etc. Co. v. Cochran, 130 Cal. 245; 62 Pac. 466, 600.

Part payment. The payment of a part of the debt or obligation, either of the principal or interest, is an acknowledgment thereof, and takes it out of the bar of the statute (Barron v. Kennedy, 17 Cal. 574); but such part payment must be evidenced by writing, complying with the requirements of this section. Fairbanks v. Dawson, 9 Cal. 89; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 343.

1. New promise to be in writing. At an early period after the passage of the English statute of limitations (21 James I, ch. 16), an impression prevailed that the statute was not to be favored; and, accordingly, a very slight acknowledgment, proved by as slight testimony, was permitted to overcome the statute. Parsons' Mercantile Law, p. 233; Dunham v. Dodge, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 568. But the modern cases upon this subject have established the rule, that, to take a case out of the operation of the statutes, there must have been either an express promise to pay, or an admission of the debt, in terms so distinct as that a promise might reasonably be inferred therefrom. If, however, the admission was accompanied by qualifying words, then it would not amount to a promise. Chitty on Contracts, pp. 712–714. The object of our statute was to change a rule of evidence, and now to require written where verbal testimony was formerly sufficient. The matter to be proved is the acknowledgment or promise, and the only competent evidence is a writing signed by the party to be charged. But whether the acknowledgment or promise will, when proved, be sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the act, is left to depend upon reason and authority, as it did before. 28 Eng. C. L. R. 82; Fairbanks v. Dawson, 9 Cal. 91. See also Barron v. Kennedy, 17 Cal. 574, commenting on Fairbanks v. Dawson, 9 Cal. 89; and as to effect of part payments and proof of acknowledgment of debt, see these cases commented on, and Fairbanks v. Dawson, supra, affirmed, in Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142. See further, Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100; Porter v. Elam, 25 Cal. 291; 85 Am. Dec. 132.

2. Promise must be in writing. Where a memorandum-book was kept by plaintiff and a passbook by defendant, and these books were compared, the account found to be correct, and so acknowledged orally by the defendant, yet it did not take the case out of the statute as defined by this section. Weatherwax v. Cosumnes Valley Mill Co., 17 Cal. 344. The party to be charged must sign his name to the writing. Peña v. Vance, 21 Cal. 142.

3. Effect of statute of limitations. The statute of limitations does not extinguish a debt nor raise a presumption of its payment. It only bars the remedy, and thus becomes a statute of repose. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

4. New promise. Nature of action on cause that is barred by the statute. When a creditor sues after the statute has run upon the original contract, his cause of action is not founded upon the original contract, but on the new promise; the moral obligation arising upon the original contract being a sufficient consideration for a new promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

5. Nature of the contract resulting from making the statutory acknowledgment on new promise. Under the statute of limitations, there are two ultimate facts that may be proved in the mode therein prescribed: a continuing contract and a new contract. The statutory acknowledgment or promise, if made while the original contract is a subsisting liability, establishes a continuing contract; while, if made after the bar of the statute, a new contract is created. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

6. Limitation of action on new promise to pay judgment. An action on a new promise to pay a judgment, so as to avoid the bar of the statute, must be brought within four years from the making of the new promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

7. New promise necessary to support action on cause that is barred. A creditor cannot recover after the statute has run upon the original contract or obligation, without a new promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

8. Nature of new promise. The new promise may be either express or implied. An express promise can only be established by producing the promise itself, in the form prescribed by this section; while an implied promise can only be established by the production, in like form, of the acknowledgment prescribed in this section. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

9. Nature and scope of acknowledgment. An acknowledgment, within the statute, to support an implied promise, must be a direct, distinct, unqualified, and unconditional admission of the debt which the party is liable and willing to pay. Such acknowledgment cannot be deduced from an offer or promise to pay any part of the debt, or the whole debt in a particular manner, or at a specified time, or upon specified conditions. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am Dec. 170.

10. Terms of express promise. An express promise, to be available to the creditor, must be either direct, certain, and unconditionally a specified part of the debt, or a like offer, upon specified conditions as to either time or manner, or both, to pay the whole or some part of the debt, or a direct conditional promise to pay the whole or a specified part of the debt; but in case of such offer or conditional promise, the creditor can only recover by showing an acceptance by him of the offer as made, or a performance, on his part, of the prescribed conditions of the promise. McCormick v. Brown, 36 Cal. 180; 95 Am. Dec. 170.

11. New promise generally. See Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187; also Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434, and authorities there cited.

§ 361. Limitation laws of other states, effect of. When a cause of action has arisen in another state, or in a foreign country, and by the laws thereof an action thereon cannot there be maintained against a person by reason of the lapse of time, an action thereon shall not be maintained against him in this state, except in favor of one who has been a citizen of this state, and who has held the cause of action from the time it accrued.

Legislation § 361. Enacted March 11, 1872; based, according to the commissioners, on Stats. 1852, p. 161, which read, "When the cause of action has arisen in another state or a territory of the United States, or in a foreign country, and by the laws thereof an action thereon cannot there be maintained against a person by reason of the lapse of time, no action thereon shall be maintained against him in this state"; but it is in the language of Practice Act, § 532, except that the words "one who has been a citizen of this state, and" are substituted for "a citizen thereof."

Effect of law of other states. This section refers to the primary and original jurisdiction in which the cause of action arose, independently of the whereabouts of the maker at the maturity thereof. McKee v. Dodd, 152 Cal. 637; 125 Am. St. Rep. 82; 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 780; 93 Pac. 854. A citizen of this state may maintain an action on a judgment recovered in another state, of which he has held the cause of action from the time it accrued, although such an action is barred by the statute where rendered. Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264; 13 Pac. 661. The bar of an action, in a foreign state, on a note secured by mortgage, bars a foreclosure of the mortgage in this state. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715. The law of a foreign jurisdiction, with reference to the statute of limitations, is presumed to be the same as the law of this state. Van Buskirk v. Kuhns, 164 Cal. 472; 129 Pac. 587.

Pleading statute. The method of pleading this section is the same as that in pleading other sections of the statute of limitations. Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213. Where the foreign land is a part of the statute of limitations, it is sufficiently pleaded by an allegation that the action is barred by the provisions of this section. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715.

Whether demands barred by law of county where they originate are barred elsewhere. See note 22 Am. Dec. 362.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1852, p. 161; Nelson v. Nelson, 6 Cal. 430.

§ 362. Existing causes of action not affected. This title does not extend to actions already commenced, nor to cases where the time prescribed in any existing statute for acquiring a right or barring a remedy has fully run, but the laws now in force are applicable to such actions and cases, and are repealed subject to the provisions of this section.

Repeal of limitation. See ante, §§ 9, 18.

Legislation § 362. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 125; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See also §§ 5, 9, ante.

§ 363. "Action" includes a special proceeding. The word "action" as used in this title is to be construed, whenever it is necessary so to do, as including a special proceeding of a civil nature.

Legislation § 363. Enacted April 1, 1872.

Laches. The defense of laches is different from the defense of the statute of limitations which applies here. Cahill v. Superior Court, 145 Cal. 42; 78 Pac. 467.

Special proceedings. Whenever it is necessary to do so, the word "action," as used in this title, is to be construed as including a special proceeding of a civil nature: the application for a writ of mandate is a special proceeding of a civil nature (Barnes v. Glide, 117 Cal. 1; 59 Am. St. Rep. 153; 48 Pac. 804; Jones v. Board of Police Commissioners, 141 Cal. 96; 74 Pac. 696); and so is a probate proceeding. Estate of Crosby, 55 Cal. 574.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872 [unpublished].

TITLE III.

PARTIES TO CIVIL ACTIONS.

§ 367. Action to be in name of party in interest.
§ 368. Assignment of thing in action not to prejudice defense.
§ 369. Executor, trustee, etc., may sue without joining the persons beneficially interested.
§ 370. Married woman as party to action.
§ 371. Wife may defend, when.
§ 372. Appearance of infant, etc., by guardian. May compromise.
§ 373. Guardian, how appointed.
§ 374. Unmarried female may sue for her own seduction.
§ 375. Father, etc., may sue for seduction of daughter, etc.
§ 376. Father, etc., may sue for injury or death of child.
§ 377. When representatives may sue for death of one caused by the wrongful act of another.
§ 378. Who may be joined as plaintiffs.
§ 379. Who may be joined as defendants.
§ 380. Parties defendant in an action to determine conflicting claims to real property.
§ 381. Parties holding title under a common source, when may join.
§ 382. Parties in interest, when to be joined. When one or more may sue or defend for the whole.
§ 383. Plaintiff may sue in one action the different parties to commercial paper or insurance policies.
§ 384. Tenants in common, etc., may sever in bringing or defending actions.
§ 385. Action, when not to abate by death, marriage, or other disability. Proceedings in such case.
§ 386. Another person may be substituted for the defendant. Conflicting claims, how made.
§ 387. Intervention, when it takes place, and how made.
§ 388. Associates may be sued by name of association.
§ 389. Court, when to decide controversy or to order other parties to be brought in.
§ 390. Actions against fire departments.

§ 367. Action to be in name of party in interest. Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except as provided in section three hundred and sixty-nine of this code.

Assignees. See post, § 368.
Association, how may be sued. See post, § 388.
Right to sue on contract made for one's benefit. See Civ. Code, § 1559.
Parties plaintiff, generally.
1. All persons interested may be joined. Post, §§ 378, 382.
2. If any refuse, they may be made defendants. Post, § 382.

Legislation § 367. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 4, which read: "Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except as otherwise provided in this act."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 63.
3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

In the name of the real party in interest. Actions must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except as otherwise provided by law. Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126; People v. Haggin, 57 Cal. 579; Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82; Craig v. Fry, 68 Cal. 363; 9 Pac. 550; Woodsum v. Cole, 69 Cal. 142; 10 Pac. 331; Monterey County v. Abbott, 77 Cal. 541; 18 Pac. 113; 20 Pac. 73; Giselman v. Starr, 106 Cal. 651; 40 Pac. 8. The general rule, however, is qualified by § 369, post. Tandy v. Waesch, 154 Cal. 108; 97 Pac. 69; Oliver v. Walsh, 6 Cal. 456. An action cannot be brought in the name of one other than the real party in interest, unless it is one of the exceptions to the rule provided by statute. Dubbers v. Goux, 51 Cal. 153. A stranger to a transaction has no right to sue. Chenery v. Palmer, 5 Cal. 131. A plaintiff, who is not the real party in interest, is not entitled to recover. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522. A defendant has a right to have the cause of action against him prosecuted by the real person in interest. Giselman v. Starr, 106 Cal. 651; 40 Pac. 8.

Pleading statute. This objection is properly taken by demurrer, on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. People v. Haggin, 57 Cal. 579. Defendant's objection, that an action is not brought in the name of the real party in interest, is without force, if he can urge any defenses that he could make against the real owner, and if a judgment satisfied by the defendant would protect him from future annoyance or loss. Giselman v. Starr, 106 Cal. 651; 40 Pac. 8; Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248; 94 Pac. 252. The right of a plaintiff to maintain an action cannot be questioned, unless the defendant pleads payment or offset against the person claiming to be the true party in interest. Gushee v. Leavitt, 5 Cal. 160; 63 Am. Dec. 116; Price v. Dunlap, 5 Cal. 483.

Who is real party in interest. The party entitled to the fruits of the action is the real party in interest (Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347); as is also one for whom a contract is made. Western Development Co. v. Emery, 61 Cal. 611. The person for whose benefit a promise is made by a second person to a third party is the party beneficially interested, and may sue. Wormouth v. Hatch, 33 Cal. 121. Where there are distinct sums due distinct payees, each payee is a proper party plaintiff, and can maintain an action in his individual name, without the authority of his associates. Craig v. Fry, 68 Cal. 363; 9 Pac. 550. One of several parties jointly interested in a claim may recover the whole amount due, if there is no plea of necessary parties plaintiff. Russ v. Tuttle, 158 Cal. 226; 110 Pac. 813. Where an injunction bond is given to a plaintiff and others as obligees, the plaintiff alone may sue, where the property on which the injunction operated was his sole property and the injury is to him alone. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347. An agent, in whose name a deed, absolute in form, is taken as security for the debt due the principal, is not a necessary party in an action to have the deed declared a mortgage, and foreclosed (Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155); but the principal is the proper party to bring an action. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 147 Cal. 384; 81 Pac. 1077. Whether a judgment, if satisfied, would protect the defendant from further loss or annoyance, is one of the tests, under this section, of the real party in interest. Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248; 94 Pac. 252.

Actions affecting public. A private person has no right to use the name of the people in suing to obtain redress for private wrongs. People v. County Judge, 40 Cal. 479. Where there is a statute requiring that it shall be done, the people, on the application of the attorney-general, may bring an action to compel a board of supervisors to issue bonds for a specific purpose (People v. Board of Supervisors, 50 Cal. 561); and a private party, applying for such relief, must have an interest, of a nature distinguishable from that of the mass of the community. Linden v. Board of Supervisors, 45 Cal. 6. The name of the people cannot be used in a writ of mandamus. People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210. The attorney-general, where the people are interested, may delegate his authority to sue (People v. Board of Supervisors, 36 Cal. 595); and where he has given such authority, and the state is not interested, and the relator only is interested, the attorney-general has no power to control the suit, or to withdraw his consent to the use of the name of the people. People v. North San Francisco Homestead etc. Ass'n, 38 Cal. 564. In certiorari, the people, as an interested party, must bring the action to determine the question of the constitutionality of an act establishing a court (Fraser v. Freelon, 53 Cal. 644); but a private party may sometimes maintain an action for the determination of a question in which the public are interested. Minor v. Kidder, 43 Cal. 229; In re Marks, 45 Cal. 199. Where a board of supervisors has imposed a license tax, and provided for its collection in the name of the people, the county cannot maintain an action in its own name to recover the tax (Monterey County v. Abbott, 77 Cal. 541; 18 Pac. 113; 20 Pac. 73); but an action on a recognizance in a criminal proceeding should be in the name of the county, although the recognizance runs in the name of the people (Mendocino County v. Lamar, 30 Cal. 627); and an action may be brought in the name of the county to recover money belonging to the general fund of the county. Solano County v. Neville, 27 Cal. 465. Although a bond is made in the name of the people, yet the party for whose benefit it was given may sue and recover thereon. Baker v. Bartol, 7 Cal. 551. An action on the official bond of a county treasurer, for failure to pay over moneys, which are alleged to belong to the county, is properly brought in the name of the county. Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145. The people are the proper parties plaintiff in an action to recover a delinquent swamp-land assessment, although the law provides that assessments shall be collected in the same manner as are state and county taxes (People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171), but a reclamation district may be a party plaintiff. People v. Haggin, 57 Cal. 579; Reclamation District v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54; 4 Pac. 945; Reclamation District v. Parvin, 67 Cal. 501; 8 Pac. 43.

Actions by and against corporations. A corporation must sue and be sued in its corporate name. Curtiss v. Murry, 26 Cal. 633. A suit to recover the amount of a subscription to stock of a corporation to be organized, is properly brought by the corporation, as the real party in interest, although the subscription was payable to a trustee or assignors. Horseshoe Pier etc. Co. v. Sibley, 157 Cal. 442; 108 Pac. 308. Any action for a recovery on a contract to the subscription stock of the corporation, must be brought in the name of the corporation, although the subscriptions are made between individuals. Western Development Co. v. Emery, 61 Cal. 611; Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126. A cause of action to recover for misappropriation of funds by the directors, belongs to the corporation, and not to the stockholders. Cogswell v. Bull, 39 Cal. 320.

Actions by assignees. The assignee of a judgment in favor of a ward, against his guardian, may maintain an action against the sureties on the guardian's bond. Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216; 94 Am. St. Rep. 39; 71 Pac. 180; Moses v. Thorne, 6 Cal. 87; Chilstrom v. Eppinger, 127 Cal. 326; 78 Am. St. Rep. 46; 59 Pac. 696. The assignee of a written agreement to pay money may maintain an action in his own name (Quan Wye v. Chin Lin Hee, 123 Cal. 185; 55 Pac. 783); as may also the assignee of a claim against a county (First National Bank v. Tyler, 21 Cal. App. 791; 132 Pac. 1053); and so also may the assignee of a contract of guaranty to secure the payment of rent reserved in a lease (Reios v. Mardis, 18 Cal. App. 276; 122 Pac. 1091); and the assignee of a contract may sue for a breach thereof. Moore v. Waddle, 34 Cal. 145. The assignee of a final judgment cannot maintain an action against the sureties upon the undertaking on appeal. Chilstrom v. Eppinger, 127 Cal. 326; 78 Am. St. Rep. 46; 59 Pac. 696; Moses v. Thorne, 6 Cal. 87; and see also Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216; 94 Am. St. Rep. 39; 71 Pac. 180. The verbal assignment of an account for labor does not make the assignee the proper party plaintiff in an action to foreclose a lien therefor. Ritter v. Stevenson, 7 Cal. 388. The delivery of a note and mortgage, without any indorsement or written transfer, is not such a transfer as will deprive the mortgagee of the right to sue thereon in his own name, with the consent of the transferee; at most, it is only a pledge, and, as between the pledgor and the pledgee, the legal title remains in the former: the rule is, that, where the plaintiff holds the legal title to the demand, he is the real party in interest. Consolidated Nat. Bank v. Hayes, 112 Cal. 75; 44 Pac. 469. The possession of a promissory note is prima facie evidence of ownership, and entitles the holder to sue. McCann v. Lewis, 9 Cal. 246.

Action by trustees. Where a plaintiff, before the rendition of a judgment in ejectment, conveys the premises in controversy, an action on the undertaking on appeal, given for the sale and occupation of the premises, is properly brought in his name, as he is the trustee of an express trust for the benefit of his grantee (Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82); but the fact that the trustee of an express trust may maintain an action does not affect the right of the real party in interest to maintain it. Horseshoe Pier etc. Co. v. Sibley, 157 Cal. 442; 108 Pac. 308.

Other actions. The widow of an intestate is the proper party to prosecute a suit to recover land. Page v. Garver, 146 Cal. 577; 80 Pac. 860. An action to recover money due an infant must be brought in the name of the infant, by his guardian. Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566. A bankrupt cannot maintain a suit in his own name in relation to his own property, not exempt, pending proceedings in bankruptcy, after the appointment of a trustee. Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248; 94 Pac. 252. In an action for trespass on real property, the proper party plaintiff is the person in actual possession. Lightner Min. Co. v. Lane, 161 Cal. 689; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1093; 120 Pac. 771. The person having the possession of and the legal title to anything in an action has the right, as the real party in interest, to maintain the action (Woodsum v. Cole, 69 Cal. 142; 10 Pac. 331); and one who obtains title to a note and mortgage through a decree of distribution is entitled to sue thereon. West v. Mears, 17 Cal. App. 718; 121 Pac. 700. An action to condemn a particular riparian right is not an action to condemn absolutely all rights in and to a part of the flow of the stream, and persons having no right or interest in such riparian right, are not proper parties to the action. San Joaquin etc. Irrigation Co. v. Stevinson, 164 Cal. 221; 128 Pac. 924.

Action by wife. See note post, § 370.

Who is real party in interest within statute defining parties by whom action must be brought. See note 64 L. R. A. 581.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1864, p. 29.

1. Assignee of a judgment. A judgment is not negotiable, like a bill of exchange by the law merchant, but is a mere chose in action, vesting an equitable right in the assignee thereof to the proceeds of it, with the right to the usual and legal means of collecting the amount due; and, between two bona fide purchasers of a judgment, the purchaser first in time is prior in right. Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436.

2. Answer, how framed. See 2 Abb. Forms, p. 31; Voorhees' N. Y. Code, p. 149, note. Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569.

3. Real party in interest. Action must be in name of real party in interest. A stranger to a transaction cannot maintain a suit. Chenery v. Palmer, 5 Cal. 133.

4. Real party in interest. The possession of a note, whether obtained before or after maturity, is prima facie evidence of ownership. The averment of a valuable consideration for the transfer to the plaintiff is generally immaterial. The transfer, with or without value, confers upon the holder the right of action; and a consideration need not be proved, unless a defense is interposed which would otherwise preclude a recovery. McCann v. Lewis, 9 Cal. 246; James v. Chalmers, 5 Sand. 52; 6 N. Y. 209. And in such a case the objection that the plaintiff is not the owner of the note is unavailing. His right to maintain action cannot be questioned, except the defendant pleads payment to, or offset against, the party alleged to be the true owner. Price v. Dunlap, 5 Cal. 483; Gushee v. Leavitt, 5 Cal. 160; 63 Am. Dec. 116.

5. Real party in interest, whether the relief sought is legal or equitable. We have but one form of action for the enforcement of private rights, and, with certain exceptions, the code requires that every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Cases of assignment are not included in these exceptions (see § 369); and in the form of the remedy no distinction exists between legal and equitable rights. In this respect the two classes of rights are placed precisely upon the same footing, and must undergo the same remedial process for their enforcement. Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 127.

6. Several obligees in a bond. A bond given to all the obligees by name, and using no words expressing a several obligation, yet necessarily creates a several liability, the design of it being to secure each and all of the obligees from damages or injury. In such cases, however, under the common-law practice, it has been held that the suit was properly brought in the name of the several obligees; and the question was said to be purely technical, to wit, With whom was the contract made?—the obligation being technically to both to pay whatever damage might be sustained by either, though, when recovered, the money would go to the party who sustained the injury. Whatever the rule may be under the old system, we think that, under our system, the right of action is in the party sustaining the injury; for, on a recovery, the other party, if entitled to receive the money at all, if judgment were had in the name of both, would hold it by right of, and as a trustee for, the other; and our Practice Act, for convenience, has given the right to sue to the party beneficially entitled to the fruits of the action. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347; Prader v. Puckett, 13 Cal. 591.

7. In a joint bond, each party may sue for his several damages, notwithstanding the bond is made payable to the obligees jointly. Lally v. Wise, 28 Cal. 539. See also Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 11.

8. Party beneficially interested in damages may sue on bond given to officer, state, or corporation. Formerly, where a bond was given to an officer, state, or corporation, suit had to be brought in the name of the party holding the legal title, for the benefit of the persons interested; but our statute has introduced a new rule, and, by the provisions of the Practice Act, the suit must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, i. e., the party beneficially interested in the damages. Baker v. Bartol, 7 Cal. 551; Lally v. Wise, 28 Cal. 540; Wormouth v. Hatch, 33 Cal. 121. A plaintiff, being the real party in interest, has a right to sue upon a bond, though made payable to the people of the state. Baker v. Bartol, 7 Cal. 551.

9. Assignees. Where A owes B, and B owes C, and A and B, without consulting C, agree between themselves that A shall pay C what A owes to B, it was held that an action could not be maintained by C against A, for want of privity (McLaren v. Hutchinson, 18 Cal. 80); but this was questioned and declared open for further investigation in Lewis v. Covillaud, 21 Cal. 189; and it was also held, that where A, B, and C agree among themselves that A shall be liable to C for a debt due from B to C, the assignee of C could sue in his own name for the debt due from A. McLaren v. Hutchinson, 22 Cal. 190, 83 Am. Dec. 59, and cases therein cited.

10. Action of ejectment. Legal title to be represented. In an action of ejectment, the plaintiff suing for possession must have or represent the legal title: an equitable title is not sufficient. The action must be in the name of the party holding the legal title. Emeric v. Penniman, 26 Cal. 123; see also Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 272; Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 222.

11. Action by sheriff against party owing attachment debtor. Where an attachment was issued by the court of first instance against the property of a debtor, and the sheriff had executed the same, and was ordered to make the amount due the creditor out of the goods, chattels, and property of the debtor. Held: that the sheriff could not maintain an action in his own name to recover a sum owing to the attachment debtor by a third person for goods sold and delivered. Sublette v. Melhado, 1 Cal. 104.

12. Sheriff not responsible when goods released from attachment on sufficient undertaking. An undertaking given to a sheriff to procure a release of goods attached is for the benefit of the plaintiff, notwithstanding it is in the name of the sheriff, and the plaintiff may sue on it; and if the sheriff takes a sufficient statutory undertaking, he has no further responsibility. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194.

13. Party procuring patent for land, who has no right thereto. Who may maintain action against. If the United States confirm a grant of land, and issue a patent therefor, to a party who did not own the grant and had no right to the patent, the patentee can only hold the legal title in trust for the real parties in interest; and as to who are proper parties in an action for affirmative relief, see facts of case in Salmon v. Symonds, 30 Cal. 306, and authorities there cited. See also § 378.

14. A party plaintiff who was agent for defendants in the transaction complained of. The fact that the owner of a ship, lost while being towed to sea, was the agent for the owners of the steam-tug, does not relieve the latter from any of the obligations under which they contract with others. White v. Steam-tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462; 65 Am. Dec. 523.

15. Corporations as plaintiffs. The allegation that plaintiff is a corporation under the laws of the state is sufficient to establish the legal capacity to sue. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511.

16. Assignable instruments. A contract not to run boats on a certain line of travel, and on failure to comply with such contract to pay fifteen thousand dollars, is an instrument in writing for the payment of money, and assignable by our laws. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511.

17. What may be assigned. Assignees. Acceptance of orders. Funds in the hands, or to come into the hands, of the third person, are assignable, and the drawees having given an order and received notice of its acceptance are liable to the payees, without any other express promise to pay. Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 407, and cases cited.

18. Acceptance of orders. Where an order is drawn for an amount due, it is a prima facie assignment of the debt due. Even if it was only for part of a debt, no one could make the objection but the defendants. McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 260; Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 97; 73 Am. Dec. 522. It would seem that a debtor may accept orders in favor of different persons, for different portions of the debt, and those accepted orders will bind all parties. McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 260.

19. Assignment of debt by parcels. And so debts due a party may by him be split up and assigned in parcels, and the debtor subjected to costs of more suits than was in the first place contemplated, if such debtor consents thereto. Marzion v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 536.

20. Agreement not to defend suit assignable. A agrees to pay a certain sum of money to B, if B will cease to defend a certain suit. Held: such an agreement is assignable, and gives the assignee a right to suit in his own name. Gray v. Garrison, 9 Cal. 325.

21. Assignable contract. A contract leasing a stallion for a certain time, and with a right reserved to have nine mares covered by the stud during the continuance of the lease, may be assigned, and carries therewith all the benefits arising out of the contract. But the assignee must give notice to the lessee of the assignment. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248.

22. Contingent rights and interests are not ordinarily assignable at law, but they are in equity. Assignments of such rights and interests, in being, are upheld and enforced by courts of equity, And, more than this, these courts support and give effect to assignments of things which have no present actual existence, but rest in mere possibility; not as a present positive transfer operates in præsenti, but as a present contract, to take effect and attach as soon as the thing comes in esse. Bibend v. Liverpool etc. Fire and Life Ins. Co., 30 Cal. 78; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 121; 2 Story's Eq., § 1040; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story, § 638; Fed. Cas. No. 9673.

23. Assignment of policy of insurance to one having no interest in property insured. See Bibend v. Liverpool etc. Fire and Life Ins. Co., 30 Cal. 89; see also Civ. Code, §§ 2546–2557.

24. Assessment for street improvements assignable. An assessment for street improvements against an owner of property assignable by the contractor. Cochran v. Collins, 29 Cal. 129. And a contract for improving a street may be assigned. See Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 248, and cases cited.

25. Suits by assignees. Where A was indebted to a company, and the company indebted to B, if all parties agreed that A should pay his debt to B it is an equitable assignment, and the assignees can sue for the amount of the assignment. Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126. An appropriation of the fund is all that is necessary, and any act amounting to such an appropriation was sufficient to constitute an equitable assignment of the debt. Id.

26. Assignment of a judgment assignment of debt on which judgment was obtained. It matters not if an assignment of a judgment is made, and the judgment is invalid for want of jurisdiction, for the assignment of a judgment so void is an assignment of the debt for which it was obtained. Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 196.

27. Cause of action assignable. Whether a cause of action is assignable depends mainly upon whether, in case of the death of the assignor, it would descend to his representatives. Zabriskie v. Smith, 13 N. Y. 322; 64 Am. Dec. 551; McKee v. Judd, 12 N. Y. 622; 64 Am. Dec. 515; Dininny v Fay, 38 Barb. 18; Fried v. New York Central R. R. Co., 25 How. Pr. 285; People v. Tioga Common Pleas, 19 Wend. 73.

28. Suit by assignee of personal property. Where personal property is wrongfully detained, the owner may assign his title thereto, and the assignee may maintain an action therefor. Cass v. New York etc. R. R. Co., 1 E. D. Smith, 522; McGinn v. Worden, 3 E. D. Smith, 355; Hall v. Robinson, 2 N. Y. 295; The Brig Sarah Ann, 2 Sumn. 211; Fed. Cas. No. 12342; 2 Hilliard on Torts, 275; Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 142.

29. A right of action for the wrongful taking and conversion of personal property is assignable, and, under the provisions of the code, the assignee can recover upon the same in his own name. McKee v. Judd, 12 N. Y. 622; 64 Am. Dec. 515; Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 347; see also North v. Turner, 9 Serg. & R. 244; Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 142.

30. A damage caused by trespass on land may be assignable. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590.

31. Causes of action not assignable. A judgment in an action for a non-assignable tort becomes a debt, but the recovery of judgment does not change the character of the debt so as to make it assignable. Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 173.

32. Partner cannot assign claim against his firm. Assignee cannot maintain an action thereon. A partner who has a claim against the firm of which he is a member, and who cannot therefore sue the firm at law, cannot confer upon his assignee a right to maintain such an action. If he could avoid the disability by assignment, it would defeat all the substantial reasons upon which the rule is founded. Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 63.

33. Vendor's lien not assignable. A vendor's lien cannot be assigned. Baum v. Grigsby, 21 Cal. 172; 81 Am. Dec. 153; affirmed in Lewis v. Covillaud, 21 Cal. 178; Williams v. Young, 21 Cal. 227.

34. A cause of action arising out of a tort is not assignable. Oliver v. Walsh, 6 Cal. 456.

35. An assignment of an account by indorsement of the word "assigned," signed by the owner of the account, is sufficient. Ryan v. Maddux, 6 Cal. 247.

36. Plaintiff designated by name of copartnership firm. A complaint, which contains no other designation of the party plaintiff than the name of a partnership firm, is defective. Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 356.

37. Set-off judgment not defeated as a set-off by assignment. Where, in the same action, two judgments were entered, one for the plaintiff for a certain sum, and one for the defendant for a less sum: Held: that defendant has a right to set off his judgment, pro tanto, against that of the plaintiff, and that this right could not be defeated by any assignment by plaintiff of his judgment before application for the set-off. Porter v. Liscom, 22 Cal. 430; 83 Am. Dec. 76.

38. Promise to third party. Where the obligation with which it is sought to affect defendants personally arises out of an alleged promise given by them to W. and A. Elder, of whom they bought the land mortgaged by Pangburn to plaintiff, that they would pay a portion of the purchase-money, equal to the amount due or to grow due upon the note given by Pangburn to plaintiff, and secured by said mortgage, this is not a promise to pay the debt of another, nor to pay the Pangburn note, but an original promise by them to the Elders to pay their own debt to them, by paying a certain amount of money to plaintiff. If such promise was given, plaintiff could recover upon it as the party beneficially interested. Wormouth v. Hatch, 33 Cal. 121.

39. In whose name writ of mandate must be applied for. An application for the writ of mandate must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, and if the name of the people is used and the people have no interest, and the relator alone is interested, the writ will be denied. People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210.

40. Who are proper parties in an action for partition. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

41. Suit by assignee of a claim. An absolute assignment of a demand enables the assignee to sue for and recover the whole debt, even though by the assignments he acquired only a portion of the demand. Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150.

42. Intervention by part-owner of claim sued on. If the owner of a claim assigns it absolutely, retaining, however, an interest in it, he may intervene to protect his interests in an action brought by the assignee to collect the same; and if he does not intervene, he is bound by the judgment. Gradwohl v. Hatch, 29 Cal. 150.

§ 368. Assignment of thing in action not to prejudice defense. In the case of an assignment of a thing in action, the action by the assignee is without prejudice to any set-off, or other defense existing at the time of, or before, notice of the assignment; but this section does not apply to a negotiable promissory note or bill of exchange, transferred in good faith, and upon good consideration, before maturity.

Assignment and survival of causes of action. See post, §§ 1582 et seq.

Negotiable instruments, and rights of parties thereto. Civ. Code, §§ 3086 et seq., where the subject is discussed.

Thing in action, defined. Civ. Code, § 953.

Legislation § 368. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 5 (New York Code, § 112), which had (1) the words "shall be" instead of "is" before "without," (2) the word "shall" instead of "does" before "not apply," and (3) the word "due" instead of "maturity."

Assignment of thing in action. The rule which prevailed in equity is adopted in this section (McCabe v. Grey, 20 Cal. 509), and it embraces every kind of thing in action, except negotiable paper, which paper alone is excepted from its operation. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876; McKenney v. Ellsworth, 165 Cal. 326; 132 Pac. 75. "A thing in action" is a right to recover money or other personal property by a judicial proceeding (Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786); and "a thing in action not arising out of contract" means a thing in action not arising out of express contract. Oliver v. Walsh, 6 Cal. 456. The law does not require that the assignee for value of a thing in action shall take it subject to latent equities of third persons, of which he has no notice, but only that the assignment shall be subject to equities existing in favor of the debtor. First Nat. Bank v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 107 Cal. 55; 40 Pac. 45; Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257. Equity will uphold assignments, not only of choses in action, but also of contingent interests and expectations, and of things which have no present actual existence, but rest in possibility; and an agreement for such interests will take effect as such assignment, when the subjects to which they refer have ceased to rest in possibility, and have ripened into reality. Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116. An unsatisfied judgment is a thing in action, within this section (Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786); but an assignee thereof, after the reversal of the judgment, stands in the same position as the assignor. Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667; 76 Am. Dec. 459. The rights of the assignee of a judgment are not affected by payments voluntarily made by the judgment debtor, notwithstanding the latter had no notice of the assignment. Brown v. Ayres, 33 Cal. 525; 91 Am. Dec. 655. The assignee of a judgment is simply the holder of an equity, with the right to use the assignor's name to enforce it, and he occupies the position of the assignor as to all the defenses which existed between the original parties. Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257. Equity will also uphold an assignment of the funds in the hands, or to come into the hands, of another (Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 403; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423), and also the assignment of an insurance policy, where there is no transfer of the property. Bergson v. Builders' Insurance Co., 38 Cal. 541. The lease of a stallion, with a reservation, is assignable, and the assignee is entitled to the benefit arising out of the contract. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248. So also is an agreement to pay a certain sum of money to a defendant to sign a stipulation waiving a jury, and to withdraw a defense interposed. Gray v. Garrison, 9 Cal. 325. An order drawn for the amount due the defendant is prima facie an assignment of the debt due. McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 258; Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 403. A part of a debt or demand cannot be assigned, without the debtor's consent, so as to give the assignee a right of action, for the creditor cannot split up his cause of action (Marziou v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 522); but such an assignment is valid in equity, without the consent of the debtor. Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. A partnership in an unsettled account is not assignable, where there is no balance struck, and no promise on the part of the individual members to pay their ascertained proportions of the amount. Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 60. A cause of action for tort is not assignable (Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 173), unless reduced to judgment; then the judgment becomes a debt, and is undoubtedly assignable. Oliver v. Walsh, 6 Cal. 456.

Without prejudice to set-off or other defense. Set-off, as used in this section, is applicable to demands independent in their nature and origin; and counterclaim includes both recoupment and set-off, and is, strictly speaking, a pleading by which matters arising out of recoupment or set-off are averred. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876. The assignee takes for a valuable consideration an assignment of a judgment subject to the right of set-off existing between the parties at the time of the purchase. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596; Jones v. Chalfant, 55 Cal. 505. A judgment is not available as a set-off in an action of common-law jurisdiction, where the parties, in such case, are not the same; but in a court of equity it is otherwise; the court will look beyond the nominal parties to the suit, to the real parties in interest, and adjudicate the rights between them accordingly. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596. The assignee of an unsatisfied judgment takes it cum onere, subject to all rights of set-off affecting it that the judgment debtor had, or might acquire, before notice to him of the assignment. Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786. Under this section, and § 1459 of the Civil Code, a defendant may avail himself of any set-off or defense acquired before notice of the assignment of any non-negotiable cause of action. Helmer v. Parsons, 18 Cal. App. 450; 123 Pac. 356. It is the duty of the proposed assignee of a non-negotiable cause of action to inquire as to any defenses or set-offs against it. Helmer v. Parsons, 18 Cal. App. 450; 123 Pac. 356.

Does not apply to negotiable paper. An assignee or a transferee, bona fide, for value, before maturity, of a promissory note or other negotiable instrument, takes the same free from all equities, counterclaims, and set-offs (Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318; Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 94; Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 450); after maturity, a different rule prevails as to the first taker and all subsequent takers (Folsom v. Bartlett, 2 Cal. 163; Vinton v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 309; Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 523; 70 Am. Dec. 746; Hayward v. Stearns, 39 Cal. 58); but where the original assignee took the instrument before maturity, bona fide, for value, discharged of all equities, counterclaims, and set-offs, all the subsequent indorsers will hold in like manner, even though they take after maturity. Bank of Sonoma County v. Gove, 63 Cal. 355; 49 Am. Rep. 92. Where a non-negotiable note is transferred by assignment after maturity, the assignee takes it subject to all equities and defenses which could have been urged against the original payee. San José Ranch Co. v. San José Land etc. Co., 132 Cal. 582; 64 Pac. 1097; St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876.

Before maturity. An assignee, bona fide, for value, of a negotiable instrument, before maturity, takes the same free from all equitable defenses (Hays v. Plummer, 126 Cal. 107; 77 Am. St. Rep. 153; 58 Pac. 447); and an assignee of negotiable paper, indorsed and delivered before maturity, is presumed to be the bona fide owner thereof, and all intendments are in favor of his right. Palmer v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 458. A negotiable promissory note, not yet due, taken bona fide, as collateral security for a pre-existing debt, is taken free from any equities, defenses, or set-offs existing between the original parties (Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318); but where assigned after maturity, it is taken subject to equities. Graves v. Mono Lake etc. Mining Co., 81 Cal. 303; 22 Pac. 665. An assignee after maturity takes the same interest the assignor had, and the thing in action is subject to the same defenses, legal and equitable, as if it were in the hands of the assignor. Folsom v. Bartlett, 2 Cal. 163. A check, after dishonor, is taken subject to all the defenses to which it would be subject in the hands of the original holder. Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 523; 70 Am. Dec. 746.

After maturity. A negotiable note, taken after maturity, is taken subject to all subsisting equities between the maker and the payee, but not such as subsisted between the maker and an intermediate holder. Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310.

Non-negotiable instrument. Non-negotiable paper is subject to all set-offs, equities, and defenses, legal and equitable, in the hands of the assignee, that existed in favor of the payor, against the payee, at the time of the assignment, or of notice thereof (St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876; Mitchell v. Hackett, 14 Cal. 661), and is also subject to all set-offs that mature after notice, and before suit brought. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876. The answer must show that the counterclaim or set-off arose before the assignment, or before the defendant had notice thereof, or, on motion, judgment for plaintiff must be entered on the pleadings. Benham v. Connor, 113 Cal. 168; 45 Pac. 258; and see Hemme v. Hays, 55 Cal. 337; Loveland v. Garner, 74 Cal. 298; 15 Pac. 844; San Francisco v. Staude, 92 Cal. 560; 28 Pac. 778.

Consideration. The delivery of a chose in action, for a valuable consideration, without a writing, is a sufficient transfer. Bibend v. Liverpool etc. Fire and Life Ins. Co., 30 Cal. 78. The presumption is, that a check was given upon a valid consideration; but this presumption may be rebutted. Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 523; 70 Am. Dec. 746. A valid consideration is necessary to the validity of an assignment; a pre-existing debt is a valuable consideration. Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318; Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 94; Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 450; Frey v. Clifford, 44 Cal. 335; Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 611; 28 Am. Rep. 647; Sackett v. Johnson, 54 Cal. 107. A claim may be assigned either for a valuable consideration or for collection, and may be enforced by the assignee, subject to any defense or counterclaim against the assignor. Watkins v. Glas, 5 Cal. App. 68; 89 Pac. 840.

Sufficiency of assignment. No particular form of words is necessary to constitute an assignment. Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126. An indorsement of an account, "Assigned to A and B," signed by the owner of the account, is sufficient. Ryan v. Maddux, 6 Cal. 247. "Please hold to the order of Messrs. A & B, of C, (£500) five hundred pounds, sterling, of insurance, effected on cargo per bark D, and oblige," is an equitable assignment of the funds in the hands or to come into the hands of the drawees, to the payees. Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 403. "Please pay to the bearer of these lines two hundred and thirty-six dollars, and charge the same to my account," where given for a valuable consideration, and for the whole amount of the demand against the drawee, operates as an assignment of the debt or fund against which it was drawn. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522. A non-negotiable contract, indorsed in blank, passes by delivery, the same as a negotiable one, but subject to all equities and defenses existing in favor of the maker at the time of indorsement. Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126. An order given by a creditor on his debtor is an equitable assignment of the claim, where it covers the full amount, without acceptance; and where for less than the full amount, and accepted, it is an assignment pro tanto. McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 258; Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116; Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 404; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. "Pay the within, in case of loss, to C D," is a sufficient assignment of an insurance policy, where indorsed on the policy, which was delivered to the assignee. Bergson v. Builders' Ins. Co., 38 Cal. 541. A negotiable promissory note can be transferred only by indorsement and delivery; and such indorsement can be made only by writing the indorser's name on the back of the instrument if there is room, and if not, then on a paper so attached as in effect to become a part of it (Hays v. Plummer, 126 Cal. 107; 77 Am. St. Rep. 153; 58 Pac. 447); but the assignment must be delivered, to be valid; the mere signing of an assignment is insufficient to transfer title. Ritter v. Stevenson, 7 Cal. 388. An agreement to pay the debts of another, not assented to by the creditor, as part consideration, is not an assignment, pro tanto, of the debts to the creditor. McLaren v. Hutchinson, 18 Cal. 80.

Notice of assignment. Notice of assignment of a claim, other than a negotiable instrument assigned before maturity, is necessary to protect the assignee. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248; Bank of Stockton

v. Jones, 65 Cal. 437; 4 Pac. 418; Hogan v. Black, 66 Cal. 41; 4 Pac. 943; Renton v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 449; 19 Pac. 820. Thus, in the case of a street assessment, settlement with the assignor and cancellation of the assessment, before notice of assignment, is a good defense to an action by the assignee (Hogan v. Black, 66 Cal. 41; 4 Pac. 943); and where a promissory note is assigned after maturity, payment to the original payee, before notice of the assignment, discharges the maker. Bank of Stockton v. Jones, 65 Cal. 437; 4 Pac. 418. The assignee of a bill of goods to arrive, part of the purchase price having been paid, and the balance to be paid upon arrival, on tendering such balance within a reasonable time after arrival, is entitled to possession of the goods, without previous notice of assignment. Morgan v. Lowe, 5 Cal. 325; 63 Am. Dec. 132. The question of the giving and the sufficiency of the notice is for the jury. Renton v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 449; 19 Pac. 820. Notice to an agent, of facts arising from or connected with the subject-matter of the agency, is notice to the principal; and it is constructive notice to the principal, when the notice comes to the agent while he is concerned for the principal, and in the course of the very transaction. Bierce v. Red Bluff Hotel Co., 31 Cal. 160. But an agent has only such authority as his principal actually or ostensibly confers upon him; and notice to the agent, of facts not arising from or connected with the subject-matter of his agency, is not notice to the principal, unless actually communicated to him. Renton v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 449; 19 Pac. 820.

Action by an assignee. An assignee may commence an action in his own name, on contracts and things in action assigned (Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423); and also on a non-negotiable instrument, indorsed (Gushee v. Leavitt, 5 Cal. 160; 63 Am. Dec. 116; Price v. Dunlap, 5 Cal. 483); and on a warehouse receipt, assigned in good faith and in the ordinary course of business. Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 611; 28 Am. Rep. 647. The assignee of a non-negotiable contract is the proper party plaintiff; for the holder of a non-negotiable contract is presumptively the owner, and, as the real party in interest, is entitled to maintain an action thereon in his own name (Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126; Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; and see Dana v. San Francisco, 19 Cal. 486; People v. Gray, 23 Cal. 125; National Bank v. Herold, 74 Cal. 603; 5 Am. St. Rep. 476; 16 Pac. 507; Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2, 542), and he may also bring an action on an account held for collection, where he has the legal title, and interest to the extent of a fee or compensation. Curtis v. Sprague, 51 Cal. 239; Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550; Tuller v. Arnold, 98 Cal. 522; 33 Pac. 445; Greig v. Riordan, 99 Cal. 316; 33 Pac. 913. On a judgment assigned for value, or purchased at a sale under execution, the purchaser takes as assignee (Moses v. Thorne, 6 Cal. 87; Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436; Low v. Burrows, 12 Cal. 181); but it is otherwise as to an assignment after verdict, and before judgment, in an action for tort, which is unassignable. Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 173. The assignment of a claim against a city, on a written contract for street improvements, is not a mere assignment, but transfers the right to collect, demand, and receive all moneys due, even if recovered on quantum meruit. Wetmore v. San Francisco, 44 Cal. 294. A cause of action based upon the breach of a covenant in a deed, not running with the land, does not pass by a conveyance of the land. Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183. The owner of personal property wrongfully detained may assign his title thereto, and the assignee may maintain an action therefor. Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 139. A claim for damages for trespass on land is assignable, and the assignee may maintain an action to recover same (More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590), and an agreement to pay money to a party to an action, in consideration of his withdrawal of his defense is also assignable (Gray v. Garrison, 9 Cal. 325), and a contract leasing the services of a stallion is assignable. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248. An order upon a third person for the whole amount of a debt owing by such third person, operates as an assignment of the debt, although not accepted by the debtor. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116; Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 403; Thomas v. Rock Island etc. Mining Co., 54 Cal. 578. Where an order is for less than the whole amount of the claim, but is made with the knowledge and consent of the drawee, the assignee must sue alone for his portion. McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 258; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423; Thomas v. Rock Island etc. Mining Co., 54 Cal. 578; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423; Marziou v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 522. An assignee, holding in trust for another, may maintain an action in his own name. Grant v. Heverin, 77 Cal. 263; 18 Pac. 647; 19 Pac. 493. An assignment by a trustee will make the assignee, with notice of the trust, a trustee, the same as his assignor, and he may maintain suit in his own name. Grant v. Heverin, 77 Cal. 263; 18 Pac. 647; 19 Pac. 493. Where the assignment of a debt is absolute, the assignee may recover the full amount thereof, notwithstanding the fact that, by the assignment, he acquired only a portion of the demand. Ginocchio v. Amador etc. Mining Co., 67 Cal. 493; 8 Pac. 29; Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150; Grant v. Heverin, 77 Cal. 263; 18 Pac. 647; 19 Pac. 493. In an action against an assignee, where the consideration passing from him is not equal to the amount of the paper, the recovery is limited to the amount actually paid him. Coye v. Palmer, 16 Cal. 158. The assignee of a judgment cannot sue upon the appeal bond, without an assignment thereof. Moses v. Thorne, 6 Cal. 87.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Purchasers and assignees of judgments. A purchaser of a judgment is not bound to inquire into latent equities existing in the hands of third parties, and is not affected as to third parties by frauds, of which he had neither actual nor constructive notice. Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257. The rule caveat emptor applies as to the right of third parties in the purchase of a judgment, as well as in the purchase of other personal property. Mitchell v. Hockett, 25 Cal. 544; 85 Am. Dec. 151. A purchaser of a judgment takes it subject to all set-offs existing at time of purchase. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596; Porter v. Liscom, 22 Cal. 430; 83 Am. Dec. 76; McCabe v. Grey, 20 Cal. 509; Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436

2. Payment by a garnishee. If the judgment creditor assigns the judgment, and the judgment debtor, without notice of the assignment, afterwards pays the same voluntarily to the sheriff, by reason of the service of garnishee process upon him, the rights of the assignee are not affected, and he may still enforce the judgment. Brown v. Ayres, 33 Cal. 525; 91 Am. Dec. 655.

3. Promissory notes assigned as collateral security. A negotiable promissory note, not yet due, and taken bona fide as collateral security for a previous debt, is not subject to a defense existing at the date of the assignment between the original parties. Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318; Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 450; Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 94. Where there is any change in the legal rights of the parties in relation to the antecedent debt, the creditor taking the collateral security is considered as a holder for value, and the paper not subject to equities existing between the original parties. Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 454. But where A gave his note to B in order that B might raise money on it as collateral security, and B raised the money thereon, and then took up the note from the pledgees, it was held that B could not sue on the note, as it had answered all the purposes for which it was given; and an assignee of B, taking the note after maturity, and upon no new consideration, took it subject to the same defense. Coghlin v. May, 17 Cal. 515.

4. Notes assigned and indorsed after maturity. An indorsee, after maturity, takes the same interest that the indorser had, and his claim is subject to the same defense. Folsom v. Bartlett, 2 Cal. 163. If a party takes a note after its maturity, he takes it subject to all subsisting equities between the maker and the payee, but not subject to such as subsisted between the maker and any intermediate holder. Vinton v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 309.

5. Transfer of check after dishonor. As to all persons except a bona fide holder without notice, a check given for a gambling debt is void. If it was presented to the bank, and payment refused, and then it was transferred, after dishonor, the assignee takes it subject to all the defenses to which it was subject in the hands of the first holder. Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 526; 70 Am. Dec. 746.

6. Assignment of judgment. The assignee of the judgment is only the holder of an equity, with the right to use the judgment and the name of the plaintiff to enforce it, and stands in the shoes of the assignor as to all defenses which existed against the judgment between the parties to it. It is like a note assigned after due. Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257; Northam v. Gordon, 23 Cal. 255; Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596.

7. What assignments equity upholds. Equity upholds assignments, not only of choses in action, but of contingent interests and expectations, and of things which have no actual existence, but vest in possibility. See note to preceding section, and the cases there cited, of Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 123; Bibend v. Liverpool etc. Fire and Life Ins. Co., 30 Cal. 78; Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 403.

8. Assigned account. As to defense to assigned account, see Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646.

9. Fraudulent assignor. A fraudulent assignor cannot sue to compel a reassignment, etc. See Gregory v. Haworth, 25 Cal. 653.

10. Notice of assignment. As to when notice of assignment is not necessary, see Morgan v. Lowe, 5 Cal. 325; 63 Am. Dec. 132.

11. Assignee of judgment. An assignee of a judgment and of the sheriff's certificate of sale thereunder, stands in the same position as his assignor when the judgment has been reversed, and the sale will be set aside, where no loss will occur to the assignee. Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667; 76 Am. Dec. 459.

§ 369. Executor, trustee, etc., may sue without joining the persons beneficially interested. An executor or administrator, or trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, may sue without joining with him the persons for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. A person with whom, or in whose name, a contract is made for the benefit of another, is a trustee of an express trust, within the meaning of this section.

Actions by executors and administrators.

1. Jointly with heirs or devisees, for possession of real estate or quieting title. Post, § 1452.

2. Alone. Post, §§ 1581–1583.

3. To set aside fraudulent deeds made by deceased. Post, § 1589.

Legislation § 369. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 6 (New York Code, § 113), which, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 59, Kerr ed. p. 84, read: "An executor or administrator, or trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, may sue without joining with him the person or persons for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. A trustee of an express trust within the meaning of this section, shall be construed to include a person, with whom, or in whose name, a contract is made for the benefit of another."

Action by an executor or administrator. An administrator may sue in his own name, as trustee of an express trust (Estate of Callaghan, 119 Cal. 571; 39 L. R. A. 689; 51 Pac. 860), without joining the heirs or beneficiaries. Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086. This is an exception to the general rule laid down in § 367, ante. Tandy v. Waesch, 154 Cal. 108; 97 Pac. 69. Where an insurance policy does not designate any beneficiary, the administrator may likewise sue for insurance on the life of the deceased (Winterhalter v. Workmen's etc. Ass'n, 75 Cal. 245; 17 Pac. 1); and, being entitled to the possession of the real estate of the deceased, he may maintain an action in ejectment (Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117; 73 Am. Dec. 632; Teschemacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 11; 79 Am. Dec. 151), and no special authority of the probate court is necessary (Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574), and an action may be brought at any time before administration is had or decree of distribution is made. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259.

Trustee of an express trust. This section is permissive only, and does not exclude an action in the name of the real party in interest. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 147 Cal. 384; 81 Pac. 1077. The fact that the trustee can maintain a suit does not preclude the beneficiary from maintaining a like suit. Horseshoe Pier etc. Co. v. Sibley, 157 Cal. 442; 108 Pac. 308. He may sue alone, but he is not bound to do so. Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26; Cerf v. Ashley, 68 Cal. 419; 9 Pac. 658; Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723; Winterhalter v. Workmen's etc. Ass'n, 75 Cal. 245; 17 Pac. 1; Patchett v. Pacific Coast Ry. Co., 100 Cal. 505; 35 Pac. 73; Graham v. Franke, 4 Cal. Unrep. 899; 38 Pac. 455; Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086; Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166. Thus, a trustee, to whom a mortgage has been assigned as security for the debt of the mortgagee, may be joined with the mortgagee as a party plaintiff in an action to foreclose the mortgage; and if not originally so made, he may be brought in afterwards. Cerf v. Ashley, 68 Cal. 419; 9 Pac. 658. That the trustee would be bound to bring an action to prevent waste or trespass upon land, or ejectment to recover its possession in case of an ouster, does not admit of doubt; on the contrary, should he refuse to do so, his cestui que trust may bring an action to compel him to do so: such being the case, it is anomalous to say that he cannot apply for other relief, if necessary, in his own name. Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26. A trustee to whom a chose in action has been transferred for collection is, in contemplation of law, so far the owner that he may sue on it in his own name. Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550. A person contracting to purchase land in his own name, although acting for another, may, without joining his principal, sue on the contract. Tandy v. Waesch, 154 Cal. 108; 97 Pac. 69. The first clause of this section has no application where a suit is brought by trustees, which involves their relations with the beneficiaries, or the relations of the beneficiaries among themselves: it applies only to suits against strangers, which affect the trust property. Mitau v. Roddan, 149 Cal. 1; 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 275; 84 Pac. 145. A person may be a trustee in a transaction wherein he is not acting in his own interest solely, but for others associated with him, and where the agreement was made in his own name for the benefit of himself and of such other persons. McCowen v. Pew, 147 Cal. 299; 81 Pac. 958. A trustee of an express trust is a person with whom or in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another. Walter v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723; People v. Stacy, 74 Cal. 373; 16 Pac. 192; Chin Kem You v. Ah Joan, 75 Cal. 124; 16 Pac. 705. Where one party is in possession of money, which, in equity and good conscience, he is bound to pay over, an action may be maintained therefor, and no privity is required, except that which results from one person having money of another, which he conscientiously has no right to retain. Kreutz v. Livingston, 15 Cal. 344. There need be no allegation of trusteeship, or proof of it at the trial. Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82; Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82; Lewis v. Adams, 70 Cal. 403; 59 Am. Rep. 423; 11 Pac. 833; Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723. The principal may sue on a contract executed by an agent without disclosing his principal, but he must show the agency, and the power of the agent to bind him. Ruiz v. Norton, 4 Cal. 355; 60 Am. Dec. 618; Thurn v. Alta Telegraph Co., 15 Cal. 472; Swift v. Swift, 46 Cal. 266. A contract, partly for the benefit of one, made in the name of another, makes the latter a trustee of an express trust. Graham v. Franke, 4 Cal. Unrep. 899; 38 Pac. 455. Where incorporators designate one of their number as the party to receive subscriptions to the capital stock, they constitute him a trustee of an express trust. West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 19; 21 Pac. 1123; Winters v. Rush, 34 Cal. 136. The directors of an insane asylum may sue as trustees of an express trust (Watt v. Smith, 89 Cal. 602; 26 Pac. 1071), as may also one taking a note or a mortgage in his own name for the benefit of another (White v. Allatt, 87 Cal. 245; 25 Pac. 420), and also one coming into possession with notice of trust property. Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141. A party to whom an undertaking on appeal is given, and who transfers the subject-matter of the litigation, becomes the trustee of the purchaser. Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82. A priest of a California Misión, occupying a position analogous to that of a sole corporation in England, may maintain an action in his own name to recover possession of Misión lands. Santillan v. Moses, 1 Cal. 92. A purchaser at an execution sale for the benefit of another, and taking possession in his own name, is trustee of an express trust (Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723); and the state is the trustee of an express trust, where a bond is executed in the name of the state for the benefit of a county (People v. Stacy, 74 Cal. 373; 16 Pac. 192); but a naked agency does not make the agent the trustee of an express trust (Lineker v. Ayeshford, 1 Cal. 75; Swift v. Swift, 46 Cal. 266); nor is an attorney in fact the trustee of an express trust (Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 197); but an agent, contracting in his own name for the benefit of his principal, the agency being known, may sue in his own name. Salmon v. Hoffman, 2 Cal. 138; 56 Am. Dec. 322; Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 515; Winters v. Rush, 34 Cal. 136. Where an agent makes an assignment without authority, the assignee cannot maintain an action, even though the assignment was subsequently ratified by the principal. Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 57 Cal. 12.

Party for whose benefit action is prosecuted. A person for whose benefit a contract is made may sue alone as the real party in interest, although not a party to it (Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Lewis v. Covillaud, 21 Cal. 178; McLaren v. Hutchinson, 22 Cal. 187; 83 Am. Dec. 59; Morgan v. Overman Silver Mining Co., 37 Cal. 534; Western Development Co. v. Emery, 61 Cal. 611; Sacramento Lumber Co. v. Wagner, 67 Cal. 293; 7 Pac. 705; Malone v. Crescent City Mill etc. Co., 77 Cal. 38; 18 Pac. 858; Tyler v. Mayre, 95 Cal. 160; 27 Pac. 160; 30 Pac. 196); but a party benefited incidentally by a contract, who is not a party to it, but for whose benefit it was not expressly made, cannot maintain suit thereon in his own name. Chung Kee v. Davidson, 73 Cal. 522; 15 Pac. 100.

Person expressly authorized by statute. The first clause of this section raises a presumption against the authority of any officer to sue, unless specially authorized by statute, otherwise the officer must sue on the ground that he is a trustee of an express trust. Watt v. Smith, 89 Cal. 602; 26 Pac. 1071.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1854, p. 84.

1. An executor or administrator may sue in his own name as executor or administrator. Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117; 73 Am. Dec. 632; Teschemacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 11; 79 Am. Dec. 151; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 579; Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82.

2. Damages for death of decedent. A suit for damages for the death of decedent can be brought only by the administrator or executor. Kramer v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 25 Cal. 435.

3. Legal title must be represented, to recover lands. But a person having the equitable title cannot sue to recover possession of lands. Such action must be in the name of the party holding the legal title; thus, where a grant of land was made to P., which was confirmed by decree of the board of land commissioners, from which an appeal was taken to the United States district court. Pending the appeal, P. died, leaving a will. An order was made in the United States court, on petition of the heirs of P., and the executors of the estate, substituting the heirs in the proceedings in place of P., and the court then confirmed the land to the heirs, and it was surveyed, and the surveyor approved. Subsequently, E. was appointed administrator with the will annexed. It was held that the legal title was in the heirs, and that the administrator could not maintain an action to recover possession of the same. Emeric v. Penniman, 26 Cal. 122; Salmon v. Symonds, 30 Cal. 301.

4. Foreclosure of a mortgage upon real property. See Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87.

5. The heir must not be joined with the administrator, in an action to recover a debt due to the decedent. The debts vest in the administrator, and not in the heir, for it is personalty, and not realty. The administrator has alone the right to maintain the action. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16.

6. Action against executors and administrators. It was held, the general right to sue an administrator was taken away by statute, except in case of presentation and rejection of the account. Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386; Falkner v. Folsom's Executors, 6 Cal. 412.

7. Administrator a proper party to all suits respecting property of decedent. The administrator has possession of all the real and personal property of the decedent, and is therefore a proper party to any suit concerning it. Harwood v. Marye, 8 Cal. 580; Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 124.

8. Administrator cannot be sued on a claim until the same has been presented and rejected. The claimant must present his claim, properly verified, to the administrator, that the administrator and the probate judge may determine whether they will allow or reject the claim. If the claimant does not thus present his claim, he can maintain no action thereon against the administrator. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 559.

9. As to mortgages, liens, etc. Their presentation, etc. See Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123; Carr v. Caldwell, 10 Cal. 380; 70 Am. Dec. 740; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 559. It was held in Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24, 81 Am. Dec. 140, that an action could be maintained against an executor or administrator to foreclose a mortgage given by the decedent, although the debt secured had been presented to and allowed by the administrator and probate judge, if the action is only to reach the mortgaged property, and subject it to sale, and have the proceeds applied to the payment of the debt secured, and no judgment is asked against the general estate of the decedent; and the cases of Ellissen v. Halleck, and Falkner v. Folsom's Executors, were overruled. It was further held, that the word "claim" did not embrace mortgage liens, etc. But this was doubted, and it was held that the word "claim" was broad enough to include a mortgage, or any other lien. Ellis v. Polhemus, 27 Cal. 353. It may be stated, therefore, that an administrator or executor cannot be sued, unless the claimant present his claims for allowance, and that the rule applies equally to mortgages and other liens as it does to any other claims. See, generally, Ellis v. Polhemus, 27 Cal. 353; Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 491; Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140; Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386; Falkner v. Folsom's Executors, 6 Cal. 412; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Carr v. Caldwell, 10 Cal. 380; 70 Am. Dec. 740; Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123.

10. Administrator cannot be joined with survivor on joint obligation. In actions upon joint and several obligations, the administrator cannot be joined with survivor. May v. Hanson, 6 Cal. 642; Humphreys v. Crane, 5 Cal. 173.

11. Trustees of express trust. See Kreutz v. Livingston, 15 Cal. 344, and cases cited therein. A person to whom a note is payable for the benefit of another is, under this section, a trustee of an express trust. Winters v. Rush, 34 Cal. 136.

12. Attorney in fact is not a trustee. One who is described in an instrument, whether parol or special, as the attorney in fact of another, does not hold the character of trustee, and is not a necessary party to represent the interest of the principal. Our statute requires every action to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 198.

13. Guardian is not trustee of express trust. A guardian appointed by the probate court, under the act which provides for the appointment and prescribes the duties of guardians, is not a trustee of an express trust, within the meaning of this section. Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 116; 91 Am. Dec. 566.

14. Miscellaneous actions on bonds taken in name of the people. Bonds in the name of the people, for the benefit of others, should be prosecuted in the name of the party in interest, although it is made payable to the people of the state. Baker v. Bartol, 7 Cal. 551.

§ 370. Married woman as party to action. When a married woman is a party, her husband must be joined with her, except:

1. When the action concerns her separate property, including action for injury to her person, libel, slander, false imprisonment or malicious prosecution, or her right or claim to the homestead property, she may sue alone.

2. When the action is between herself and her husband, she may sue or be sued alone.

3. When she is living separate and apart from her husband by reason of his desertion of her, or by agreement, in writing, entered into between them, she may sue or be sued alone.

Contracts of married women, generally. See Civ. Code, § 158.

Sole traders. Post, §§ 1811 et seq.

Legislation § 370. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based, except subd. 3, on Practice Act, § 7 (New York Code, § 114), as amended by Stats. 1867–68, p. 550; subd. 3 being based on Stats. 1869–70, p. 226, and when enacted in 1872, read, "3. When she is living separate and apart from her husband, she may sue or be sued alone."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 293; this amendment differing from the present (1913) as noted infra.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 217, in subd. 1, adding "including action for injury to her person, libel, slander, false imprisonment or malicious prosecution."

Married woman a party, joinder of husband. The common-law rule required the husband to join the wife in all actions in which she was a party, plaintiff or defendant; but that rule is altered by this section, the provisions of which are permissive, and not compulsory, in their nature, and for that reason the husband may be joined with the wife as a party, even where she is permitted to sue or to be sued alone. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333; Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82; Snyder v. Webb, 3 Cal. 83; Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456. The object of this section is to avoid the necessity of a married woman suing by prochein ami. Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312. In an action concerning property belonging to a married woman as a sole trader, her husband need not be joined. Guttmann v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455. In an action for injuries to her person, before the amendment of 1913, the wife could not sue alone (Tell v. Gibson, 66 Cal. 247; 5 Pac. 223; McFadden v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 464; 11 L. R. A. 252; 25 Pac. 681); but the husband merely a formal party; the right of action was the wife's (McFadden v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 464; 11 L. R. A. 252; 25 Pac. 681; Neale v. Depot Railway Co., 94 Cal. 425; 29 Pac. 954); the husband joins as party plaintiff, only because the common-law rule requiring him to do so is still in force. Matthew v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 63 Cal. 450; Baldwin v. Second Street Cable R. R. Co., 77 Cal. 390; 19 Pac. 644. In an action for the false imprisonment of the wife, although the recovery would be community property, the wife is a necessary party (Gomez v. Scanlan, 155 Cal. 528; 102 Pac. 12); and in an action for malicious prosecution, the wife must be joined with her husband as a party plaintiff (Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77; 58 Pac. 380; McFadden v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 464; 11 L. R. A. 252; 25 Pac. 681); and in an action against the wife for personal injuries, the husband is a necessary party. Henley v. Wilson, 137 Cal. 273; 92 Am. St. Rep. 160; 58 L. R. A. 941; 70 Pac. 21. In an action sounding in tort to the wife, based on a contract, she is properly joined as plaintiff; thus, in an action against a steamer for a breach of contract to carry the wife to a certain port, the alleged breach consisting in carrying her to another port, causing her detention there, and consequent illness and other injuries, she is a proper and necessary party. Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697. The wife may, without joining her husband, unless objection is raised by special demurrer, maintain an action against a person who, by fraudulent representations concerning her husband brought about her separation from her husband, to recover damages resulting therefrom. Work v. Campbell, 164 Cal. 343; 128 Pac. 943. The objection that the plaintiff is a married woman, and that her husband should be joined with her, is, in effect, a plea of defect of parties plaintiff; such objection is waived if not raised by demurrer, where the defect appears upon the face of the complaint, or by answer, where it does not. Hayt v. Bentel, 164 Cal. 680; 130 Pac. 432.

Action concerning separate property. In an action concerning her separate estate, a married woman may sue either without her husband (Snyder v. Webb, 3 Cal. 83; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; Duncan v. Duncan, 6 Cal. App. 404; 92 Pac.

310; Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456), or jointly with him. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308. In an action for money, which, when recovered, will be the wife's separate property, subject to the management and control of her husband, he may, but need not necessarily, be joined with her as plaintiff (Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308); and in an action for the purchase-money of her separate property, where she alleges that she had never given her consent, either in writing or orally, that the money might be paid to her husband, although his nonjoinder as a party plaintiff is not ground of demurrer, yet the fact of the payment of the money to him may constitute a defense. Kays v. Phelan, 19 Cal. 128. The wife is the proper party plaintiff in an action to foreclose a mortgage, executed by her husband, on lands claimed by her (Kohner v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 578); the husband is not a necessary party defendant in an action against the wife, upon an express contract made by the wife, and the judgment will bind the wife's separate property only. Terry v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 85; 42 Pac. 464. The wife may bring an action for converted goods, her separate estate without her husband being joined. Bondy v. American Transfer Co., 15 Cal. App. 746; 115 Pac. 965. A judgment against the wife alone, in a suit brought against her in her maiden name, to quiet title to property acquired in such name, is not void. Emery v. Kipp, 154 Cal. 83; 129 Am. St. Rep. 141; 16 Ann. Cas. 792; 97 Pac. 17; 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 983. The husband need not be joined in an action concerning property belonging to the wife as a sole trader (Guttmann v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455); nor in an action brought by the wife to quiet title to her separate property, on which a homestead has been declared. Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423; 42 Pac. 908. The fact that the validity of the homestead is involved does not affect the right of the wife to sue alone. MacLeod v. Moran, 11 Cal. App. 622; 105 Pac. 932. A tenant, under a lease of the homestead, executed by the husband, cannot hold adversely to either the husband or the wife (Mauldin v. Cox, 67 Cal. 387; 7 Pac. 804); but the statute of limitations may be pleaded against an action by the wife, where the facts establish adverse possession. Wilson v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 447; 95 Am. Dec. 194; Kapp v. Griffith, 42 Cal. 408. The earnings of a wife for her labor belong to her husband, and he is the proper party to sue therefor, in the absence of an agreement between them making such proceeds her separate property. Moseley v. Heney, 66 Cal. 478; 6 Pac. 134. A right of action for personal injury is community property; and in an action to recover for such injury, before the amendment of 1913, the husband was a necessary party, unless his wife was living separate and apart. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56. The wife cannot be sued alone in an action concerning her separate property; thus, in an action to foreclose a chattel mortgage on the separate property of the wife, the husband is a necessary party defendant. McDonald v. Porsh, 136 Cal. 301; 68 Pac. 817.

Action concerning homestead property. The husband is not a necessary party in an action to quiet title to the wife's separate property, on which a homestead has been declared; the wife may sue alone. Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423; 42 Pac. 908. The phrase, "or her right or claim to the homestead property," was not in the original Practice Act section before the amendment of 1867–78, and it was held that the wife could not sue alone to recover the homestead (Poole v. Gerrard, 6 Cal. 71; 65 Am. Dec. 481; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Cook v. Klink, 8 Cal. 347; Marks v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 96; Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296; Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472; Guiod v. Guiod, 14 Cal. 506; 76 Am. Dec. 440), as the husband alone had title to the homestead (Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472; Bowman v. Norton, 16 Cal. 213; Himmelmann v. Schmidt, 23 Cal. 117; Brennan v. Wallace, 25 Cal. 108; Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 366; Johnston v. Bush, 49 Cal. 198), and the homestead right could not be asserted individually, both husband and wife being required to join (Cook v. Klink, 8 Cal. 347), and the homestead right could not then be determined, unless both husband and wife were before the court. Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304. But, since the amendment of 1867–68, the wife may sue or be sued alone, the husband not being a necessary party (Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456; Hart v. Church, 126 Cal. 471; 77 Am. St. Rep. 195; 58 Pac. 910; 59 Pac. 296; Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423; 42 Pac. 908); and an action to recover the homestead may be maintained by the wife in her own name, without her husband joining as a party plaintiff. Mauldin v. Cox, 67 Cal. 387; 7 Pac. 804. The complaint in such an action must show that the land sued for is covered by a valid declaration of homestead. Tappendorff v. Moranda, 134 Cal. 419; 66 Pac. 491. Where a homestead was claimed by the husband, in an action, in which he was the sole defendant, brought to foreclose a mortgage executed by him alone, after the marriage, the rights of neither husband nor wife can be affected by the proceedings, the wife not being a party; and the proceedings, to be conclusive against either, must include both. Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Van Reynegan v. Revalk, 8 Cal. 75; Cook v. Klink, 8 Cal. 347; Marks v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 96; Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296.

Action between husband and wife. In such an action the wife may sue alone, and it is not necessary to introduce other parties, and their introduction cannot affect her rights. Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312. But this section does not contemplate actions in tort by one spouse against the other; it applies only to actions for the possession of property rights. Peters v. Peters, 156 Cal. 32; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 699; 103 Pac. 219. The wife may maintain a suit against her husband, on a promissory note executed by him to her before their marriage. Wilson v. Wilson, 36 Cal. 447; 95 Am. Dec. 194.

Wife living separate and apart from her husband. Where the wife is living separate and apart from her husband, she may sue alone for damages for injury to her person (Andrews v. Runyon, 65 Cal. 629; 4 Pac. 669; Duncan v. Duncan, 6 Cal. App. 404; 92 Pac. 310; Baldwin v. Second Street Cable R. R. Co., 77 Cal. 390; 19 Pac. 644; Muller v. Hale, 138 Cal. 163; 71 Pac. 81); but this does not mean a mere temporary absence of the wife; there must be an abandonment on the part of either the wife or the husband, or a separation which was intended to be final. Tobin v. Galvin, 49 Cal. 34; Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 253; 54 Pac. 847. Where, however, a wife, who has deserted her husband, before the period has expired entitling her to a divorce, in good faith offers to return and resume the marital relations, to which the husband does not consent, she is entitled to sue alone. Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456; Muller v. Hale, 138 Cal. 163; 71 Pac. 81. An action may be maintained by the wife for injuries sustained by the enticing away of her husband. Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 253; 54 Pac. 847. Adverse possession by the wife, as against the husband, who has deserted her, may be acquired; and as to the property so acquired, she may sue or be sued alone. Union Oil Co. v. Stewart, 158 Cal. 149; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 567; 110 Pac. 313. If a married woman, not living separate and apart from her husband, is sued by a third person for the alleged conversion of a fund, the plaintiff cannot recover where the husband is not joined as a party defendant. Taylor v. Darling, 19 Cal. App. 232; 125 Pac. 249. A married woman, deserted by her husband, may sue alone to recover damages for her personal injuries, although such damages, when recovered, are community property. Duncan v. Duncan, 6 Cal. App. 404; 92 Pac. 310.

Action concerning community property. In a suit to recover money lent to the wife to complete the purchase of what afterwards becomes community property, though the title is taken in her name, she is not a proper party defendant (Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; 99 Am. Dec. 363; Maclay v. Love, 25 Cal. 367; 85 Am. Dec. 133; Brown v. Orr, 29 Cal. 120; Smith v. Greer, 31 Cal. 476); and in an action to foreclose a mortgage on the community property, the husband is a necessary party. McComb v. Spangler, 71 Cal. 418; 12 Pac. 347.

Judgments against married woman. See note, 55 Am. Dec. 599.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1868, p. 550. The third subdivision is taken from Stats. 1870, p. 226.

1. Construction of section. Since married women can sue or defend alone, they are responsible alone for costs, etc., of suit, if unsuccessful. This section provides in what cases a married woman may sue and be sued, without imposing any conditions or bestowing any privileges. Thus, in the cases mentioned, she is put upon a common level with all other parties to actions, no discrimination being made in her favor or against her. Thereafter the code proceeds, and, without any distinction as to persons, prescribes, in general terms, applicable to all alike, the manner in which actions shall be prosecuted, and the nature and form of the judgments which shall be rendered, and the manner in which the same shall be executed. The provisions in the code relating to judgments do not declare that judgments may be rendered in favor of, but not against, married women; on the contrary, they merely provide, in general terms, when the plaintiff or defendant shall have judgment and execution, regardless of the fact whether they are male or female, married or unmarried. The provisions of the Practice Act, allowing a married woman to sue alone, is not merely the adoption of the old chancery rule, allowing her, in certain cases, to sue by her "next friend." It is something more, for it allows her to sue alone. The office which the prochein ami performed was to be responsible for costs. The old form of suing by prochein ami is abolished, but the right of the opposite party to recover costs is unimpaired, and, as a necessary consequence, resulting from dispensing with the prochein ami, the married woman has herself been charged with the responsibility which previously attached to him; and there is no good reason why it should not be so. If she is to be regarded as a feme sole for any purpose connected with litigation, she ought to be so regarded for all. There is no justice in according to her all the advantages and benefits to be gained by an action, and at the same time exempting her from all risk and responsibility. If she is to be allowed the rights of a suitor, she must, in the absence of an express provision to the contrary, be held to take also the responsibilities of a suitor, for they ought not to be separated. A question somewhat analogous arose in Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 321, where the court said: "In this state, the wife can appear in and defend an action separately from her husband. To enable her to do so, she must possess, as defendant, all the rights of a feme sole, and be able to make as binding admissions in writing, in the action, as other parties." The question has arisen in New York, from which state our system is borrowed, and has been there determined in accordance with the views entertained by us. In Moncrief v. Ward, New York common pleas (reported in note to Baldwin v. Kimmel, 16 Abb. Pr. 364), this same question was involved, and it was held that an execution for costs against a married woman could be enforced against her separate estate, whether it contains a direction to that effect or not. Mr. Justice Brady said: "Having the right to sue, the power must be employed cum onere. The statute awarding costs does not exempt a married woman, either as plaintiff or defendant, from the payment of costs when unsuccessful. There is no just reason why she should be thus exempted. Having the status of a feme sole in the courts, if she fail in her action, it would be unjust to compel her adversary to resort to extraordinary modes to collect his costs. It cannot be that the legislature intended this. It is true that, until the amendment of the code (§ 274) in 1862, the legislature did not, in express terms, provide that costs could be recovered against her, but such was the effect of the statutes then in existence, as I interpret them. That amendment merely declared the necessary legal conclusion from the existing statutes; no class of suitors, as already suggested, having been excepted from them. The execution to compel the payment of such costs must be enforced against her separate estate, whether so directed or not. It cannot be employed against the property of another person, per se." Leonard v. Townsend, 26 Cal. 443.

2. Wife may choose whether she will sue or defend alone, or in connection with her husband. It has been held that this section is not obligatory upon the wife to sue or defend alone; it confers only a privilege which, in many instances, it may be important for her to assert, for the protection of her interests, and in the exercise of which the fullest liberty should be accorded to her. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 311; Kays v. Phelan, 19 Cal. 128.

3. Suits concerning the homestead property. The original statute, 1851–52, did not contain the clause "or her right or claim to the homestead property," and the phrase was added by the amendment of 1867–68, p. 550. Until after the passage of the amendment the court had held a wife could not sue alone to recover the homestead. See Poole v. Gerrard, 6 Cal. 71; 65 Am. Dec. 481; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66, 68 Am. Dec. 304; Cook v. Klink, 8 Cal. 347; and see Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472, overruling these cases in some particulars, but not as to this point, it seems; see Guiod v. Guiod, 14 Cal. 507; 76 Am. Dec. 440; see also Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296. And it was said that a wife had no right in the homestead, independent of the husband, which she could enforce against his consent, and that she could not maintain a suit for it in her own name alone. Guiod v. Guiod, 14 Cal. 506; 76 Am. Dec. 440. And in a suit against the husband for a foreclosure of a mortgage upon the homestead, it has been held that when the husband appears and defends alone, any decision the court could make in regard to the homestead could not affect the rights of the wife, she not being a party to the suit. And such is the nature of the title to the homestead, that the rights of the husband cannot be affected without affecting those of the wife also. If no binding decision can be made when one of them only is a party, then it is idle for the court to make any decision at all in such a case. Marks v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 97.

4. Separate property. Snyder v. Webb, 3 Cal. 83. When the action concerns the wife's separate property, it has been held she may seek the aid of the court either with or without her husband. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 311; Kays v. Phelan, 19 Cal. 128; Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333; Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82.

5. Foreclosure of mortgage on wife's separate property. In an action for the foreclosure of mortgage executed by the husband, if the wife alleges the land was her separate property by virtue of a previous conveyance from the husband to her, she may be made a defendant. Kohner v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 578.

6. Action between wife and husband. Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312.

7. Foreclosure of mortgage executed by both husband and wife. If a wife executes a mortgage with her husband, she may be made a party defendant along with her husband in an action to foreclose the same, without alleging her interest in the property mortgaged. Anthony v. Nye, 30 Cal. 401.

8. Action for damages for injury to the person of the wife. Husband and wife must be joined. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193.

9. Partnership obligation contracted by wife and third parties previous to marriage. The husband of a married woman is properly joined with her as a defendant in an action upon a partnership obligation, contracted by the wife and a third person, as partners, previous to the marriage, and while she was a feme sole. Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78.

10. When the wife lives apart from husband. The third subdivision is taken from the statutes of 1870, p. 226.

11. Sole trader. In a suit against a married woman, who is a sole trader, on a contract made by her, she must be sued alone. McKune v. McGarvey, 6 Cal. 497. And an action may be maintained by a married woman, who is a sole trader, in her own name, without joining her husband. Guttmann v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455; see also Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564.

12. Damages to community property. In an action for damages to the community property, the husband must sue alone: the wife cannot be made a party. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193; Barrett v. Tewksbury, 18 Cal. 334.

§ 371. Wife may defend, when. If a husband and wife be sued together, the wife may defend for her own right, and if the husband neglect to defend, she may defend for his right also.

Legislation § 371. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 8, which read, "If a husband and wife be sued together, the wife may defend for her own right."

Defense by wife to action against herself and husband. A wife can appear in and defend an action separately from her husband (Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315); and where sued with her husband, she pleads a special defense, she may defend as if she were sued separately. Deuprez v. Deuprez, 5 Cal. 387. Where the wife is a necessary party to the full adjustment of the controversy, she should be allowed to intervene (Sargent v. Wilson, 5 Cal. 504), and to file a separate answer, where the action concerns the homestead property. Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296. If a feme sole subsequently marries, her husband should be made defendant in a supplemental pleading setting up the fact of the marriage. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The words "and if the husband neglect," etc., are added to the original provision of § 8 of the Practice Act.

1. The wife can appear in and defend an action separately from her husband. To enable her to do so, she must possess, as defendant, all the rights of a feme sole, and be able to make as binding admissions in writing in the action as other parties. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315.

2. The wife may defend for her own right, as well when sued jointly with her husband as if the trial were separate; her defense, if a separate one, could come in, in either case. See Deuprez v. Deuprez, 5 Cal. 388.

§ 372. Appearance of infant, etc., by guardian. May compromise. When an infant, or an insane or incompetent person is a party, he must appear either by his general guardian or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending, in each case. A guardian ad litem may be appointed in any case, when it is deemed by the court in which the action or proceeding is prosecuted, or by a judge thereof, expedient to represent the infant, insane, or incompetent person in the action or proceeding, notwithstanding he may have a general guardian and may have appeared by him. The general guardian or guardian ad litem so appearing for any infant, or insane or incompetent person in any suit shall have power to compromise the same and to agree to the judgment to be entered therein for or against his ward, subject to the approval of the court in which such suit is pending.

Appointment of guardian ad litem. See post, § 373.

Guardian and ward, generally. See post, §§ 1747 et seq.; Civ. Code, §§ 236 et seq.

Insane or incompetent person. Civ. Code, §§ 36, 38–42. Guardian of. Post, §§ 1763–1766.

Minors and persons of unsound mind, their rights and liabilities. Civ. Code, §§ 33 et seq.

Legislation § 372. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 9 (New York Code, § 115), which read: "When an infant is a party he shall appear by guardian, who may be appointed by the court in which the action is prosecuted, or by a judge thereof, or a county judge." When enacted in 1872, § 372 read: "When an infant is a party he must appear by his general guardian, if he has one; and if not, by a guardian who may be appointed by the court in which the action is prosecuted, or by a judge thereof, or a county judge."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 294, to read: "When an infant is a party, he must appear either by his general guardian, or by a guardian appointed by the court in which the action is prosecuted, or by a judge thereof. A guardian may be appointed in any case, when it is deemed by the court in which the action is prosecuted, or by a judge thereof, expedient to represent the infant in the action, notwithstanding he may have a general guardian, and may have appeared by him."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 63, and then contained the first two sentences of the present section.

4. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 350, adding the final sentence.

Where infant is a party. An infant, party to an action, must appear, prosecute, and defend by his general guardian, or guardian ad litem. Crawford v. Neal, 56 Cal. 321; Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364; Childs v. Lanterman, 103 Cal. 387; 42 Am. St. Rep. 121; 37 Pac. 382. The reason for this is the supposed want of discretion in the infant, and his inability to bind himself, or to appoint an attorney to represent him. Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364. But a judgment is not absolutely void, where no guardian is appointed; for the failure to appoint a guardian does not go to the jurisdiction of the court; it is merely an irregularity. Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364; Foley v. California Horseshoe Co., 115 Cal. 184; 56 Am. St. Rep. 87; 47 Pac. 42. There is a distinction to be observed, and with good reason, between an action brought by an infant and one taken in hostility to him. Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364. The supreme court has held, however, that, notwithstanding the provisions of this section, a judgment against an infant, in a cause in which no guardian was appointed for him, is not for that reason void. Childs v. Lanterman, 103 Cal. 387; 42 Am. St. Rep. 121; 37 Pac. 382; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. Under this section and § 373, post, upon the application of a relative, where a plaintiff sues to annul his marriage on the ground of mental incompetency at the time of the marriage, a guardian ad litem may be appointed for him, the evidence tending to show incompetency. Dunphy v. Dunphy, 161 Cal. 380; Ann. Cas. 1913B, 1230; 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 818; 119 Pac. 512. An allowance for minor children may be made in a probate proceeding, on the petition of any person, or by the court of its own motion; it is immaterial whether or not a guardian ad litem is appointed. Estate of Snowball, 156 Cal. 235; 104 Pac. 446.

Incompetent person a party. An action must be brought against an incompetent person, not against his guardian: there is no obligation on the part of the latter to discharge the obligation (Justice v. Ott, 87 Cal. 530; 25 Pac. 691; Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566); and the incompetent, being the aggrieved party, may appeal from an order binding the guardian. In re Moss, 120 Cal. 695; 53 Pac. 357.

General guardian. An infant may appear by his general guardian (Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629; Smith v. McDonald, 42 Cal. 484; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Western Lumber Co. v. Phillips, 94 Cal. 54; 29 Pac. 328); and his appearance is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of an infant defendant. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227; Western Lumber Co. v. Phillips, 94 Cal. 54; 29 Pac. 328.

Guardian ad litem. Where the interest of the infant requires it, the court will appoint a guardian ad litem; but it cannot do so until the infant has been brought into court by summons. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616; Johnson v. San Francisco Savings Union, 63 Cal. 554; McCloskey v. Sweeney, 66 Cal. 53; 4 Pac. 943. Service upon the general guardian of an infant under fourteen years of age is sufficient service upon the infant (Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227); and the appearance of a general guardian is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of the person of an infant defendant; the fact that no guardian ad litem was appointed for him is immaterial. Western Lumber Co. v. Phillips, 94 Cal. 54; 29 Pac. 328; and see Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629; Smith v. McDonald, 42 Cal. 484; Hill v. Den, 54 Cal. 6. Where infants become necessary parties during the pendency of partition proceedings, as the successors of a deceased defendant, they need not be served with summons: they may be brought in on motion, by order of the court. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Stuart v. Allen, 16 Cal. 473; 76 Am. Dec. 551. There is no provision for the time of appointment of a guardian ad litem. Stuart v. Allen, 16 Cal. 473; 76 Am. Dec. 551.

Control of guardian ad litem over action. See note 16 L. R. A. 507.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Appear by general, not special, guardian. "The infant must appear by his general guardian, if he has one." Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 660. But it has been held, that, although the infant may have a general guardian, yet the court will appoint a guardian ad litem if the interests of the infant require it. Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629. The words, "his general guardian, if he has one; and if not, then by," etc., were not in the section when the above decision was rendered.

2. Guardian appointed by will may act before letters issue. If a guardian is appointed by the will, it is not necessary that any letters of guardianship should issue to authorize the guardian to act. The order of appointment, when made by the probate court, constitutes the authority of the guardian, and the will, in cases of testamentary appointment, that of guardians in other cases. Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 256.

3. When married women regarded as infants, when under age. It has been held that, in some instances, the disability of infancy attaches as well to married women under age as it does to other infants. See Magee v. Welsh, 18 Cal. 159.

4. Action in name of infant for money due him. In an action to recover money due to an infant, the action must be brought by the guardian in the name of the infant, and not in the name of the guardian. Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566.

5. Guardian ad litem not appointed until infant is brought into court. The court has no right to appoint a guardian ad litem, until the infant is properly brought into court. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 638.

6. Guardian ad litem limited in authority. A guardian ad litem has only a special and limited authority, and cannot go beyond it. Where guardians ad litem were appointed to represent an infant in a suit for the partition of real property, they had no authority to give and gave no assent to a decree, nor for partition or division of a common estate, but for a foreclosure of all claim of the infants, and the quieting against them of the plaintiff's title to the particular piece of land mentioned in the decree. The court might as well have entered a decree affecting their title or declaring void their claim to any other property. The infants were not before the court for any such purpose, and the appointment of the guardian being a special power exercised by the court, and giving only special and limited authority to the guardians, it would seem that their acts, so far as transcending this authority, would be void. Waterman v. Lawrence, 19 Cal. 217; 79 Am. Dec. 212.

7. Infant's day in court after he attains his majority, etc. At common law when the heir was sued at law, upon a specialty obligation of the ancestor chargeable upon the inheritance, he might pray that "the parol demur"—that is to say, that the pleadings or proceedings be stayed until he should attain his majority. This privilege was based on feudal reasons, and was confined to heirs. It did not even extend to devisees. "Courts of equity did not, however, confine this species of protection to cases precisely similar to those in which the parol could demur at law; but by a kind of analogy they adopted a second rule, by which, in cases of foreclosure and partition, and in all such cases in which the real estate of an infant was to be sold or conveyed under a decree of the court, and, consequently, the execution of the conveyance was necessarily deferred, the infant had an opportunity, after attaining twenty-one, to show cause against the decree. For this purpose a provision was inserted in the decree." Joyce v. McAvoy, 31 Cal. 279, 89 Am. Dec. 172, and cases there cited.

§ 373. Guardian, how appointed. When a guardian ad litem is appointed by the court, he must be appointed as follows:

1. When the infant is plaintiff, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years, or if under that age, upon the application of a relative or friend of the infant.

2. When the infant is defendant, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years, and apply within ten days after the service of the summons, or if under that age, or if he neglect so to apply, then upon the application of a relative or friend of the infant, or of any other party to the action.

3. When an insane or incompetent person is a party to an action or proceeding, upon the application of a relative or friend of such insane or incompetent person, or of any other party to the action or proceeding.

Legislation § 373. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 10 (New York Code, § 116), which read: "The guardian shall be appointed as follows: 1. When the infant is plaintiff, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years; or if under that age, upon the application of a relative or friend of the infant; 2. When the infant is defendant, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years, and apply within ten days after the service of the summons; if he be under the age of fourteen, or neglect so to apply, then upon the application of any other party to the action, or of a relative or friend of the infant." When enacted in 1872 the introductory paragraph was changed to read, "When a guardian is appointed by the court, he must be appointed as follows," this being the only change.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 63.

Appointment of guardian ad litem. The appointment of a guardian ad litem may be made ex parte. Crawford v. Neal, 56 Cal. 321; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Granger v. Sherriff, 133 Cal. 416; 65 Pac. 873. No notice of the application is necessary. Granger v. Sherriff, 133 Cal. 416; 65 Pac. 873. It may be made ore tenus, in open court; but it is the better practice to file the petition, setting forth the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. The court has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant until such infant has been served with summons. McCloskey v. Sweeney, 66 Cal. 53; 4 Pac. 943; Estate of Callaghan, 119 Cal. 571; 39 L. R. A. 689; 51 Pac. 860.

Application for family allowance. A guardian ad litem may be appointed for the purpose of applying for a family allowance, in a probate proceeding. Estate of Snowball, 156 Cal. 235; 104 Pac. 446.

Guardian ad litem for insane person. Application for appointment of a guardian for an insane person may be made ex parte. Boyd v. Dodson, 66 Cal. 360; 5 Pac. 617. No notice of the application is necessary. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418.

Guardian ad litem for incompetent. See note ante, § 372.

Appointment of guardian ad litem, where infant has general guardian. Where the interest of the infant requires it, the court in which the cause of action is pending will appoint a guardian ad litem, even though the infant has a general guardian (Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629); but the provisions of this section apply only to cases where there is no general guardian, or where the general guardian is interested adversely to the ward, or does not act. Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section relates to the appointment of a guardian ad litem, where there is no general guardian. Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 659; Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 255; Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629. See the cases referred to in note to the preceding section.

§ 374. Unmarried female may sue for her own seduction.

An unmarried female may prosecute, as plaintiff, an action for her own seduction, and may recover therein such damages, pecuniary or exemplary, as are assessed in her favor.

Exemplary damages. See Civ. Code, § 3294.
Damages for seduction. See Civ. Code, § 3339.

Legislation § 374. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Unmarried female may sue for her own seduction. The word "seduction," as used in this section, means the use of some influence, promise, art, or means, upon the part of the male, by which he induces the female to surrender her chastity and virtue to his embraces. Marshall v. Taylor, 98 Cal. 55; 35 Am. St. Rep. 144; 32 Pac. 867; and see Morrell v. Morgan, 65 Cal. 575; 4 Pac. 580. When rape is shown, instead of seduction, it but aggravates the offense, and justifies augmented exemplary damages. Marshall v. Taylor, 98 Cal. 55; 35 Am. St. Rep. 144; 32 Pac. 867. In an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff may plead seduction, brought about by reason of the promise, in aggravation of damages. Lanigan v. Neely, 4 Cal. App. 760; 89 Pac. 441.

"Seduction," defined. Marshall v. Taylor, 98 Cal. 55; 35 Am. St. Rep. 144; 32 Pac. 867.

In whom right of action for seduction vests. See note 4 Am. Dec. 403.
Right of woman to recover damages for her own seduction. See notes 8 Ann. Cas. 1115; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1062.
Who is real party in interest by whom action for seduction must be brought. See note 64 L. R. A. 622.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This, and the succeeding section, are new. Heretofore the action could only be in the name of the parent, or one who stands in that relation, and is supported by the fiction that he has suffered pecuniary injury by loss of service, etc. The object of these sections is to provide a remedy in favor of the party injured, and to make the law, in this respect, harmonious with the declaration of the code, "that all actions must be prosecuted in the name of the real party," etc.

§ 375. Father, etc., may sue for seduction of daughter, etc.

A father, or, in case of his death or desertion of his family, the mother, may prosecute as plaintiff for the seduction of the daughter, and the guardian for the seduction of the ward, though the daughter or ward be not living with or in the service of the plaintiff at the time of the seduction or afterwards, and there be no loss of service.

Guardian ad litem. Ante, § 372. Appointment of. Ante, § 373.

Legislation § 375. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Accrual of father's right of action for daughter's seduction. See note 1 Ann. Cas. 388.
Right of person standing in loco parentis to maintain civil action for seduction. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 299.

§ 376. Father, etc., may sue for injury or death of child. A father, or in case of his death or desertion of his family, the mother, may maintain an action for the injury or death of a minor child, and a guardian for the injury or death of his ward, when such injury or death is caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another. Such action may be maintained against the person causing the injury, or death, or if such person be employed by another person who is responsible for his conduct, also against such other person.

Guardian and ward. Post, §§ 1768–1776; Civ. Code, §§ 236–258.

Legislation § 376. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, in the exact language of Practice Act, § 11, and then read: "A father, or, in case of his death or desertion of his family, the mother, may maintain an action for the injury or death of a child, and a guardian for the injury or death of his ward."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 294.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Action by father for injury or death of child. This section does not create a right of action, where none existed before, but merely designates the persons by whom an action, for the causes therein mentioned, which then existed, or might thereafter be created by statute, should be brought. Kramer v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 25 Cal. 434. The anomalies of this section are evidence of careless legislation, and suggest caution in its construction and application. Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. The action provided for in this section is a new action, and not that which the deceased might have brought had he survived. Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139. In an action for the death of a child, the parent may recover all pecuniary loss suffered. Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. It is left to the jury, in such cases, to say what they deem "just"; and if they have not made their estimate upon a wrong basis, nor acted under the influence of passion or prejudice, their judgment is final. Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139; Skelton v. Pacific Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 507; 74 Pac. 13. There are no restrictions as to the amount of damages recoverable in an action for death caused by the defendant's negligence, except that the damages must be just, and not exceed the amount claimed. Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co., 3 Cal. App. 312; 84 Pac. 1010.

Measure of damages. The measure of damages is that prescribed by this and the succeeding section (Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366); neither of which sections give redress or compensation for mental distress consequent upon the death of a child (Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603); nor for the pain or anguish suffered by the child. Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. The damages recoverable by the father are limited to such losses as he sustains; the infant can recover such further damages as are personal to himself (Durkee v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 388; 38 Am. Rep. 59; Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139); but the father is not limited, in his recovery, to the actual pecuniary injury sustained by reason of the loss of the services of his child. Nehrbas v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal. 320; Beeson v. Green Mountain Gold Mining Co., 57 Cal. 20; Cook v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal. 604. The proper elements to be considered by the jury in awarding damages to parents in such cases are: 1. The loss of the child's services during minority; 2. The mental anguish and suffering of the parents; 3. The expenses for medical attendance; and 4. The funeral expenses. Karr v. Parks, 44 Cal. 46; Sykes v. Lawlor, 49 Cal. 236; Cleary v. City Railroad Co., 76 Cal. 240; 18 Pac. 269; and see Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270, 276; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. The main element of the damages for the determination of the injury is the loss of the child's services. Cleary v. City Railroad Co., 76 Cal. 240; 18 Pac. 269; Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603. In the case of a mother or a wife, the jury have been allowed to consider the fact that they were deprived of the comfort, society, and protection of a son or a husband; but it has always been held that this was in strict accordance with the rule, that only the pecuniary value of the life to the relatives could be recovered, the probable comfort, society, and protection having a pecuniary value. Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139.

Recovery by infant. The infant may recover damages for such injuries as are personal to himself, such as physical and mental pain and suffering, disfigurement, etc., notwithstanding the recovery of damages by his parent for the losses the latter sustains. Durkee v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 388; 38 Am. Rep. 59. Where the infant plaintiff was a female of two years, and the evidence showed that the deceased father was twenty-seven years old, with an expectancy of thirty-seven years, and that he earned forty dollars a month and board, a verdict of five thousand dollars was sustained as not excessive. Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co., 3 Cal. App. 312; 84 Pac. 1010.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It was held that the eleventh section of the Practice Act (which was in the same terms as this section), which provides that the father, or, in case of his death, or desertion of his family, the mother, may maintain an action for the injury or death of a child, and a guardian for the injury or death of his ward, does not create a right of action where none existed before, but merely designates the persons by whom an action, for the causes therein mentioned, which then existed, or might thereafter be created by statute, should be brought; and at the time the Practice Act was passed, the death of a person constituted no cause of action; and the eleventh section of that act, so far as it designates the parties by whom an action for the death of a person may be brought, is repealed by the act of 1862 (see next section), which provides that "every such action shall be brought by and in the names of the personal representatives of such deceased person." Kramer v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 25 Cal. 435.

§ 377. When representatives may sue for death of one caused by the wrongful act of another. When the death of a person not being a minor is caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another, his heirs or personal representatives may maintain an action for damages against the person causing the death, or if such person be employed by another person who is responsible for his conduct, then also against such other person. In every action under this and the preceding section, such damages may be given as under all the circumstances of the case, may be just.

Legislation § 377. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "When the death of a person is caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another, his heirs or personal representatives may maintain an action for damages against the person causing the death; or when the death of a person is caused by an injury received in falling through any opening or defective place in any sidewalk, street, alley, square, or wharf, his heirs or personal representatives may maintain an action for damages against the person whose duty it was, at the time of the injury, to have kept in repair such sidewalk or other place. In every such action the jury may give such damages, pecuniary or exemplary, as, under all the circumstances of the case, may to them seem just."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873-74, p. 294.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Action by heirs or personal representatives. The action may be brought either by the heirs of the deceased, or by his personal representatives; and when an action is brought, and the court has obtained jurisdiction of it, that is the only action that is permitted, under this section. Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Hartigan v. Southern Pacific Co., 86 Cal. 142; 24 Pac. 851. This section is general; but actions for injuries arising out of the relation of employer and employee are governed by § 1970 of the Civil Code. Pritchard v. Whitney Estate Co., 164 Cal. 564; 129 Pac. 989. The action under this section is intended for the compensation of the families of persons killed, not for the solacing of their wounded feelings. Simoneau v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co., 159 Cal. 494; 115 Pac. 320. The word "heirs," in this section, is used in the common-law sense: it includes all persons capable of inheriting from the deceased, without any reference to the distribution of his property under a statute. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063; Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139. The action being purely statutory, and the statute contemplating but one action and one recovery, where a child is unborn, and its existence in its mother's womb is unknown to the defendant when a judgment in favor of the widow or other heirs is given, an action cannot be maintained by the child after its birth. Daubert v. Western Meat Co., 139 Cal. 480; 96 Am. St. Rep. 154; 69 Pac. 297; 73 Pac. 244. A recovery in the action is a bar to a further recovery, in a subsequent action, by another heir, of whose existence the defendant had no knowledge at the time of the first action. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. The action must be brought for the benefit of all the heirs, or by all the heirs for their own benefit. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. The bringing of the action by the personal representatives of the deceased does not make the damages any part of the estate. Jones v. Leonardt, 10 Cal. App. 284; 101 Pac. 811. The words "personal representatives" mean the administrator or executor, and not the heir or next of kin. Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Burk v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 125 Cal. 364; 73 Am. St. Rep. 52; 57 Pac. 1065. The administrator is simply made a statutory trustee to recover damages for the benefit of the heirs. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. Where the complaint by an administrator, in an action for death, does not show that there are heirs, it does not state a cause of action; the administrator can bring only such an action as the statutory trustee for heirs, to recover damages which they have suffered; but where there are no heirs, there can be no recovery. Webster v. Norwegian Mining Co., 137 Cal. 399; 92 Am. St. Rep. 181; 70 Pac. 276; Jones v. Leonardt, 10 Cal. App. 284; 101 Pac. 811; Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. An amended complaint, curing the defect of the original in not alleging that there are heirs, does not state a new or different cause of action. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. The damages recovered by the administrator, in such an action, are not assets of the estate of the decedent, but go to the heirs and persons injured by the death. Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Jones v. Leonardt, 10 Cal. App. 284; 101 Pac. 811. The heirs cannot recover, where the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence. Shade v. Bay Counties Power Co., 152 Cal. 10; 92 Pac. 62. All the heirs should join as plaintiffs in the action; and where one does not consent to be joined, he may be made a defendant. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. The surviving widow may be the sole heir of the decedent. Knott v. McGilvray, 124 Cal. 128; 56 Pac. 789; Daubert v. Western Meat Co., 139 Cal. 480; 96 Am. St. Rep. 154; 69 Pac. 297; 73 Pac. 244. In an action by a husband for the death of his wife, caused by the malpractice of a physician, it is not necessary to allege expressly that he is her heir, where it is alleged she was his wife, at the time of her death. Groom v. Bangs, 153 Cal. 456; 96 Pac. 503. A special administrator may sue, when authorized by the order appointing him. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330.

Action for death by wrongful act or neglect. An action for damages for death by negligence or wrongful act is purely statutory: no such right existed at common law. Burk v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 125 Cal. 364; 73 Am. St. Rep. 52; 57 Pac. 1065; Daubert v. Western Meat Co., 139 Cal. 480; 96 Am. St. Rep. 154; 69 Pac. 297; 73 Pac. 244; Pritchard v. Whitney Estate Co., 164 Cal. 564; 129 Pac. 989. In order to entitle one to recover, two things must be shown: 1. The wrongful act or negligence of the defendant; 2. No want of ordinary care on the part of the decedent; the gravamen of the action is the negligence or wrongful act of the defendant; and there can be no recovery, where the negligence of the decedent contributed in any degree to the death, or to the injury resulting in the death. Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153. Where a widow sues for damages for the death of her husband, caused by negligence, the social and domestic relations of the parties, and their kindly demeanor toward each other, are admissible to be shown, as parts of "all the circumstances of the case." Beeson v. Green Mountain Gold Mining Co., 57 Cal. 20; Cook v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal. 604; McKeever v. Market Street R. R. Co., 59 Cal. 294; Nehrbas v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal. 320; Wolford v. Lyon Gravel etc. Mining Co., 63 Cal. 483. The heirs may all be joined as plaintiffs; and the husband, as the heir of his deceased wife, may bring suit in his own name as an heir, and as the guardian ad litem of the minor heirs. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063. Joint tort-feasors are liable jointly and severally, and they may be sued jointly in one action, or severally in separate actions. Grundel v. Union Iron Works, 127 Cal. 438; 78 Am. St. Rep. 75; 47 L. R. A. 467; 59 Pac. 826. If several persons are guilty in common of a tort, the injured party may, at his election, sue such tort-feasor either separately or together. Butler v. Ashworth, 110 Cal. 614; 43 Pac. 4, 386. Where work is being done with tools and materials directly over a thoroughfare, where people are constantly traveling, and have the undoubted right to travel, the law demands the exercise of great care and precaution in the performance of the work, in order that the travelers may not be injured. Dixon v. Pluns, 98 Cal. 384; 35 Am. St. Rep. 180; 20 L. R. A. 698; 33 Pac. 268; Judson v. Giant Powder Co., 107 Cal. 549; 48 Am. St. Rep. 146; 29 L. R. A. 718; 40 Pac. 1020; Knott v. McGilvray, 124 Cal. 128; 56 Pac. 789. The mere fact that a child is drowned in a public bathing-house is not conclusive proof of negligence on the part of the proprietor. Flora v. Bimini Water Co., 161 Cal. 495; 119 Pac. 661.

Damages recoverable. The damages recoverable are for the injuries inflicted upon the plaintiff, not for those upon the decedent (Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063; Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366; Pierce v. United Gas etc. Co., 161 Cal. 176; 118 Pac. 700); and the jury have power to assess such damages as, under all the circumstances of the case, may be just (Beeson v. Green Mountain Gold Mining Co., 57 Cal. 20; McKeever v. Market Street R. R. Co., 59 Cal. 294; Cook v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal. 604; Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603); and if they have not made their estimate upon a wrong basis, and have not acted under the influence of passion and prejudice, their judgment is final. Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139. The rule of damages stated in the last sentence of this section is the exclusive measure of damages in any action for injuries causing death (Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366); and is a direct determination of the legislature that the policy adopted by other states in that regard shall not exist in this state. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063. The general language of the last clause of this section is used with reference to the fact that the damages allowed by the statute to be recovered are usually prospective in their nature, and necessarily based upon probabilities; therefore the estimate of such damages must necessarily call for the exercise of a very large discretion upon the part of the jury, who must keep in view the fact that the measure thereof is what shall fairly seem to be the pecuniary injury or loss of the plaintiff. De Haven, J., concurring, in Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603. The jury are not limited, in assessing damages, to the actual pecuniary injury sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the loss of the services of the deceased. Nehrbas v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal. 320; Cleary v. City Railroad Co., 76 Cal. 240; 18 Pac. 269; Skelton v. Pacific Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 507; 74 Pac. 13. If the amount of damages awarded is large, the court cannot, for that reason, say they are excessive. Aldrich v. Palmer, 24 Cal. 513; Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603; Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063; Skelton v. Pacific Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 507; 74 Pac. 13. Compensatory, and not exemplary or vindictive, damages may be allowed, and these must be confined to the pecuniary loss suffered, including comfort, society, etc., of the deceased. Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303. Exemplary damages cannot be allowed. Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139. The statute of 1862 expressly provided that the jury might give exemplary damages, and this provision was carried into the first edition of the code (Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139; Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603; but damages cannot be recovered for grief, mental suffering, or sorrow. Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515; 18 Am. St. Rep. 248; 24 Pac. 303; Beeson v. Green Mountain Gold Mining Co., 57 Cal. 20. Evidence as to necessary medical attention is proper on the question of damages: Simoneau v. Pacific Electric Ry., 159 Cal. 494; 115 Pac. 320; but in order to recover such charges for medical and hospital services rendered, they must have been paid. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. In order that funeral expenses may be recovered, they must be pleaded as special damages. Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153. In all actions for injuries causing death, the damages are limited to the pecuniary loss suffered, by the person or persons for whose benefit the right of action is given, from the death or injury of the victim. Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. Pecuniary damages are limited to the probable value of the life of the deceased to relatives. Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510; 29 Am. St. Rep. 143; 17 L. R. A. 71; 30 Pac. 603; Pepper v. Southern Pacific Co., 105 Cal. 389; 38 Pac. 974; Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388; 47 Pac. 139. The pecuniary interest of children in the lives of their parents does not necessarily end with their attaining majority; the jury must take into consideration and allow for the probable loss of any benefit of pecuniary value which the children would probably receive from their parents at the age of majority. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063; Valente v. Sierra Railway Co., 158 Cal. 412; 111 Pac. 95; Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. Children have a right to demand from their father a comfortable support and a reasonably good education until of sufficient age to maintain themselves; and where the father, whilst able to perform this duty, loses his life through the negligence of another, it was the intention of the statute to compel the offending party to make fair and just compensation for the loss; to accomplish that end, a larger sum would be required for a numerous family than for one of but one or two persons; in like manner, if there is a surviving widow, who, if her husband were alive, would be entitled to support from him, appropriate to his circumstances and standing in life, she would be entitled to be fairly and justly compensated for the loss, in this respect, which she suffered by his death. Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323. In determining the amount of damages to the children, caused by the death of the parent, the jury may take into consideration the value of nurture and instruction, moral and physical and intellectual training, which a parent gives to children. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063. The proof of the value of the deceased as a wage-earner is not the only element of damages to be considered by the jury. Skelton v. Pacific Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 507; 74 Pac. 13. Evidence of the business and education of the decedent, and of his habits of sobriety and economy, are also admissible. Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

The theory of this section is, that those who are entitled to recover damages have a pecuniary interest in the life of the person killed, and hence the amount of recovery is limited to the value of that interest; but "pecuniary interest" does not mean a precise sum in money, measured and demonstrated by evidence. Ruppel v. United Railroads, 1 Cal. App. 666; 82 Pac. 1073. A life annuity in favor of the deceased is not a measure of damages. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063. If the facts are clear and undisputed, and no other inference than that of negligence can be drawn from them, the court may draw the inference, and grant a nonsuit, where the plaintiff is guilty of contributory negligence. Shade v. Bay Counties Power Co., 152 Cal. 10; 92 Pac. 62. If liability for an injury caused by blasting depends upon negligence, the person who has an independent contract for the blasting is liable for the negligence, and not the party who let the contract. Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co., 152 Cal. 500; 14 Ann. Cas. 1159; 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 913; 93 Pac. 82. The plaintiff, in an action, in this state, to recover for an injury causing death in a foreign state, must allege and prove the law of such foreign state, giving a right of action for the death. Ryan v. North Alaska Salmon Co., 153 Cal. 438; 95 Pac. 862. The rule of damages is discussed in Durkee v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 388; 38 Am. Rep. 59; Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co., 3 Cal. App. 312; 84 Pac. 1010.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section is intended as a substitute for "An Act requiring compensation for causing death by wrongful act, neglect, or default." Stats. 1862, p. 447. The portion of that act relating to the time in which the action must be commenced is inserted in chapter III of the title relating to the time in which civil actions must be commenced. See Kramer v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 25 Cal. 435.

§ 378. Who may be joined as plaintiffs. All persons having an interest in the subject of the action, and in obtaining the relief demanded, may be joined as plaintiffs, except when otherwise provided in this title.

Co-tenants. Post, § 381.

Special partners. Civ. Code, § 2492.

Other parties, bringing in. Post, § 389.

Misjoinder and non-joinder of plaintiffs. Post, § 430.

Legislation § 378. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 12 (New York Code, § 117), the only change being to substitute the word "title" for "act."

Persons having interest, joined as plaintiffs. All persons in interest as plaintiffs should be joined as such (Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531); but no one can be both plaintiff and defendant; a party cannot have a right of action against himself as debtor or tort-feasor: Brown v. Mann, 71 Cal. 192; 12 Pac. 51; Byrne v. Byrne, 94 Cal. 576; 29 Pac. 1115; 30 Pac. 196. A person interested both as plaintiff and defendant must be made defendant; but this rule is dispensed with, where it is impracticable or very inconvenient, as in cases of joint associations composed of numerous individuals. Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531. Generally, several persons, who have a common interest in the subject-matter of the action, and the right to ask the same remedy against the defendant, may properly be joined as plaintiffs. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336; Toomey v. Knobloch, 8 Cal. App. 585; 97 Pac. 529. Several parties, having one common interest in the subject-matter of the action, may join as plaintiffs, although they claim under distinct titles and have different interests (Churchill v. Lauer, 84 Cal. 233; 24 Pac. 107); and several parties, all interested in the principal question raised, though they do not have a joint interest adverse to the defendant, may join as plaintiffs, particularly where such joinder will prevent a multiplicity of suits. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171. Several abutting property-owners, each with a distinct parcel of land, all watered successively by the same stream, may unite as plaintiffs in an action seeking the redress of a common grievance. Daly v. Ruddell, 137 Cal. 671; 70 Pac. 784; Los Robles Water Co. v. Stoneman, 146 Cal. 203; 79 Pac. 880; Barham v. Hostetter, 67 Cal. 272; 7 Pac. 689; Foreman v. Boyle, 88 Cal. 290; 26 Pac. 94. Tenants in common may maintain a joint action for the diversion of the waters of a ditch, such action being in the nature of an action for the abatement of a nuisance. Parke v. Kilham, 8 Cal. 77; 68 Am. Dec. 310; De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 149. In an action in trover, all parties in interest should be joined as plaintiffs, and failure so to join may be pleaded in abatement. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360. A trustee, to whom a mortgage has been transferred by the mortgagee to secure a debt, may be joined in an action to foreclose the mortgage. Cerf v. Ashley, 68 Cal. 419; 9 Pac. 658. Parties holding distinct water rights, regulated by a contract, jointly exercised by all, are properly united as plaintiffs in an action for the enforcement of such contractual rights (Daly v. Ruddell, 137 Cal. 671; 70 Pac. 784; Los Robles Water Co. v. Stoneman, 146 Cal. 203; 79 Pac. 880); but where several riparian owners of distinct parcels of land, which are supplied with water from the same source, join in an action to prevent the diversion of the waters, and also ask for damages severally to plaintiffs, the cause of action for damages to each of the plaintiffs, being several and individual, cannot be joined with the cause of action for an injunction, which is common to them all. Barham v. Hostetter, 67 Cal. 272; 7 Pac. 689; Foreman v. Boyle, 88 Cal. 290; 26 Pac. 94. An attorney in fact, not a trustee, is not a necessary party to a suit to represent his principal. Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 197. Where the plaintiff brings a suit upon a bill of lading, made to the plaintiff jointly with another, he has no separate cause of action. Mayo v. Stansbury, 3 Cal. 465. Where a purchase is made on a joint contract of two, one cannot sue for damages sustained by himself alone. McGilvery v. Moorhead, 3 Cal. 267. Under a lease made jointly by two parties, to a third party, by the terms of which each of the lessors was to receive an equal portion of the rent, both lessors are properly joined as plaintiffs, in an action to recover restitution and damages on a breach of the contract by the lessee. Treat v. Liddell, 10 Cal. 302. In an action to quiet title, brought by the vendor against his vendee, under a contract of sale, the right to purchase under which had not been forfeited at the time of the commencement of the action, a subsequent vendee, under another contract, is a necessary party to the complete determination or settlement of the question. Birch v. Cooper, 136 Cal. 636; 69 Pac. 420. Where a party agreed to pay the debt of another, a suit cannot be maintained by either the person to whom the debt was owing, or his assignee, neither having been a party to the agreement, nor assented to it, nor sought to connect themselves with it, until the commencement of the action. McLaren v. Hutchinson, 18 Cal. 80. Where the defendant is indebted to another person, and he to the plaintiff, and all parties agree that the defendant shall pay his indebtedness to the plaintiff, there is an equitable assignment of the debt, and the plaintiff may maintain an action thereon against the defendant. Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126. Where a business is destroyed by fire, through the negligence or wrongful act of the defendant, the owner of the building and the insuring company are properly joined as plaintiffs, although the owner alleges and seeks to recover special damages to his business by reason of such negligence or wrongful act, in which damage the insurer has no interest. Fairbanks v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 579; 47 Pac. 450; and see also People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171. When a citizen has been injured through the failure of a state officer to do his duty, the state is not a proper party in an action to recover damages for such injury. Nougues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65. Where the nonjoinder does not appear on the face of the complaint, it may be taken advantage of, either by the answer, or by the apportionment of the damages at the trial. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360. Where there is no showing of the impairment of substantial rights, a judgment will not be reversed for multifariousness and misjoinder. Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293; 34 Pac. 777; Shade v. Sisson Mill etc. Co., 115 Cal. 357; 47 Pac. 135; Daly v. Ruddell, 137 Cal. 671; 70 Pac. 784. In an action to cancel liens for street-work, the owners in severalty of separate lots may be joined as plaintiffs, this section expressly authorizing the joinder of plaintiffs, in one action, to accomplish a common purpose. Toomey v. Knobloch, 8 Cal. App. 585; 97 Pac. 529. In an action for the specific performance of a contract to purchase, brought by one of two purchasers, the other having received his share, the court, in the absence of a demurrer for nonjoinder, may grant a decree in favor of the plaintiff alone. Stevens v. Los Angeles Dock etc. Co., 20 Cal. App. 743; 130 Pac. 197.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. "Having an interest in the subject of the action." See § 367, ante, and notes. In an action of trover, all parties in interest should be joined. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360.

2. "Except when otherwise provided in this title." See the following notes.

3. "Assignees of things in action." See § 368, ante, and notes.

4. Executors, administrators, and trustees. See § 369, ante, and notes.

5. Married women. See §§ 370, 371, ante, and notes.

6. For infants and guardian. See § 372, ante, and notes.

7. Actions by parents in certain cases. See §§ 375, 376, ante, and notes.

8. Actions by heirs and personal representatives for death of person by wrongful act. See preceding section.

9. When one or more parties may sue or defend for all the parties in interest. See § 382, post.

10. Actions to quiet title. See § 738, post.

11. Parties having an interest. Who are proper parties to equity actions. Who are the proper and necessary parties to a suit in equity, is a subject of great practical importance, and oftentimes of no inconsiderable difficulty. It is the constant aim of a court of equity to do complete justice, by deciding upon and settling the rights of all parties interested in the subject of the suit, so as to make the performance of the decree of the court perfectly safe to those compelled to obey it, and to prevent further litigation. For this purpose, all persons materially interested, either legally or beneficially, in the subject-matter of the suit, ought generally to be made parties thereto, either as plaintiffs or defendants, so that there may be a complete decree, which shall bind them all. Mitford's Pleading, 6th Am. ed., p. 189; 1 Daniell's Chancery Pl. & Pr., p. 40; Story's Eq. Pl., § 72; People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 360, 361. The rule, as stated and illustrated in King v. Berry's Executors, 3 N. J. Eq. 52, is, that all persons legally or beneficially interested in the subject-matter and result of a suit must be parties; and to the same effect are the following cases: Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. 306; 7 L. Ed. 156; Caldwell v.

Taggart, 4 Pet. 190; 7 L. Ed. 828; Marshall v. Beverley, 5 Wheat. 313; 5 L. Ed. 97; Connecticut v. Pennsylvania, 5 Wheat. 424; 5 L. Ed. 125; Williams v. Russell, 19 Pick. 165; to which many others might be added. But to this general rule there are, according to the authorities, exceptions. Mitford's Pleading p. 190; Story's Eq. Pl., §§ 76, 76a. 76b, 76c; Wiser v. Blackly, 1 Johns. Ch. 437. These it is not necessary to notice in this place, as no question is presented requiring it. There is a distinction made in some of the authorities between the subject-matter of the suit and the object of the suit; and it has been said, that it is not all persons who have an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, but, in general, those only who have an interest in the object of the suit, who are ordinarily required to be made parties. Calvert on Parties, pp. 5, 6, 10, 11. The general rule on the subject may be stated to be, that all are necessary parties who have an interest in the subject-matter, which may be affected by the decree. Smith v. Trenton Delaware Falls Company, 4 N. J. Eq. 508; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 531. This rule is founded on the principle of preventing future litigation and avoiding a multiplicity of suits, by adjudicating upon the rights of all parties upon whom a decree may or ought to operate. But this rule requiring all in interest to be before the court, is one somewhat of convenience, and will not be rigidly enforced where its observance would be attended with great inconvenience, and answer no substantially beneficial purpose. It will be modified, or partially dispensed with, in the discretion of the court, as justice and the exigencies of the case may require. Having thus referred generally to the rule of courts of equity in relation to what persons ought to be made parties to a suit, we shall proceed directly to the consideration of the question in issue, that is to say, the objection that there is a misjoinder of parties defendants, and an improper union of causes of action, or in other words, that the complaint is fatally infected with the vice of multifariousness. A bill in equity is said to be multifarious when distinct and independent matters are joined therein; as, for example, the uniting of several matters perfectly distinct and unconnected against one defendant, or the demand of several matters of a distinct and independent nature against several defendants. But the case of each particular defendant must be entirely distinct and independent from that of the other defendants, or the objection cannot prevail; for, as said by Judge Story, "the case of one may be so entire as to be incapable of being prosecuted in several suits, and yet some other defendant may be a necessary party to some portion only of the case stated. In the latter case the objection of multifariousness could not be allowed to prevail. So it is not indispensable that all the parties should have an interest in all the matters contained in the suit; it will be sufficient if each party has an interest in some matters in the suit, and they are connected with the others." Story's Eq. Pl., §§ 271, 271a. The same authority lays it down, that "to support the objection of multifariousness, because the bill contains different causes of suit against the same person, two things must concur: first, the different grounds of suit must be wholly distinct; secondly, each ground must be sufficient, as stated, to sustain a bill. If the grounds be not entirely distinct and unconnected, if they arise out of one and the same transaction, or series of transactions, forming one course of dealing, and all tending to one end, if one connected story can be told of the whole, the objection does not apply." Id., § 271b. When the point in issue is a matter of common interest among all the parties to the suit, though the interests of the several defendants are otherwise unconnected, still they may be joined. In Salvidge v. Hyde, 5 Madd. 138, Sir John Leach, vice-chancellor, said: "If the objects of the suit be single, but it happens that different persons have separate interests, indistinct questions which arise out of the single object, it necessarily follows that such different persons must be brought before the court, in order that the suit may conclude the whole subject." In Boyd v. Hoyt, 5 Paige Ch. 78, Mr. Chancellor Walworth laid down the same doctrine, in substantially the language used by Sir John Leach in Salvidge v. Hyde; and Mr. Daniell, in the first volume of his excellent work on Pleading and Practice in the High Court of Chancery, at page 386, says, in reference to the doctrine held in Salvidge v. Hyde, there is no doubt that the learned judge stated the principle correctly, though in the application of it he went, in the opinion of Lord Eldon, too far. 1 Jac. 151. In Whaley v. Dawson, 2 Sch. & Lef. 370, Lord Redesdale observed, that, in the English cases, where demurrers, because the plaintiff demanded in his bill matters of distinct natures against several defendants not connected in interest, have been overruled, there has been a general right in the plaintiff covering the whole case, although the rights of the defendants may have been distinct. In such cases the court proceeds on the ground of preventing multiplicity of suits, when one general right is claimed by the plaintiff against all the defendants; and so in Dimmock v. Bixby, 20 Pick. 368, the court held that where one general right is claimed by the plaintiff, although the defendants may have separate and distinct rights, the bill of complaint is not multifarious. In the elaborate case of Campbell v. Mackay, 1 Myl. & C. 603, Lord Cottenham held that where the plaintiffs have a common interest against all the defendants in a suit, as to one or more of the questions raised by it, so as to make them all necessary parties for the purpose of enforcing that common interest, the circumstance of the defendants being subject to distinct liabilities, in respect to different branches of the subject-matter, will not render the bill multifarious. In the same case his lordship observed that it was utterly impossible, upon the authorities, to lay down any rule or abstract proposition as to what constitutes multifariousness which can be made universally applicable. The only way, he said, of reconciling the authorities upon the subject is by adverting to the fact, that, although the books speak generally of demurrers for multifariousness, yet, in truth, such demurrers may be divided into two kinds, one of which, properly speaking, is on account of a misjoinder of causes of action, that is to say, uniting claims of so different a character that the court will not permit them to be litigated in one record, even though the plaintiff and defendants may be parties to the whole transactions which form the subject of the suit. The other of which, as applied to a bill, is, that a party is brought as a defendant upon a record with a large portion of which, and with the case made by it, he has no connection whatever. A demurrer for such cause is an objection that the complaint sets forth matters which are multifarious, and the real cause of objection is, as illustrated by the old form of demurrer, that it puts the parties to great and useless expense; an objection which has no application in a case of mere misjoinder of parties. Upon this subject, Judge Story says: "In the former class of cases, where there is a joinder of distinct claims between the same parties, it has never been held, as a distinct proposition, that they cannot be united, and that the bill is of course demurrable for that cause alone, notwithstanding the claims are of a similar nature, involving similar principles and results, and may, therefore, without inconvenience, be heard and adjudged together. If that proposition were to be established and carried to its full extent, it would go to prevent the uniting of several instruments in one bill, although the parties were liable in respect to each, and the same parties were interested in the property which was the subject of each"; and, after giving an example in illustration of the inconvenience of an opposite doctrine, he continues: "Such a rule, if established in equity, would be very mischievous and oppressive in practice, and no possible advantage could be gained by it. It would be a multiplication of suits in cases where it could answer no assignable purpose but to have the subject-matter split into a variety of separate bills"; and further, he denies that such a rule has been established, but says, on the contrary, a different doctrine has been maintained, which is supported by the most satisfactory authority (Story's Eq. Pl., §§ 531, 532); and he states, in conclusion, the result of the principles of the cases on the subject to be, that, where there is a common liability in the defendants, and a common interest in the plaintiffs, different claims to property, at least if the subjects are such as may without inconvenience be joined, may be united in one and the same suit; and further, that, where the interests of the plaintiffs are the same, although the defendants may not have a coextensive common interest, but their interests may be derived under different instruments, if the general object of the bill will be promoted by their being united in a single suit, the court will not hesitate to sustain the bill against all of them. Ibid., §§ 533, 534; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 426.

12. Parties interested in annulling patent. Persons not owning a joint interest in the real estate, yet if they have a common interest in annulling a patent therefor, they may be joined as plaintiffs. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 352; see also People v. Stratton, 25 Cal. 244.

13. Action by assignee of equitable title for specific performance. Where A contracts for the conveyance of certain lands to B, the assignees of B, who had the equitable title, may jointly maintain an action against A for a specific performance. Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 177.

14. Joint action by several holders of mechanics' liens. Several parties, holding mechanics' liens, may be joined for the enforcement of the liens, even though they have no common interest together. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 502.

15. Agents, action by. Generally, agents cannot maintain action in their own name for causes arising out of the subject-matter of the agency. Lineker v. Ayeshford, 1 Cal. 75; Phillips v. Henshaw, 5 Cal. 509. But, if a note is payable to a person, as agent of another, yet he may sue in his own name at law. Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 515. If two agents are employed to do a certain business, each agent may, in some cases, maintain a separate action for his expenses. Conner v. Hutchinson, 12 Cal. 127.

16. Principals, when they may sue in their own names on contracts made by their agents. See Ruiz v. Norton, 4 Cal. 359; Brooks v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 482; Thurn v. Alta Telegraph Co., 15 Cal. 472; Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 462; 58 Am. Dec. 415.

17. Assignees. Generally an assignee may bring an action in his own name. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 98; 73 Am. Dec. 522. If the assignment was absolute of a whole demand, although he only acquired a portion thereof, yet the assignee may sue for the whole debt. Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150. But the assignment of a portion of a debt does not constitute the assignee a joint owner in the whole debt, and he need not necessarily be joined as a party in an action to recover the debt. Leese v. Sherwood, 21 Cal. 152.

18. Assignment of contract as security for debt, etc. "An assignment of a contract as a security for a debt, and also in consideration of a covenant not to sue upon the debt, entitles the assignee to sue on the contract in his own name." Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310 (syllabus); see also Gray v. Garrison, 9 Cal. 325. When assignee of a judgment may sue on appeal bond. See Moses v. Thorne, 6 Cal. 88.

19. Indorsers and indorsees. The holder of a non-negotiable note may maintain an action against the person assigning the same to him, and also against every one from whose hands the note has passed by assignment. Hamilton v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 128. If a new promise has been made to a payee, a subsequent indorsee succeeds to the rights of the payee, and may maintain an action upon it. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

20. Joint contracts, bills of lading, and leases. As to joint contracts, both joint contractors must be joined as plaintiffs in an action thereon, notwithstanding only one of the contractors has sustained damage. See McGilvery v. Moorhead, 3 Cal. 267. A suit being brought upon a bill of lading made to the plaintiff jointly with another party. Held: the plaintiff had no separate cause of action. Mayo v. Stansbury, 3 Cal. 465. Also, as to joint leases, see Treat v. Liddell, 10 Cal. 302.

21. Actions by or against counties. See Pol. Code, §§ 4000, 4003, and 4452, and notes. See also People v. Myers, 15 Cal. 33; Mendocino County v. Lamar, 30 Cal. 627; Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; Placer County v. Astin, 8 Cal. 305; Price v. Sacramento County, 6 Cal. 254; Board of Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66; Solano County v. Neville, 27 Cal. 468; Sharp v. Contra Costa County, 34 Cal. 284.

22. Ejectment suits. "All persons having an interest in the subject of the action," etc. Actions of ejectment must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33. See also Seaward v. Malotte, 15 Cal. 304; Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183; Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361; Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 162; 81 Am. Dec. 108. If the action is brought for the community property of husband and wife, the action should be by the husband alone. Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533. An heir at law can maintain the action without entry upon the land. See Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87; see also Estate of Woodworth, 31 Cal. 604; Updegraff v. Trask, 18 Cal. 458.

23. Non-resident alien. A non-resident alien may be plaintiff in an action of ejectment. State v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 165.

24. Party to a fraud. A party to a fraud cannot maintain an action thereon. Depuy v. Williams, 26 Cal. 313.

25. Partners. Actions against each other. One partner cannot sue the other in an action at law. The remedy is by bill in equity for a dissolution and an account. Barnstead v. Empire Mining Co., 5 Cal. 299; Stone v. Fouse, 3 Cal. 292; Russell v. Ford, 2 Cal. 86; see also Buckley v. Carlisle, 2 Cal. 420.

26. Church, who represents in an action. Priest may have power to sue for the church. See Santillan v. Moses, 1 Cal. 94.

27. The state may be a party. Civil actions. See State v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 532. A private person cannot bring a suit for private wrongs in the name of the state. See People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210. The state cannot be plaintiff in certain actions, where it has no interest. See People v. Stratton, 25 Cal. 244.

28. Who may bring action to annul patents to mines. The state, and persons who have a right to mine on the land, under the mining laws of this state, may be joined as plaintiffs in an action to annul a patent for land sold illegally. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 352; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420; see also, however, People v. Stratton, 25 Cal. 244.

29. State cannot be sued. Except as may be authorized by some statute. People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256.

30. Administrators, when proper parties. In an action to recover judgment on a promissory note, the suggestion of the death of the defendant, and the substitution of his administrator, and the continuance of the suit against him, subject the proceedings to such rules of the Probate Act as are applicable to proceedings for the collection of claims against an estate of a deceased person. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

31. Administrators, when parties. Though the defendant in such an action be described in the caption of the complaint as administrator, yet the facts show that it is not sought to charge him as administrator, and no relief is sought against the estate. Held: that the objection that he is sued in his representative capacity is untenable. People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141.

32. Same person interested both as plaintiff and defendant. Person being payee of a note and mortgage, and also payer of the same jointly with others, may sue the other joint payers. Where thirteen persons made a joint and several promissory note, payable to three of their number, and all joined in the execution of a mortgage to secure the payment of the note, the plaintiffs being both payers and payees in the note, and the mortgagors and mortgagees in the mortgage, and, subsequently, the payees of the note brought suit against the other makers, and for a foreclosure of the mortgage. Held: That the suit was properly brought, and plaintiffs were entitled to a judgment of foreclosure. McDowell v. Jacobs, 10 Cal. 387.

33. Actions to foreclose mortgages. The plaintiff had the right to go into equity and foreclose the mortgage given to the principal to secure the note, if he was really interested in the subject-matter. Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 515.

34. Mortgage given to secure separate debts of several persons as mortgagees. "Where a mortgage is given to secure the separate debts of several persons as mortgagees, it is a several security, and may be enforced by each creditor, as in case of a separate mortgage. But when other parties are interested in the property, the court will require them to be brought in, before ordering a sale or foreclosure." Tyler v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 212 (syllabus).

35. Actions by assignees to foreclose mortgage. Where an assignment of a note and mortgage has been made to plaintiffs, to indemnify them as sureties on a bail bond for the assignor, and where suit is then pending on such bond, it is proper for them as such assignees, to institute suit on the note and mortgage; and a decree of foreclosure in such case, with directions to pay the money into court, to await the further decree of the court, is proper, or at least there is no error in such a decree to the prejudice of the defendants. Hunter v. Levan, 11 Cal. 11.

36. Stranger in interest. A mere stranger, who voluntarily pays money due on a mortgage, and fails to take an assignment thereof, but allows it to be canceled and discharged, cannot afterwards come into equity, and, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake of fact, have the mortgage reinstated and himself substituted in the place of the mortgagee. Guy v. Du Uprey, 16 Cal. 195; 76 Am. Dec. 518.

37. Parties plaintiff in suit on injunction bond. If several parties are severally in possession of and cultivating in separate parcels a tract of land, and are sued jointly in ejectment to recover possession of the whole tract, and an injunction is obtained, restraining them jointly from taking off the crops, these parties cannot maintain a joint action for damages on the injunction bond, provided their damages are not joint. They can maintain a joint action for such damages, only, as are joint, such as attorneys' fees. Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 34.

38. Action on injunction bond for several damages. The fact that the plaintiff brings a joint action against several persons as trespassers, and obtains an injunction against them jointly, does not estop him, in an action brought against him on the injunction bond, from showing that the damages were several, and from claiming that they cannot maintain a joint action for several damages. Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 34.

39. Party plaintiff in action for deceit. An action for deceit in the sale of land, to which the grantor had no title, should be brought by all the grantees jointly, unless there has been a conveyance of the cause of action to the plaintiff. A conveyance by one of the grantees to the others, of his interest in the land, does not assign the cause of action for deceit, so as to enable the assignees to sue for the deceit in their names. Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183.

40. Plaintiffs in suit upon covenants in a deed. All the grantees should join as plaintiffs in an action upon either a direct or implied covenant in a deed, that the grantor has not sold or encumbered the land, or that he is seised of and has a right to convey the same. A deed of the land by one of the grantees to another, does not convey to him the cause of action upon such covenant. Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183.

41. Parties having a part-interest must be joined. All the parties having a part-interest in the subject-matter should be joined as plaintiffs, but the defect must be taken advantage of by answer or apportionment of damages, where it does not appear on the face of the complaint. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360.

42. Constructive parties in action upon bond. In an action upon a bond or written undertaking, there can be no constructive parties jointly liable with the proper obligors. Lindsay v. Flint, 4 Cal. 88.

§ 379. Who may be joined as defendants. Any person may be made a defendant who has or claims an interest in the controversy adverse to the plaintiff, or who is a necessary party to a complete determination or settlement of the question involved therein. And in an action to determine the title or right of possession to real property which, at the time of the commencement of the action, is in the possession of a tenant, the landlord may be joined as a party defendant.

Joining landlord. Civ. Code, § 1949.
Parties to foreclosure. Post, § 726.
Corporation stockholders. Const., art. xii, §§ 3, 4; Civ. Code, § 322.
Associates, suing by common name. Post, § 388.
Quieting title. See post, § 738.
Executors, unqualified, need not be joined. Post, § 1587.
Fresh parties, bringing in. Post, § 389.
Service on one defendant out of several, effect of. Post, § 414.
State, suits against. Suits may be brought against state in such manner and in such courts as shall be directed by law. Const., art. xx, § 6.

Legislation § 379. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 13 (New York Code, § 113), which read: "Any person may be made a defendant, who has or claims an interest in the controversy, adverse to the plaintiff, or who is a necessary party to a complete determination or settlement of the question involved therein."

Parties having interest, joined as defendants. The former rule in equity is substantially adopted in this section, under which the parties interested not only in the cause of action, but also in the relief to be obtained, or who would be affected by the granting or withholding of such relief, were proper parties. Shakespear v. Smith, 77 Cal. 638; 11 Am. St. Rep. 327; 20 Pac. 294; Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420. The "controversy" referred to in this section is the claim for relief, set forth in the complaint, made by the plaintiff against the defendant. Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935. All persons interested in the subject-matter of the litigation, adverse to the plaintiff, should be made parties defendant. Shakespear v. Smith, 77 Cal. 638; 11 Am. St. Rep. 327; 20 Pac. 294; Randall v. Duff, 79 Cal. 115; 3 L. R. A. 754; 19 Pac. 532; 21 Pac. 610; Bireh v. Cooper, 136 Cal. 636; 69 Pac. 420. Persons who cannot be affected by the judgment are not proper parties (Smith v. Lawrence, 38 Cal. 24; 99 Am. Dec. 344); but accommodation grantees are necessary parties defendant, and they have a right to be heard at law in their own defense, before a court of chancery can pronounce definitely on their claims. Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212. The owner of an equitable right to a part of the proceeds of a note is not a necessary party to an action on the note. Smith v. Woods, 164 Cal. 291; 128 Pac. 748. An action at law for damages cannot be maintained against several defendants jointly, where each acted independently of the others, and there was no concert or unity of design among them. Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 87 Cal. 430; 22 Am. St. Rep. 254; 25 Pac. 550; Lang v. Lilley and Thurston Co., 20 Cal. App. 223; 128 Pac. 1028. Where a wife brings an action to quiet title to land, to remove a cloud created by her husband's deed, the grantee of the husband is the only necessary party defendant: the holders of a mortgage executed by such grantee are not. Peralta v. Simon, 5 Cal. 313. An administrator has no interest in, nor is he a proper party to, suits to determine controversies between the different heirs as to their rights of inheritance. Estate of Healy, 137 Cal. 474; 70 Pac. 455; Estate of Wright, 49 Cal. 550; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387; Roach v. Coffey, 73 Cal. 281; 14 Pac. 840; Goldtree v. Thompson, 83 Cal. 420; 23 Pac. 383; Jones v. Lamont, 118 Cal. 499; 62 Am. St. Rep. 251; 50 Pac. 766; McCabe v. Healy, 138 Cal. 81; 70 Pac. 1008. The administrator of a deceased debtor or promisor may be joined with survivors jointly liable with the decedent to the plaintiff (Lawrence v. Doolan, 68 Cal. 309; 5 Pac. 484; 9 Pac. 159); and the administrator of a deceased executor may be joined with the surviving executor in an action to recover attorneys' fees for services rendered the executors jointly (Briggs v. Breen, 123 Cal. 657; 56 Pac. 633, 886); but before the adoption of the codes it was otherwise. Humphreys v. Crane, 5 Cal. 173. Adverse claimants to the rent of property are all necessary parties to an action by a tenant to obtain a decision as to who is entitled to receive the rent. McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592. An attorney, charged with being a party to a fraud in obtaining judgment for his client, is properly joined with his client in a suit to set aside the judgment. Crane v. Hirshfelder, 17 Cal. 467. Contractors under an independent contract are alone responsible for injuries occurring in the progress of the work, before completion and acceptance. Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469; 68 Am. Dec. 345. In an action to foreclose a lien on lots assessed for street-work, the contractor may properly join as defendants, in one action, all the owners in common of several lots (Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Crist, 21 Cal. App. 1; 130 Pac. 435); in an action to cancel a deed of trust, the beneficiaries are not necessary parties defendant: their interest is represented by the trustee. Watkins v. Bryant, 91 Cal. 492; 27 Pac. 775. Judgment must be rendered severally, not jointly: a judgment against a surviving obligor must be payable de bonis propriis, and a judgment against an administrator must be payable de bonis testatoris, in due course of administration. Bank of Stockton v. Howland, 42 Cal. 129; Briggs v. Breen, 123 Cal. 657; 56 Pac. 633, 886. Two defendants, whose liability is based upon different theories, cannot be joined. Hannon v. Nuevo Land Co., 14 Cal. App. 700; 112 Pac. 1103. One of the promisors on a bond, joint and several in form, may be sued separately thereon. Goff v. Ladd, 161 Cal. 257; 118 Pac. 792. Stockholders may be made parties, and several judgments may be entered against those served, or who appear. Turner v. Fidelity Loan Concern, 2 Cal. App. 122; 83 Pac. 62, 70. All stockholders, including a corporation stockholder, who were such when the debt of a corporation was incurred, may be joined as parties defendant. Kiefhaber Lumber Co. v. Newport Lumber Co., 15 Cal. App. 37; 113 Pac. 691. If stockholders, in behalf of the corporation and other stockholders, sue the corporation for acts complained of, that could not have been consummated otherwise than by the aid of the directors, such directors are proper parties defendant. Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 353; 119 Pac. 941. A temporary injunction, restraining the payment of dividends on stock in a corporation, or enjoining the stockholders from voting for the election of directors, will not be granted, unless the stockholders whose rights are affected are made parties to the action. Willis v. Lauridson, 161 Cal. 106; 118 Pac. 530.

Parties necessary to a complete determination. An executor may be joined with the administrator of a deceased executor, in an action to recover attorneys' fees for services rendered to the executors jointly. Briggs v. Breen, 123 Cal. 657; 56 Pac. 633, 886. Fictitious depositaries of title are necessary parties defendant, and they have a right to be heard at law in their own defense, before a court of chancery can pronounce definitely on their claims. Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212. An assignee in insolvency is a necessary party in an action to recover the possession of property, and to set aside a conveyance thereof, alleged to have been made by the judgment debtor in fraud of the creditors. Pfister v. Dascey, 65 Cal. 403; 4 Pac. 393. In an action for the rescission of a sale and conveyance of property to trustees for a corporation, on the ground of fraud, the joinder of an English stockholder, as a plaintiff, with the corporation defrauded, is not a fatal misjoinder, where he holds bonds and stocks of the corporation, that may have to be canceled or transferred as a part of the relief asked. California Farm etc. Co. v. Schiappa-Pietra, 151 Cal. 732; 91 Pac. 593. The grantor is a proper but not a necessary party defendant in an action to subject to the lien of a judgment the property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed. Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765. A guardian is not a proper party in an action affecting only the ward's interest. O'Shea v. Wilkinson, 95 Cal. 454; 30 Pac. 588. The guardian appears in the action, simply to manage and take care of the interests of the infant, and is no more a party to the action than the attorney who appears for one who has attained his majority. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Justice v. Ott, 87 Cal. 530; 25 Pac. 691; O'Shea v. Wilkinson, 95 Cal. 454; 30 Pac. 588. The heirs of a deceased mortgagor are not necessary parties to an action to foreclose the mortgage. Finger v. McCaughey, 119 Cal. 59; 51 Pac. 13; Cunningham v. Ashley, 45 Cal. 485; De Halpin v. Oxarart, 58 Cal. 101; Bayly v. Muehe, 65 Cal. 345; 3 Pac. 467; 4 Pac. 486; Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; 23 Pac. 700; Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. Several tort-feasors, not acting in concert or by unity of design, are not liable to a joint action for damages, although the consequences of the several torts have united to produce an injury to the plaintiff, but a joint action may be maintained to restrain them all from continuing the wrong. Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 87 Cal. 430; 22 Am. St. Rep. 254; 25 Pac. 550; People v. Gold Run etc. Min. Co., 66 Cal. 138; 56 Am. Rep. 80; 4 Pac. 1152. To restrain the issuance of bonds by a corporation, it is necessary that some of the persons to whom the bonds are to be issued shall be made parties. Hutchinson v. Burr, 12 Cal. 103; Patterson v. Board of Supervisors, 12 Cal. 105. To restrain the opening of a road by the road-overseer of the district, the board of supervisors are properly joined as defendants with the road-overseer, where the complaint alleges that there never has been any road or highway over or across the premises, and that one of the defendants, who is the road-overseer, and who is insolvent, instigated and abetted by the other defendants, who are the board of supervisors, had trespassed upon the plaintiff's premises, etc., for the purpose of constructing the road. Myers v. Daubenbiss, 84 Cal. 1; 23 Pac. 1027. The real owner of the equity of redemption is a necessary party, in an action to foreclose a fraudulent mortgage. Randall v. Duff, 79 Cal. 115; 3 L. R. A. 754; 19 Pac. 532; 21 Pac. 610. Where a husband is sued in an action of partition of land claimed as the homestead, the wife is a necessary party. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 329; 87 Am. Dec. 81. Where H. & Co. was sued as a partnership, but there was a failure to prove that others were connected with H. in the transaction, "& Co." may be treated as surplusage, and the action proceed against H. alone. Mulliken v. Hull, 5 Cal. 245. The non-joinder of a secret partner, whose relation to the firm was not known to the plaintiff, cannot be objected to by the defendant. Tomlinson v. Spencer, 5 Cal. 291. Where producers contract to sell their product to an association, which brings an action for an accounting, and each producer is equitably interested in the fund derived from a sale of the season's product held by the plaintiff for distribution, a demurrer for misjoinder of causes and parties defendant is properly overruled. California Raisin Growers' Ass'n v. Abbott, 160 Cal. 601; 117 Pac. 767. Where a consignment of merchandise was made to two defendants as partners, and, after a dissolution of the partnership, two sales of a portion of the goods were made, one by each, and each received the purchase-money, the partnership continues for the purpose of fulfilling engagements, and the defendants are jointly liable. Johnson v. Totten, 3 Cal. 343; 58 Am. Dec. 412. In an action for a dissolution and accounting, all persons having an interest in the partnership are necessary parties (Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490; Young v. Hoglan, 52 Cal. 466; Wright v. Ward, 65 Cal. 525; 4 Pac. 534); and the assignee of a partner is a necessary party to such action, because no complete determination of the controversy can be had without his presence. Cuyamaca Granite Co. v. Pacific Paving Co., 93 Cal. 252; 30 Pac. 525; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456. Where two persons purchased partnership property from one of two partners, who had taken forcible possession, the other partner cannot maintain a joint action against the partner selling and the purchasers. Mason v. Tipton, 4 Cal. 276. A patentee is a necessary party in an action to avoid or set aside a patent for fraud in its procurement, and his right cannot be impaired or determined in an action between third parties. Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 279. In an action against a trustee, for an accounting, the beneficiaries are necessary parties, to protect the trustee against further litigation. Alison v. Goldtree, 117 Cal. 545; 49 Pac. 571. There is a broad distinction between actions brought in opposition to trusts and those brought to enforce them; in the former, the beneficiaries are not necessary parties; in the latter, they are. Watkins v. Bryant, 91 Cal. 492; 27 Pac. 775. In an action for the rescission of a sale and conveyance of property to trustees for a corporation, the trustees, if they hold title to the property at the beginning of the action, are properly joined as parties defendant; they do not become improper parties because, pending the action, they part with their interest. California Farm etc. Co. v. Schiappa-Pietra, 151 Cal. 732; 91 Pac. 593. Where an intestate had violated a contract, made in his lifetime, to leave a will in favor of his nephew, who had fully performed the contract on his part, and the nephew brings an action to enforce a constructive trust against the heirs, the administrator has no interest in the litigation, and is not a necessary party. McCabe v. Healy, 138 Cal. 81; 70 Pac. 1008. A subsequent vendee is a necessary party to an action by his vendor against the first vendee to quiet title to land. Birch v. Cooper, 136 Cal. 636; 69 Pac. 420. The vendee of land, purchasing after the termination of a lease thereon, is a proper party defendant in an action by the lessee against the lessor-vendor to recover for the value of improvements made, where the complaint asks to have the amount declared a lien on the land, and the land sold in satisfaction thereof. Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935. A promise to pay for improvements is personal, and does not run with the land (Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935); and such agreement does not bind the assignee of the lessor of land, where the breach of covenant took place before he took possession. Bailey v. Richardson, 66 Cal. 416; 5 Pac. 910. In the absence of an agreement in the lease to that effect, the tenant has no lien on the land for improvements placed thereon, during the term of his lease, under an agreement with his landlord to pay for the same at the expiration of the lease. Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935. In a judgment creditors' suit upon a stockholder's subscription, all the stockholders should be made parties, so far as practicable, unless some valid excuse is shown for not bringing them in. Turner v. Fidelity Loan Concern, 2 Cal. App. 122; 83 Pac. 62, 70. Where the complaint charged that a defendant was indebted to the plaintiffs, and had combined with another to defraud them, such defendant is a necessary party. Lucas v. Payne, 7 Cal. 92. In the absence of any provision by the legislature, the state cannot be sued (People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256); and it is not a necessary party to a suit by a citizen, who claims to have been injured by the alleged failure of a state officer to do his duty. Nougues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65.

Defendant in action to determine title or right of possession to real property. Before the adoption of this section, if the landlord was joined with his tenant, and the evidence at the trial did not show that he was in possession of any part of the premises, he was entitled to a nonsuit (Hussman v. Wilke, 50 Cal. 250); but the court had power to substitute the landlord for the tenant in possession, in an action in ejectment, after notice and motion for that purpose. Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572; 11 Pac. 463. The tenant having notified the landlord, as required by the Civil Code, of the pendency of an action, and permitted him to appear and defend in the tenant's name, the latter cannot interfere with any of the subsequent proceedings to the landlord's injury. Valentine v. Mahoney, 37 Cal. 389. The landlord and a tenant in possession are proper parties defendant. Easton v. O'Reilly, 63 Cal. 305; Oakland Gas Light Co. v. Dameron, 67 Cal. 663; 8 Pac. 595.

How judgment may be. See note post, §§ 578, 579.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Parties united in interest. All parties united in interest should be joined See § 382, post.

2. Tenants in common. One or more may be defendants. See § 384, post; also § 378, ante, note. See also § 382, post.

3. When one party may defend for all. See § 382, post.

4. Married women. See § 370, ante.

5. Executor, administrator, etc. See § 369, ante.

6. Infants, guardians, etc. See § 372, ante.

7. Trustees of express trust. See § 369, ante.

8. Partners. May be sued in firm name. § 388, post.

9. Actions to quiet title. See § 738, post.

10. Personal representatives and successors in interest. See § 385, post.

11. Parties severally liable upon the same obligation. See § 383, post.

12. If a necessary party will not consent to be joined as plaintiff, he may be made defendant. See § 382, post.

13. Substitution of another party as defendant. See § 386, post. See also § 389, post, party desiring to be made a defendant.

14. Interveners. See § 387, post.

15. Action against state. The state cannot be sued. People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256.

16. Construction of section as to ejectment suits. Former law as to landlord and tenant, when parties to ejectment suit modified. The last sentence, "And in an action to determine the title or right of possession to real property, which, at the time of the commencement of the action, is in the possession of a tenant, the landlord may be joined as a party defendant," was added to avoid the rule laid down in Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488, that, "when the premises are in possession of a tenant, the tenant is, and the landlord is not, a proper party defendant." All who have given the subject any consideration will concede that the plaintiff ought to have the right to make the landlord a party to the action, and to bind him by the judgment, otherwise he would, in every such case, be driven to two actions to determine what could as well be settled in one. The additional clause changes, to a great extent, the construction heretofore given to this section (Practice Act, § 13) by our courts. The reasons for the change are apparent, and attention has long since been called to its necessity by our supreme court. In Valentine v. Mahoney, 37 Cal. 393, the court say: "It was decided at an early day in this court, that the provision of this section, that 'any person may be made a defendant who has or claims an interest in the controversy adverse to the plaintiff,' was not applicable to actions of ejectment (Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 270; see also Hawkins v. Rechert, 28 Cal. 534), and that construction has prevailed to the present time. But it is readily seen that in all cases in which the defendant is holding under a lease, and the lessor's title is in issue, it is proper, if not necessary, that the latter should have an opportunity to participate in the defense, for no one is as competent to present and defend his title as he. The landlord, having been in possession, and having transferred it to the tenant, ought not to be deprived of the possession at the expiration of the term by proceedings in which he could take no part. And, on the other hand, the party holding the true title might be kept out of possession for years, should the person claiming the adverse title lease the premises to different persons for such short terms that the tenancy of any one would expire before a suit against him could be prosecuted to final judgment. But this construction of that section has been too long maintained to be departed from by the courts, and if a change in the rule is desirable or necessary, it must come from the legislature. Considerations of the character alluded to have induced the courts to give some regard to the rights and position of the landlord, and it is held that when the tenant has notified the landlord of the pendency of the action, and has permitted him to appear and defend in the tenant's name, the tenant cannot interfere with any subsequent proceedings to the prejudice of the landlord. See Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 619; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 156; Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488. In Dutton v. Warschauer, although the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Field was not expressly concurred in by Mr. Justice Cope and Mr. Justice Norton, it is apparent that the case is authority for the position above stated, from the fact that the tenant, who was the defendant, executed a release of errors, and that, notwithstanding this, the court, at the instance of the landlord of the defendant, reviewed the cause and reversed the judgment. If the landlord, though not nominally a party to the record, when once permitted by the tenant to appear and defend the action, can insist upon the right to conduct the defense from that point, this right cannot spring from the notice from the tenant to assume the burden of the defense, but proceeds from the fact that he will be affected by the judgment. The judgment is conclusive, both upon the landlord and tenant, in a subsequent action between them, involving the issue of eviction of the tenant by virtue of the judgment (Wheelock v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 309; Wheelock v. Warschauer, 34 Cal. 265); and this is another instance in which the judgment binds others than the parties to the record and their privies. A possible future controversy between the landlord and tenant was not the only nor the principal purpose in view in securing to the landlord the right to defend the action in the tenant's name, but it was, that the issue between the plaintiff's and the landlord's title might be litigated and determined." Valentine v. Mahoney, 37 Cal. 393. The change made materially modifies the decisions of the supreme court as to proper parties to an ejectment suit. Among the decisions thus modified, to some extent at least, are the following: Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70; 60 Am. Dec. 597; Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33; Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268; Waring v. Crow, 11 Cal. 366; Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200; Hawkins v. Reichert, 28 Cal. 535; Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 489; Valentine v. Mahoney, 37 Cal. 393. And this modification extends also to other cases. The rule of law laid down by the supreme court heretofore has been, that ejectment was a possessory action, and must be brought against the occupant; it determines no rights but those of possession at the time, and it matters not who has, or claims to have, the title of the premises. Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268; Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 148; Owen v. Fowler, 24 Cal. 192; Lyle v. Rollins, 25 Cal. 440; Hawkins v. Reichert, 28 Cal. 534; Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623.

17. Parties to a foreclosure suit. It has been held, in an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage, if the creditor, the debtor, and the title to the mortgaged premises are before the court, it has jurisdiction of the case, though there may be other holders of distinct liens who might have been made parties to the suit, and were omitted. Hayward v. Stearns, 39 Cal. 58.

18. A defendant in possession, not directly interested in the question in litigation between other parties to the action, should not be affected by the results of such litigation. Welton v. Palmer, 39 Cal. 456.

19. Foreclosure of mortgages. In actions to foreclose mortgages, all persons interested should be made parties; and as to who should be joined as defendants, see Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87; Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 559; 76 Am. Dec. 561; Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194; De Leon v. Higuera, 15 Cal. 483; Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307; Luning v. Brady, 10 Cal. 265; Hocker v. Reas, 18 Cal. 650; Bludworth v. Lake, 33 Cal. 255; Id., 33 Cal. 265; Carpentier v. Williamson, 25 Cal. 159; Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123; Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140; Skinner v. Buck, 29 Cal. 253; Eastman v. Turman, 24 Cal. 382; Heyman v. Lowell, 23 Cal. 106. All persons interested in the premises prior to a suit brought to foreclose a mortgage, or to enforce a mechanic's lien, whether purchasers, lienholders, devisees, remaindermen, reversioners, or encumbrancers, must be made parties, otherwise their rights will not be affected. Persons who acquire interests by conveyance or encumbrance after suit brought need not be made parties; and who are and who are not proper parties to a foreclosure suit, is carefully discussed in Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 547, 70 Am. Dec. 748, and authorities there cited. A tenant need not, from the mere fact of his tenancy, be made a party to the foreclosure suit. McDermott v. Burke, 16 Cal. 580.

20. Community property. Where the community property of husband and wife, or the separate property of the wife, is the subject of an action for foreclosure. See Kohner v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 578; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Marks v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 96; Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 197; see note to §§ 370, 371, ante.

21. Equitable actions. All persons interested legally or beneficially should be made parties. See Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420, commented on in note to § 378, ante.

22. Trustees and assignees. If a debtor assigns his property to trustees, to be by them sold, and proceeds divided pro rata among the creditors, one creditor cannot, after the property has been converted into money, maintain an action against the trustees for an accounting and for judgment for his pro rata share, without making the other creditors parties and the assignor a defendant. McPherson v. Parker, 30 Cal. 455; 89 Am. Dec. 129. Where A owed plaintiff, and conveyed his property to B, to be sold for his benefit, and drew an order, in favor of plaintiff, on B, who accepted it, and it was charged that B had subsequently conveyed a portion of the property to A without consideration, praying that B be compelled to execute the trust in favor of plaintiff. Held: that A was a proper and necessary party to the action. Lucas v. Payne, 7 Cal. 92. In an action by one of several cestuis que trust, to declare and enforce an implied trust in relation to land, all the persons who are entitled to, or claim to be entitled to, a portion of the trust estate, are proper parties defendant. Jenkins v. Frink, 30 Cal. 586; 89 Am. Dec. 134.

23. Assignees. The vendor, or the assignee of the rights and claims of the vendor, is not bound to know every assignee, though they were numerous. Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 286.

24. Parties to action between mining partners, and to dissolve mining partnership. Where two of three partners in a mine make a contract with a person not interested in the same, by which he becomes entitled to a share of their interests, and a like share of the profits of their interests, the two are the only necessary parties defendant in an action brought by the person they contract with, to determine his right to a share in the mine and a corresponding share of the profits on their interest. But in an action to take account of a mining partnership and dissolve the same, and sever the interests of the several partners, all those owning interests in the partnership are necessary parties. Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490 (syllabus).

25. Persons not made parties not affected by suit. The rights of a third party cannot be determined or impaired in any suit between two other parties. Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 114 Cal. 279.

26. Parties to action to enjoin issuance of county bonds, etc. In an action to enjoin the issuance of bonds, it may be necessary that some of the persons to whom the bonds are to be issued should be joined as defendants. See Hutchinson v. Burr, 12 Cal. 103; Patterson v. Board of Supervisors, 12 Cal. 105.

27. Attorney joined with his client, when. Where there has been fraud in obtaining a judgment, if the attorney is a party to the fraud he may be joined with his client as a defendant, in an action to set aside the judgment. Crane v. Hirshfelder, 17 Cal. 467.

28. Unknown defendant. When the name of the defendant is unknown, fictitious name may be used, etc. See § 474, post.

29. Real estate may be made a party in actions in rem, as for collection of taxes, etc. See People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 131.

30. Principal and agent, or attorney. When the principal, or when the agent, is liable. See Engels v. Heatly, 5 Cal. 136; Haskell v. Cornish, 13 Cal. 45; McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 13 Cal. 221; Shaver v. Ocean Mining Co., 21 Cal. 45; Love v. Sierra Nevada etc. Mining Co., 32 Cal. 639; 91 Am. Dec. 602; Hall v. Crandall, 29 Cal. 568; 89 Am. Dec. 64.

31. Actions against counties, supervisors, etc. See § 378, ante, and note. In an action against or for a county, it must be in the name of the county, not in the name of the people. People v. Myers, 15 Cal. 33; McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121; Price v. Sacramento County, 6 Cal. 254; see also, however, Gilman v. Contra Costa County, 8 Cal. 52; 68 Am. Dec. 290; Hastings v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 49. The right to sue a county is not confined to actions of tort, malfeasance, etc., but extends to all accounts after their presentation to the board of supervisors. People v. Board of Supervisors, 28 Cal. 431. But the account or claim, of whatever nature, must have been first presented to the supervisors, and rejected, before any action thereon can be maintained against the county. McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121. The agents of the county, and its officers, may be joined as defendants in certain cases. McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121. At least a majority of the members of the board of supervisors should be made defendants in an action brought to enjoin the board from purchasing property for the use of the county. Trinity County v. McCammon, 25 Cal. 119; see further, Political Code, § 4000.

32. Joinder of parties who have no joint interest. It seems that the joinder of two persons as co-defendants, who have no joint interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and are under no joint liability, will, unless the mistake be corrected in the court below, be error. Sterling v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 478.

33. Accommodation grantees and fictitious depositaries of title. When may be made parties. It was shown that some of the parties were mere accommodation grantees and fictitious depositaries of title; but it was held that they have a right to be heard at law in their own defense, before courts of chancery can pronounce definitely on their claims, however false they may appear, inter alia. Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212.

34. Action against one attaching creditor by a subsequent attaching creditor. Property was seized under two attachments, and was claimed by a third party. Both attaching creditors indemnified the sheriff, who proceeded to sell it, and paid the proceeds to the first attaching creditor, the amount not equaling his judgment; and afterwards the party claiming the property obtained judgment against the sheriff for the value of the property. Held: That the recourse must be had against the first attaching creditor, for whose benefit the property was sold. In such a case the attaching creditors do not stand in the position of joint trespassers, the seizure of the second being subject to the first. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227.

35. Actions against contractors by third parties for damages to property of such parties. Where parties employed architects, reputed to be skilled in their profession, to construct, at a designated point on a creek, a dam or embankment, of certain specific dimensions, capable of resisting all floods and freshets of the stream for the period of two years, and to deliver it completely by a given time, and before the embankment was completed it was broken by a sudden freshet, and a large body of water, confined by it, rushed down the channel of the stream, carrying away and destroying in its course the store of plaintiffs, with their stock of merchandise. The employers exercised no supervision, gave no directions, furnished no materials, nor had they accepted the work. Plaintiffs brought suit to recover the damage sustained by them against the employers and contractors. Held: that the latter alone were liable. The relation of the parties is that of independent contractors. The relation of master and servant, or superior and subordinate, did not exist between them, and therefore the doctrine respondeat superior does not apply to the case. Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469; 68 Am. Dec. 345.

36. Actions on contracts. In an action on a contract, only the contractors therein can be made parties. See Barber v. Cazalis, 30 Cal. 92.

37. Actions against public officers. A public officer, who stands in the relation of agent of the government, or of the public, is not personally liable upon contracts made by him as such officer, and within the scope of his legitimate duties; but this reason does not apply when neither the government nor the public in any way can be considered or held responsible for a contract made by a person, although a public officer. Dwinelle v. Henriquez, 1 Cal. 392.

38. Action for malicious prosecution. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83.

§ 380. Parties defendant in an action to determine conflicting claims to real property. In an action brought by a person out of possession of real property, to determine an adverse claim of an interest or estate therein, the person making such adverse claim and persons in possession may be joined as defendants, and if the judgment be for the plaintiff, he may have a writ for the possession of the premises, as against the defendants in the action, against whom the judgment has passed.

Actions to quiet title. See post, § 738.
Writ of possession. See post, § 682.
Fresh parties, bringing in. See post, § 389.
Non-joinder or misjoinder of parties. See post, § 430.

Legislation § 380. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "In an action brought by a person ont of possession of real property to determine an adverse claim of an interest or estate therein, the person making such adverse claim and all persons in possession must be joined as defendants."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 295.

Action to recover adverse claims to real property. A person out of possession may maintain an action to quiet title. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481; Bryan v. Tormey, 3 Cal. Unrep. 85; 21 Pac. 725; Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380; Castro v. Barry, 79 Cal. 443; 21 Pac. 946; Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284; McGrath v. Wallace, 85 Cal. 622; 24 Pac. 793.

Judgment. The findings are sufficient if they follow the language of the pleadings, or if they make definite reference to the pleadings. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280; Bryan v. Tormey, 3 Cal. Unrep. 85; 21 Pac. 725. Where it is adjudicated that the judgment defendant has no adverse claim to or interest in the property in controversy, the subject of the litigation is exhausted, and if the plaintiff is out of possession, the judgment necessarily entitles him to possession. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771; Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542. Where the complaint alleges that the plaintiff was the owner and in possession, and the findings are that he is the owner, but that the defendant is in possession, the plaintiff cannot have judgment that his title be quieted, and that defendant be removed from possession; because the findings and the judgment, so far as the possession is concerned, are in contradiction of the complaint, and the plaintiff cannot have a judgment in direct contradiction of the complaint. Bryan v. Tormey, 3 Cal. Unrep. 85; 21 Pac. 725; Von Drachenfels v. Doolittle, 77 Cal. 295; 19 Pac. 518.

Writ for possession of the premises. Where the gravamen of an action is to determine conflicting claims to real property, brought by a person in possession at the time the action is commenced, but who, during pendency, is turned out of possession, a judgment in favor of the plaintiff may provide for a restitution of the premises; and the action remains an equitable one. Polack v. Gurnee, 66 Cal. 266; 5 Pac. 229, 610; Kitts v. Austin, 83 Cal. 167; 23 Pac. 290. And where the answer of a defendant out of possession sets up an adverse claim of title, which is found to be superior to that of the plaintiff, the court may award possession to such defendant. Kitts v. Austin, 83 Cal. 167; 23 Pac. 290.

Who may be dispossessed under writ of possession. See note 39 Am. Dec. 311.

§ 381. Parties holding title under a common source, when may join. Any two or more persons claiming any estate or interest in lands under a common source of title, whether holding as tenants in common, joint tenants, coparceners, or in severalty, may unite in an action against any person claiming an adverse estate or interest therein, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim, or of establishing such common source of title, or of declaring the same to be held in trust, or of removing a cloud upon the same.

Co-tenants may sever. See post, § 384.
Ejectment. See post, § 738, and ante, § 379.
Quieting title. See post, § 738.
Joint tenants. See post, § 384.

Legislation § 381. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1867–68, p. 158), and then read: "Persons claiming an interest in lands under a common source of title may unite as plaintiffs in an action against any person claiming an adverse interest therein, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim, or of establishing such common source of title, or of declaring the same to be held in trust, or for removing a cloud thereon."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 295.

Joinder of parties holding title under common source. The general rule is, that unconnected parties may join in bringing a bill in equity, where there is one connected interest among them all, centering in the point in issue in the case. Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171. An action to recover rents and profits could not be maintained at law by one tenant in common against another, before the adoption of the code, and under the common-law rule. Pico v. Columbet, 12 Cal. 414; 73 Am. Dec. 550; Howard v. Throckmorton, 59 Cal. 79; McCord v. Oakland Quicksilver Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863. It is otherwise in equity, for an accounting. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 233. The principle enunciated in Pico v. Columbet, supra, has no application to the case of money received by one tenant in common from sales of water, or profits derived from the operation of a ditch or mine. Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 233. Where an estate is sold in lots, to different persons, the purchasers cannot unite in an action for specific performance: each purchaser's case being distinct, and depending upon its own peculiar circumstances, there must be distinct and separate actions. Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171. One of two tenants in common of personal property can maintain replevin against the other, where there is an agreement that on a sale of the property the proceeds shall be equally divided. Hewlett v. Owens, 50 Cal. 474. Persons having a common interest in the subject of an action to redeem, and in obtaining the general relief demanded, may join as plaintiffs (Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93), as also may persons claiming as devisees under the same will, and seeking to remove from their title the cloud of a fraudulent deed that affects the whole land. Gillespie v. Gouly, 152 Cal. 643; 93 Pac. 856. Tenants in common of an irrigation-ditch may join in an action for an injunction to prevent the stoppage of the flow of water in such ditch, notwithstanding their several ownerships of lands, and of water to irrigate the same from said ditch. Smith v. Stearns Rancho Co., 129 Cal. 58; 61 Pac. 662; Los Robles Water Co. v. Stoneman, 146 Cal. 203; 79 Pac. 880. The joinder of tenants in common in real actions was not permissible, before the code (De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 149; Throckmorton v. Burr, 5 Cal. 400; Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165); but for injuries to their common property, as trespass quare clausum fregit, nuisance, and the like, all were required to join. De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 149. A tenant in common may recover an entire tract against all persons in possession, except his co-tenants (Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361; Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; 81 Am. Dec. 108; Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202; Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 21 Cal. 552; Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484; 87 Am. Dec. 135); and he may maintain an action for the recovery of land, without joining his co-tenants (Morenhaut v. Wilson, 52 Cal. 263); and, where ousted by a co-tenant, he may maintain ejectment, unless such co-tenant is acting as his bailiff, by agreement, when an action for an accounting lies. Pico v. Columbet, 12 Cal. 414; 73 Am. Dec. 550; Carpentier v. Webster, 27 Cal. 524; Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484; 87 Am. Dec. 135; Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160; Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330. Damages may be recovered for ouster by a co-tenant, the same as for ouster by a stranger; but the only damages the plaintiff is entitled to recover are such as grow out of and are incident to the ouster upon which the recovery rests. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330. Where there is an ouster by a stranger, who afterwards purchases the interest of the co-tenant, and becomes a tenant in common in possession, his possession then loses its hostile character, and damages are limited to those of the period from the date of the ouster to the date on which he became the tenant in common. Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484; 87 Am. Dec. 135. In an action to quiet title, the complaint should set forth that the plaintiffs deraign their title from the same source, and this allegation must be proved, and be found by the court, where that fact is in issue; but where there is no plea of misjoinder of plaintiffs, the failure of the plaintiffs so to plead and of the court so to find is immaterial. Dewey v. Parcells, 137 Cal. 305; 70 Pac. 174. The administrator of a deceased co-tenant's estate may be joined as plaintiff with the surviving co-tenants, in all cases in which the deceased co-tenant could have been joined, until the administration of the estate represented is closed, or the property distributed under decree of the probate court. Meeks v. Hahn, 20 Cal. 620; Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202; Goller v. Fett, 30 Cal. 481; Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616. Joint tenants were formerly required to join, where the land was held jointly. Dewey v. Lambier, 7 Cal. 347; Cohas v. Raisin, 3 Cal. 443. Parties making separate instruments to secure the same debt may join as plaintiffs in an action to redeem (Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93), and devisees under a will may join in an action to remove a cloud affecting the lands of both. Gillespie v. Gouly, 152 Cal. 643; 93 Pac. 856.

1. Actions respecting common property. Actions for the diversion of the waters of ditches are in the nature of actions for the abatement of nuisance, and may be maintained by tenants in common in a joint action. De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 151; Parke v. Kilham, 8 Cal. 79; 68 Am. Dec. 310. Tenants in common in a mine may sue jointly to recover possession of all of their several undivided interests. Goller v. Fett, 30 Cal. 481. And the executor of a tenant in common can be united with the surviving co-tenants. Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202. A tenant in common, employed as agent, may sue his co-tenant for the services rendered in respect to the land. Thompson v. Salmon, 18 Cal. 632. One of several tenants in common has a right to sue alone for his moiety. Covillaud v. Tanner, 7 Cal. 38.

2. Action of ejectment, where there are several co-tenants. In this state, two or more of several co-tenants cannot be joined as parties in an action of ejectment. The rule which determines whether tenants in common should sue jointly or severally depends upon the nature of their interest in the matter or thing which is in controversy. For injuries to their common property, as trespass quare clausum fregit, or nuisance, etc., they should all be joined; but they must sue severally in real actions, generally, as they all have separate titles. See Coke Lit., p. 197; De Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 151.

§ 382. Parties in interest, when to be joined. When one or more may sue or defend for the whole. Of the parties to the action, those who are united in interest must be joined as plaintiffs or defendants; but if the consent of any one who should have been joined as plaintiff cannot be obtained, he may be made a defendant, the reason thereof being stated in the complaint; and when the question is one of a common or general interest, of many persons, or when the parties are numerous, and it is impracticable to bring them all before the court, one or more may sue or defend for the benefit of all.

Joinder, misjoinder, non-joinder. Post, § 430.
Executors, etc., not qualified, need not be joined. Post, § 1587.

Legislation § 382. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 14 (New York Code, § 119), which had the word "shall" instead of "must" before "be joined."

Joinder of parties united in interest. All parties in interest must be joined, either as plaintiffs or as defendants (Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974; Birch v. Cooper, 136 Cal. 636; 69 Pac. 420); and this rule is general, and applies to undertakings, obligations, and promises of all possible descriptions. Moreing v. Weber, 3 Cal. App. 14; 84 Pac. 220. The rule requiring all parties in interest to be before the court is somewhat one of convenience, and will not be rigidly enforced, where its observance would be attended with great inconvenience, and answer no substantially beneficial purpose, but will be modified or partially dispensed with, in the discretion of the court, as justice and the exigencies of the case may require. Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420. When an objection is not taken either by demurrer or answer, defect of parties is deemed waived. Dunn v. Tozer, 10 Cal. 167; Wendt v. Ross, 33 Cal. 650; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Trenor v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 222; Foley v. Bullard, 99 Cal. 516; 33 Pac. 1081. Parties plaintiff are all who are interested as plaintiffs in the subject-matter of the action. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360; People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336; Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733.

Party refusing to join may be made defendant. Where antagonism of interests exists, a person who is a necessary party plaintiff, but who cannot be joined because of such antagonistic interests, may be made a party defendant. Byrne v. Byrne, 94 Cal. 576; 29 Pac. 1115; 30 Pac. 196. A partner, interested, but who refuses to join as plaintiff, may be made a party defendant, the reason therefor being stated in the complaint (Nightingale v. Scannell, 6 Cal. 506; 65 Am. Dec. 525; O'Connor v. Irvine, 74 Cal. 435; 16 Pac. 236; Cuyamaca Granite Co. v. Pacific Paving Co., 95 Cal. 252; 30 Pac. 525); and if the consent of an heir, who should be joined, cannot be obtained, he may be made a defendant. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733.

Effect of joinder, as defendant, of one refusing to become plaintiff. See note post, § 395.

Joinder where question is of common interest and parties are numerous. A party, who seeks to avail himself of the provisions of this section, must allege facts which bring his case within the provisions: he must show that the question is one of common or general interest, of many persons, or that parties are numerous, and that it is impracticable to bring them all before the court. Carey v. Brown, 58 Cal. 180. In an action upon the joint indebtedness of two partners, the complaint should be against both, as both are united in interest. Baker & Hamilton v. Lambert, 5 Cal. App. 708; 91 Pac. 340. If an obligation is joint, and not joint and several, the joint obligors must all be made parties. Moreing v. Weber, 3 Cal. App. 14; 84 Pac. 220. The second pledgee of a note and mortgage, though not the holder thereof, is entitled to foreclose the same, where the first pledgee, who is the holder, is made a party to the action. Patten v. Pepper Hotel Co., 153 Cal. 460; 96 Pac. 296. This section applies to an action for partition, brought for the benefit of all persons interested in the estate. Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228. It permits the joinder, in actions of condemnation, of all defendants whose lands are affected by the action. Sacramento County v. Glann, 14 Cal. App. 780; 113 Pac. 360. This section, and § 383, post, authorize the joinder of a wife with her husband, in an action against him to recover for necessaries contracted for solely by him. Evans v. Noonan, 20 Cal. App. 288; 128 Pac. 794. A complaint, in which there is united with some defendants another, against whom no liability is alleged or recovery sought, is not necessarily defective. Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293; 34 Pac. 777. This section is a re-enactment of § 14 of the Practice Act, which was construed as intended to apply to suits in equity and not to actions at law. Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 330. In equity proceedings, the rule is relaxed, requiring all persons materially interested to be before the court; it is always dispensed with, where it is inconvenient or impracticable to get them before the court, as in the case of joint associations composed of numerous individuals. Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531. All parties to joint contracts must be made parties defendant. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456; Farmers' Exchange Bank v. Morse, 129 Cal. 239; 61 Pac. 1088. Where all parties to a contract are not made parties, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, because the allegations and the proof will not correspond (Cotes v. Campbell, 3 Cal. 191; Morrison v. Bradley etc. Corporation, 5 Cal. 503; Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456); and several persons, contracting together with the same party for one and the same act, are regarded as jointly, and not individually or separately, liable, in the absence of any words to show that a distinct as well as an entire liability was intended to be fastened upon the promisors. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456. In an action to enforce a joint note, upon which there is no several liability, all the joint makers must be united. Farmers' Exchange Bank v. Morse, 129 Cal. 239; 61 Pac. 1088. In an action for an injunction, the joinder of all tort-feasors as defendants is permissible. Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 87 Cal. 430; 22 Am. St. Rep. 254; 25 Pac. 550. A stockholder may sue in behalf of himself and other stockholders, for a misappropriation of the funds of the corporation (Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145; 76 Am. Dec. 508; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; 28 Pac. 788); and all who participate in such fraudulent acts are properly joined as defendants (Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309); for, each of them being alleged to have been in some way connected with the transaction, complete justice cannot be done in their absence; and it is not necessary that the plaintiff join with him other stockholders, or make them defendants, as he has a right to bring the action in his own behalf and for his individual account, as well as in behalf of other stockholders. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; 28 Pac. 788. The corporation is not a necessary party defendant, although the suit by the plaintiff is, in reality, in behalf of the corporation. Beach v. Cooper, 72 Cal. 99; 13 Pac. 161; Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145; 76 Am. Dec. 508. This section (§ 14 of the Practice Act) does not apply to an action brought by one for himself and in behalf of others, to remove a cloud from a title, and for an injunction, where the right sought to be enforced is not general and common to all. Gibbons v. Peralta, 21 Cal. 629. Where a creditor of one class sues for the benefit of all creditors similarly situated, the creditors of another class cannot claim the benefit of the action; and thus, where a judgment creditor sues, and provision is inserted in the judgment for the relief of other judgment creditors, it will include only such as were judgment creditors at the time the action was commenced, and will not include such as were creditors at large, without judgment at that time, who became judgment creditors after the entry of such judgment. Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1; 37 Pac. 767; Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55. A creditor may sue the stockholders of a corporation on their liability as stockholders, for the benefit of all the creditors. Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581; 29 Am. St. Rep. 158; 27 Pac. 674; 30 Pac. 776. In an action to compel a reconveyance of real property, alleged to have been secured by conspiracy and fraud, all persons who have participated in the alleged fraud, and all persons claiming an interest in the property through or by means of the alleged fraudulent transactions, may be joined as parties defendant. Raynor v. Mintzer, 67 Cal. 159; 7 Pac. 431. A suit by one person for the partition of real estate, for the benefit of all having a community of interest in the property, has the effect to stop the running of the statute of limitations as to all. Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 19; 77 Pac. 712. Where a partner sues alone, and no objection is made, either by demurrer or answer, he may recover the whole amount due the partnership (Williams v. Southern Pacific Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974); the reason for this rule being, that the interest of the partner extends to the entire demand, and payment to one partner discharges the debtor's liability to the firm, and the recovery by one partner has the same effect. Williams v. Southern Pacific Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974; Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 330; McCord v. Seale, 56 Cal. 262; Webb v. Treseony, 76 Cal. 621; 18 Pac. 796; Weinreich v. Johnston, 78 Cal. 254; 20 Pac. 556; Baxter v. Hart, 104 Cal. 344; 37 Pac. 941. In a suit by one partner, making the other defendant because he refuses to join in the action, the recovery must be entire for the whole injury; the law will not tolerate the division of a joint right of action. Nightingale v. Scannell, 6 Cal. 506; 65 Am. Dec. 525. A member of a religious corporation may prosecute an action for the benefit of himself and all the other members of the association, to prevent a wrongful exchange of creed or denomination, or the diversion of the property. Baker v. Ducker, 79 Cal. 365; 21 Pac. 764. One member of a voluntary association may sue for all the members. Gieske v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 247; 19 Pac. 421; Baker v. Ducker, 79 Cal. 365; 21 Pac. 764; Florence v. Helms, 136 Cal. 613; 69 Pac. 429. A member of a voluntary association, elected the treasurer thereof, may maintain a suit in behalf of himself and other members of the association, except the former treasurer thereof, to compel him to pay over the funds in his hands belonging to the association, which properly belong in the custody of the treasurer, and which the former treasurer, on demand, refused to pay over. Gieske v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 247; 19 Pac. 421. An action may be maintained under this section, where the plaintiffs allege that they are members of an association, and that the action is prosecuted in behalf of the association and all the members thereof. Florence v. Helms, 136 Cal. 613; 69 Pac. 429.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Joint associations composed of many individuals. In cases of joint associations which consist of a great many individuals, and when it would be very inconvenient or almost impossible to join them, one or more may sue or defend for all. See Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531.

2. Action by stockholder against corporation and certain trustees for negligence on part of trustees. An action was brought to compel an account and obtain a settlement of the affairs of a corporation. The plaintiff was a stockholder, and the corporation and four of the trustees were made defendants. It was alleged that these trustees were the owners of stock sufficient to enable them to control the business of the company, and various acts of fraud and mismanagement were charged against them in the complaint. It was decided that a stockholder could maintain an action in equity for an account (Angell and Ames on Corporations, § 312; Robinson v. Smith, 3 Paige Ch. 222; 24 Am. Dec. 212); and that where no objection was interposed, that all the stockholders were not made parties, the trustees and corporation could be sued alone, and made the only parties. The trustees will be compelled to make good any loss occasioned by their negligence or improper conduct. See Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 151; 76 Am. Dec. 508.

3. Decree in action brought by one for himself and on behalf of others. Where an action is brought by one of several persons, claiming title from a common source, in his own behalf, and in behalf of all others interested in the same manner as himself, to set aside a deed executed to others by the same grantor, under whom plaintiff claims, on the ground of fraud, the parties named in the complaint, for whose benefit the action is brought, are entitled to the benefit of the decree declaring the deed fraudulent. Hurlbutt v. Butenop, 27 Cal. 50.

4. Partner suing for injury to partnership property and making copartner a defendant. When one partner sues for an injury to the partnership property, and makes his copartner a defendant for want of his consent to join as plaintiff, the recovery must be entire for the whole injury. The law will not tolerate a division of a joint right of action into several actions. The whole cause of action must be determined in one, and thus avoid a multiplicity of suits. In such a case, the partner recovering is liable to account to his copartner defendant, and the latter is interested immediately in the event of the suit. Nightingale v. Scannell, 6 Cal. 509; 65 Am. Dec. 525. But this case did not decide that such a nonjoinder of the plaintiffs would be permitted under the code. The question was not raised. Id.

5. Section applies only to suits in equity. It was held that this section was intended to apply to suits in equity, and not to actions at law. Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 333.

§ 383. Plaintiff may sue in one action the different parties to commercial paper or insurance policies. Persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, and sureties on the same or separate instruments, may all or any of them be included in the same action, at the option of the plaintiff; and all or any of them join as plaintiffs in the same action, concerning or affecting the obligation or instrument upon which they are severally liable. Where the same person is insured by two or more insurers separately in respect to the same subject and interest, such person, or the payee under the policies, or the assignee of the cause of action, or other successor in interest of such assured or payee, may join all or any of such insurers in a single action for the recovery of a loss under the several policies, and in case of judgment a several judgment must be rendered against each of such insurers according as his liability shall appear.

Judgment for or against one or more of several parties. See post, §§ 414, 578, 579.

Legislation § 383. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, in the exact language of Practice Act, § 15 (New York Code, § 120), and then read: "Persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, and sureties on the same or separate instruments, may all or any of them be included in the same action, at the option of the plaintiff."

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 19, to read: "Persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, and sureties on the same or separate instruments, may all or any of them be included in the same action, at the option of the plaintiff; and all or any of them join as plaintiffs in the same action, concerning or affecting the obligation or instrument upon which they are severally liable."

3. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 203.

Parties liable upon the same obligation. A plaintiff may, at his election, sue one or more, or all, of the persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument (Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176; People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429; Hurlbutt v. N. W. Spaulding Saw Co., 93 Cal. 55; 28 Pac. 795; Kurtz v. Forquer, 94 Cal. 91; 29 Pac. 413; London etc. Bank v. Smith, 101 Cal. 415; 35 Pac. 1027; Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 413; 50 Pac. 546; Slater v. McAvoy, 123 Cal. 437; 56 Pac. 49); but where the liability is joint, all must be united, in an action upon the contract; and this rule applies to undertakings, obligations, and promises of all possible descriptions. Moreing v. Weber, 3 Cal. App. 14; 84 Pac. 220. This section is in the exact language of § 15 of the Practice Act, which latter section was said to be in derogation of the common law, which required that one or all, and not an intermediate number, should be sued. Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176; People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520. This section permits all or any of the persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, including the parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes, to be joined as defendants; but where the promise is separate and distinct, the promisors cannot be joined. Thomas v. Anderson, 58 Cal. 99. The object of this section is solely the avoidance of a multiplicity of actions. Loustalot v. Calkins, 120 Cal. 688; 53 Pac. 258. By § 15 of the Practice Act, the common-law rule that one or all, and not any intermediate number, may be sued, was changed; and, under that section, a plaintiff could, at his election, sue one or more, or all of the persons severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument. People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520. The joinder of all the defendants in a complaint does not prevent the plaintiff from going to trial before some of them have been served. People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429; Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 463; People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520. Where a sheriff executed two attachments upon the same property, which was claimed by a third person, and each of the attaching creditors executed to the sheriff an indemnifying bond, the liability of the attaching creditors is several, and not joint, and each bond must be sued on as an independent obligation. White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521. The joinder of co-defendants is at the option of the plaintiff. People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520; Powell v. Powell, 48 Cal. 234; Heppe v. Johnson, 73 Cal. 265; 14 Pac. 833; Kurtz v. Forquer, 94 Cal. 91; 29 Pac. 413; Sacramento v. Dunlap, 14 Cal. 421; People v. Hartley, 21 Cal. 585; 82 Am. Dec. 758.

Joinder of sureties. The sureties on a several obligation may be sued alone, at the election of the plaintiff. London etc. Bank v. Smith, 101 Cal. 415; 35 Pac. 1027. The joinder of an indorser and the maker of a promissory note is permissible, under this section (Loustalot v. Calkins, 120 Cal. 688; 53 Pac. 258; Hubbard v. University Bank, 125 Cal. 684; 58 Pac. 297); and each one who writes his name upon the note is a party to it; and, from its original character, each party to it is an original undertaker. Riggs v. Waldo, 2 Cal. 485; 56 Am. Dec. 356. From the earliest judicial history of this state, makers and indorsers of negotiable promissory notes have been joined as parties defendant, and no question as to the correctness of the practice has ever been suggested. Loustalot v. Calkins, 120 Cal. 688; 53 Pac. 258; Pierce v. Kennedy, 5 Cal. 138; Ford v. Hendricks, 34 Cal. 673; Jones v. Goodwin, 39 Cal. 493; 2 Am. Rep. 473; Fessenden v. Summers, 62 Cal. 484; Young v. Miller, 63 Cal. 302. The distinction at common law, and in most of the states, between guarantor and surety has been done away with by our Civil Code, and the guarantor has been practically reduced to the footing of a surety, and has less protection than the indorser; there is this distinction to be observed, however: the obligation of the surety arises out of the instrument, while that of the guarantor is separate and apart from it; the guarantor becomes liable immediately upon the failure of his principal to perform (except in case of guaranty of collectibility), but this liability grows out of such failure to perform, and not out of the instrument; the surety may be joined with his principal, under this section, but it is thought the guarantor cannot; it is barely possible, but not probable, that a case may arise where the guarantor's liability arises out of the instrument. Carman v. Plass, 23 N. Y. 286. Where an administrator gives two bonds, one on his qualification as administrator and the other upon a sale of real estate, the conditions and the sureties on each bond being the same, the sureties are properly joined as co-defendants, having assumed a common burden. Powell v. Powell, 48 Cal. 234; Heppe v. Johnson, 73 Cal. 265; 14 Pac. 833. The sureties on a bond to sell real estate, given by a deceased administrator, the estate being unadministered, are proper parties defendant in an action to recover moneys realized from the sale of such real estate (Slater v. McAvoy, 123 Cal. 437; 56 Pac. 49); and they are the proper parties to make the settlement (People v. Jenkins, 17 Cal. 500; Slater v. McAvoy, 123 Cal. 437; 56 Pac. 49); and also in an accounting against a deceased guardian. Zurfluh v. Smith, 135 Cal. 644; 67 Pac. 1089; Reither v. Murdock, 135 Cal. 197; 67 Pac. 784.

Joinder of insurers. Where two insurance companies insure a building against loss, both uniting in the policy for separate amounts, and the loss occurs within the policies, the two companies are severally liable upon the same obligation or instrument, and may be joined as co-defendants, at the option of the plaintiff. Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382; Blasingame v. Home Ins. Co., 75 Cal. 633; 17 Pac. 925.

What judgment must be rendered. Where a plaintiff sues, jointly, two or more defendants on a joint and several contract or obligation, one of whom defaults, and judgment is taken against him on such default, this releases the other defendants. Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176.

Joinder of husband and wife. See note ante, § 382.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Plaintiff may elect which one or what number of many persons severally liable he will sue. This section changes the common-law rule, that one or all, and not any intermediate number, may be sued. Under this section, a plaintiff may, at his election, sue one or more, or all the persons severally liable, upon the same obligation or instrument. People v. Love, 25 Cal. 526; Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 183; see also People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402; Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399.

2. Judgment may be for or against one of several defendants, and otherwise as to the other defendants. See §§ 578, 579, post. Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399; People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402.

3. Indorsers. When jointly, and not severally, liable. A note was payable to A, and, previously to its delivery to the payee, was indorsed by B and C. These parties were accommodation indorsers. An indorsement was made by two persons, upon an agreement with each other, that they would each become surety if the other would, or in other words, that they would become sureties together. It was decided that the indorsers were guarantors (see facts), and were jointly, and not severally, liable to payee, etc. Brady v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 31.

4. There must be express words to create a several liability. See Chitty on Contracts, p. 96; 1 Chitty's Pleading, p. 41; Brady v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 32.

5. Judgment against one is bar to action against other parties on a joint contract. A judgment against one on a joint contract of several is a bar to an action against the others. Smith v. Black, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 142; 11 Am. Dec. 686; Ward v. Johnson, 13 Mass. 148. When the cause of action is joint, and not joint and several, the entire cause of action is merged in the judgment. See also Pierce v. Kearney, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 86; Taylor v. Claypool, 5 Blackf. 557; Brady v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 33.

6. Administrator not joined with survivor on several contract. In cases of joint and several contracts, an administrator cannot be joined with the survivor, for one is charged de bonis testatoris, and the other de bonis propriis. Humphreys v. Crane, 5 Cal. 173.

7. Judgment in suit on joint and several bond. In an action upon a joint and several bond, where all the persons who sign it are made defendants in the complaint, the plaintiff may go to trial, if he elects so to do, before all the defendants are served, and may dismiss as to some of the defendants, and take judgment against the others. People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429.

8. When a bond is joint, and not several. A bond in this form: Know all men, That we, A, as principal, and B, C, and D, as sureties, are bound unto the people in the several sums affixed to our names, viz.: B, in the sum of ten thousand dollars; C, in the sum of five thousand dollars; D, in the sum of three thousand dollars, etc., "for the which payment well and truly to be made we severally bind ourselves, our heirs," etc., and signed and sealed by the obligors, is held to be an instrument embracing several distinct obligations, each of which is a joint obligation of the principal and one surety, and not joint and several. People v. Hartley, 21 Cal. 585; 82 Am. Dec. 758.

9. Suit on separate indemnifying bonds for the same attached property. A sheriff seized goods on two attachments, for different plaintiffs. The plaintiffs in the attachment suits executed to the sheriff separate indemnifying bonds. It was decided that there is no joint liability between the plaintiffs to the sheriff. Each bond must be sued on as an independent obligation. White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521.

10. Action on note secured by mortgage. The maker executes and delivers to the same person a promissory note, and a mortgage to secure the same, and this person indorses the note and assigns the mortgage to a third person, who brings an action on the note and to foreclose the mortgage. It was held that the indorser and maker of the note were properly joined as defendants. Eastman v. Turman, 24 Cal. 379.

§ 384. Tenants in common, etc., may sever in bringing or defending actions. All persons holding as tenants in common, joint tenants, or coparceners, or any number less than all, may jointly or severally commence or defend any civil action or proceeding for the enforcement or protection of the rights of such party.

Co-claimants, united as plaintiffs. Ante, § 381.

Joinder of tenants in common. Co-tenants may sue alone or jointly touching matters affecting common property or estate. Clark v. Huber, 20 Cal. 196; Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202; Goller v. Fett, 30 Cal. 481; Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616; Morenhaut v. Wilson, 52 Cal. 263; Himes v. Johnson, 61 Cal. 259; Moulton v. McDermott, 80 Cal. 629; 22 Pac. 296; Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong & Co., 91 Cal. 593; 28 Pac. 45; Kimball v. Tripp, 136 Cal. 631; 69 Pac. 428; Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516; 70 Pac. 549; Harlow v. Standard Improvement Co., 145 Cal. 477; 78 Pac. 1045. A co-tenant of the plaintiff is not a necessary party in an action for the wrongful diversion of water from a ditch and lands owned by the plaintiff and others. Himes v. Johnson, 61 Cal. 259. Co-distributees are tenants in common; and one tenant, suing alone, may recover the entire tract of land from an intruder. Moulton v. McDermott, 80 Cal. 629; 22 Pac. 296. The personal representative of a deceased co-tenant may join with the surviving co-tenants. Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202; Goller v. Fett, 30 Cal. 481; Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616. One co-tenant cannot recover all the rents and profits, even as against a trespasser (Clark v. Huber, 20 Cal. 196; Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175; Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong & Co., 91 Cal. 593; 28 Pac. 45); but, under an agreement apportioning the rents and profits, whereby one co-tenant is to receive them every alternate six months, perhaps a co-tenant, in a proper action, would be entitled to recover all the rents and profits due for periods allotted to him. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong & Co., 91 Cal. 593; 28 Pac. 45. An heir, as tenant in common, may sue alone, under this section, regarding the subject-matter affecting the common estate. Kimball v. Tripp, 136 Cal. 631; 69 Pac. 428. A husband is not a necessary party in an action by his wife to quiet title to her separate property, upon which a homestead has been declared for their joint benefit. Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423; 42 Pac. 908. Husband and wife may sue jointly as tenants in common, in an action for trespass. Wagoner v. Silva, 139 Cal. 559; 73 Pac. 433. A surviving partner may sue alone regarding the subject-matter of the firm's property. Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516; 70 Pac. 549.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1867, p. 62.

§ 385. Action, when not to abate by death, marriage, or other disability. Proceedings in such case. An action or proceeding does not abate by the death, or any disability of a party, or by the transfer of any interest therein, if the cause of action survive or continue. In case of the death or any disability of a party, the court, on motion, may allow the action or proceeding to be continued by or against his representative or successor in interest.

In case of any other transfer of interest, the action or proceeding may be continued in the name of the original party, or the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made to be substituted in the action or proceeding.

If party die, judgment against his representative must be that he pay in due course of administration. Post, § 1504.

Necessity for claiming against estate of deceased. Post, §§ 1493, 1502.

Death after verdict or decision, and before judgment. See post, § 669.

Survival of actions. See post, §§ 1582 et seq.

Legislation § 385. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 16 (New York Code, § 16), which read: "An action shall not abate by the death, or other disability of a party; or by the transfer of any interest therein, if the cause of action survive or continue. In case of the death, or other disability of a party, the court, on motion, may allow the action to be continued by or against his representative or successor in interest. In case of any other transfer of interest, the action may be continued in the name of the original party; or the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made, to be substituted in the action." When enacted in 1872, the section read as at present, except that the words "death or any disability" then read "death, marriage, or other disability," in both instances.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 295.

Action does not abate, where the cause of action survives. This section is permissive, and appeals to the discretion of the court (Fay v. Steubenrauch, 138 Cal. 656; 72 Pac. 156; Emerson v. McWhirter, 128 Cal. 268; 60 Pac. 774); and should receive a liberal construction, with a view to effect its object and promote justice. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703; Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797. If this section is applicable to the case of a corporation, it does not authorize the continuance of the action against the corporation itself, but allows the action to be continued only against the "representative or successor in interest" brought in on motion. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 150 Cal. 575; 89 Pac. 335. It applies to the supreme court, except where the code otherwise provides, or where it is evidently applicable only to the trial court. Trumpler v. Trumpler, 123 Cal. 248; 55 Pac. 1008; People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348. It does not make distinctions dependent upon the stages of the action or proceeding. Ex parte Connaway, 178 U. S. 421; 44 L. Ed. 1134; 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951. It does not apply in a contest for the purchase of state land, which has been referred to the courts, and where the applicant dies pending the action. Polk v. Sleeper, 158 Cal. 632; 112 Pac. 179. In case a corporation, which is a party, is dissolved, the action may be continued, only as against the representative or successor in interest brought in on motion; the remedy is against the directors, as trustees, and the stockholders. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 150 Cal. 575, 581; 89 Pac. 335. The substitution of the representative of a deceased person as a party, pending an appeal, should be followed by a like substitution in the trial court in order properly to determine the responsibility for the costs upon appeal. Reay v. Heazelton, 128 Cal. 335; 60 Pac. 977. The court cannot permit a person to be substituted as plaintiff, in place of the then plaintiff, on the ground that the person substituted was the real party in interest at the commencement of the action. Dubbers v. Goux, 51 Cal. 153. The right of action against a person for wrongful imprisonment ceases upon his death. Harker v. Clark, 57 Cal. 245. A former application for a writ of mandate against a city treasurer does not bar an action against the city. Madary v. Fresno, 20 Cal. App. 91; 128 Pac. 340. In an action of ejectment, brought by a lessee for the benefit of the lessor, the court may, after the expiration of the lease, allow the substitution of a plaintiff who has succeeded to the whole title (Cassin v. Nicholson, 154 Cal. 497; 98 Pac. 190); and in an action to determine an adverse claim to real property, it has power to substitute a special administrator for the general administrator as a party defendant. McNeil v. Morgan, 157 Cal. 373; 108 Pac. 69. A transfer, by the defendant, of attached real estate, pending the principal suit, is not such a transfer as entitles the transferee to be substituted as a party defendant. Anderson v. Schloesser, 153 Cal. 219; 94 Pac. 885. If a suit on assigned claims, commenced in a state court, is transferred to a Federal court, but the cause of action is transferred to the plaintiff's assignor, the action may be continued either in the name of the original party or in that of the transferee. Davis v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 108; 113 Pac. 898. An action abates upon a showing of the institution and pendency of a prior action between the same parties upon the same subject-matter. Fresno Planing Mill Co. v. Manning, 20 Cal. App. 766; 130 Pac. 196. If a husband and wife were properly joined as plaintiffs in the first instance, a personal representative for the husband may be substituted upon his death, pending suit. Gomez v. Scanlan, 155 Cal. 528; 102 Pac. 12. If, pending an action to foreclose a mortgage given to secure a note, the note and mortgage are assigned, and are subsequently distributed by a decree of distribution in the estate of the assignee, the distributee, as a successor in interest, may be substituted as plaintiff in the foreclosure suit. Blinn Lumber Co. v. McArthur, 150 Cal. 610; 89 Pac. 436. Where, pending a suit commenced in this state, against a non-resident defendant, the property involved is transferred to a resident of this state, the death of the original defendant, subsequently to such transfer, does not confer upon the transferee any right of substitution as representative of the original defendant. Anderson v. Schloesser, 153 Cal. 219; 94 Pac. 885.

Does not abate by death. On the death of a party in this state, whatever property he has vests immediately, by operation of law, in his heirs, subject to the lien of the administrator to pay the debts of the estate. Beckett v. Selover, 7 Cal. 215; 68 Am. Dec. 237; Updegraff v. Trask, 18 Cal. 458; Meeks v. Hahn, 20 Cal. 620. Whenever, by reason of the death of a defendant, the case becomes such that execution cannot be legally issued, an attachment must of necessity cease, whether judgment has been procured or not, in an action in which attachment issued and was levied. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49; affirmed in Hensley v. Morgan, 47 Cal. 622; Ham v. Cunningham, 50 Cal. 365. The common-law rule, that a personal right of action dies with the person, is inapplicable where the plaintiff dies after a judgment in his favor, which has not been vacated. Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178. This section does not have the effect of abating an action against a corporation after its legal death, by a forfeiture of its charter for the non-payment of its license taxes, when construed with § 10a of the act of June 13, 1906 (Stats. Extra Sess. 1906, p. 22), providing that the trustees may maintain or defend any action or proceeding then pending, in behalf of or against the corporation, and § 400 of the Civil Code. Lowe v. Supreme Court, 165 Cal. 708; 134 Pac. 190. A judgment against a person, who is dead at its rendition, is valid, until reversed or set aside by some competent judicial authority, and it cannot be collaterally attacked. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 67 Cal. 1; 6 Pac. 867. Where a party dies after verdict, but before judgment, judgment will be entered in accordance with the verdict (Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463), and where a party dies after judgment, but before notice of appeal is filed, the appeal will be dismissed. Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463; Shartzer v. Love, 40 Cal. 93. Where, pending an appeal, the defendant dies, and the court, on plaintiff's motion, substitutes his executor, notice must be served on the executor; and if notice is served, and the executor does not appear and answer, nor adopt the answer of the testator as his own, and judgment is subsequently entered in the testator's name and in his favor, this judgment is not one in favor of the executor; for, as to him, the case has never been tried, and the judgment a nullity. McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284. When a husband and wife sue to recover the homestead, and the wife dies without issue, pending suit, the husband cannot recover. Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472. An assignee or grantee is the legal representative of the assignor or grantor, and, as such, is entitled to defend in his name. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703; Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Trumpler v. Trumpler, 123 Cal. 248; 55 Pac. 1008. An action to foreclose a mortgage does not abate on the death of the defendant, pending suit, but survives against the estate. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Wackenreuder, 99 Cal. 503; 34 Pac. 219; Union Sav. Bank v. Barrett, 132 Cal. 453; 64 Pac. 713, 1071. Upon the appointment of a personal representative of the defendant, the plaintiff has the same right to proceed against him as he would have against the original defendant. Union Sav. Bank v. Barrett, 132 Cal. 453; 64 Pac. 713, 1071. If, pending an action on a note and mortgage, they are assigned, and the assignee dies, whereupon his estate is distributed to his widow, she may, as a successor in interest, be properly substituted as plaintiff in the foreclosure suit. Blinn Lumber Co. v. McArthur, 150 Cal. 610; 89 Pac. 436.

Effect of transfer of interest. The last clause of this section has reference to the transfer of interest before judgment; after judgment, others succeeding to interests in the property affected take the same subject to the judgment, and with all of its protection. Emerson v. McWhirter, 128 Cal. 268; 60 Pac. 774. The last clause of this section is permissive, and the discretion of the court, in making the order, is to be exercised in view of all the attending circumstances. Emerson v. McWhirter, 128 Cal. 268; 60 Pac. 774; Hentig v. Johnson, 12 Cal. App. 423; 107 Pac. 582. An assignee for the benefit of creditors may be substituted as a party, in place of the assignor (Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253); but the assignee need not be substituted: he may prosecute or defend in the name of his assignor. Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264; 13 Pac. 661. The court rendering a judgment has control of such judgment, and authority to direct the issuance and execution of process thereunder, and to determine who is entitled thereto. Rowe v. Blake, 112 Cal. 637; 44 Pac. 1084; McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268; 38 Pac. 730. Where the court, in the exercise of such jurisdiction, makes an order which involves the determination that an assignee was entitled to have process, such determination is conclusive, without any express finding that such assignee was the owner of the judgment, or that the application was upon notice to the judgment plaintiff. Rowe v. Blake, 112 Cal. 637; 44 Pac. 1084; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Lewis, 117 Cal. 577; 47 Pac. 602; 49 Pac. 714. Against a collateral attack, it will be presumed that the application for such order was regularly made upon notice to the parties interested, and that the court, upon competent evidence, found and determined the ownership of the judgment, and who was entitled to have process for its execution. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559; 27 Pac. 411. The conveyance by the plaintiff of the demanded premises, or a portion thereof, pending the action, does not necessarily defeat the suit (Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90); and the transfer of the real estate under attachment in the action is not such a transfer of an interest in the action as will give the transferee the right to be substituted as a party (Anderson v. Schloesser, 153 Cal. 219; 94 Pac. 885), but the acquirement of a pledge by the pledgee, pending an action on the note secured thereby, gives the pledgee the right to be substituted. Merced Bank v. Price, 9 Cal. App. 177; 98 Pac. 383. The use of the name of a person as a nominal plaintiff is not improper, where such person has been authorized to act. Cobb v. Doggett, 142 Cal. 142; 75 Pac. 785. A purchaser pendente lite, on giving notice of such purchase, may be substituted in place of the original party, under this section, and thus conserve his rights, or he may permit the action to continue in the name of the grantor, but, in either event, he is equally bound by the judgment with his grantor (Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Lewis, 117 Cal. 577; 47 Pac. 602; 49 Pac. 714; Hohn v. Pauly, 11 Cal. App. 724; 106 Pac. 266); and he has control of the action, both in the court below and in the supreme court. Trumpler v. Trumpler, 123 Cal. 248; 55 Pac. 1008; People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348. Where the parties to an action have disposed of all their interest to a third party, and thereafter, upon appeal, by fraudulent means, procure a reversal, the supreme court will recall the remittitur, stay the proceedings of the court below, and assert its jurisdiction over the appeal, on the ground that its jurisdiction cannot be divested by such fraud and irregularity. Trumpler v. Trumpler, 123 Cal. 248; 55 Pac. 1008; Rowland v. Kreyenhagen, 24 Cal. 52; Vance v. Peña, 36 Cal. 328; Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178; Bernal v. Wade, 46 Cal. 640; Holloway v. Galliac, 49 Cal. 149; People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247; 32 Pac. 7; In re Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479. One who has no further interest in the matter in litigation has no right to interfere with the control of the suit respecting it. Harlan Douglas Co. v. Moncur, 19 Cal. App. 177; 124 Pac. 1053. A grantee, pendente lite, unless substituted as plaintiff, acquires no right which he can enforce in an action, or under the judgment. Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82. Where the plaintiff, pendente lite, parts with his interest, the action may be continued in his name, unless the transferee makes an application to be substituted. Camarillo v. Fenlon, 49 Cal. 202. The court should permit the substituted party to file an amended complaint; otherwise he may be seriously embarrassed on the trial. Northern Railway Co. v. Jordan, 87 Cal. 23; 25 Pac. 273. Substitution may be had of a new corporation, in place of the old one, in a proceeding to condemn lands under the right of eminent domain. California Central Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 404; 18 Pac. 599. In an action to enforce a lien, a grantee, pendente lite, of the land in controversy, claiming under the defendant, may appear and move to vacate a judgment and open a default. McKendrick v. Western Zinc Mining Co., 165 Cal. 24; 130 Pac. 865.

Substitution of parties. An assignee or transferee cannot acquire any right which can be enforced, in his own name, in an action, or under the judgment, unless substituted. Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82. Parties substituted take up the controversy in the condition in which they find it, and subject to the terms of stipulations theretofore entered into by the original parties. De Temple v. Alexander, 53 Cal. 3. Where the property in controversy is conveyed pendente lite, and no substitution is asked for, the action proceeds in the name of the original plaintiff, and no application to or order by the court is necessary. Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063. The practice in this state is well settled, on the death of a party to an action, to allow the substitution of his legal representative, upon the suggestion of the death, and on an ex parte motion showing the appointment and qualification of the administrator. Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Kittle v. Bellegarde, 86 Cal. 556; 25 Pac. 55; Campbell v. West, 93 Cal. 653; 29 Pac. 219, 645; De Leonis v. Walsh, 140 Cal. 175; 73 Pac. 813. Substitution of parties is not such an amendment of the pleadings as is required to be made on notice, or to be engrossed otherwise than entered in the minutes of the court. Kittle v. Bellegarde, 86 Cal. 556; 25 Pac. 55; Farrell v. Jones, 63 Cal. 194; Brock v. Martinovich, 55 Cal. 516. An allegation of the representative capacity of a substituted executor, filed by leave of the court, in connection with a showing that the action was continued in his name, is a sufficient showing of the appointment and qualification of the legal representative. Campbell v. West, 93 Cal. 653; 29 Pac. 219, 645. A different party cannot be substituted as plaintiff, on the ground that he was the real party in interest when the action was commenced. Dubbers v. Goux, 51 Cal. 153. Where it is admitted in open court, by all the parties, that, under the will of the decedent, the claim in the action has been decreed by the probate court to the legatee named in the will, the court may make an order substituting such distributee as plaintiff. Cockrill v. Clyma, 98 Cal. 123; 32 Pac. 888. The substitution "in case of any other transfer of interest," must be made by supplemental complaint or answer. Campbell v. West, 93 Cal. 653; 29 Pac. 219, 645; Ford v. Bushard, 116 Cal. 273; 48 Pac. 119. In case of assignment, the supplemental complaint should set out such assignment, which is an issuable fact, and if denied, its proof, as in all other cases of assignment, is vital to a recovery. Ford v. Bushard, 116 Cal. 273; 48 Pac. 119; Murdock v. Brooks, 38 Cal. 596; Read v. Buffum, 79 Cal. 77; 12 Am. St. Rep. 131; 21 Pac. 555. A purchaser pendente lite need not be substituted as a party plaintiff. Stufflebeem v. Adelsbach, 135 Cal. 221; 67 Pac. 140; Sears v. Ackerman, 138 Cal. 583; 72 Pac. 171. Where an action is commenced by the general guardian of an infant, and the infant subsequently appears by a guardian ad litem, this is substitution, and not intervention; the guardian ad litem takes the case in the state in which he finds it. Temple v. Alexander, 53 Cal. 3. Where there is an action pending to enforce a lien against real property, and the defendant owner conveys his interest by a deed which is recorded, and the action is thereafter continued, in the name of the original defendant, to judgment, the grantee may move, in his own name, to set the judgment aside, and appeal from an order denying the motion. Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703; People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348. The right of a grantee, as legal representative, cannot be enforced in his own name, unless he is substituted as plaintiff. Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 443; 6 Pac. 82. The assignor may settle a claim, where the assignee is not substituted. Hogan v. Black, 66 Cal. 41; 4 Pac. 943. As between the assignor and the assignee, the assignment transfers the interest of the plaintiff in the subject-matter of the action, but the assignee cannot avail himself of the benefit of the same against the defendant, without notifying him of the assignment, or without having himself substituted for the plaintiff. Hogan v. Black, 66 Cal. 41; 4 Pac. 943; Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248. A part interest may be assigned, under this section; and the assignee must be joined as plaintiff with the assignor (Cerf v. Ashley, 68 Cal. 419; 9 Pac. 658; Cramer v. Tittle, 79 Cal. 332; 21 Pac. 750); and the rights of such grantee and his protection, under this section, are the same as though he acquired the entire interest (Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797); and he may move the court to set aside a judgment entered by stipulation of the original defendants to the action, in fraud of his rights. Cramer v. Tittle, 79 Cal. 332; 21 Pac. 750; Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797. Where the plaintiff transfers his interests to others, and the action is prosecuted in his name, without a substitution of parties or a change of attorneys of record, a stipulation for dismissal by the original plaintiff is a flagrant breach of good faith, and an order of dismissal, entered on such stipulation, should be promptly vacated. Walker v. Felt, 54 Cal. 386. Where, pending litigation, the defendant transfers his interest to a third person, and subsequently enters into a fraudulent stipulation with the plaintiff, allowing him to take judgment, such judgment will be set aside, on motion of the purchaser. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703; People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348; Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797. Where the plaintiff disposes of his interest, the substitution of the transferee as plaintiff is a matter in which the defendant is not concerned, and in which he cannot move; it concerns only the original plaintiff and the transferee; as against the defendant, the former has a right to remain in court until the case is disposed of. Hestres v. Brennan, 37 Cal. 385. The defendant can take advantage, by supplemental answer, of such transfer. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90; Hestres v. Brennan, 37 Cal. 385. The joinder of a transferee in an action to foreclose a mortgage is proper, if not necessary. Cerf v. Ashley, 68 Cal. 419; 9 Pac. 658. Infant heirs succeeding are substituted, ex parte, on motion. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. The want of substitution of a representative does not render the judgment of the appellate court void. Phelan v. Tyler, 64 Cal. 80; 28 Pac. 114. The death of an interested party in no way affects an appeal, and it will proceed without a substitution of his personal representative. Davies & Henderson Lumber Co. v. Gottschalk, 81 Cal. 641; 22 Pac. 860. A representative should be substituted in all cases, under this section, where the action does not abate on the death of the party. Union Savings Bank v. Barrett, 132 Cal. 453; 64 Pac. 713, 1071; Daneri v. Gazzola, 139 Cal. 416; 73 Pac. 179; De Leonis v. Walsh, 140 Cal. 175; 73 Pac. 813. The substitution of heirs and representatives is authorized by this section (Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Wackenreuder, 99 Cal. 503; 34 Pac. 219), which may be made on an ex parte suggestion and proof of death, without any amendment of the complaint, though all subsequent proceedings should be in the name of the substituted party. Kittle v. Bellegarde, 86 Cal. 556; 25 Pac. 55. Personal representatives are not proper parties to be substituted, where the decedent had transferred his interest; the action must either be continued in decedent's name by the transferee, or the latter substituted.

Tuffree v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 124 Cal. 306; 57 Pac. 69; Daneri v. Gazzola, 139 Cal. 416; 73 Pac. 179; Blinn Lumber Co. v. McArthur, 150 Cal. 610; 89 Pac. 436. Where the defendant transfers his interest, pendente lite, to one having notice of the pendency of the action, the transferee may elect to be substituted as defendant or to defend in the name of the original defendant, who thereupon becomes merely a nominal party, and upon his death his representatives cannot be substituted. Tuffree v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 124 Cal. 306; 57 Pac. 69. Where the respondent dies pending an appeal, his personal representatives must be substituted in the supreme court; substitution in the trial court, after appeal taken, is not noticed by the supreme court. Lyons v. Roach, 72 Cal. 85; 13 Pac. 151. An action in ejectment survives the death of the defendant, pendente lite, and the representative of the deceased may be substituted. Barrett v. Birge, 50 Cal. 655. Where the personal representatives are substituted, the judgment does not bind the transferee, and does not protect the adverse party. Daneri v. Gazzola, 139 Cal. 416; 73 Pac. 179.

Effect of disability of party. An appeal may be prosecuted by a bankrupt or his assignee, under this section, though the bankruptcy was adjudicated before the taking of the appeal. O'Neil v. Dougherty, 46 Cal. 575. An assignee for the benefit of creditors may be substituted as a party, in the place of an assignor in a pending action. Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253. Where one of the plaintiffs in an action is adjudged an insolvent during its pendency, his assignee need not be substituted in his place. Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264; 13 Pac. 661. Upon the expiration of the term of a public officer, the court, upon the proper suggestion of the fact, will order the substitution of his successor as defendant. Ex parte Tinkum, 54 Cal. 201; Jordan v. Hubert, 54 Cal. 260.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Construction of section. This rule as to right of a third person, under our statute, to be made a party, where he is directly interested in the subject-matter in litigation, as it existed upon this subject, both at law and in chancery, has been altered by the Practice Act of this state, by the sixteenth and seventeenth sections of which it is provided that, in case of the transfer of any interest in the action during the pendency, the suit may be continued in the name of the original party, or the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made to be substituted in the action. Again, it is provided that the court shall order parties to be brought in, if there cannot be a complete determination of the action without prejudice to their interests. Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 282.

2. Judgment for or against a party deceased. See § 669, post; see also Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 464.

3. Transfer of cause of action in ejectment. The transfer, by the plaintiff in ejectment, of the demanded premises, pending the action, is a transfer of the cause of action, within the provisions of this section, and the action may be continued in the name of the original plaintiff. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

4. Transfer of plaintiff's interest in cause of action. If the plaintiff has conveyed the demanded premises, pending ejectment, the court, by the consent of both the plaintiff and vendee, may make an order continuing the action in the name of the original plaintiff. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

5. Plaintiff may recover after sale of land. If the action is continued, as above stated, in the name of the original plaintiff, notwithstanding the premises have been transferred by him, he may recover judgment for both possession and the rents and profits. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

6. Death of one of several respondents. If one of several respondents died before notice of appeal was filed, a motion to dismiss the appeal as to him must be granted. Shartzer v. Love, 40 Cal. 96; Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463.

7. Husband cannot recover homestead on death of wife. If the wife die after an action has been commenced by herself and husband for the homestead, a recovery by the husband is defeated, although his right to recover existed at the time when the action was begun. Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472, overruling Taylor v. Hargous, 4 Cal. 273; 60 Am. Dec. 606; Poole v. Gerrard, 6 Cal. 71; 65 Am. Dec. 481; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 73; 68 Am. Dec. 304.

8. Death of party to a divorce suit abates action. Partitioner's community property. A supplemental decree in the divorce suit, after death of husband, under which the plaintiff claims to be the owner of the whole land sued for, was, in our judgment, null and void, as against the heirs at law. By the death of the husband, the suit abated, for all the purposes of further judicial action therein, on the subject of partitioning the common property, and the court had no jurisdiction to adjudge that the property should be sold and the proceeds divided, without a revivor as to the heirs. No such revivor was had, and the interest of the heirs was, therefore, unaffected by the supplemental decree, and the transactions under it. Ewald v. Corbett, 32 Cal. 499.

9. Where, during action in name of husband and wife, they are divorced. An action begun by husband and wife in their joint names, does not abate in consequence of a divorce. Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 335.

10. Conveyance of demanded land, pending suit. The conveyance of demanded premises, by the plaintiff in ejectment, pending the suit, to a person not a party to the action, does not necessarily defeat the action. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468; Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90.

11. Continuation of action in name of executor on death of party. What is a sufficient suggestion of death of principal, and a revival of the cause in the name of the executor. See Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 443.

12. Death of appellant after argument of his case on appeal. The death of an appellant after argument of his case upon appeal, does not constitute any ground for delaying a decision or departing from the ordinary course of procedure, except as to the entry of the judgment which may be rendered. The entry should be of a day anterior to the appellant's death. King v. Dunn, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 253; Campbell v. Mesier, 4 Johns. Ch. 335; 8 Am. Dec. 570; Miller v. Gunn, 7 How. Pr. 159; Black v. Shaw, 20 Cal. 69.

13. Death of appellant previous to argument on appeal. The rule is different from that above stated if the death occurs previous to the argument; in that event, further proceedings can only be had upon leave given after suggestion of the death is made. Black v. Shaw, 20 Cal. 69.

14. Defendants cannot change plaintiffs. The substitution of one person as plaintiff in place of another, in case of a transfer of the cause of action, is a matter which the defendant cannot move. It concerns only the plaintiff, or the person to whom the transfer is made. If the plaintiff desires to take advantage of the transfer for any cause, he must do so by supplemental answer. As against a defendant, a plaintiff has a right to stay in court till his case has been tried. Hestres v. Brennan, 37 Cal. 385.

15. Mode of showing the death of a party and substitution of his legal representatives. The death of a party, pendente lite, should be made known by suggestion of that fact to the court, and the action continued by order of the court against the representative of the party deceased, of which he must be duly notified before he can be affected by further proceedings in the action. Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 464.

16. Suggestion of the death of party. When it may be made. It is regular and proper to suggest the death of a party to an action in any court, and at any stage of the proceedings. And the death of a party occurring before the appeal taken may be shown in this court by affidavit of the fact. Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 464.

17. Death of the defendant during the pendency of an action. In an action to recover judgment on a promissory note, the suggestion of the death of the defendant, and the substitution of his administrator, and the continuance of the suit against him, subject the proceedings to such rules of the Probate Act as are applicable to proceedings for the collection of claims against an estate of a deceased person. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

18. Judgment against administrators enforcing attachment lien. If the defendant dies after the service of summons and the levy of an attachment on his property, and before judgment, and the administrator is substituted, and the action continued against him, the court cannot render a judgment enforcing the lien of the attachment by a sale of the attached property, and an application of the proceeds to the satisfaction of the demand. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

19. Purchase of property pending an action to recover possession of it. One who buys land during the pendency of an action to recover possession of it, in which his grantor is a defendant, may thereafter continue the defense in the name of his grantor, or may cause himself to be substituted in his place. Mastick v. Thorp, 29 Cal. 444.

§ 386. Another person may be substituted for the defendant. Conflicting claims, how made. A defendant, against whom an action is pending upon a contract, or for specific personal property, may, at any time before answer, upon affidavit that a person not a party to the action makes against him, and without any collusion with him, a demand upon such contract, or for such property, upon notice to such person and the adverse party, apply to the court for an order to substitute such person in his place, and discharge him from liability to either party, on his depositing in court the amount claimed on the contract, or delivering the property or its value to such person as the court may direct; and the court may, in its discretion, make the order. And whenever conflicting claims are or may be made upon a person for or relating to personal property, or the performance of an obligation, or any portion thereof, such person may bring an action against the conflicting claimants to compel them to interplead and litigate their several claims among themselves. The order of substitution may be made and the action of interpleader may be maintained, and the applicant or plaintiff be discharged from liability to all or any of the conflicting claimants, although their titles or claims have not a common origin, or are not identical, but are adverse to and independent of one another.

Legislation § 386. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 658, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 72, Kerr ed. p. 102, § 70, which had the word "due" before "notice to such person," and with this omission the section was enacted in 1872, ending with the words "make the order."

2. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 19, (1) changing the word "such" before "contract" and before "property" from the words "the same," and (2) adding the rest of the section after the words "make the order."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 126; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Intervention by substitution of defendant. A party sued upon a debt, contract, or claim, upon which another has or claims a demand, or right to receive the money, may, before answer, file an affidavit setting up such facts, and have an order made thereon, substituting such claimant as defendant in his place or stead; and by paying the money into the court he may be relieved of all further liability. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133; 10 Pac. 369; Howell v. Stetefeldt Furnace Co., 69 Cal. 153; 10 Pac. 390; Cross v. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co., 73 Cal. 302; 2 Am. St. Rep. 808; 14 Pac. 885; San Francisco Sav. Union v. Long, 123 Cal. 107; 55 Pac. 708; 137 Cal. 68; 69 Pac. 687; Orient Ins. Co. v. Reed, 81 Cal. 145; 22 Pac. 484; Woodmen of the Word v. Rutledge, 133 Cal. 640; 65 Pac. 1105; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. A person seeking to bring in a party to litigate his claim, must show that such person claims an interest in the property, or has made a demand therefor. McGorray v. Stockton

Sav. & L. Soc., 131 Cal. 321; 63 Pac. 479. The order should specifically state the nature and character of the claim of the defendant. Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166. There must be claims to be litigated, or an order for intervention cannot be made. Cahoon v. Levy, 4 Cal. 243.

Interpleader, where there are conflicting claims. The second clause of this section makes no provision for an order permitting the plaintiff in an action of interpleader to pay the money into court or to deliver the property. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111; Fox v. Sutton, 127 Cal. 515; 59 Pac. 939. This section applies to conflicting claims of attorneys to a particular fund for their fees (Sullivan v. Lusk, 7 Cal. App. 186; 94 Pac. 91, 92), and in an action to compel defendants to litigate among themselves their claims to certain moneys in the hands of plaintiff. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667. Where a case is a proper one for an interpleader, and the plaintiff's complaint is sufficient, an order will be made discharging him from liability to the conflicting claimants, and requiring them to litigate their several claims among themselves. Interlocking Stone Co. v. Scribner, 19 Cal. App. 344; 126 Pac. 178. Until an order is obtained therefor, a party cannot, of his own volition, relieve himself of responsibility by voluntarily placing the property or money in the hands of the clerk, which would not then, in any proper sense, be in the custody of the law. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. An interpleader will be sustained against persons who claim, legally or equitably, the same thing, debt, or duty, whenever it is necessary for the protection of one who has incurred no independent liability to any of the claimants and who does not himself claim an interest in the matter. Pfister v. Wade, 56 Cal. 43; Sullivan v. Lusk, 7 Cal. App. 186; 94 Pac. 91, 92. Where one of two claimants of the same fund litigates it and secures judgment, the other, standing by, cannot deprive him of the fruits of his labor, by compelling him to litigate again his right to the fund. Wilson v. Heslep, 4 Cal. 300. Defendants in interpleader are persons having adverse interests. McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592. Notice of the claim to the debtor is necessary, in order to make him liable to the claimant. Hogan v. Black, 66 Cal. 41; 4 Pac. 943. It is an inflexible rule, that the thing to which the parties make adverse claims must be one and the same thing, or in other words, the claims must be identical; there may be cases in which all the fund (where the plaintiff sustains to it the mere relation of a stockholder or trustee) may not be claimed by each of the defendants; but the defendants must assert adverse claims to all and every part of it. Pfister v. Wade, 56 Cal. 43. An action in interpleader cannot be employed to determine disputed claims between the plaintiff and the defendants; the amounts claimed by the defendants, or any of them, must be admitted by the plaintiff, and he must be a mere uninterested stakeholder; and where one of them claims more than the plaintiff admits to be due, the interpleader is defeated: the general rule is, that an interpleader cannot be invoked, where the plaintiff denies the claim; but a denial, made in another action, does not defeat an interpleader subsequently filed. Orient Ins. Co. v. Reed, 81 Cal. 145; 22 Pac. 484. It is essential to the right of interpleader, that the person standing in the position of a stakeholder is ignorant of the rights of the different claimants of the fund, debt, duty, or property owing by him or in his possession, or that there is some doubt as to whom he shall deliver the property, pay the debt, or render the duty, so that he cannot safely do so to any one of them. Pfister v. Wade, 56 Cal. 43.

The pleadings. Defects in matter of formal allegation may be cured by amendment. Orient Ins. Co. v. Reed, 81 Cal. 145; 22 Pac. 484. A demurrer must be made or an objection must be raised to the complaint, or any objection to the plaintiff's right of action will be deemed waived. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Long, 123 Cal. 107; 55 Pac. 708; Woodmen of the World v. Rutledge, 133 Cal. 640; 65 Pac. 1105. The plaintiff may dismiss the proceeding at any time, upon the payment of costs, where no counterclaim has been filed or affirmative relief asked. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904.

Order of substitution. An interlocutory order, requiring the defendants to come in and litigate their conflicting claims, should not be made until it has first been determined that the plaintiff has a right to bring the action. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Long, 123 Cal. 107; 55 Pac. 708. Persons brought in in invitum, under this section, are entitled to a change of place of trial to the county in which they reside. Howell v. Stetefeldt Furnace Co., 69 Cal. 153; 10 Pac. 390.

Liability of plaintiff. Where an interlocutory order is made, bringing in the conflicting claimants, and dismissing the plaintiff, he ceases to be a party to the action, and is not responsible for costs. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Long, 137 Cal. 68; 69 Pac. 387. It is not necessary that the plaintiff in a bill for interpleader shall offer to pay the costs of a previous suit by one of the defendants against him: such costs are taxable in that action. Orient Ins. Co. v. Reed, 81 Cal. 145; 22 Pac. 484.

Conflicting claimants. A corporation paying the money into court, and complying with the provisions of this section, may have the claimants to dividends substituted in its place as defendants, and be relieved of all responsibility. Cross v. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co., 73 Cal. 302; 2 Am. St. Rep. 808; 14 Pac. 885. An insurance company sustaining a loss, involving conflicting claims to the money payable thereunder, may file an action in interpleader, and have an order directing it to pay the money into court, and thus be discharged from further liability. Orient Ins. Co. v. Reed, 81 Cal. 145; 22 Pac. 484. A tenant may file a complaint in interpleader, making all the adverse claimants to the rents parties defendant, and pay the same into court, to abide the ultimate decision (McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592; Schluter v. Harvey, 65 Cal. 158; 3 Pac. 659); also on other claims, where there is privity of estate between the claimants and the landlord. McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592; Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166. In such cases the court may make an order directing the tenant to pay the amount of the rents stipulated in the lease into court, and thus absolve the tenant from liability to any of the parties. Schluter v. Harvey, 65 Cal. 158; 3 Pac. 659. Interpleader by a judgment debtor is not allowable, under this section. Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513; 14 Pac. 135.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This is § 658 of the Practice Act, taken from its place and inserted here because it relates to parties to actions.

When tenant finds there are adverse claimants to property he has rented. When there are adverse claimants to the property, a tenant should file a bill of interpleader, making them parties thereto, and offering to pay the rents into court to abide its ultimate decision. McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592.

§ 387. Intervention, when it takes place, and how made. At any time before trial, any person, who has an interest in the matter in litigation, or in the success of either of the parties, or an interest against both, may intervene in the action or proceeding. An intervention takes place when a third person is permitted to become a party to an action or proceeding between other persons, either by joining the plaintiff in claiming what is sought by the complaint, or by uniting with the defendant in resisting the claims of the plaintiff, or by demanding anything adversely to both the plaintiff and the defendant, and is made by complaint, setting forth the grounds upon which the intervention rests, filed by leave of the court and served upon the parties to the action or proceeding who have not appeared, and upon the attorneys of the parties who have appeared, who may answer or demur to it within ten days from the service thereof, if served within the county wherein said action is pending, or within thirty days if served elsewhere.

Eminent domain. Intervention in. Post, § 1246.

Legislation § 387. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 659–661 (Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 73, Kerr ed. p. 102, §§ 71–73), which read: "§ 71 [§ 659]. Any person shall be entitled to intervene in an action who has an interest in the matter in litigation, in the success of either of the parties, to the action or an interest against both. An intervention takes place, when a third person is permitted to become a party to an action between other persons, either by joining the plaintiff in claiming what is sought by the complaint, or by uniting with the defendant in resisting the claims of the plaintiff, or by demanding anything adversely to both the plaintiff and defendant." "§ 72 [§ 660]. A third person may intervene either before or after issue has been joined in the cause." "§ 73 [§ 661]. The intervention shall be by petition or complaint, filed in the court in which the action is pending, and it must set forth the grounds on which the intervention rests; a copy of the petitions or complaint shall be served upon the party or parties to the action against whom anything is demanded, who shall answer it as if it were an original complaint in the action." When enacted in 1872, the section read the same as when amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 296, down to the words "action or proceeding," the section ending, after these words, with the clause, "who may answer it as if it were an original complaint."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 296, and then read: "Any person may, before the trial, intervene in an action or proceeding, who has an interest in the matter in litigation, in the success of either of the parties, or an interest against both. An intervention takes place when a third person is permitted to become a party to an action or proceeding between other persons, either by joining the plaintiff in claiming what is sought by the complaint, or by uniting with the defendant in resisting the claims of the plaintiff, or by demanding anything adversely to both the plaintiff and the defendant, and is made by complaint, setting forth the grounds upon which the intervention rests, filed by leave of the court and served upon the parties to the action or proceeding who have not appeared, and upon the attorneys of the parties who have appeared, who may answer or demur to it as if it were an original complaint."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 127; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 703; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in adding the words, 'within ten days from the service thereof, if served within the county wherein said action is pending, or within thirty days if served elsewhere,' thus removing any ambiguity respecting the time within which the complaint in intervention must be answered."

Interest in the matter in litigation. Any one having an interest in the matter in litigation may be permitted to intervene before the trial of the action or the hearing of the proceedings. Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875. "To intervene" is to appear as a party, to protect some right, or an interest affected thereby, in a pending action, carried on by other persons, where the intervener has not the right to institute or carry on the proceeding himself. Estate of Ghio, 157 Cal. 552; 137 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 108 Pac. 516. Where the court allows a party to intervene, the plaintiff cannot afterwards, by a dismissal of the action as to some of the defendants, deprive such party of the right to a judgment on his claim, unless the court sets aside the order allowing intervention. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071. The interest entitling a person to intervene must be one created by a claim to the demand in a suit, or a claim to or lien upon the property which is the subject of the litigation. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569; Robinson v. Crescent City Mill etc. Co., 93 Cal. 316; 28 Pac. 950. The code does not attempt to state what or how great the interest shall be, in order to give the right to intervene; any interest is sufficient. Coffey v. Greenfield, 55 Cal. 382; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111; Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91; 63 Pac. 141. If one has any interest in the subject-matter of the litigation, or in the success of some of the parties, he has the right to intervene (Coffey v. Greenfield, 55 Cal. 382; Moran v. Bonynge, 157 Cal. 295; 107 Pac. 312); but the interest must be direct, in the subject-matter of the action (Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 281; Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35; Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184; Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742), either for or against one of the parties, or adversely to both (Stich v. Dickinson, 38 Cal. 608; Moran v. Bonynge, 157 Cal. 295; 107 Pac. 312); and it must be of such immediate and direct character that he will either gain or lose by the direct legal operation and effect of the judgment. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569. In an action of accounting between partners, the firm creditors may join in an intervention to share in a fund in the hands of one of the partners, the proceeds of a fraudulent sale of firm property (Grossini v. Perazzo, 66 Cal. 545; 6 Pac. 450); but an attaching creditor of an individual partner's interest in the partnership has no such interest in proceedings to wind up the affairs of the partnership as entitle him to intervene. Isaacs v. Jones, 121 Cal. 257; 53 Pac. 793, 1101. A creditor, by garnishment, may intervene in an action and set up his rights, under this section. Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 13 Pac. 621. Execution and attachment creditors may intervene to defeat the lien of a prior attachment (Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569; Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184; Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157; McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115; Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 673; Coffey v. Greenfield, 55 Cal. 382); as also may one who has procured a garnishment. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. Where, in an action, money claimed to belong to the debtor is attached, a third person, claiming it, may intervene (Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91; 63 Pac. 141); as also may an administrator, who claims that a note and mortgage, sued upon, belong to the estate of his decedent (Stich v. Dickinson, 38 Cal. 608); and also the assignee of an interest, pendente lite (Loughborough v. McNevin, 74 Cal. 250; 5 Am. St. Rep. 435; 14 Pac. 369; 15 Pac. 773); and also the assignee of the subject-matter, who still retains an interest therein, although the assignment is general (Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150); and also the assignee of a pledge. Loughborough v. McNevin, 74 Cal. 250; 5 Am. St. Rep. 435; 14 Pac. 369; 15 Pac. 773. The claimant of an interest in a fund or property held in trust, sought to be reached by creditor's bill, which is founded upon an agreement between the parties, entered into prior to the execution of the trust, and which was to have been included in the trust, but was not, may intervene, set up facts, and have the trust agreement reformed so as to protect his interests. Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. The judgment creditors of a decedent may intervene to set aside, as to them, an attachment procured on a debt not yet due (Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184; Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157), the attachment of a debt not yet due being void as to creditors whose interests are affected injuriously thereby. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184. Judgment creditors having liens may intervene as subsequent debtors in a foreclosure suit against a common debtor (Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569); as also may judgment creditors of the same class with the plaintiff, in an action by creditor's bill, to reach unpaid subscriptions to the stock of a debtor corporation. Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1; 37 Pac. 767. An actual settler on swamp-lands may intervene in an action to determine who is entitled to purchase; and if the petition does not show the right to intervene, the court may, in its discretion, allow the intervener, as amicus curiæ, to remain in the case for the purpose of showing that neither of the parties is entitled to purchase, where he is not allowed to take anything by the judgment. McNee v. Lynch, 88 Cal. 519; 26 Pac. 508. He may intervene before judgment, but not afterwards. Smith v. Roberts, 1 Cal. App.

148; 81 Pac. 1026. An intervention may be had in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, and will be as much a compliance with law as the institution of an original suit (Mars v. McKay, 14 Cal. 127; Sheldon v. Gunn, 56 Cal. 582); and a mortgagee holding a prior mortgage may intervene in such an action (Walker v. Hauss-Hijo, 1 Cal. 183; Van Winkle v. Stow, 23 Cal. 457); as also may mortgagee, subsequent to a mechanic's lien for labor done, if he makes timely application (Hocker v. Kelley, 14 Cal. 164); but material-men who have not filed liens cannot intervene. Walker v. Hauss-Hijo, 1 Cal. 183. The statute must be strictly complied with, in order to give rights under the mechanic's lien law. Davis v. Livingston, 29 Cal. 283. In an action to determine the right to a mining claim, under § 3226 of the United States Revised Statutes, only such persons as have filed claims to the land in the United States land-office may intervene. Mont Blanc etc. Mining Co. v. Debour, 61 Cal. 364. Persons having an interest in property involved in an action to quiet title may intervene (Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071); but a third party cannot intervene in an action in ejectment to quiet title (Rosecrans v. Ellsworth, 52 Cal. 509), by alleging title adversely to both parties (Porter v. Garrissino, 51 Cal. 559); nor in proceedings to condemn a particular riparian right. San Joaquin etc. Irrigation Co. v. Stevinson, 164 Cal. 221; 128 Pac. 924. An insane person may intervene, where otherwise qualified, but he can appear only by general guardian or guardian ad litem, and the court has authority to appoint a guardian ad litem in intervention, just as it has in other cases. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Kauffman, 108 Cal. 214; 41 Pac. 467; Crawford v. Neal, 56 Cal. 321. The sureties of a defendant on a replevin bond may intervene, as they will be affected by the judgment. Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742; Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 281. Bondholders interested in the success of a defendant may intervene, but, like him, they cannot seek any affirmative relief. Boskowitz v. Thompson, 144 Cal. 724; 78 Pac. 290. Stockholders may intervene, where the corporation refuses to answer, or, having properly answered, does not defend in good faith. Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646; 44 Pac. 1086. Where a debt secured by mortgage is barred by statute, the mortgage is also barred; and where one acquires a lien on the property subsequently to the mortgage, he may intervene and plead the statute, to the extent of his interest, in an action to foreclose the mortgage. Coster v. Brown, 23 Cal. 142; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Low v. Allen, 26 Cal. 141; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361; Wood v. Goodfellow, 43 Cal. 185. The mortgagee, when entitled to immediate possession under the recorded mortgage, may intervene in an action by a third person to recover from the mortgagor the specific property; and the fact that the plaintiff takes the property, and gives the statutory bond, does not defeat the mortgagee's right to intervene. Martin v. Thompson, 63 Cal. 3. The lien of a mortgage upon a growing crop is not lost by severance or tortious removal by a third person. Martin v. Thompson, 63 Cal. 3; Wilson v. Prouty, 70 Cal. 196; 11 Pac. 608; Chittenden v. Pratt, 89 Cal. 178; 26 Pac. 626. A mortgagee, subsequent to the one in foreclosure proceedings, may intervene to show that the mortgage sought to be foreclosed is barred by the statute. Coster v. Brown, 23 Cal. 142. A simple contract creditor of a common debtor cannot intervene in an action to foreclose a mortgage executed by such common debtor (Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569); nor can general creditors intervene, unless they have acquired some lien upon the subject-matter of the action. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184; Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157; Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 673. A wife may intervene in an action to foreclose a mortgage on property claimed as a homestead. Sargent v. Wilson, 5 Cal. 504; Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296; Mabury v. Ruiz, 58 Cal. 11; Fitzgerald v. Fernandez, 71 Cal. 504; 12 Pac. 562; Booth v. Hoskins, 75 Cal. 271; 17 Pac. 225. An administrator cannot intervene in a suit brought to determine a controversy between different heirs as to their respective rights of inheritance, in which no claim is made against the estate of the deceased or against the administrator, or against his right to retain possession of the property during the administration of the estate, or against the application of any property in his hands to the purpose of such administration. Estate of Healy, 137 Cal. 474; 70 Pac. 455; Roach v. Coffey, 73 Cal. 281; 14 Pac. 840; Estate of Jessup, 80 Cal. 625; 22 Pac. 260; Goldtree v. Thompson, 83 Cal. 420; 23 Pac. 383; Jones v. Lamont, 118 Cal. 499; 62 Am. St. Rep. 251; 50 Pac. 766. When the complaint in intervention shows the intervener to be the real party in interest, he has the right to intervene. Robinson v. Crescent City Mill etc. Co., 93 Cal. 316; 28 Pac. 950.

How intervention is made. The right to intervene is purely statutory, and the statute prescribes the mode; intervention is made by complaint, setting forth the grounds upon which the intervention rests, filed by leave of the court, and served upon the parties to the action, who may answer or demur as if it were an original complaint. Chase v. Evoy, 58 Cal. 348. Application for leave to intervene may be granted ex parte. Spanagel v. Reay, 47 Cal. 608; People v. Pfeiffer, 59 Cal. 89; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. Where the intervener is allowed to defend in the name of a defendant in the action, no harm results to him from an erroneous order. Muller v. Carey, 58 Cal. 538. The intervener is to be regarded as a plaintiff or as a defendant in the action, unless he seeks something adversely to both, according as is the party for whose success he seeks to intervene, and is limited to the same procedure and remedies as is such original party, either for the purpose of defeating the action or of resisting the claim of the plaintiff. Boskowitz v. Thompson, 144 Cal. 724; 78 Pac. 290. The complaint must affirmatively show the facts which entitle the petitioner to intervene. People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256. Where the intervener joins the defendant in resisting the plaintiff's claim, the complaint in intervention is, in effect, an answer to the complaint of the plaintiff. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773; Henry v. Vineland Irrigation Dist., 140 Cal. 376; 73 Pac. 1061. The rules applicable to pleadings in general apply with equal force to pleadings in intervention. Hadsall v. Case, 15 Cal. App. 541; 115 Pac. 330. Intervention is treated as a complaint, by this section, to which either party may demur, answer, or file a cross-complaint (Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27; 62 Pac. 386); and the plaintiff must meet the issues raised by the complaint, so long as he seeks relief in the action. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071. A complaint in intervention, to recover a share of commissions, alleging the placing of the property in the plaintiff's hands, to be sold upon specified terms as to the division of the profits, is sufficient, if it does not allege performance (Gorham v. Heiman, 90 Cal. 346; 27 Pac. 289), and its insufficiency must be objected to by demurrer, to be available on appeal (Gorham v. Heiman, 90 Cal. 346; 27 Pac. 289); and an objection because of the insufficiency of the complaint or the want of right, must be made at the time, or the right to object will be considered waived. McKenty v. Gladwin, 10 Cal. 227; Smith v. Penny, 44 Cal. 161; Bangs v. Dunn, 66 Cal. 72; 4 Pac. 963; People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; 18 Pac. 309. It cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court. People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; 18 Pac. 309. All objection thereto is waived by entering into a stipulation with the intervener, that his claim shall be determined upon certain facts. Donner v. Palmer, 51 Cal. 629. Averments, in an answer to a complaint in intervention, must, under the statute, be considered denied by the intervener. (Pearson v. Creed, 78 Cal. 144; 20 Pac. 302); and an allegation, in a complaint in intervention, that the partnership previously existing between the plaintiff and the defendant had never been dissolved, is deemed to be denied by the answer. Strong v. Stapp, 74 Cal. 280; 15 Pac. 835. A failure to find on an immaterial issue is not error, and does not affect the judgment. Gorham v. Heiman, 90 Cal. 346; 27 Pac. 289. An averment in the complaint, not denied, need not be found (Gorham v. Heiman, 90 Cal. 346; 27 Pac. 289; Grossini v. Perazzo, 66 Cal. 545; 6 Pac. 450); and the decision thereon cannot be controlled or reviewed by mandamus. People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34; People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; 87 Am. Dec. 110; People v. Weston, 28 Cal. 639. The order dismissing an intervention should state precisely the grounds relied on. Coffey v. Greenfield, 62 Cal. 602; Kiler v. Kimbal, 10 Cal. 267; McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426; People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470; Sanchez v. Neary, 41 Cal. 485, 486; Poehlmann v. Kennedy, 48 Cal. 201; Silva v. Holland, 74 Cal. 530; 16 Pac. 385; Miller v. Luco, 80 Cal. 257; 22 Pac. 195; Belcher v. Murphy, 81 Cal. 39; 22 Pac. 264; Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577; 23 Pac. 198; Bronzan v. Drobaz, 93 Cal. 647; 29 Pac. 254; People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235; 33 Pac. 202. The inaction of defendants in permitting their default does not preclude an intervener from his relief. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071. An order of the court, consolidating cases and providing for intervention, although irregular, must be excepted to. Bangs v. Dunn, 66 Cal. 72; 4 Pac. 963; People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; 18 Pac. 309.

Intervention must be before trial. Intervention may be made before issue is joined (Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 281; Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742), or afterwards, at any time after the commencement of the action (Ah Goon v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 555; Robinson v. Crescent City Mill etc. Co., 93 Cal. 316; 28 Pac. 950; Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Churchill, 128 Cal. 633; 79 Am. St. Rep. 73; 61 Pac. 278), or before the trial, if the complaint therein raises no issues other than those raised by the answer on file. Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742. It may be had even after the cause is called for trial, but before it is commenced (Ah Goon v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 555), but it cannot be allowed after trial. Johnson v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 63 Cal. 554. Judgment creditors may intervene at any time before judgment is entered. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. A default, by which all the issues tendered by the complaint are admitted in plaintiff's favor, is equivalent to a trial, and shuts out intervention. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Churchill, 128 Cal. 633; 79 Am. St. Rep.

73; 61 Pac. 278. After final judgment and decree, the application to intervene must be denied. Hocker v. Kelley, 14 Cal. 164; Laugenour v. Shanklin, 57 Cal. 70; Carey v. Brown, 58 Cal. 180; Cunningham v. Shanklin, 60 Cal. 118; Owens v. Colgan, 97 Cal. 454; 32 Pac. 519; Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875; Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1; 37 Pac. 767. There is no authority for intervention, after judgment, and while the cause is pending on appeal; a stranger to the record cannot be heard on appeal. Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875. The general rule is, that intervention cannot be allowed after final judgment (Owens v. Colgan, 97 Cal. 454; 32 Pac. 519; Laugenour v. Shanklin, 57 Cal. 70; Carey v. Brown, 58 Cal. 180; Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1; 37 Pac. 767); but where the plaintiff attempts to sue in behalf of others, and the would-be intervener is interested in the thing recovered, the rule is otherwise, and he may be permitted to intervene after judgment and before distribution, so as to receive his share (Carey v. Brown, 58 Cal. 180); and where the cause is reversed, and remanded for retrial, intervention may be had (Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875), as it may, also, after the decision in a contest of the right to purchase public lands (Laugenour v. Hennagin, 59 Cal. 625; Cunningham v. Shanklin, 60 Cal. 118), and after an interlocutory order for an accounting, not establishing any indebtedness (Clarke v. Baird, 98 Cal. 642; 33 Pac. 756); but not after an interlocutory decree in partition, fixing the respective interests of the parties. Leonis v. Biscailuz, 101 Cal. 330; 35 Pac. 875.

What may be demanded. Intervening creditors cannot raise or litigate a question as to the validity of a note and mortgage as between the original parties: all they can demand is a judgment protecting their interests, and preventing the enforcement of the judgment to their prejudice (Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569); nor, in an action brought by an assignee to foreclose a mortgage executed by a husband, can the wife, intervening, question the validity of the assignment of the mortgage, nor demur to the complaint on this ground; the only question that can be considered is the homestead character of the property. Mabury v. Ruiz, 58 Cal. 11.

Pleadings and proceedings. Allegations in a complaint in intervention, traversing the complaint of the plaintiff, have the same effect as denials in an answer have, and require affirmative proof by the plaintiff, to entitle him to judgment. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. A plaintiff, against whom no affirmative relief is sought, may dismiss his action at any time, both as against the defendant and the intervener (Henry v. Vineland Irrigation Dist., 140 Cal. 376; 73 Pac. 1061); and an intervener, against whom no relief is sought, may dismiss his complaint of intervention at any time, and abandon the contest (Sheldon v. Gunn, 56 Cal. 582); and the court may set aside an order, made ex parte, allowing the complaint in intervention to be filed, and dismiss the complaint. People v. Pfeiffer, 59 Cal. 89. Where the intervener claims an interest in the subject-matter of the action, adverse to both parties, and the complaint in intervention is answered by the plaintiff, and material issues are raised, the nonsuit of the plaintiff, on motion of the defendant, does not affect the intervener, and the issues raised by the complaint in intervention and the answer thereto remain. Poehlmann v. Kennedy, 48 Cal. 201. The plaintiff has a right to an appeal where intervention is granted in a justice's court, and to have the superior court pass upon the sufficiency of his demurrer to the complaint, without any statement of the case. Rossi v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 371; 46 Pac. 177; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471. Where the complaint in intervention is not properly set out in the record, the supreme court will presume that the demurrer thereto was properly overruled. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. A judgment in favor of the intervener, against the defendant, will not be reversed upon appeal of the plaintiff, where he is not aggrieved thereby. People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; 18 Pac. 309. Where the defendant and the intervener prosecute separate appeals from a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, and from an order denying a new trial, the affirmance of the judgment and order on the appeal of the defendant does not operate to oust the authority of the supreme court to reverse it afterwards, on the appeal by the intervener. Donner v. Palmer, 45 Cal. 180. Formerly, an order denying a motion to intervene was not appealable (Wenborn v. Boston, 23 Cal. 321); but now an appeal may be taken from an order sustaining an objection to the right to intervene. Stich v. Dickinson, 38 Cal. 608. The sureties on a replevin bond are entitled to intervene; and where their motion for leave to intervene is denied, they may immediately prosecute an appeal. Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742; People v. Grant, 45 Cal. 97. Where permission has been given to intervene, the intervener may appeal from the judgment, although no judgment was rendered against him. People v. Perris Irrigation District, 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773.

Who may become interveners. See note 15 Am. Dec. 162.

Origin and nature of intervention. See note 16 Am. Dec. 177.

Intervention. See note 123 Am. St. Rep. 280.

Right of contract creditors to intervene in equity. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 1091.

Right of claimant of attached property to intervene. See notes 18 Ann. Cas. 594; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 536.

Right of adverse claimant to intervene in action for partition. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 82.

Right of surety to intervene in an action against principal or principal in action against surety. See note 68 L. R. A. 736.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Intervention may take place either before or after issue joined. A party has the right to intervene in an action in case of the transfer of any interest during the pendency thereof, or when he is directly interested in the subject-matter in litigation, and this can be done either before or after issue has been joined in the case. Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 281.

2. What interest is necessary to entitle party to intervene. Before a party may intervene in an action between third parties, he must have such an interest in the matter in litigation of such a direct and immediate character that the intervener will either gain or lose by the direct legal operation and effect of the judgment. It must be an interest created by a claim to the demand, or some part thereof, in suit or a claim to or lien upon the property, or some part thereof, which is the subject of litigation. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569; see also Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307.

3. Assignor of a claim retaining an interest therein may intervene in an action by assignee thereon. If a party assigns a claim absolutely, retaining, however, an interest in it, he may intervene to protect his interest in an action brought by the assignee to collect the same, and if he does not intervene, he is bound by the judgment. Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150.

4. Who may intervene in foreclosure suit. A simple contract creditor cannot intervene in a foreclosure suit. But judgment creditors, being, as such, subsequent encumbrancers, may intervene; and a court may order them to be made parties by an amendment of the complaint, or on petition of intervention. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569.

5. When co-tenants cannot intervene in action by one of the tenants in common. Where one tenant in common sues to recover possession of the premises, and the damages sustained by the ouster, his co-tenants cannot intervene. Donner v. Palmer, 23 Cal. 40.

6. Subsequent mortgagee no right of intervention in action to enforce lien. A mortgagor of a ditch, subsequent to the lien, has no absolute right to intervene in an action to enforce the mechanic's lien on the ditch. And when the suit has been pending some time, and the application to intervene was made just as plaintiff was taking judgment, the application was too late, and therefore properly refused. Hocker v. Kelley, 14 Cal. 164.

7. Right to intervene in a suit where property is attached. If the first attachment was fraudulently obtained, and the debtor has not sufficient property to pay both claims, a subsequent attaching creditor, who has his attachment levied on the property previously levied on by a prior attaching creditor, may intervene in the action between the first attaching creditor and the defendant. Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 673.

8. Intervention by judgment creditors in attachment suits. Judgment creditors can intervene in an attachment suit, and have the attachment set aside, because as to them it was void. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184.

9. Intervention by subsequent attaching creditors in attachment suit. Where an attachment has been levied upon the property of a defendant in an action to recover money, a subsequent attaching creditor may intervene, any time before judgment is entered, and dispute the validity of the first attachment. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280, 81 Am. Dec. 157, sustaining Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378, 79 Am. Dec. 184, and Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569. In a case like this, before the passage of this provision of the code, and as doubtless may still be done, the proceedings would have been by a separate action, in the nature of a bill in chancery, as in the case of Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376, 65 Am. Dec. 519; or by a motion to the court, as in Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570; Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157.

10. Owner of lien subsequent to mortgage may intervene and plead statute of limitations as to mortgage. If an action is brought to foreclose a mortgage barred by statute of limitations, one who has purchased or acquired a lien on the property subsequent to the mortgage has a right to intervene and plead the statute of limitations. Coster v. Brown, 23 Cal. 142.

11. Intervention by creditors in an action on a fraudulent note and mortgage. In an action on a note and mortgage, where creditors of the defendant intervened, alleging the note and mortgage to be fraudulent as against them, the interveners cannot prevent a judgment for plaintiff against defendant. The most they can claim is protection against the enforcement of the judgment to their prejudice. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569.

When defendant alone can object. If the proceedings between the debtor and a prior creditor are not void, but voidable, the defendant can alone object. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

12. Wife may intervene in action to foreclose mortgage on homestead. The wife is a proper party defendant in a suit to foreclose a mortgage executed upon premises claimed as a homestead. If not made such a party, she may intervene, or, by permission of the court, be allowed to file a separate answer. Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 297; Sargent v. Wilson, 5 Cal. 504. See also Dillon v. Byrne, 5 Cal. 456.

13. Intervention by county to recover tax on property which is the subject of an action. A had property deposited with B, which was taxed by the county, and payment demanded of both A and B, and it was held that in an action concerning the money, the county might intervene so as to recover the tax. Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 37.

14. Intervention of same effect as commencing an original action. In an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, the interveners having filed their intervention and become parties to the suit within the prescribed time and during the existence of the lien, the effect of their position is precisely the same as if they had commenced an original action. Mars v. McKay, 14 Cal. 129.

15. Petition of intervener treated as a declaration or complaint. See People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 258.

16. Onus probandi as to action between plaintiff and interveners. "Where a subsequent attaching creditor intervenes in an action for the purpose of setting aside an attachment issued therein, on the ground that there is no debt due from the defendant to the plaintiff, the allegations in the pleading on the part of the intervener, traversing the complaint, have the same effect as denials in an answer, and require affirmative proof by the plaintiff of his cause of action, in default of which the intervener will have judgment in his favor." Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280 (syllabus); 81 Am. Dec. 157.

17. Objection to intervention in trial below cannot be made on appeal. An objection cannot be made on appeal for the first time that certain persons could not intervene in an action prosecuted in an inferior court. McKenty v. Gladwin, 10 Cal. 227.

18. Decision of lower court as to right of parties to intervene cannot be reviewed on mandamus. A motion for leave to intervene in an action, made at any stage of the proceedings, presents a judicial question, the decision of which cannot be reviewed or controlled by the supreme court by mandamus, however erroneous it may be. People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532.

Generally. See Dutil v. Pacheco, 21 Cal. 441; 82 Am. Dec. 749.

§ 388. Associates may be sued by name of association. When two or more persons, associated in any business, transact such business under a common name, whether it comprises the names of such persons or not, the associates may be sued by such common name, the summons in such cases being served on one or more of the associates; and the judgment in the action shall bind the joint property of all the associates, and the individual property of the party or parties served with process, in the same manner as if all had been named defendants and had been sued upon their joint liability.

Partners under fictitious name must file certificate. See Civ. Code, §§ 2466 et seq.

Legislation § 388. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 656 (Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 72, Kerr ed. p. 102, § 68), reading as at present down to the words "more of the associates," the section then proceeding, "but the judgment in such case shall bind only the joint property of the associates." When enacted in 1872, the section read the same as now, except for the clause, "and the individual property of the party or parties served with process."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 127; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 704; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'and the individual property of the party or parties served with process' have been added, thus avoiding multiplicity of suits."

Parties associated in business. Two or more persons, transacting business under a common name, may be sued under such common name (Hearst v. Egglestone, 55 Cal. 365; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456; Goodlett v. St. Elmo Investment Co., 94 Cal. 297; 29 Pac. 505); but the plaintiff is not bound to sue them by their common name. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456. Where it is alleged in the complaint that the defendant is a copartnership, but no attempt is made to allege who comprise it, the action is one under this section. John Bollman Co. v. S. Bachman & Co., 16 Cal. App. 589, 590; 117 Pac. 690. Many exceptions exist to the general rule, that, in equity, all must be parties who have an interest in the object of the suit; but all persons in being, capable of appearing, who are interested, must be brought into court. Los Angeles County v. Winans, 13 Cal. App. 234; 109 Pac. 640. Before the amendment of the Practice Act, in a case where the plaintiff sued H. & Co. under their common name, alleging that other persons composing the firm were unknown to him, and on the trial was unable to prove that there was any person or persons associated with H., it was held that the words "& Co." might be stricken out and the cause proceed against H. alone. Mulliken v. Hull, 5 Cal. 245. Plaintiff may join as defendants all claiming title adversely from a common source, whether they are a voluntary association, copartners, or individuals. Senior v. Anderson, 115 Cal. 496; 47 Pac. 454. A judgment not appealed from cannot be modified. John Bollman Co. v. S. Bachman & Co., 16 Cal. App. 589; 117 Pac. 690.

Common name. The action must be against the parties in the association, in the name in which they transact their business. King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318. Persons who have been carrying on business under a common name may be sued in such name. San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111. Where a party seeks the advantages secured to him by this section, he ought to show substantially, in his complaint, that the conditions stated therein exist in his case. Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85; Maclay Co. v. Meads, 14 Cal. App. 363; 112 Pac. 195; 113 Pac. 364. The benefit fund of an unincorporated society belongs absolutely to the beneficiaries, when named; and an action cannot be maintained, under this section, by personal representatives. Swift v. San Francisco Stock etc. Board, 67 Cal. 567; 8 Pac. 94; Hoeft v. Supreme Lodge, 113 Cal. 91; 33 L. R. A. 174; 45 Pac. 185. Actions against partnerships may be brought against the individual partners, or against the firm name under which the partnership transacts business. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456. A copartnership sued in its common name, under this section, as it stood prior to its amendment in 1907, was regarded as a distinct entity. John Bollman Co. v. S. Bachman & Co., 16 Cal. App. 589; 117 Pac. 690. Where associates are not sued in their common name, but in their individual names, this section does not apply. Feder v. Epstein, 69 Cal. 456; 10 Pac. 785; Davidson v. Knox, 67 Cal. 143; 7 Pac. 413. A suit against a copartnership, in its common name, is not a suit against the individuals comprising the copartnership. John Bollman Co. v. S. Bachman & Co., 16 Cal. App. 589; 117 Pac. 690. Where the members of a firm are described as defendants in the caption of the complaint, but in the body thereof as defendant, in the singular number, a demurrer for ambiguity should be sustained, and a judgment based thereon must be reversed. Hawley Bros. Hardware Co. v. Brownstone, 123 Cal. 643; 56 Pac. 468. The action must be brought against all members of the partnership; where brought against the individuals, this section does not apply. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456; Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 356; Cotes v. Campbell, 3 Cal. 191; Morrison v. Bradley, 5 Cal. 503; Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135. A dormant partner need not be joined as a party defendant, because he stands in the relation of an undisclosed principal. Tomlinson v. Spencer, 5 Cal. 291. The association designated by the common name is the only proper party defendant, under this section; and the only judgment authorized thereunder, prior to the amendment of 1907, was a judgment binding the joint property of the associates. John Bollman Co. v. S. Bachman & Co., 16 Cal. App. 589; 117 Pac. 690. An action by an association, in the common name, is not within this section; the names of the partners should be given. Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 356; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456.

Judgment binds joint property. Under this section, there can be no judgment against the separate property of any associate or partner, not served or made a party; the judgment is a lien only upon the individual interests of those served. Davidson v. Knox, 67 Cal. 143; 7 Pac. 413; Feder v. Epstein, 69 Cal. 456; 10 Pac. 785; Golden State etc. Iron Works v. Davidson, 73 Cal. 389; 15 Pac. 20. Judgment for or against one or more of several defendants, under §§ 578, 579, post, is authorized only under the rules established by the code or the general principles of law (McDonald v. Porsh, 136 Cal. 302; 68 Pac. 817), and a sale under it transfers only the individual interest of the partners made parties. Golden Gate etc. Iron Works v. Davidson, 73 Cal. 389; 15 Pac. 20; Davidson v. Knox, 67 Cal. 143; 7 Pac. 413. Where an association of persons, transacting business under a common name, contracts a debt, secured by a mortgage of one or more of the associates, or of a third person, the mortgagee, in his action to foreclose, may proceed against the association, under this section, for the purpose of obtaining a deficiency judgment binding only the joint property of the associates. Goodlett v. St. Elmo Investment Co., 94 Cal. 297; 29 Pac. 505. The joint property of all the defendants may be bound by the service of summons upon one or more of a larger number of associates. Los Angeles County v. Winans, 13 Cal. App. 234; 109 Pac. 640. Service on one partner, in an action against the copartnership, binds the firm property; but it will not, where the action is against the partners as individuals. Maclay Co. v. Meads, 14 Cal. App. 363; 112 Pac. 195.

Right of unincorporated association to sue in association name in absence of permissive statute. See note 6 Am. St. Rep. 833.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This is substantially § 656 of the Practice Act, inserted here as the appropriate place for it.

1. Action may be brought against a defendant, but not for a plaintiff, in firm name. Defendants may be sued in firm name, but an action cannot be brought by plaintiffs in firm name. Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 357.

2. Plaintiff cannot sue in the name of the firm. A complaint should set forth the names of the individuals composing the firm as plaintiffs, if the action is intended to be in behalf of the individuals composing such firm. Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 357.

3. Complaint in an action against a company by its company name. If the complaint does not show the existence of the conditions provided for in this section, and a judgment is rendered by default, it is a debatable question whether or not the judgment is void. But if the conditions, as required by this section, appear in the complaint, and the summons was served on one of the members of the company, and judgment is had by default against the company, the judgment may be enforced against the joint property of the company. Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85.

§ 389. Court, when to decide controversy or to order other parties to be brought in. The court may determine any controversy between parties before it, when it can be done without prejudice to the rights of others, or by saving their rights; but when a complete determination of the controversy cannot be had without the presence of other parties, the court must then order them to be brought in, and to that end may order amended and supplemental pleadings, or a cross-complaint to be filed, and summons thereon to be issued and served. And when, in an action for the recovery of real or personal property, or to determine conflicting claims thereto, a person, not a party to the action, but having an interest in the subject thereof, makes application to the court to be made a party, it may order him to be brought in, by the proper amendment.

Joining landlord. Ante, § 379; Civ. Code, § 1949.

Party, adding and striking out name of. Ante, § 473.

Legislation § 389. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 17 (New York Code, § 122), which read same as § 389 now reads, down to the words "presence of other parties," thereafter reading and ending "the court shall order them to be brought in."

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 9, to read as at present, but not containing the clause, "or to determine conflicting claims thereto."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 127; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 704; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'or to determine conflicting claims thereto' have been added, thus authorizing the bringing in of new parties in actions to determine conflicting claims of real or personal property, and thus avoiding multiplicity of actions."

Construction of section. This section is applicable to proceedings for the revocation of the probate of a will; it does not apply merely to parties who were not named in the first instance. San Francisco Protestant Orphan Asylum v. Superior Court, 116 Cal. 443; 48 Pac. 379. The right to have new parties brought in under this section still exists, and this may be done whenever the court finds it necessary for a proper determination of the controversy before it. Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel, 10 Cal. App. 75; 101 Pac. 31.

Saving rights of others. The right to bring in new parties is to be exercised when the court finds them necessary for the proper determination of the controversy before it; but this right is subject to its power to determine the controversy before it, without bringing in new parties, when it can be done without prejudice to the rights of others, or by a saving of their rights. O'Connor v. Irvine, 74 Cal. 435; 16 Pac. 236; Alison v. Goldtree, 117 Cal. 545; 49 Pac. 571; Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel, 10 Cal. App. 75; 101 Pac. 31. A stockholder is a proper party defendant, and should be permitted to be made such, upon proper application, where it is alleged that the corporation will not defend in good faith. Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646; 44 Pac. 1086.

When new parties may be brought in. Where other persons are interested in the subject-matter, without whose presence the controversy cannot be fully determined, the court should order them brought in (Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490; Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 392; Robinson v. Gleason, 53 Cal. 38; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456; O'Connor v. Irvine, 74 Cal. 435; 16 Pac. 236; Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 9 Am. St. Rep. 245; 18 Pac. 658; Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407; Cuyamaca Granite Co. v. Pacific Paving Co., 95 Cal. 252; 30 Pac. 525); although the parties to the action have not objected to such defect of parties; and the failure of the court to order such necessary parties to be brought in, is fatal to the judgment (O'Connor v. Irvine, 74 Cal. 435; 16 Pac. 236; Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490, 498; Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 392; Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407; Alison v. Goldtree, 117 Cal. 545; 49 Pac. 571; Mitau v. Roddan, 149 Cal. 1; 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 275; 84 Pac. 145); but this section does not authorize the court to bring into the action, for determination, a controversy between one of the parties and a stranger, which is irrelevant to the action between the parties before it. Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171. Persons receiving an interest pendente lite must be brought in, when their presence is necessary to a full determination of the controversy. Ashton v. Heggerty, 130 Cal. 516; 62 Pac. 934; Treasurer v. Commercial Coal Mining Co., 23 Cal. 390; Ralston v. Bank of California, 112 Cal. 208; 44 Pac. 476. It is the policy of the law, and the peculiar province of a court of equity, to have a complete determination of a controversy before the court, when it can be done; but when this cannot be done without the presence of other parties, they may be brought in, under the provisions of this section (Newhall v. Bank of Livermore, 136 Cal. 533; 69 Pac. 248; Boskowitz v. Thompson, 144 Cal. 724; 78 Pac. 290; Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155); but the attention of the court must be called to the defect, in some manner. Syvertson v. Butler, 3 Cal. App. 345; 85 Pac. 164. Where the contest can be settled without affecting the rights of others, there is no ground or reason for bringing in other parties; such procedure is not required by this section (Lytle Creek Water Co. v. Perdew, 65 Cal. 447; 4 Pac. 426; Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel, 10 Cal. App. 75; 101 Pac. 31); nor can the court order other parties to be brought in, when, on the coming in of the answer, it is of the opinion that they are not necessary to a full determination of the controversy. Hughson v. Crane, 115 Cal. 404; 47 Pac. 120; Syvertson v. Butler, 3 Cal. App. 345; 85 Pac. 164. A plaintiff, not knowing which one of two defendants is liable for a wrongful act, cannot implead them together, and ask the court to fix the liability, without stating a cause of action against either. Hannon v. Nuevo Land Co., 14 Cal. App. 700; 112 Pac. 1103. In a controversy involving the obligation of three defendants to pay the balance due on a promissory note, the question of contribution among the co-guarantors is not necessary to its determination. Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel, 10 Cal. App. 75; 101 Pac. 31. Though a defendant, after answer, is adjudicated a bankrupt, this does not affect the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien against his property, by the plaintiff, nor require that the trustee in bankruptcy shall be made a party to the action. Kritzer v. Tracy Engineering Co., 16 Cal. App. 287; 116 Pac. 700.

Issuance of alias summons. See note post, § 408.

Parties necessary to a complete determination. A subsequent vendee is a necessary party to an action to quiet title, and should be brought in. Birch v. Cooper, 136 Cal. 636; 69 Pac. 420. A person claiming an interest in the controversy is entitled to come in and defend such interest. Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253. The beneficiary is a necessary party in an action to declare a trust and compel the performance of it, where the trustee claims to own the property in his own right, to the exclusion of the beneficiary. O'Connor v. Irvine, 74 Cal. 435; 16 Pac. 236. The beneficiary in possession, for whose benefit the plaintiff holds the legal title, is a proper party, and may be brought in by cross-complaint. Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407. In an action to restrain the collection of an excessive assessment for interest on the bonds of an irrigation district, brought against the collector, neither the irrigation district, its agent for the sale of the bonds, nor the holder of illegal bonds, is a necessary party, and should not be brought in. Hughson v. Crane, 115 Cal. 404; 47 Pac. 120. In an action on a joint contract, all the parties thereto must be brought in. Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616; 11 Pac. 456; Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 392; Cuyamaca Granite Co. v. Pacific Paving Co., 95 Cal. 252; 30 Pac. 525. In an action to foreclose a mortgage upon an undivided interest, a prior mortgagee of the whole estate is a proper party defendant, and, by cross-complaint, he may bring in the owners of the other undivided interests and the subsequent mortgagee, and ask the foreclosure of his mortgage. Newhall v. Bank of Livermore, 136 Cal. 533; 69 Pac. 248. Where a third party holds two mortgages, one on the land in litigation and the other on another parcel, he may set up both mortgages and have them foreclosed. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612; 60 Pac. 165; and see Brill v. Shively, 93 Cal. 674; 29 Pac. 324; Newhall v. Bank of Livermore, 136 Cal. 533; 69 Pac. 248. In an action to compel a corporation to transfer stock, sold under foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, the mortgagor is not a necessary party, and need not be brought in. Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 9 Am. St. Rep. 245; 18 Pac. 658. A motion to vacate a previous order, sustaining a demurrer to the cross-complaint of the defendant, made after some of the defendants have answered, should be entertained, where no final judgment has been entered in favor of such defendants. De la Beckwith v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 496; 80 Pac. 717. In a partnership accounting, the assignee of a partner is a necessary party, and should be brought in. Cuyamaca Granite Co. v. Pacific Paving Co., 95 Cal. 252; 30 Pac. 525. A purchaser, after issue joined, is properly ordered in as a party defendant, so that the whole controversy may be determined. Robinson v. Gleason, 53 Cal. 38. Different persons, using the waters of a stream, under separate appropriations, are tenants in common, and any one may maintain a suit to enjoin trespass and diversion of water without joining the others, and the failure to bring them in is not error. Lytle Creek Water Co. v. Perdew, 65 Cal. 447; 4 Pac. 426.

Supplemental pleadings. Where facts occur subsequently to the filing of a pleading, and which change the liability of the defendant, and a third party becomes interested, and a necessary party by reason thereof, as by the marriage of a female defendant, or by the purchase of an interest pendente lite, such party should be brought in by supplemental pleadings. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238; Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467. But simply ordering parties brought in, or inserting necessary facts in the pleadings and their names as parties, does not give the court jurisdiction over them; as to them, it is a new action; their names must be inserted in the summons, and process served on them, the same as in an original suit, unless they voluntarily appear. Pico v. Webster, 14 Cal. 202; 73 Am. Dec. 647; Powers v. Braly, 75 Cal. 237; 17 Pac. 197.

Cross-complaint. Necessary parties may be brought in by way of cross-complaint. Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407; Eureka v. Gates, 120 Cal. 54; 52 Pac. 125; Lewis v. Fox, 122 Cal. 244; 54 Pac. 823. Leave to file a cross-complaint, bringing in new parties, made ex parte, may be vacated without notice, by the judge who made it. Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171. New issues cannot be set up by cross-complaint, nor can new parties be brought in to set up an issue not involved in the original action. East Riverside Irrigation Dist. v. Holcomb, 126 Cal. 315; 58 Pac. 817. The general rule is, that a plaintiff may select the parties defendant, and that new parties, brought in against his will, cannot be allowed to set up against him new defenses and affirmative causes of action which the original defendant could not set up, especially where the granting of the relief sought by the complaint could not prejudice the new matters and causes of action sought to be adjudicated. East Riverside Irrigation Dist. v. Holcomb, 126 Cal. 315; 58 Pac. 817.

Alias summons. Where parties are brought in by order of the court, or by stipulation of the parties, there may be service of an alias summons by publication. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252.

Waiver of objection. An objection that one interested in the litigation should have been made a party is waived, unless presented by demurrer or answer. Bell v. Solomons, 142 Cal. 59; 75 Pac. 649.

Amendment of pleading by changing character in which defendant is sued as bringing in new parties. See note, 10 Ann. Cas. 150.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Application and construction of section. See Brooks v. Hager, 5 Cal. 281; see note 1 to § 385, ante; and note 1 to § 387, ante.

2. Clause additional to the section as it stood before the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure. The last sentence, commencing, "And when, in an action for the recovery of real or personal property," etc., is a new provision.

3. All rights determined in one action. A court of equity will not permit litigation by piecemeal. The whole subject-matter, and all the parties, should be before it, and their respective claims determined once and forever. Wilson v. Lassen, 5 Cal. 116. The rights of all should be adjusted, and nothing left open for future litigation, if it can be helped. Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 516.

4. Order to bring in other parties. Where it turns out, upon the trial, that a complete determination of the controversy cannot be had without the presence of other parties, the court should, of its own motion, order them to be brought in before a final disposition of the case. Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 497.

5. Court may bring in other parties, without waiting for demurrer. The omission of the defendant to demur for want of parties, does not affect the power of the court, under this section of the code, from directing other parties to be brought in, if it finds that it cannot completely determine the case in their absence. Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. But the right of demurrer was given to enable the court to bring in necessary parties. Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697.

6. What may be tried in partition. Any question affecting the right of the plaintiff to a partition, or the rights of each and all of the parties in the land, may be put in issue, tried, and determined in such action. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 330; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

7. Parties to suit for partition. A married woman, whose husband is sued in partition, is a necessary party, if she claims a homestead right to or an interest in the property in dispute. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 329; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

8. Disclaimer in partition. In an action of partition, a defendant cannot claim that the action be dismissed as to him, on the ground that his answer disclaims any interest in the land, unless he has made the disclaimer in absolute and unconditional terms. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 329; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

9. Wife must be brought in, in action to foreclose mortgage on homestead. In an action to foreclose a mortgage against a husband, where the defendant sets up the right of homestead, the court should order the wife of defendant to be brought in as a party, as no decision upon the question of homestead can be conclusive, either upon the husband or the wife, unless both are parties. Marks v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 96.

10. Even accommodation grantees and fictitious depositaries of title may be brought in. Although some of the parties may be mere accommodation grantees and fictitious depositaries of title, still they have a right to be heard at law in their own defense, before courts of chancery can pronounce definitely on their claims. Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 213.

11. Who are unnecessary parties, and need not be brought in. See Peralta v. Simon, 5 Cal. 313.

12. If persons are not made parties, they are unaffected by judgment. Persons not parties to a suit in ejectment, and in possession before and at the time it is brought, or those claiming under them, cannot be ousted by the writ of restitution issued upon a judgment therein, in favor of the plaintiff. See also, for other particulars, Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200.

§ 390. Actions against fire departments. Causes of action upon contract, or for damages arising out of, or pertaining or incident to the official administration of the fire departments created by acts of the legislature of this state, shall be brought directly by and against the municipality by its corporate name wherein the damage was sustained. And the said boards of fire commissioners shall not be sued as such, except to compel or restrain the performance of acts proper to be compelled or restrained under and not within the discretion intended to be conferred by this act.

Legislation § 390. 1. Added by Stats. 1885, p. 92.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 128; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

TITLE IV.

PLACE OF TRIAL OF CIVIL ACTIONS.

§ 392. Certain actions to be tried where the subject or some part thereof is situated.
§ 393. Other actions, where the cause or some part thereof arose.
§ 394. Place of trial of actions against counties.
§ 395. Actions to be tried in county in which defendant resides, etc. If defendant does not reside in state.
§ 396. Action may be tried in any county, unless the defendant demand a trial in the proper county.
§ 397. Place of trial may be changed in certain cases.
§ 398. When judge is disqualified, cause to be transferred.
§ 399. Papers to be transmitted. Costs, etc. Jurisdiction, etc.
§ 400. Proceedings after judgment in certain cases transferred.

§ 392. Certain actions to be tried where the subject or some part thereof is situated. Actions for the following causes must be tried in the county in which the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial, as provided in this code:

1. For the recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest therein, or for the determination in any form, of such right or interest, and for injuries to real property;

2. For partition of real property;

3. For the foreclosures of all liens and mortgages on real property.

Where the real property is situated partly in one county and partly in another, the plaintiff may select either of the counties, and the county so selected is the proper county for the trial of such action.

Riot. Actions for damages caused by, must be tried in county in which property injured is situated. Pol. Code, § 4453.

Legislation § 392. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 18, as amended by Stats. 1861, p. 494, which (1) had the word "shall" instead of "must," and the word "act" instead of "code," in the first paragraph, (2) in subd. 2, had the word "the" before "partition," (3) subd. 3 ended with the words "real property," and (4) section ended with the paragraph, "Provided, that where such real property is situate partly in one county and partly in another, the plaintiff may select either of said counties, and the county so selected shall be the proper county for the trial of any, or all, of such actions as are mentioned in the first, second, and third, subdivisions of this section." When enacted in 1872, the proviso paragraph was changed to read: "Where the real property is situated partly in one county and partly in another, the plaintiff may select either of the counties, and the county so selected is the proper county for the trial of such action."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 90, and in subd. 3 the words "a mortgage of" changed to "all liens and mortgages on."

3. Amended by Stats. 1889, p. 352, (1) omitting, in subd. 2, the word "the" before "partition," and (2) adding, at end of subd. 3, after words "such action," the proviso, "provided, that in the case mentioned in this subdivision, if the plaintiff prays in his complaint for an injunction pending the action, or applies pending the action for an injunction, the proper county for the trial shall be the county in which the defendant resides or a majority of the defendants reside at the commencement of the action."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 128; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 700; the code commissioner saying, "The former provision at the end of the section, that if in an action to recover real property an injunction is at any time applied for, the proper county for the trial is that in which the defendant resides, is omitted. The old provision is inconsistent with § 5 of article vi of the constitution, requiring actions of this character to be brought in the county in which the property, or some part thereof, is situated."

County where the subject of the action is situated. This section is a limitation of the general jurisdiction of the superior court, and is to be strictly construed; it goes no further than to prohibit the commencement of certain enumerated actions affecting real property, in counties other than those in which the land is situated. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 140 Cal. 132; 73 Pac. 836; Wood v. Thompson, 5 Cal. App. 247; 90 Pac. 38. As this section declares an exception to the general rule, the conditions under which the exception is claimed must be clearly and distinctly shown. Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209. It is only where real estate alone is the subject-matter of the suit that the provisions of this section can be invoked against the defendant. Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Anaheim Odd Fellows' Hall Ass'n v. Mitchell, 6 Cal. App. 431; 92 Pac. 531. An action for the determination, in any form, of a right of interest in real estate, is triable in the county in which the property is situated. Franklin v. Dutton, 79 Cal. 605; 21 Pac. 964. The word "action" does not include "special proceedings"; and as originally enacted, §§ 392 to 395 referred only to "actions" as defined by § 22, ante, and not to "special proceedings" as defined by the sections following § 22. Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136; Lake Pleasanton Water Co. v. Contra Costa Water Co., 67 Cal. 659; 8 Pac. 501; Aliso Water Co. v. Baker, 95 Cal. 268; 30 Pac. 537; Siskiyou County v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94; 42 Pac. 468; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 221; 43 Pac. 602; San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Gould, 122 Cal. 601; 55 Pac. 411; Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101; 57 Pac. 766. The nature of an action is determined by the nature of the relief that can be granted in it. Robinson v. Williams, 12 Cal. App. 515; 107 Pac. 705. Actions are deemed transitory, where the transactions upon which they are founded may occur anywhere; local, where their cause is in its nature essentially local. Ophir Silver Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 467; 3 Ann. Cas. 340; 82 Pac. 70. The provision as to the place where the action shall be tried does not affect the jurisdiction of the court (Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139; Grocers' Fruit etc. Union v. Kern County Land Co., 150 Cal. 466; 89 Pac. 120), but is a matter of legislative regulation. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Kauffman, 108 Cal. 214; 41 Pac. 467. There is a distinction between the jurisdiction of courts, and the right to have the action tried in the county of defendants' residence: the court may have jurisdiction, and still the defendant may be entitled to have the place of trial changed. State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 602; 86 Pac. 840. Each of the defendants has a right to the trial of the cause in the county in which the land is situated (O'Neil v. O'Neil, 54 Cal. 187), but there is no requirement that actions for injury to real property shall be commenced in that county. Miller & Lux v. Madera Canal etc. Co., 155 Cal. 59; 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391; 99 Pac. 502. The proper place for the trial of an action for injury to real property is in the county where such property is situated (Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 6 Cal. Unrep. 684; 65 Pac. 312), where a change of the place of trial may be ordered for special reasons. Ophir Silver Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 467; 3 Ann. Cas. 340; 82 Pac. 70. Where an action against a corporation for injury to real estate is brought in the county where it has its principal place of business, which is not that where the land is situated, the defendant cannot demand, as a matter of right, and without any showing of grounds, that the place of trial be changed. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856. See also Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 140 Cal. 132; 73 Pac. 836. An action to enforce a trust in land should be tried in the county where the land is situated, though an incidental accounting is also asked for. Hannah v. Canty, 1 Cal. App. 225; 81 Pac. 1035. An action for the destruction of the plaintiff's buildings by fire, caused by negligence, must be tried in the county where the land is situated (Las Animas etc. Land Co. v. Fatjo, 9 Cal. App. 318; 99 Pac. 393), as must also an action to cancel a contract for the purchase of land. Robinson v. Williams, 12 Cal. App. 515; 107 Pac. 705. In an action to recover real property, the complaint need not state the residence of the parties: the location of the land determines the venue. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432. An action to quiet title to land must be brought in the county where the land is situated (Fritts v. Camp, 94 Cal. 393; 29 Pac. 867; Pacific Yacht Club v. Sausalito Bay Water Co., 98 Cal. 487; 33 Pac. 322); as must also an action brought on a trust deed (Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012; More v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 345; 28 Pac. 117; Le Breton v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 27; 4 Pac. 777); and an action to reform a contract of sale of land (Franklin v. Dutton, 79 Cal. 605; 21 Pac. 964); and an action to set aside a fraudulent sale of land by an administrator, and to annul the order of sale. Sloss v. De Toro, 77 Cal. 129; 19 Pac. 233. Domestic corporations, as well as natural persons, have the right to have real or quasi-real actions tried in the county in which the land is situated. Cook v. Ray Mfg. Co., 159 Cal. 694; 115 Pac. 318. An action for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land may be commenced in the county of the principal place of business of a corporation defendant, but the corporation has the right to have the place of trial changed to the county where the land is situated. Grocers' Fruit Growing Union v. Kern County Land Co., 150 Cal. 466; 89 Pac. 120. The court assumed, in an action to set aside conveyances of land, release of interest therein, and certain assignments of mortgages, that such action was a real action, and within the provisions of this section. Kimball v. Tripp, 136 Cal. 631; 69 Pac. 428. An action to cancel a deficiency judgment, improperly rendered in another county, in a foreclosure suit, upon ex parte application, after the right thereto had been lost by the decree, and a levy thereunder made, upon lands in another county, seems to have been properly brought in the county in which the lands levied upon are situated. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139. Though an action has been properly commenced under this section, yet the court is bound by the mandatory terms of § 394, post, concerning a transfer of the action. Yuba County v. North America etc. Mining Co., 12 Cal. App. 223; 107 Pac. 139.

"Or some part thereof is situated." An action for the partition of distinct parcels of land, situated in different counties, may be brought in any county in which any portion of the land is situated; the term "real property" is used in the code, and the term "real estate" is used in the constitution, and either term, in its popular as well as in its legal acceptation, is broad enough to include several distinct parcels of land, as well as one entire tract. Murphy v. Superior Court, 138 Cal. 69; 70 Pac. 1070. An action must be wholly local in its nature, under this section, to entitle it to be tried in a county other than that of the residence of the defendant; and if real and personal actions are joined, the case falls within § 395, post, and must be tried in the county of the residence of the defendant. Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Booker v. Aitken, 140 Cal. 471; 74 Pac. 11.

Subject to power of court to change venue. Where an action is brought in the wrong county, a motion for a change of venue, and not a demurrer, is the proper remedy. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321. A demand filed is essential to the validity of an application for a change of venue. Estrada v. Oreña, 54 Cal. 407; Byrne v. Byrne, 57 Cal. 348; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523. Where an action to compel the conveyance of land is commenced in the county in which the land is situated, the place of trial may be changed, either by consent of the parties or by order of the court, to another county, to promote the convenience of the witnesses. Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443. By amending his complaint, the plaintiff cannot deprive the defendant of any right existing at the time the motion is made for change of venue. Buell v. Dodge, 57 Cal. 645; Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311. One of several defendants may apply for a change of venue, and he is entitled to have such change, on a proper showing, notwithstanding a co-defendant has waived his right to a change. O'Neil v. O'Neil, 54 Cal. 187; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Pieper v. Centinela Land Co., 56 Cal. 173; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8. The right of change is absolute; the court has no discretion in the matter, where timely application and proper showing is made (Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321; Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649); but the court is not bound, of its own motion, to change the place of trial. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321 (overruling, so far as conflicting, Vallejo v. Randall, 5 Cal. 461). The right to a change of the place of trial of a cause involving the title to or the right to the possession of real property is a legal right, and may be waived (Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321; Vallejo v. Randall, 5 Cal. 461; O'Neil v. O'Neil, 54 Cal. 187; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108); but the waiver of the right, by one defendant, does not affect the right of the others. O'Neil v. O'Neil, 54 Cal. 187. The right is waived by consenting to a trial in another county (Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443); and also by stipulating that the case be set for trial at a time to suit the convenience of a judge called in to try the cause. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557.

Venue of actions for recovery of real property. Actions to recover real property, or an interest therein, or for injuries thereto, or for determining any right or interest therein, must be commenced in the county in which the land is situated. Baker v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 73 Cal. 182; 14 Pac. 686; Williams v. Hall, 79 Cal. 606; 21 Pac. 965. The constitution requires that "all actions for the recovery of the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real estate, shall be commenced in the county in which the real estate, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated" (Goldtree v. McAlister, 86 Cal. 93; 23 Pac. 207; 24 Pac. 801; Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 197; 24 Pac. 1000; Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288; 43 Am. St. Rep. 100; 38 Pac. 81; Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139; Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 140 Cal. 132; 73 Pac. 836; Campbell-Kawannanakoa v. Campbell, 152 Cal. 201; 92 Pac. 184); and this provision is not retroactive (Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91); nor does it provide that the action shall be tried, but simply that it shall be commenced, in the county in which the land is situated (Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443); and the statutory provision of the third subdivision of this section is not an element going to the jurisdiction of the court, but is a matter of legislative regulation. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Kauffmann, 108 Cal. 214; 41 Pac. 467. The privilege secured to a defendant, under this section, may be lost by laches, or waived by submitting to the jurisdiction of the court of another county, and the like. Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523.

For determination of right or interest. An action for the determination of a right or interest, in any form, in real estate, is triable in the county where the land is situated (Williams v. Hall, 79 Cal. 606; 21 Pac. 965; Bentley v. Fraser, 16 Cal. App. 560; 117 Pac. 683); as is also an action for the reformation of a contract of sale of land (Franklin v. Dutton, 79 Cal. 605; 21 Pac. 964); and an action for partition is maintainable in any county in which a part of the property is situated. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. An action to annul or cancel a mortgage is one for the determination of a right or interest in real property (Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Baker v. Fireman's Fund Ins.

Co., 73 Cal. 182; 14 Pac. 686); as is also an action to enforce a trust in real property, and to avoid a deed (Booker v. Aitken, 140 Cal. 471; 74 Pac. 11); and an action for the rescission of the sale of a mine and water rights. Bartley v. Fraser, 16 Cal. App. 560; 117 Pac. 683.

Venue in actions for injury to real property. An action for injury to real property is within this section (People v. Selby Smelting etc. Co., 163 Cal. 84; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 1267; 124 Pac. 692, 1135), although caused by acts done in another county (Last Chance Water Ditch Co. v. Emigrant Ditch Co., 129 Cal. 277; 61 Pac. 960), and an action to abate a nuisance, also causing injury to real property. Marysville v. North Bloomfield etc. Mining Co., 66 Cal. 343; 5 Pac. 507. An action to enjoin the diversion of water from a ditch situated in two counties may be brought in either county; and a corporation defendant having its principal place of business in the county other than that in which the action is brought, is not entitled to a change of the place of trial to that county. Last Chance Water Ditch Co. v. Emigrant Ditch Co., 129 Cal. 277; 61 Pac. 960. An action to enjoin the erection of a dam, which will permanently injure real estate, is within this section (Drinkhouse v. Spring Valley Water Works, 80 Cal. 308; 22 Pac. 252); as is also an action to restrain mining upon certain land (Ophir Silver Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 467; 3 Ann. Cas. 340; 82 Pac. 70), and an action for damages occasioned by the destruction of buildings by fire. Las Animas etc. Land Co. v. Fatjo, 9 Cal. App. 318; 99 Pac. 393.

For partition of real property. An action for the partition of real property among tenants in common, who derive title from the same source, is within this section. Murphy v. Superior Court, 138 Cal. 69; 70 Pac. 1070.

For the foreclosure of liens and mortgages. An action to enforce a vendor's lien on land is within this section (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pixley, 103 Cal. 118; 37 Pac. 194; Baker v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 73 Cal. 182; 14 Pac. 686); as is also an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage (Goldtree v. McAlister, 86 Cal. 93; 23 Pac. 407; 24 Pac. 801; Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 197; 24 Pac. 1000; Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012), and an action to foreclose a tax lien (People v. Plumas-Eureka Mining Co., 51 Cal. 566); and an action to cancel a mortgage for fraud. Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333; 36 Pac. 650. In an action to foreclose a mortgage on land, the plaintiff must both allege and prove that the land is situated in the county in which the action is brought. Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 197; 24 Pac. 1000. Every court takes judicial notice of the existence and boundaries of the territory within which it exercises jurisdiction, as well as of the subject-matter over which jurisdiction has been conferred on it. People v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 234; 50 Pac. 305. A decree of foreclosure, rendered by the court of the wrong county, is void. Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288; 43 Am. St. Rep. 100; 38 Pac. 81.

Personal actions. An action for an accounting, even though involving real estate, is personal, and is not within this section. Clark v. Brown, 83 Cal. 181; 23 Pac. 289; Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356. Such an action must be tried in the county where the defendant resides, although the land is situated in another county. Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333; 36 Pac. 650; Griffin etc. Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495. Nor is an action for the breach of a covenant in a deed, nor an action for the cancellation of a deed, for a divorce, and for a division of the community property, within this section (Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523); nor an action for the removal of a trustee of real property (More v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 345; 28 Pac. 117); nor an action for the settlement of a trust in relation to real and personal property (Le Breton v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 27; 4 Pac. 777); nor an action in the nature of a creditor's bill, to set aside a deed made by an executor, on the ground of fraud (Beach v. Hodgdon, 66 Cal. 187; 5 Pac. 77); nor an action in which mandamus is sought, to compel the sheriff to execute a deed (McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655); nor an action to recover the purchase-money for land sold (Samuel v. Allen, 98 Cal. 406; 33 Pac. 273); nor an action against a wife to recover the cost of a party-wall (Anaheim Odd Fellows' Hall Ass'n v. Mitchell, 6 Cal. App. 431; 92 Pac. 331); nor an action for damages for the fraud of an agent in the sale of shares of stock. Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698. An action to remove a trustee of mining property is personal: he has the right to have the cause tried in the county of his residence. Golden Cross Mining etc. Co. v. Spiers, 115 Cal. 247; 47 Pac. 108.

Forum in which action for damages to realty must be brought. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 344.

Venue of action to recover shares of stock. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 506.

Venue of action to set aside transfer of realty within state as in fraud of creditors. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 663.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Actions to foreclose mortgages must be tried in the county in which the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated. Vallejo v. Randall, 5 Cal. 462; but see Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 324, overruling this case in some particulars.

2. Residence of parties in actions concerning real property is immaterial. It is unnecessary to mention the residence of the parties, or either of them, in actions concerning real property. The statute only provides for the trial of actions in certain counties; and with reference to actions to recover real property, the situation of the premises, and not the residence of the parties, determines the county. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 433.

3. Mining claims are within the provisions of this section. See Hughes v. Devlin, 23 Cal. 506, affirming Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 324.

4. Not applicable to probate proceedings. This section does not apply to probate proceedings. Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220.

5. Court is not bound, on its own motion, to change the venue. It is a matter of right as to the parties, however. For convenience, parties have a right to a trial of particular cases in particular counties. This is a mere privilege, which may be waived by those entitled to it. It must be claimed at the proper time, and in the proper way. It is not, by our statute, matter in abatement of the writ, but a mere privilege of trial of the suit in the given county. The party desiring a change of venue should move the court to change the place of trial, and then the court, in the proper case, has no discretion to refuse the motion. It seems to be made by the statute a matter of peremptory right. We think the court is not bound, of its own motion, to change the venue, and overrule so far the case of Vallejo v. Randall, 5 Cal. 461, if that case is to be so construed. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 324.

§ 393. Other actions, where the cause or some part thereof arose. Actions for the following causes must be tried in the county where the cause, or some part thereof, arose, subject to the like power of the court to change the place of trial:

1. For the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute; except, that when it is imposed for an offense committed on a lake, river, or other stream of water, situated in two or more counties, the action may be brought in any county bordering on such lake, river, or stream, and opposite to the place where the offense was committed;

2. Against a public officer, or person especially appointed to execute his duties, for an act done by him in virtue of his office; or against a person who, by his command or in his aid, does anything touching the duties of such officer.

Legislation § 393. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 19 (New York Code, § 124).

Actions defined. The word "actions," as used in this section, refers to such actions as are defined in § 22, ante, and does not include "special proceedings." Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136.

Actions for the recovery of a penalty. An action for the recovery of a statutory penalty must be tried in the county where the cause of action, or some part thereof, arose. Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381.

Actions against a public officer. The second subdivision of this section applies only to such affirmative acts of an officer as directly interfere with the personal rights or property of the person complaining, such as wrongful arrests, trespass, and conversion, and not to mere omissions or neglect of official duty. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; Bonestell v. Curry, 153 Cal. 418; 95 Pac. 887; State Commission v. Welch, 154 Cal. 775; 99 Pac. 181. An executor is not a public officer, within this section; and he is entitled to have a change of venue to the county of his residence, when sued in the county in which the estate is being administered, particularly in the absence of a motion to retain the case in the county for the convenience of witnesses. Thompson v. Wood, 115 Cal. 301; 47 Pac. 50. In an action for false imprisonment, the defendant has the right to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence. Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381. Statutory provisions determining the proper place of trial do not affect the jurisdiction of the court. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139. Probate proceedings were not civil actions, within the meaning of §§ 18–21 of the Practice Act. Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220. An action for damages for fraud in the sale of stock is personal and transitory, and not within this section. Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The second subdivision of this section, which provides that actions against a public officer for acts done by him in virtue of his office, shall be tried in the county where the cause, or some part thereof, arose, applies only to affirmative acts of the officer, by which, in the execution of process, or otherwise, he interferes with the property or rights of a third person, and not to mere omissions or neglect of official duty. Elliot v. Cronk, 13 Wend. 35; Hopkins v. Haywood, 13 Wend. 265; McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 420; 70 Am. Dec. 655.

§ 394. Place of trial of actions against counties. An action or proceeding against a county, or city and county, may be commenced and tried in such county, or city and county, unless such action or proceeding is brought by a county, or city and county, in which case it may be tried in any county, or city and county, not a party thereto. Whenever an action or proceeding is brought by a county, city and county, or city, against a resident of another county, city and county, or city, or a corporation doing business in the latter, the action or proceeding must be, on motion of the said defendant, transferred for trial to a county, or city and county, other than the plaintiff, if the plaintiff is a county, or city and county, and other than that in which the plaintiff is situated, if the plaintiff is a city, and other than that in which the defendant resides or is doing business or is situated. Whenever an action or proceeding is brought against a county, city and county, or city, in any county, or city and county, other than the defendant, if the defendant is a county, or city and county, or, if the defendant is a city, other than that in which the defendant is situated, the action or proceeding must be, on motion of the said defendant, transferred for trial to a county, or city and county, other than that in which the plaintiff, or any of the plaintiffs, resides, or is doing business, or is situated, and other than the plaintiff county, or city and county, or county in which such plaintiff city is situated, and other than the defendant county, or city and county, or county in which such defendant city is situated. In any action or proceeding, the parties thereto may, by stipulation in writing, or made in open court, and entered in the minutes, agree upon any county, or city and county, for the place of trial thereof. This section shall apply to actions or proceedings now pending or hereafter brought.

Actions against cities for injuries from mobs. See Pol. Code, § 4453.

Legislation § 394. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 45, Kerr ed. p. 194), and then read: "§ 394. Actions against counties may be commenced and tried in any county in the judicial district in which such county is situated, unless such actions are between counties, in which case they may be commenced and tried in any county not a party thereto."

2. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 23, to read: "An action against a county, or city and county, may be commenced and tried in such county, or city and county, unless such action is brought by a county, or city and county, in which case it may be commenced and tried in any county, or city and county, not a party thereto."

3. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 56, by adding the proviso: "provided further, that whenever an action is brought by a county or city against citizens of another county, or a corporation doing business in the latter, the action must be, on the motion of the defendant, transferred for trial to a county other than the plaintiff, if the plaintiff be a county, and other than that in which the plaintiff is situated if the plaintiff be a city."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 128; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 700, (1) in the first sentence, striking out "city and county," after "county," in the three instances; (2) changing the proviso into a sentence, and incidentally striking out "provided further, that"; (3) substituting "residents" for "citizens"; (4) inserting "or city" after "another county"; (5) substituting "is" for "be" in the two instances. The code commissioner says, in his note, "The word 'citizen' is stricken out, and the word 'residence' is inserted, that having been the legislative intent in the original enactment of the section."

6. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 721, the old section being recast, and two new sentences added at the end thereof.

Section not special legislation. This section is not special legislation, merely because it provides a different rule in the case of non-resident defendants from that which applies to resident defendants. Yuba County v. North America etc. Mining Co., 12 Cal. App. 223; 107 Pac. 139.

Action defined. The word "action," as used in this section, does not include a special proceeding. Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136.

Action by a county. Where, in an action by a county against the county treasurer and the sureties on his bond, a motion is made by a substituted administrator of a deceased surety for a change of the place of trial to the county of the residence of the surety, the burden of proof is on such administrator to show that none of the other defendants resided in the county at the time suit was brought. Modoc County v. Madden, 136 Cal. 134; 68 Pac. 491; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Greenleaf v. Jacks, 133 Cal. 506; 65 Pac. 1039. This section applies to an action by a county against a non-resident to enjoin the pollution of a stream (Yuba County v. North America etc. Mining Co., 12 Cal. App. 223; 107 Pac. 139); and to all actions brought by the state. State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 602; 86 Pac. 840. The language of this section which applies to an action by a county, as plaintiff, against a corporation doing business in another county, is mandatory, that the action must, on motion of the defendant, be transferred to a county other than the plaintiff. Yuba County v. North America etc. Mining Co., 12 Cal. App. 223; 107 Pac. 139.

Venue of action against municipal corporation. See note 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 711.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1854, p. 194.

§ 395. Actions to be tried in county in which defendant resides, etc. If defendant does not reside in state. In all other cases, the action must be tried in the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, or if it be an action for injury to person, or property, or for death from wrongful act, or negligence, in the county where the injury occurs, or the injury causing death occurs, or in the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action. If none of the defendants reside in the state, or, if residing in the state, and the county in which they reside is unknown to the plaintiff, the same may be tried in any county which the plaintiff may designate in his complaint, and if the defendant is about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where either of the parties reside, or service is had, subject however, to the power of the court to change the place of trial, as provided in this code. If any person is improperly joined as a defendant, or has been made a defendant solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county where he resides, his residence must not be considered in determining which is the proper county for the trial of the action.

Change of venue in criminal actions. See Pen. Code, §§ 1033, 1034.

Legislation § 395. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 20 (New York Code, § 125), as amended by Stats. 1858, p. 82, which read: "In all other cases, the action shall be tried in the county in which the defendants, or any one of them, may reside at the commencement of the action; or, if none of the defendants reside in the state, or, if residing in this state, the county in which they so reside be unknown to the plaintiff, the same may be tried in any county which the plaintiff may designate in his complaint; and if any defendant or defendants may be about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where either of the parties may reside or service be had; subject, however, to the power of the court to change the place of trial as provided in this act." When enacted in 1872, (1) the words "action. If none" read "action; or, if none," (2) the words "residing in the state," read "residing in this state," (3) and the section ended with the words "provided in this code."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 128; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 700, the code commissioner saying, "The last sentence of this section has been added, and the amendment thereby made is intended to reach cases where a person has been made a defendant solely for the purpose of having an action tried in the county wherein he resides, thus taking away from the defendant properly joined and from the real defendants the rights of change of venue intended to be vouchsafed to them in other sections of the code."

4. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 847, adding to the end of the first sentence all the matter beginning with "or if it be an action for injury," the other sentences not being amended.

Construction of section. This section applies to an action for damages for personal injuries (McDonald v. California Timber Co., 151 Cal. 159; 90 Pac. 548); and also to actions brought by the state (State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 602; 86 Pac. 840); and to an action for the fraud of an agent in the sale of corporate stock (Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698); and to an action on a note past due, without reference to the place of its execution or payment (Bell v. Camm, 10 Cal. App. 388; 102 Pac. 225); but it does not apply to special proceedings, such as those for the condemnation of land (Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136); nor to an action to set aside a deed. Sloss v. De Toro, 77 Cal. 129; 19 Pac. 233. Actions for the condemnation of land must be brought and tried in the county where the land is situated, unless transferred to another county, as provided in this section. Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136. Condemnation proceedings should be tried in the county where the land is situated, although the defendants therein reside elsewhere. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293. The defendant's right to have an action tried in the county of his residence is subordinate to the direction in § 392, ante, that a local action, as one to enforce a trust in mining property, must be tried in the county where the property is situated. McFarland v. Martin, 144 Cal. 771; 78 Pac. 239. One who properly should have been made a plaintiff, but who refuses to become such, and is therefore made a nominal defendant, is not a "defendant" within this section. Donohoe v. Wooster, 163 Cal. 114; 124 Pac. 730. The proceedings for the settlement of an estate, and matters connected therewith, is not a civil action, within the meaning of this section, so as to transfer it from one county to another. Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220. The positive provision of the statute, that actions shall be commenced in a particular county, must be carried out; but that does not prohibit a change of the place of trial. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607. The term "proper county" means the county in which the action is required to be tried, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72. The right of a plaintiff, by this section, to have an action tried in a county other than that in which the defendant resides, is exceptional; and if he would claim such right, he must bring himself within the terms of the exception. Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209.

Residence of parties. The right of the defendant to have the action tried in the county where he resides at the time of the commencement of the suit, is provided by this section (Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226); and where there is no express provision to the contrary, the proper county for trial, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial on account of convenience of witnesses, disqualification of judge, and inability to have an impartial trial, is the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action. Bonestell v. Curry, 153 Cal. 418; 95 Pac. 887. A personal action to recover a money judgment is triable in the county of defendant's residence (Anaheim Odd Fellows' Hall Ass'n v. Mitchell, 6 Cal. App. 431; 92 Pac. 331); as is also an action to compel a county treasurer to pay over certain moneys to the state treasurer. State Commission v. Welch, 154 Cal. 775; 99 Pac. 181. If one defendant resides in one county and a co-defendant in another county, the plaintiff may have the cause tried in either county. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 16 Cal. App. 193; 116 Pac. 696; Hellman v. Logan, 148 Cal. 58; 82 Pac. 848. An action to recover damages for the loss of property by fire, caused by the negligence of the defendants, may be brought in the county of the residence of either defendant. Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034. An action to recover a partnership interest, and for an accounting, must be tried in the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action; it is only where none of the defendants are residents of the state that the plaintiff can designate in his complaint the place of trial (Banta v. Wink, 119 Cal. 78; 51 Pac. 17); and the burden of proof is on the moving party to show that no defendant resides in the county where the suit is commenced. Modoc County v. Madden, 136 Cal. 134; 68 Pac. 491. The test is, Does one of the necessary parties reside in the county where the action is brought? and if so, it may be tried there. Hellman v. Logan, 148 Cal. 58; 82 Pac. 848. In the United States generally, and particularly in this state, the distinction between local and transitory actions, so far as any consequence attends it, depends entirely upon statutory law, and does not coincide with or depend upon the distinction between actions in rem and actions in personam (Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157); but an action to compel the execution of a deed does not involve the determination of an interest in real property, and it may be commenced and tried in the county where the relator resides. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655.

Where residence of defendant is unknown. The right to designate the county in which to bring the action is not an arbitrary right, or optional with the plaintiff upon a mere statement that the residence of the defendant is unknown to him; he must state facts sufficient to show that he has resorted to such means to ascertain the defendant's residence as would be expected of a reasonable man in seeking in good faith to make the discovery. Mahler v. Drummer Boy Gold Mining Co., 7 Cal. App. 190, 192, 93 Pac. 1064.

Venue in actions against corporations, generally. A corporation may be sued in the county where it has its principal place of business. Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157; Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845; White v. Fresno Nat. Bank, 98 Cal. 166; 32 Pac. 979; Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395.

Corporations, as well as natural persons, are entitled to have personal or transitory actions tried in the county of their residence. Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698. An action against a corporation to recover damages for injuries to real property may be brought and tried in the county where its principal place of business is situated, although not the one in which the land is located. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856. Actions against foreign corporations may be brought and tried in any county of the state, in the absence of a statute conferring upon them a county residence. Waechter v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 70; 101 Pac. 41; Thomas v. Placerville etc. Mining Co., 65 Cal. 600; 4 Pac. 641.

Constitutional provision as to venue of actions against corporations. Under § 16 of article XII of the constitution, a personal action against a domestic corporation may, at the option of the plaintiff, be commenced in one of the designated counties, other than the one in which the defendant has its principal place of business, and may be prosecuted to final judgment where commenced, unless the defendant can allege and show some sufficient ground for a change of the place of trial, distinct from the fact that the residence of the corporation is in another county (Cook v. Ray Mfg. Co., 159 Cal. 694; 115 Pac. 318); but that section applies only to domestic corporations or associations, and not to foreign corporations (Waechter v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 70; 101 Pac. 41); and its provisions are applicable in actions in tort as well as in actions on contracts. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856; Lewis v. South Pac. Coast R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 209; 5 Pac. 79; Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157; Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209. The word "may" does not mean "must," in the provision of that section, that a corporation "may be sued in the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises or the breach occurs; or in the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated." Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856; Griffin & Skelly Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495. Nor does that section violate the fourteenth amendment of the Federal constitution, in depriving domestic corporations of the equal protection of the laws. Cook v. Ray Mfg. Co., 159 Cal. 694; 115 Pac. 318.

Residence of corporations. The place of residence of a corporation, foreign or domestic, is the place where, by its articles of incorporation, it has its principal place of business (Waechter v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 70; 101 Pac. 41; Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698); and the principal place of business of a domestic corporation is its residence, within the meaning of this section. California Southern R. R. Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 394; 4 Pac. 344; Waechter v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 70; 101 Pac. 41; Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698; Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 537; McSherry v. Pennsylvania etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 637, 643; 32 Pac. 711; Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395; Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845; but see Cohn v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488; 12 Pac. 498; Howell v. Stetefeldt Furnace Co., 69 Cal. 153; 10 Pac. 390. Compliance by a foreign corporation with the laws of this state in regard to the establishment of a principal place of business in this state, does not make it a domestic corporation. Waechter v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 70; 101 Pac. 41. A municipal corporation, though not capable of having a "residence," in the ordinary and restricted sense of that word, occupies a position at least as favorable as a trading corporation, and, a fortiori, a municipal corporation "resides" where its territory is, and where all its constituents reside. Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845.

Right of corporations to change of venue. Where a suit is not commenced in any one of the counties designated in § 16 of article XII of the constitution, the defendant is entitled, upon motion and a proper showing, to have the place of trial changed to the county of its principal place of business. Cohn v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488; 12 Pac. 498; California Southern R. R. Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 293; 4 Pac. 12; Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157. A corporation, on being sued in the county where the liability arose, cannot insist upon a change of venue to the county in which it has its principal place of business. Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395. A change of venue can be granted, although an action is brought in a county designated by the constitutional rule of procedure; but this change cannot be made on the ground, merely, that the legislature has provided that some other county is the proper county because that would amount, pro tanto, to a legislative repeal of a constitutional provision: grounds for such change must be shown. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856; Lewis v. South Pacific Coast R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 209; 5 Pac. 79; Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157; Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395. The plaintiff is entitled to the constitutional right to sue a corporation in the county where the contract was made, only when it is the sole defendant; but where the plaintiff joins as defendant one residing in another county, he thereby waives the benefit of the provision, and cannot deprive such defendant of his right, under this section, to have the action tried in the county of his residence. Griffin etc. Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356. If an action is brought in one county, for the conversion of goods by a corporation having its principal place of business in another county, the defendant, upon demand duly made therefor, is, in the absence of a counter-showing, entitled to an order changing the place of trial to the county of his residence. Wong Fung Hing v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 15 Cal. App. 537; 115 Pac. 331. If a transitory action is not brought in the county of the residence of personal defendants, the joinder of a foreign corporation as a co-defendant will not prevent a change of the place of trial to the county of their residence. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699.

Right to change of venue. It is the statutory right of the defendant to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence, upon proper and timely application, there being no counter-application to have the trial retained for the convenience of witnesses. Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387; 4 Pac. 349. The test of the right to a change of venue is to be made by ascertaining who are necessary parties to the action as set forth in the complaint (Hellman v. Logan, 148 Cal. 58; 82 Pac. 848); and the right to the change must be determined by the condition of things existing at the time the parties claiming it first appeared in the action. Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8. When a local is joined with a transitory cause of action, the defendant is entitled, under this section, to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence (Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333; 36 Pac. 650); and also in a personal action, to recover a personal judgment. Anaheim Odd Fellows' Hall Ass'n v. Mitchell, 6 Cal. App. 431; 92 Pac. 331. If all the defendants are non-residents of the county in which the action is brought, any one of them is entitled to a change of the place of trial, notwithstanding the opposition of the others. Ludington Exploration Co. v. La Fortuna etc. Mining Co., 4 Cal. App. 369; 88 Pac. 290; Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588; but see Mahler v. Drummer Boy Gold Mining Co., 7 Cal. App. 190; 93 Pac. 1064. Where the action is dismissed as to certain defendants, the others are entitled to a change of venue to the county of their residence. Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311.

Defeat of right to change of venue. The plaintiff cannot deprive the defendant of the right to a change of venue, under this section, by joining with him, as a defendant, one who resides in the county where the action is brought, but against whom no cause of action is stated, or from whom no relief is demanded. Sayward v. Houghton, 82 Cal. 628; 23 Pac. 120; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Thompson v. Wood, 115 Cal. 301; 47 Pac. 50; McDonald v. California Timber Co., 151 Cal. 159; 90 Pac. 548. The joining, as a party defendant, of one against whom no cause of action is stated, does not deprive the other defendant of the right to have the action brought in the county of his residence; nor does the joinder of a person as a defendant, who refuses to become a plaintiff, deprive a non-resident defendant of the right to a change of the place of trial (Donohoe v. Wooster, 163 Cal. 114; 124 Pac. 730); nor does the plaintiff's ignorance of the defendant's residence debar the latter of his right to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence. Thurber v. Thurber, 113 Cal. 607; 45 Pac. 852.

Application for change of venue. The party seeking to avail himself of the right granted should make his application for the change of venue upon his first appearance in court (Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308); otherwise he waives it. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311. Under this section, and § 396, post, but one right is given to a defendant in a personal action to move to change the place of trial of the action to the county of his residence, and but one time is fixed when he may assert it; even then, only upon a sufficient showing in his affidavit of merits is he entitled to an order therefor. McNeill & Co. v. Doe, 163 Cal. 338; 125 Pac. 345. In order properly to raise the issue as to a fraudulent attempt to prevent a change of venue, as by a fraudulent joinder of a defendant for that purpose, the fraud should be distinctly specified in the notice of motion. Henderson v. Cohen, 10 Cal. App. 580; 102 Pac. 826.

Granting of application. In an action for alimony, the defendant has the right to have the cause tried in the county of his residence, and an application, under this section, for removal thereto must be granted, before other or further proceedings in the case. Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649. Where there are two or more defendants, the cause is properly transferred for trial to the county of the residence of the only necessary and proper party. Bartley v. Fraser, 16 Cal. App. 560; 117 Pac. 683.

Denial of application. An action for damages for the destruction of plaintiff's buildings by fire, caused by negligence, is triable in the county where the land is situated; and the defendants cannot, under this section, have the action removed to the county of their residence. Las Animas etc. Land Co. v. Fatjo, 9 Cal. App. 318; 99 Pac. 393. A motion for a change of venue is properly denied, where one of the defendants, whose residence is in the county where the action was commenced, is a proper party, and does not join in the motion. Paxton v. Paxton, 150 Cal. 667; 89 Pac. 1083. A defendant who moves for a change to the county of his residence, must show by his moving-papers that none of the other defendants reside in the county in which the action is brought, or the motion will be denied (Greenleaf v. Jacks, 133 Cal. 506; 65 Pac. 1039); and the motion will also be denied where the complaint fails to show the residence of the defendant, if he does not prove in what county he resides. Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108. If any of the defendants reside in the county in which the suit is brought, a motion to change the place of trial to a county in which other defendants reside will be refused, unless all of the defendants join in the motion, or good reason is shown why they have not so joined. McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034; Mahler v. Drummer Boy Gold Mining Co., 7 Cal. App. 190; 93 Pac. 1064; Sullivan v. Lusk, 7 Cal. App. 186; 94 Pac. 91, 92.

Discretion of court. When proper application is made for a change of venue, the court has no discretion to refuse to hear the motion, or to impose terms as a condition precedent to the hearing. Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649. The discretion of the court in granting or refusing a motion for a change of venue, is not always controlling; and where the record discloses no reason for not granting a change of venue, the order denying the motion cannot be justified on the ground that the granting of such orders is in the discretion of the court. Carr v. Stern, 17 Cal. App. 397; 120 Pac. 35.

Appeal. An order refusing to grant a change of venue, where one of the defendants resides in the county in which the action is brought, will not be disturbed. Hirschfeld v. Sevier, 77 Cal. 448; 19 Pac. 819. The question whether a defendant resides in the county to which a transfer is requested is to be determined, primarily, by the court in which the action is instituted, and its finding will not be disturbed on appeal, where the evidence was conflicting, though it was entirely documentary. Bradley v. Davis, 156 Cal. 267; 104 Pac. 302; Henderson v. Cohen, 10 Cal. App. 580; 102 Pac. 826.

Transfer of case. The court to which the case is transferred acquires jurisdiction at the moment the court transferring the case loses jurisdiction. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355.

Trial of actions, where the subject, or some part thereof, is situated. See note ante, § 392.

Constitutional right of party defendant to be sued in county of his residence. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 614.

Venue of action for death caused by negligence. See note 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 263.

Venue of action in state court against foreign corporation. See note 70 L. R. A. (N. S.) 696.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Corporation has a residence where its principal office or place of business is established, and is included within the provisions of this section. Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 538; see also Louisville R. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. (U. S.) 497; 11 L. Ed. 353; Angell and Ames on Corporations, pp. 6, 265, 404–407, 440.

2. Action tried where defendant resides. Defendant has a right to have the case tried in the county where he resides, except in the cases otherwise provided by this code. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418.

3. When a public officer is defendant. See § 393, ante, and note.

4. Not applicable to probate proceedings. This section does not apply to probate proceedings. See Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220.

5. Habeas corpus not to run out of county. The writ of habeas corpus should not issue to run out of the county, unless for good cause shown, as the absence, disability, or refusal to act of the local judge, or other reason showing that the object and reason of the law requires its issuance. Ex parte Ellis, 11 Cal. 225.

§ 396. Action may be tried in any county, unless the defendant demand a trial in the proper county. If the county in which the action is commenced is not the proper county for the trial thereof, the action may, notwithstanding, be tried therein, unless the defendant, at the time he answers or demurs, files an affidavit of merits, and demands, in writing, that the trial be had in the proper county.

Legislation § 396. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 129; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 701; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'appears and' are omitted before the word 'answers,' as superfluous."

Application of section. This section is applicable to actions brought by the state. State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 602; 86 Pac. 840.

Actions according to residence of parties. See note ante, § 395.

When application for change of venue must be made. An application for a change of the place of trial must be made by the defendant in his answer, or contemporaneously with the filing of the answer of a demurrer (Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Tooms v. Randall, 3 Cal. 438; Reyes v. Sanford, 5 Cal. 117; Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642; Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 245; Mahe v. Reynolds, 38 Cal. 560); and must be prosecuted with diligence; but the trial court must, upon the facts of the particular case, determine whether there has been undue delay. Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815. The right to a change of the place of trial is a mere privilege, and is waived by failure to make application therefor at the proper time (Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381; Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308; Pennie v. Visher, 94 Cal. 323; 29 Pac. 711; Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139; Bell v. Camm, 10 Cal. App. 388; 102 Pac. 225); but the right is not waived by filing an amended demurrer. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699. The defendant does not appear and demur, within the meaning of this section, until he files the demurrer; and it is sufficient to file the notice, affidavit, and demand at the same time with the filing of the demurrer (Fletcher v. Maginnis, 136 Cal. 362; 68 Pac. 1015); but it comes too late after the demurrer is amended. Union

Lumber Co. v. Metropolis Construction Co., 13 Cal. App. 584; 110 Pac. 329. The defendant must also appear, and demur or answer, at the same time that he makes his application for a change of the place of trial. Nicholl v. Nicholl, 66 Cal. 36; 4 Pac. 882; Bagley v. Cohen, 121 Cal. 604; 53 Pac. 1117. If the grounds upon which the motion is made appear upon the face of the complaint, the demand should be made at or before the time of filing the demurrer, or the motion will be deemed waived. Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642. A fraudulent joinder of a fictitious defendant, for the purpose of defeating the real defendant's right to have the cause removed to the proper county for trial, will not prevent the real defendant, upon motion, from securing a removal of the cause to the proper county; and where fraud in joining a resident of the county to prevent removal is the ground of the motion, it should be distinctly specified in the notice. McDonald v. California Timber Co., 151 Cal. 159; 90 Pac. 548. An action commenced in a justice's court, and transferred to the superior court, cannot be transferred to the county of the defendant's residence, where the demand was not made at the time of his appearance in the justice's court. Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308. A demurrer or answer to an amended complaint, by a defendant who has demurred to the original complaint, does not constitute a first appearance, within this section; the filing of an amended complaint is not the commencing of a new action. Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 245. A defendant who demurs to a complaint without answering must demand a transfer before or when he demurs. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72. The plaintiff cannot resist a motion for change of venue, made on the ground that the action was not commenced in the proper county, by a showing of convenience of witnesses, unless an answer has been filed and issue joined. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72. An order refusing to change the place of trial, made upon conflicting affidavits, is not reviewable. Bernon v. Bernon, 15 Cal. App. 341; 114 Pac. 1000.

Affidavit of merits. To make a prima facie showing on advice of counsel, the affidavit of merits should state that the defendant fully and fairly stated "all the facts of the case" to his counsel, and that, after making such statement, he was advised by such counsel that he had, and that he verily believes that he has, a good and substantial defense to the action upon the merits; but where the affidavit alleges that he has stated fully and fairly "the case," it is sufficient (Woodward v. Backus, 20 Cal. 137; Reidy v. Scott, 53 Cal. 69; Rowland v. Coyne, 55 Cal. 1; Watkins v. Degener, 63 Cal. 500; Buell v. Dodge, 63 Cal. 553; Rathgeb v. Tiscornia, 66 Cal. 96; 4 Pac. 987; Nolan v. McDuffie, 125 Cal. 334; 58 Pac. 4); but an affidavit that the defendant has stated "his" case is not sufficient. Nickerson v. California Raisin Co., 61 Cal. 268; People v. Larue, 66 Cal. 235; 5 Pac. 157; Morgan v. McDonald, 70 Cal. 32; 11 Pac. 350. Belief in the advice of the attorney need not be stated. Watt v. Bradley, 95 Cal. 415; 30 Pac. 557. The terms "attorney," "counselor," and "attorney at law" are used synonymously. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699. An affidavit by one of several defendants, in behalf of all, is sufficient (Rowland v. Coyne, 55 Cal. 1; Watkins v. Degener, 63 Cal. 500; People v. Larue, 66 Cal. 235; 5 Pac. 157; Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226; McSherry v. Pennsylvania etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 637; 32 Pac. 711; Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588); as is also an affidavit by a party's attorney if it shows the merits, and adequate excuse for not being made by the defendant personally (Nicholl v. Nicholl, 66 Cal. 36; 4 Pac. 882); but such an affidavit is insufficient, where the attorney does not state that he knows the facts of the case, or that the defendant has fully and fairly stated his whole case to him, or fails to state a good excuse for the failure of the defendant personally to make it. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. An insufficient affidavit may be amended after the time of appearing and demurring or answering, and by a defendant other than he who first made the affidavit. Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226; Nolan v. McDuffie, 125 Cal. 334; 58 Pac. 4. The omission of the title of the cause or court will not invalidate the affidavit, where the action is intelligently referred to therein. Watt v. Bradley, 95 Cal. 415; 30 Pac. 557. The transfer, when title to real estate is involved, should be made on mere suggestion; it is unnecessary to file an affidavit. Fritts v. Camp, 94 Cal. 393; 29 Pac. 867. If the complaint does not show the residence of the defendant, the burden of proof is cast upon him to show the county of his residence, if he would secure a change of venue; and if there are several defendants, he must show that none of them are residents of the county in which the action is brought. Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Greenleaf v. Jacks, 133 Cal. 506; 65 Pac. 1039; Greenleaf v. Jack, 135 Cal. 154; 67 Pac. 17; Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034; Modoc County v. Madden, 136 Cal. 134; 68 Pac. 491. When the application is made on the ground of convenience of witnesses, an affidavit of merits is not required (Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815); nor is the affidavit required on a motion by the plaintiff for a retransfer of the case. Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815.

Demand in writing, and affidavit of merits. To secure a change of place of trial, there must be a demand in writing and an affidavit of merits; the affidavit of merits may be amended. Jaques v. Owens, 18 Cal. App. 114; 122 Pac. 430. The procedure for asserting the right to a change of place of trial, is not regulated solely by this section, but by § 397, post, also. Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532; 129 Pac. 981. On appeal from an order changing the place of trial, the record should show the demand for the change, and also whether the respondent had answered or demurred at the time he filed his affidavit of merits and made demand for such change. Harrison v. Cousins, 16 Cal. App. 515; 117 Pac. 564. The effect of the demand and motion is to intercept all judicial action, and to suspend the power of the court to act upon any other question, until it has been determined; the hearing cannot be postponed until the answer is filed, nor for the purpose of permitting the plaintiff's cross-motion to be heard at the same time; nor can the court rule upon the demurrer filed, or consider the propriety of the amendment to the complaint, or impose any terms as a condition for the transfer of the case; the defendants are entitled to have the motion determined upon the conditions existing at the time of their appearance, and to have all judicial action in the case determined in the superior court of the proper county. Heald v. Hendy, 65 Cal. 321; 4 Pac. 27; Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381; Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649; Griffin etc. Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495; Thurber v. Thurber, 113 Cal. 607; 45 Pac. 852; Nolan v. McDuffie, 125 Cal. 334; 58 Pac. 4. Actions involving real estate must be transferred on demand: the court has no discretion. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321. The convenience of witnesses should be considered, and the motion denied if the convenience of witnesses or the ends of justice require that the action be retained in the county where the action is pending. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418; Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 537; Hanchett v. Finch, 47 Cal. 192; Edwards v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 48 Cal. 460; Hall v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 49 Cal. 454; Reavis v. Cowell, 56 Cal. 588. All the defendants must join in the demand, in personal actions (Pieper v. Centinela Land Co., 56 Cal. 173; Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8); but a defendant against whom no relief is sought, or who is improperly joined, need not unite in a demand, or be considered in determining the proper county of the trial. Buell v. Dodge, 57 Cal. 645; Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Sayward v. Houghton, 82 Cal. 628; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333; 36 Pac. 650; Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209. Persons properly plaintiffs, and made defendants without any allegation that they refused to join the plaintiff in commencing the suit, should not be considered in determining the application by other defendants for a change of venue on the ground of residence. Read v. San Diego Union Co., 6 Cal. Unrep. 703; 65 Pac. 567. The question as to who are proper and necessary defendants must be determined from the complaint; and the effect of the complaint cannot be varied by the affidavit filed. McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034; and see Lakeshore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 108 Cal. 261; 41 Pac. 472; Bowers v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 117 Cal. 50; 48 Pac. 979. Only those who are residents of the state need join in the demand to change the place of trial (Banta v. Wink, 119 Cal. 78; 51 Pac. 17); and only the defendants who are served, or who have appeared, need join in the demand (Rathgeb v. Tisconnia, 66 Cal. 96; 4 Pac. 987; McSherry v. Pennsylvania etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 637; 32 Pac. 711; Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588); but all necessary defendants who have been served, or who have appeared, must join in the motion where the action is brought in the proper county. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699. Defendants who have appeared and demanded the change of place of trial to the county of their residence, cannot be deprived of the right by other defendants, who appear after the demand and consent to a trial in the county where the action was commenced, if it affirmatively appears that no defendants reside in the county. Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588; Pieper v. Centinela Land Co., 56 Cal. 173. The demand of a defendant sued under his true name, with others sued under fictitious names, the return of summons showing service on the former only, and the affidavit showing that all the defendants are residents of another county, cannot be defeated by the subsequent return of an alias summons, stating that one of the defendants sued under a fictitious name is a resident of the county in which the action is brought, in the absence of an amendment of the complaint describing him under his true name, and of an affidavit or a showing by the plaintiff as to the person intended to be sued under such fictitious name. Baehman v. Cathry, 113 Cal. 498; 45 Pac. 814; Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101; 57 Pac. 766. All the defendants must join in the demand, or sufficient reason must be shown for failure to join, or it must be made to appear that those who have not joined are not proper parties. Pieper v. Centinela Land Co., 56 Cal. 173; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588. The discretion of the court in determining the motion for a change of the place of trial, on the ground of the convenience of witnesses, will not be disturbed, where no abuse of discretion is shown. Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815. A party may, either expressly or by implication, waive his right to have a cause tried in a particular county. Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108. If the county in which the action is commenced is not the proper place for the trial thereof, the only remedy of the defendant is a demand for a change of venue, and if he fails to demand the transfer, he waives objection to the venue. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139.

Actions against corporations. The provisions of § 16 of article XII of the constitution, as to the jurisdiction of corporations, are, in effect, permissive, and were intended to give the plaintiff the right to select the county in which to try the action; and the superior court of any county in the state is not, by that section, deprived of jurisdiction to hear all classes of actions generally within the limits of the jurisdiction conferred upon it by § 5 of article VI. Bond v. Karma-Ajax Consol. Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 469; 115 Pac. 254. Whether affidavits contradicting the complaint as to the county where the alleged liability of a corporation was incurred can be used to vary or contradict the allegations of the complaint, has not been decided, except where the order has been sustained on the ground of a conflict of evidence. Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 108 Cal. 261; 41 Pac. 472; Bowers v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 117 Cal. 50; 48 Pac. 979; Brown v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 122 Cal. 648; 55 Pac. 598; but see McSherry v. Pennsylvania etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 637; 32 Pac. 711. The affidavit, where the facts contained therein are not in the complaint, or are stated as conclusions, may be used to show the county where the contract was made or was to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arose or the breach occurred, or the location of the principal business place of the defendant corporation. Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196, 197; 46 Pac. 926; Byrum v. Stockton etc. Agricultural Works, 91 Cal. 657; 27 Pac. 1093. If the county in which the action was brought is not the county where the contract was made or was to be performed, or in which the obligation or liability was incurred or the breach occurred, the defendant corporation is entitled to a change of the place of trial to the county where its principal place of business is located. Cohn v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488; 12 Pac. 498. The defendant corporation cannot require a change of the place of trial to the county where its principal place of business is located, merely because it is the place of its residence; for the constitution gives to the plaintiff the right to sue the corporation in any of the counties therein referred to: 1. Where the contract is made; 2. Where it is to be performed; 3. Where the obligation or liability arises; 4. Where the breach occurs; and 5. In the county where the principal place of business is situated; and the option thus given includes more than the bare right to choose the county where the complaint shall be filed in the first instance; it confers also upon the plaintiff the right to prosecute such action in the county where it is commenced, unless the place of trial is changed for some other reason than that of the residence of the defendant. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856; and see also Lewis v. South Pacific Coast R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 209; 5 Pac. 79; Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157; Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47; 36 Pac. 395; Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196; 46 Pac. 926; Brown v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 122 Cal. 648; 55 Pac. 598; C. E. Whitney & Co. v. Sellers' Commission Co., 130 Cal. 188; 62 Pac. 472; Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co., 141 Cal. 314; 65 L. R. A. 90; 74 Pac. 855. The joinder of other defendants, in an action against a corporation, is a waiver by the plaintiff of his right to have the action tried in the counties designated by the constitution; and the proper place of trial must be determined by the provisions of the code. Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Griffin etc. Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495; Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586; 66 Pac. 856; Aisbett v. Paradise Mountain Mining etc. Co., 21 Cal. App. 267; 131 Pac. 776. A foreign corporation may be sued in any county in the state; and having no residence in any county in the state, it cannot demand transfer on the ground of residence. Thomas v. Placerville etc. Mining Co., 65 Cal. 600; 4 Pac. 641. A municipal corporation resides in the county wherein its territory lies, within the meaning of this section, and may demand that the trial be held in the county of its residence. Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135; 31 Pac. 845.

Proper county. The "proper county" is the county in which actions are required to be tried, "subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial" by §§ 392, 393, 394, 395, ante. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215.

Jurisdiction. Generally, the jurisdiction of the court is not affected by the fact that the action was not commenced in the proper county (Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139; Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 140 Cal. 132; 73 Pac. 836); but actions to recover realty must be commenced in the county where the property is situated, otherwise the court is without jurisdiction, and the case must be dismissed; change of place of trial is not the proper remedy, under such circumstances (Urton v. Woolsey, 87 Cal. 38; 25 Pac. 154; Fritts v. Camp, 94 Cal. 393; 29 Pac. 867; Pacific Yacht Club v. Sausalito Bay Water Co., 98 Cal. 487; 33 Pac. 322; Waters v. Pool, 130 Cal. 136; 62 Pac. 385; Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139), and a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction is not waived by the subsequent filing of a demurrer, answer, or demand for a change of venue. Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491; 24 Pac. 157. Where an action to procure the cancellation of agreements relating to land situated in several counties is commenced in one of such counties, the defendant cannot, by disclaiming any interest in the land situated in such county, demand a change of the place of trial to the county of his residence, in which part of the land is situated. Pennie v. Visher, 94 Cal. 323; 29 Pac. 711. Where a new county is created after the commencement of an action to enforce a lien upon real estate, the court is not divested of jurisdiction, if such real estate is situated in the new county. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Kauffman, 108 Cal. 214; 41 Pac. 467.

Personal and transitory actions. If the complaint be regarded as stating two separate causes of action, upon one of which the defendant would be entitled to a change of venue, but not upon the other, it should be construed most strongly against the plaintiff, and the defendant's demand for a change of venue should be granted. Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381; Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Griffin etc. Co. v. Magnolia etc. Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378; 40 Pac. 495. Conditions existing at the time of the appearance, so far as the pleadings are concerned, determine the proper county for the trial of personal actions; the dismissal of the action against a co-defendant, who did not join in the demand, after demand and motion have been made, cannot confer the right to a change. Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Ah Fong v. Sternes, 79 Cal. 30; 21 Pac. 381. The fact that some of the defendants are non-residents of the state does not deprive the other defendants of the right to have the case tried in the county in which they, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action. Banta v. Wink, 119 Cal. 78; 51 Pac. 17. All actions for the recovery of money must be tried in the county where the defendant resides, unless he directly or impliedly consents to a trial elsewhere. State v. Campbell, 3 Cal. App. 602; 86 Pac. 840. An action for fraud in the sale of stock is personal and transitory, and not within this section. Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698. The place for commencing the action is not necessarily the proper county for the trial. Hancock v. Burton, 61 Cal. 70; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443; Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012. If the case is not one of those mentioned in §§ 392, 393, and 394, ante, the residence of the defendant is the proper county for the trial; and if the action has been commenced elsewhere, it is the right of the defendant to have the place of trial changed to the proper county: the statute is peremptory, and the court has no discretion in the matter. Watkins v. Degener, 63 Cal. 500; McFarland v. Martin, 144 Cal. 771; 78 Pac. 239; Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418; Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649; Thurber v. Thurber, 113 Cal. 607; 45 Pac. 852; Booker v. Aitken, 140 Cal. 471; 74 Pac. 11; Schilling v. Buhne, 139 Cal. 611; 73 Pac. 431. The county of the residence of one proper and necessary defendant is a proper county for the trial. Hirschfeld v. Sevier, 77 Cal. 448; 19 Pac. 819; McKenzie v. Barling, 101 Cal. 459; 36 Pac. 8; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Greenleaf v. Jacks, 133 Cal. 506; 65 Pac. 1039; Quint v. Dimond, 135 Cal. 572; 67 Pac. 1034; Modoc County v. Madden, 136 Cal. 134; 68 Pac. 491. The consent of resident defendants to a change to a county which would be the proper county as to the other defendants were they not joined, does not make it obligatory upon the court to order the transfer. Hirschfeld v. Sevier, 77 Cal. 448; 19 Pac. 819; Greenleaf v. Jack, 135 Cal. 154; 67 Pac. 17. One involuntarily substituted as the sole defendant in an action is entitled to a change of the place of trial to the county of his residence, notwithstanding the failure of the original defendant to demand such a change. Howell v. Stetefeldt Furnace Co., 69 Cal. 153; 10 Pac. 390. An association of persons, although not formally a corporation, may be sued in the county where its liability arose. Kendrick v. Diamond Creek etc. Mining Co., 94 Cal. 137; 29 Pac. 324. Executors sued upon a claim against the estate of the decedent, in the county in which the estate is being administered, but who reside in another county, are entitled, upon proper motion, to a change of venue to the county of their residence, where no counter-motion is made that the case be retained for the convenience of witnesses, and no facts are shown in reply to the motion. Thompson v. Wood, 115 Cal. 301; 47 Pac. 50. A change of place of trial cannot be demanded on the ground of residence, in an action taken to the superior court by appeal or transfer from a justice's court. Gross v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 382; 12 Pac. 264; Luco v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 555; 12 Pac. 677. Where the plaintiff unites in the same action a local cause of action with one that is transitory, the defendant is entitled to have the action tried in the county of his residence, and also where the principal object of the action is the adjustment of questions personal in character; an action must be wholly local in its nature, to entitle it to be tried in a county other than that of the residence of the defendant; the plaintiff cannot, by writing in his complaint matters which form the subject of a personal action with matters which form the subject of a local action, compel the defendant to have both actions tried in a county other than that in which he resides. Smith v. Smith, 88 Cal. 572; 26 Pac. 356; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333; 36 Pac. 650; Booker v. Aitken, 140 Cal. 471; 74 Pac. 11.

Notice of application. No notice of the application for a change of venue is required, where there are no contesting affidavits: the court must make the order for the change, as demanded, regardless of notice. Bohn v. Bohn, 16 Cal. App. 179; 116 Pac. 568. No notice of the application for a change of the place of trial need be given to non-resident co-defendants who have not been served with summons nor made an appearance. Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588.

Waiver of right to change of venue. A party may waive his absolute right to a change of the place of trial, and there is a waiver where the procedure for asserting it is not followed. Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532; 129 Pac. 981. A defendant, when served with summons, is bound to appear and either demur or answer; and his demand for a change of venue can be made only at the time he answers or demurs. Witter v. Phelps, 163 Cal. 655; 126 Pac. 593. A party cannot be deprived of the right of transfer by an amendment of the complaint. Buell v. Dodge, 57 Cal. 645; Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209.

Conflicting evidence. Where the evidence as to residence is conflicting, the determination of the trial court as to the proper county will not be reversed upon appeal. Creditors v. Welch, 55 Cal. 469; Hastings v. Keller, 69 Cal. 606; 11 Pac. 218; Daniels v. Church, 96 Cal. 13; 30 Pac. 798; Ludwig v. Harry, 126 Cal. 377; 58 Pac. 858. The court will not go into the merits of the action, on a motion to change the place of trial. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 16 Cal. App. 193; 116 Pac. 696. The affidavit of a party, other than the defendant, on a motion for a change of venue, in order to be of any value as proof on the question of residence, must state some fact or facts to aid the court in forming a conclusion upon that question. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 16 Cal. App. 103; 116 Pac. 692.

Timeliness of motion for change of venue or change of judge made after trial of cause. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 758.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 397, post.

§ 397. Place of trial may be changed in certain cases. The court may, on motion, change the place of trial in the following cases:

1. When the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county;

2. When there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had therein;

3. When the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change;

4. When from any cause there is no judge of the court qualified to act.

Appeal from order as to change of venue. Post, § 939, subd. 3.

Judge, when disqualified. See ante, § 170.

Mandamus and prohibition. Controlling action of court on motion to change place of trial by resort to these writs. See post, §§ 1085, 1102.

Legislation § 397. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 21 (New York Code, § 126), the words "in the action," at the end of subd. 4, being omitted when adopted in 1872, subd. 4, then reading, "4. When from any cause the judge is disqualified from acting."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 129; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 701; the code commissioner saying, "Subdivision 4 is so amended that there need not be any change from the place of trial, if there is any judge within the county not disqualified from acting. This was certainly the real legislative intent."

Transfer from one department to another. A transfer from one department of the same court to another, by order of the presiding judge, in violation of the rules of the court, does not affect the jurisdiction. White v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 60; 42 Pac. 480. This section is applicable, in counties having more than one judge, only when no judge is qualified to act. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56.

Criminal actions. This section has no application to criminal actions. People v. Ebey, 6 Cal. App. 769; 93 Pac. 379.

Where county designated is not proper county. The authority given to the court by this section, to change the place of trial when the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county, is a limitation upon its power, and necessarily implies that if the county designated in the complaint is the proper county, the place of trial cannot be changed, except for some good reason authorized by the code. Mc-Farland v. Martin, 144 Cal. 771; 78 Pac. 239.

Residence. Conditions cannot be imposed, where the defendant makes a demand, at the proper time and in the proper manner, for a change of the place of trial to the county of his residence. Hennessy v. Nicol, 105 Cal. 138; 38 Pac. 649.

Where impartial trial cannot be had. The place of trial may also be changed on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county where the action was commenced. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Grewell v. Walden, 23 Cal. 165.

Waiver of right. The right to have the cause tried in a particular county is a personal privilege, which the party may waive, either expressly or by implication (Tooms v. Randall, 3 Cal. 438; Reyes v. Sanford, 5 Cal. 117; Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642; Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321; Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 245; Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72; Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308; Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11; 34 Pac. 523; Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209; Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373; 43 Pac. 1108; Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139); but in an action concerning real estate, a failure to appeal from the first order denying the motion for a change, for want of an affidavit of merits, is not a waiver of the right to move again for the transfer of the cause to the proper county (Fritts v. Camp, 94 Cal. 393; 29 Pac. 867); nor is the filing of a motion to strike out portions of the complaint a waiver of the right to demand a change of the place of trial (Wood v. Herman Mining Co., 139 Cal. 713; 73 Pac. 588); neither is the right waived by amending the demurrer. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699.

Change for convenience of witnesses. The place of trial may be changed for the convenience of witnesses (Haun v. Robinson, 162 Cal. 760; 121 Pac. 1132); and the trial court has a wide discretion in applications on this ground (Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815), and its rulings will not be disturbed, where the affidavits as to residence are conflicting. Bernou v. Bernou, 15 Cal. App. 341; 114 Pac. 1000. The court must grant the change, if the affidavits show clearly that the convenience of the witnesses will be promoted thereby (Thompson v. Brandt, 98 Cal. 155; 32 Pac. 890; Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196; 46 Pac. 926; C. E. Whitney & Co. v. Sellers' Commission Co., 130 Cal. 188; 62 Pac. 472); and the court may consider the relative expense of producing evidence; but the affidavits should set forth the particulars regarding such expense (Schilling v. Buhne, 139 Cal. 611; 73 Pac. 431; Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 140 Cal. 132; 73 Pac. 836); and must show that the witnesses are material and necessary to the defendant, and must state what is expected to be proved by them, that the court may judge of their materiality. Ennis-Brown Co. v. Long, 7 Cal. App. 313; 94 Pac. 250. The determination of a motion for the rechange of a cause to the first place of venue, for the convenience of witnesses, rests largely in the discretion of the court, and will not be disturbed on appeal, except for abuse of discretion. Wong Fung Hing v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 15 Cal. App. 537; 115 Pac. 331. A refusal to change the place of trial for the convenience of witnesses is an abuse of discretion, where there is practically no legal showing in opposition to the motion. Carr v. Stern, 17 Cal. App. 397; 120 Pac. 35. There is no abuse of discretion in denying a motion for a change, on the ground of the convenience of witnesses, if the affidavits of the plaintiff, in opposition to the motion, show that his witnesses will be inconvenienced. McNeill & Co. v. Doe, 163 Cal. 338; 125 Pac. 345. Where the convenience of witnesses is alleged in opposition to the motion for change on the ground of the residence of the defendant, the evidence as to the convenience of the witnesses should be as full and particular as that required upon the application to transfer the trial. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418. The plaintiff may move to change the place of trial after the issues are made, on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice will thereby be promoted (Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72); and when the application is made on this ground, no affidavit of merits is necessary. Pascoe v. Baker, 158 Cal. 232; 110 Pac. 815. In an action to foreclose a mortgage upon land situated partly in two counties, where the affidavits establish clearly that the convenience of the witnesses will be promoted by a change, the motion should be granted. Thompson v. Brandt, 98 Cal. 155; 32 Pac. 890. Where the action is brought to quiet title to stock of a corporation defendant having its principal place of business in the county to which the change of venue is sought, and the transactions involved were concluded in that county, and the plaintiff's grantor and all the defendants owning stock reside therein, and the plaintiff has business relations therein, the motion is properly granted. Grant v. Bannister, 145 Cal. 219; 78 Pac. 653. A motion either to change the place of trial, or to retain it for trial in a county other than the proper county, based upon the convenience of witnesses, will not be entertained, where the defendant appears by demurrer only. Wong Fung Hing v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 15 Cal. App. 537; 115 Pac. 331. Until an answer is filed and issues of facts are joined, it cannot be said that a production of witnesses upon a trial will be required.

Wong Fung Hing v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 15 Cal. App. 537; 115 Pac. 331.

Motion for change. This section contemplates that the order shall be made "on motion," but the basis of the motion is the demand and the affidavit of merits; the "motion" is the formal application in court for the order. Jaques v. Owens, 18 Cal. App. 114; 122 Pac. 430. The motion must be made upon notice to the plaintiff, which notice must be in writing, and conform to the requirements of § 1010, post. Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532; 129 Pac. 981. To obtain a change of the place of trial, an application must be made to the court for an order of transfer; such application is a motion, and, under this section, the motion for the change must be made, in addition to the demand and affidavit. Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532; 129 Pac. 981. Upon the motion, the question of residence must be decided upon probative facts; these are the facts that should be set forth in the affidavit. Bernou v. Bernou, 15 Cal. App. 341; 114 Pac. 1000. A corporation sued, in a transitory action, in a county other than that of its principal place of business, may insist upon a change of the place of trial. Krogh v. Pacific Gateway etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 237; 104 Pac. 698. If there are several defendants in a personal action, a non-resident defendant, moving alone, is not entitled to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence, in the absence of a showing that none of the other defendants are residents of the county in which the action was brought. Donohoe v. Wooster, 163 Cal. 114; 124 Pac. 730. In condemnation proceedings, the place of trial cannot be changed to the place of residence of the defendants. Santa Rosa v. Fountain Water Co., 138 Cal. 579; 71 Pac. 1123, 1136. The right to a change of the place of trial must be determined by the conditions existing at the time of the appearance of the party demanding the change. Donohoe v. Wooster, 163 Cal. 114; 124 Pac. 730.

When an appeal may be taken. An appeal may be taken directly upon an order changing or refusing to change the place of trial. Remington Sewing Machine Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360; 33 Pac. 211; San Joaquin County v. Superior Court, 98 Cal. 602; 33 Pac. 482. Under the Practice Act, an appeal did not lie from an order granting a change of the place of trial; the remedy for an erroneous change of place of trial was by appeal from the final judgment. Juan v. Ingoldsby, 6 Cal. 439; Martin v. Travers, 7 Cal. 253; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78. Although the taking of an appeal from an order denying a motion to change the place of trial entitles the appellant to a continuance of the general cause in the court below while the appeal is pending, yet it does not follow that the trial court has, by reason of the pendency of the appeal, lost jurisdiction of the case or that a trial of the case, pending the appeal, would be a proceeding without or in excess of the jurisdiction of the trial court; it might amount to an error for which the judgment would be reversed on appeal, but there can be no such excess of jurisdiction as to authorize a writ of prohibition. People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 607; Howell v. Thompson, 70 Cal. 635; 11 Pac. 789. A judgment against the appellant, after an appeal from and before the reversal of the order refusing to change the place of trial, will be reversed upon appeal from the judgment, without inquiry as to the commission of errors on the trial, although the appellant may have appeared at the trial and contested the right of the respondent to recover. Howell v. Thompson, 70 Cal. 635; 11 Pac. 789; Pierson v. McCahill, 23 Cal. 249. The place for filing the notice and undertaking on appeal from an order changing the place of trial to another county, is in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county which made the order; if filed with the clerk of the county to which the transfer is made, the appeal is ineffectual, and will be dismissed. Mansfield v. O'Keefe, 133 Cal. 362; 65 Pac. 825. Although the affidavit upon which the application to change the venue is made may not show any legal cause for the change, still, if the court grants the application, it has acted judicially upon a matter within its cognizance, and the order is valid and conclusive, unless reversed on appeal. People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78. The action of the court in proceeding to trial, pending an appeal from an order denying a motion for a change of the place of trial, is not void, and will not be stayed by writ of prohibition. People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584; Howell v. Thompson, 70 Cal. 635; 11 Pac. 789; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 607. If the motion for a change of the place of trial, on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had, is made upon conflicting affidavits, a denial of the motion will be sustained on appeal, where the voir dire examination of the jurors is not in the record, and it does not appear that a single citizen liable for jury duty in the county is disqualified from giving the plaintiff a fair and impartial trial. Carpenter v. Sibley, 15 Cal. App. 589; 119 Pac. 391.

Change of venue. See note 74 Am. Dec. 241.

Number of times party is entitled to change of venue. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 304.

County to which venue may be changed in absence of statute requiring change to be to nearest or adjoining county. See note 9 Ann. Cas. 177.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Motion, when made. Where the convenience of witnesses is the ground of the motion, it should not be made till after issue joined. Hubbard v. National Protection Ins. Co., 11 How. Pr. 149; Merrill v. Grinnell, 10 How. Pr. 31; 12 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 286; Hinchman v. Butler, 7 How. Pr. 462; Hartman v. Spencer, 5 How. Pr. 135; see also Sup. Ct. Rules, pp. 59, 60.

2. When motion must be made. In Reyes v. Sanford, 5 Cal. 117, and in Tooms v. Randall, 3 Cal. 438, it was held that an objection to the venue must be made in the answer, and comes too late after an answer to the merits; it follows that such a motion, on grounds disclosed by the complaint, must be made before or at the time of filing demurrer. By filing a demurrer, and consenting to set the case for trial at a particular day, the defendant waives his right to move for a change of venue. Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 643; see also Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 246. See § 396, which modifies the rule of these distinctions in some respects.

3. Parties, and not court, to make motion. Motion should be made by the parties to the suit, and not by the court in the first instance. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 324.

4. Change of venue discretionary with judge. The granting of a change of venue on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had, and other grounds, is discretionary with the courts, and is subject to revision, only in cases of clear abuse. Watson v. Whitney, 23 Cal. 378; Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 410; Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 131; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78; People v. Fisher, 6 Cal. 155, commenting on People v. Lee, 5 Cal. 354. And the granting of time to file counter-affidavits, on a motion to change the place of trial, is a matter of discretion in the lower court. Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127.

5. When change of venue is not discretionary. The court has no discretion as to change of venue when an action concerning real estate is brought in the wrong county. A motion to change the place of trial, and not a demurrer, is the proper proceeding, and the trial must be changed as a matter of right. Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321.

6. Right to change place of trial may be waived. For convenience, parties have a right to a trial of particular cases in particular counties. This is a mere privilege, which may be waived by those entitled to it. It must be claimed at the proper time, and in the proper way. It is not, by our statute, matter in abatement of the writ, but a mere privilege of trial of the suit in the given county. The party desiring a change of venue should move the court to change the place of trial, and then the court, in the proper case, has no discretion to refuse the motion. It seems to be a matter of peremptory right. We think the court is not bound, of its own motion, to change the venue, and overrule, so far, the case of Vallejo v. Randall, 5 Cal. 461, if that case is to be so construed. Watts v. White 13 Cal. 324.

7. Resisting change of venue. What facts should govern court in granting change. When a defendant applies for a change of the place of trial, on the ground that the action was not brought in the county where he resides, the plaintiff has a right to oppose the motion, by showing that the "convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted" by refusing the change, and such facts should govern and control the court in determining the question whether the application for the change should be granted or not. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418; Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127; Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 538; see also Fickens v. Jones (not reported), 2 Parker's Cal. Dig., p. 82.

8. Opposing the motion. The motion, on the part of the defendant, to change the place of trial for the convenience of witnesses, may be resisted by the plaintiff by affidavit, showing that he has an equal or greater number of material witnesses than the defendant, residing in or near the county in which venue is laid. Gilbert v. Chapman, 1 How. Pr. 56; Spencer v. Hulbert, 2 Cai. 374; Du Boys v. Fronk, 3 Cai. 95; Stoutenbergh v. Legg, 2 Johns. 481; Anonymous, 7 Cow. 102; Onondaga County Bank v. Shepherd, 19 Wend. 10; Sherwood v. Steele, 12 Wend. 294.

9. When action commenced in wrong court, it may yet be retained there, if convenience of witnesses require it. Practice in such case. When defendant was not sued in the county of his residence, and moved to change the place of trial to such county, plaintiff may make a counter-motion to retain the cause on account of convenience of witnesses, and then defendant can reply to the allegations as to the convenience of witnesses; or plaintiff, instead of a counter-motion, may simply resist the motion of defendant, but reasonable time should be allowed defendant, if desired, to meet the matter set up in opposition to the original motion. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418; Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127. But if the plaintiff should neglect to present the facts as to convenience of witnesses, and the place of trial should once be changed to the county where defendant resides, it is doubtful whether the plaintiff can afterwards apply to the court to which it has thus been removed, to have it sent back again. Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127.

10. The affidavit by plaintiff to retain a cause for trial in a county not the residence of the defendant, upon the ground of convenience of witnesses, must contain the names of the witnesses, and the evidence as to the convenience should be as full and particular as that which is required upon application for this cause to transfer the trial to another county. Loehr v. Latham, 15 Cal. 418.

11. Affidavit on motion for change of venue must state what. The facts should be stated in the affidavit in such a manner as to enable the court to draw its own inference whether or not an impartial trial could be had in the particular case, admitting that a prejudice did exist in the community against the defendant. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 412.

12. Where the witnesses of plaintiff reside in the place from which defendant applies to move the trial. If the affidavit of a defendant for a change of venue, because a fair trial cannot be had, shows that all the witnesses of the plaintiff reside in the place from which the defendant seeks to remove the cause, it has an appearance as though he was endeavoring to escape from the effects of their testimony by a removal of the cause, and should cause the application to be regarded with suspicion. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 412.

13. The plaintiff in an action may have the place of trial changed upon a proper showing, equally with the defendant. There is nothing in the statute forbidding it. This section does not confine this motion to the defendant, but leaves it open for both parties. As a general rule, the action should be commenced in the county where the defendants reside; but if, after the issues are made up and each party knows the facts necessary to be proved, the plaintiff should find that the convenience of his witnesses requires that the trial should be had in some other county, where the cause of action arose, and where his witnesses reside, he is certainly as much entitled to a change as the defendant would be under the same circumstances, and he should not be denied that right because he has brought his action in the county where the defendants reside, or where the personal property in controversy may happen to be found. The present case shows the importance of thus establishing the rule. (See facts.) Grewell v. Walden, 23 Cal. 169. In New York, however, it was held that the plaintiff cannot directly move to change his venue, but may change it, by amending his complaint, of course, within the time allowed, or by motion for leave to amend, after the time to amend, of course, has expired. Swartwout v. Payne, 16 Johns. 149; Wakeman v. Sprague, 7 Cow. 164.

14. Where a strong prejudice exists, so that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had. See Fickens v. Jones (not reported), 2 Parker's Cal. Dig., p. 82.

15. The influence of the office of sheriff is not sufficient cause to change the venue, on the ground that it will prevent a fair and impartial trial. Baker v. Sleight, 2 Cai. 46.

16. The existence of a party spirit in the county where the venue is laid, against the party making the application, is not adequate ground for changing the place of trial. Zobieskie v. Bauder, 1 Cai. 487.

17. Where there are more defendants than one, all must join in the motion. Sailly v. Hutton, 6 Wend. 508; Welling v. Sweet, 1 How. Pr. 156. And where all do not so join, good reason must be shown therefor. Id. And this doctrine was established in Fickens v. Jones (not reported), 2 Parker's Cal. Dig., p. 82.

18. When all defendants need not join in motion. In an action against several defendants, where some of them have suffered default, the others may move to change the venue. Chace v. Benham, 12 Wend. 200. So if the action be in form against several defendants, and process be served upon a part only. Brittan v. Peabody, 4 Hill, 62, n.

19. Incapacity of judge to act. Section 170 of this code provides that "A judge cannot act as such in any of the following cases: When he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree. . . . But this section does not apply to the arrangement of the calendar or the regulation of the order of business." These are the only exceptions mentioned. This section (§ 397) of the code authorizes the court to change the place of trial, "when, from any cause, the judge is disqualified from acting in the action." These are mere formal matters, which determine no question in dispute between the parties, in any way affecting the merits of the controversy. But, beyond these acts, the judge is totally disqualified from sitting in the case. Even if no objection is made, he has no right to act, and ought, of his own motion, to decline to sit as judge. In Oakley v. Aspinwall, 3 N. Y. 547, where a judge sat in the case at the earnest solicitation of the party most interested in excluding him, and with the consent of both parties, it was held that the judgment which depended upon his concurrence was vitiated. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 77; see also De la Guerra v. Burton, 23 Cal. 592.

20. Incapacity of judge, exhibition of partisan feeling by judge, etc. The exhibition, by a judge, of partisan feeling, or the unnecessary expression of an opinion upon the justice or merits of a controversy, though exceedingly indecorous, improper, and reprehensible, as calculated to throw suspicion upon the judgment of the court, and bring the administration of justice into contempt, is not, under our statute, sufficient to authorize a change of venue, on the ground that the judge is disqualified from sitting. The law establishes a different rule for determining the qualification of judges from that applied to jurors. McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 523; see also People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

21. Change of venue in probate court. When the probate judge is interested in an estate, or in money coming to the heirs therefrom, he has no jurisdiction to act as judge therein, and should grant a change of venue. It is no excuse for refusing a change of venue, in such case, to say that the judge decided correctly upon the matter before him, after refusing such change of venue. Estate of White, 37 Cal. 190.

22. Fraudulent debtor confessing several fraudulent judgments in different courts. See Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

23. The effect of an appeal from order refusing change of venue is to stay all further proceedings in the action until the determination of such appeal. Pierson v. McCahill, 23 Cal. 249.

24. Transfer of actions to United States courts. See Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604; People v. Hager, 20 Cal. 167; Calderwood v. Braly, 28 Cal. 97; Magraw v. McGlynn, 32 Cal. 257. See the subject fully discussed in notes 13, 14, 15, 16, of § 33, ante. The provisions of "An Act to provide for certifying and removing certain cases from the courts of this state to the United States circuit courts, and to remove by writ of error certain cases from the supreme court of this state to the supreme court of the United States," passed April 9, 1855 (Stats. 1855, p. 80), have been omitted from the code. It has been held that the state legislature had no power to confer jurisdiction on the Federal courts, nor to provide for the mode of exercising its jurisdiction. Say the court in Greely v. Townsend: The origin and history of the act of the 9th of April, 1855 (Stats. 1855, p. 80), are well known. Five months prior to its passage the then supreme court of this state, in the case of Johnson v. Gordon, 4 Cal. 368, had decided that the twenty-fifth section of the Federal Judiciary Act of 1789 was unconstitutional, and declared that no case could be taken from a state to a Federal court by writ of error or otherwise. The decision was made upon the authority of the court of appeals of Virginia, in the case of Martin v. Hunter's Lessee, and in harmony with the ultra state rights doctrine of Calhoun and his political followers, the soundness of which is now undergoing its last test upon the bloody battle-fields of the republic. Startled by the judicial enunciation of this doctrine by the highest court of the state, . . . the legislature sought to provide a remedy against its supposed evils by interposing a barrier to its further judicial progress, apparently without pausing to consider whether a remedy was within the constitutional reach of state legislation. The motive was a good one; but, as all must admit, the power was wanting. It is not within the constitutional power of a state legislature to confer jurisdiction upon Federal courts, or prescribe the means or mode of its exercise. That subject belongs exclusively to the Federal government, and must be regulated solely by the Federal constitution and the laws of Congress. While, therefore, I appreciate the motive of the legislature in passing the act in question, I am compelled to deny its power, and must hold that, so far as the act attempts to prescribe a rule for judicial conduct in cases like the present, it is wholly inoperative. Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 613; see also People v. Judge of Jackson Circuit Court, 21 Mich. 577; 4 Am. Rep. 504.

§ 398. When judge is disqualified, cause to be transferred. If an action or proceeding is commenced or pending in a court, and the judge or justice thereof is disqualified from acting as such, or if, from any cause, the court orders the place of trial changed, it must be transferred for trial to a court the parties may agree upon, by stipulation in writing, or made in open court and entered in the minutes; or, if they do not so agree, then to the nearest or most accessible court, where the like objection or cause for making the order does not exist, as follows:

1. If in a superior court, to another superior court.
2. If in a justices' court, to another justices' court in the same county.

Legislation § 398. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Stats. 1881, p. 23, to read as at present, except for the words "or most accessible," added in 1897; (1) changing "for any cause" to "from any cause," (2) omitting the words "to be" before the word "changed," (3) in subd. 1, changing the word "district" to "superior" in both instances, (4) renumbering subd. 4 as subd. 2, (5) omitting subd. 2 and subd. 3, which read: "2. If in a county court, to some other county court; 3. If in the probate court, to some other probate court."

3. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 184.

When judge is disqualified. This section applies to the judge acting at the time of the application, and not necessarily to the superior judge of the county. Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215; Upton v. Upton, 94

Cal. 26; 29 Pac. 411; Krumdick v. Crump, 98 Cal. 117; 32 Pac. 800. The construction of this section should be liberal, with a view to effect its object and to promote justice. Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215. Where the motion for change of venue is presented for hearing before a judge who is qualified to try the case, the motion is properly denied. Santa Cruz Bank v. Taylor, 125 Cal. 249; 57 Pac. 987; Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215; Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746; Upton v. Upton, 94 Cal. 26; 29 Pac. 411; Krumdick v. Crump, 98 Cal. 117; 32 Pac. 800. A motion on the ground of bias or prejudice of the judge must be decided upon the affidavits filed: the judge is not permitted to use his own knowledge of the matter (People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44; People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 248; 59 Pac. 573; Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332; 68 Pac. 976), except where the ground of disqualification alleged is the interest of the judge; the knowledge of the judge in such case would be more certain and satisfactory than any evidence. Southern California etc. Road Co. v. San Bernardino Nat. Bank, 100 Cal. 316; 34 Pac. 711. The burden is on the moving party to show disqualification; there is no presumption of disqualification. Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129. The right to make and file an affidavit as to the disqualification of a judge is not restricted to any particular party. Parrish v. Riverside Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 95; 93 Pac. 685. Even if no objection is made, a disqualified judge has no right to act, and ought, of his own motion, to decline to sit as a judge. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; Tracy v. Colby, 55 Cal. 67. A judgment, after an improper refusal to grant a change of venue on the ground of the disqualification of the judge, is void, and will be reversed on appeal, without consideration of its merits (Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 113; 53 Pac. 1128); but jurisdiction is not divested by giving notice of the motion; and if the motion is properly denied, the judgment is not affected thereby. Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129. By the change of venue granted by a judge who is a party to or interested in the action, jurisdiction is conferred upon the court to which the transfer is made. Oakland v. Hart, 129 Cal. 98; 61 Pac. 779. There is no presumption that a judge is disqualified; whether disqualification exists is a judicial question, to be determined by the tribunal before which it is presented, and the facts establishing it must be set forth by affidavits. Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129.

Nearest and most accessible court. The words "most accessible" mean most accessible from the court in which the action is pending; and the words "nearest court" mean the court nearest that in which the action is pending; but the "most accessible" court may not be the "nearest" court. Anaheim Water Co. v. Jurupa Land etc. Co., 128 Cal. 568; 61 Pac. 80. The determination of this question is a matter within the jurisdiction of the disqualified judge, and an error therein would not render the judgment void. Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140; 21 Pac. 527, 855. In case of the disqualification of a judge, the law selects the judge to try the cause; the disqualified judge has no discretion in the selection. Parrish v. Riverside Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 95; 93 Pac. 685. A judge who is interested in an action or proceeding can only act as directed by law; he cannot transfer the same to a judge of his own selection, nor call in any other judge to try the cause. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293. The provision for a change to another county is applicable, only when all the judges of the county are disqualified, and there is no judge of the court qualified to act. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56.

Transfer may be compelled. Mandamus will issue to enforce the right of transfer (Livermore v. Brundage, 64 Cal. 299; 30 Pac. 848; Krumdick v. Crump, 98 Cal. 117; 32 Pac. 800); and prohibition will issue to restrain a judge from proceeding in the action, where he is disqualified by reason of interest, although the court in which he presides has jurisdiction of the action (North Bloomfield etc. Mining Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 315; Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121); but the showing of bias and prejudice must be clear, or prohibition will not issue. Dakan v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 52; 82 Pac. 1129. While the motion remains undetermined, prohibition will not issue (Chester v. Colby, 52 Cal. 516; Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121); and the right to claim a transfer is waived by a subsequent stipulation that the cause may be set for trial at any time that may suit the convenience of the judge called to try the same, and by an appearance before the judge called to preside, without objection, and obtaining leave to file an amended complaint, and arguing the demurrer thereto. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557. By consenting to the calling in of a qualified judge, the party is precluded from raising the question of irregularity of manner in calling him in, or of his right to hear the cause. Oakland v. Hart, 129 Cal. 98; 61 Pac. 779.

Power of disqualified judge. The power of the disqualified judge is limited, so that he may not act at all, except so far as the action may be affected by the arrangement of the calendar of his court for regulation of the order of business, and except to transfer the case to some other court for trial; he has but one thing to do, and it is his duty to do that thing at once; there should be no postponement on account of the absence of the adverse party, no continuances, no time given for the filing of briefs, no holding under advisement, no entertaining of any counter-motion based upon grounds calling for the exercise of judicial discretion. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; Estate of White, 37 Cal. 190; Livermore v. Brundage, 64 Cal. 299; 30 Pac. 848; Krumdick v. Crump, 98 Cal. 117; 32 Pac. 800; Anaheim Water Co. v. Jurupa Land etc. Co., 128 Cal. 568; 61 Pac. 80. The dismissal of an action involves judicial discretion; and if made by a disqualified judge, it is void. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73. A motion for a new trial must be transferred for hearing, where the judge becomes disqualified; the hearing and disposition of a motion for a new trial amounts to a trial, within the meaning of this section. Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746. A cause which the judge is disqualified to try may be transferred by him to another department of the same court, instead of to the superior court of another county. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56; Regents of University v. Turner, 159 Cal. 541; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1162; 114 Pac. 842. A disqualified judge may call in a judge, who is not disqualified, to act in his place. Upton v. Upton, 94 Cal. 26; 29 Pac. 411; Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215. The disqualified judge has no discretion: he must perform the duty imposed by this section (Parrish v. Riverside Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 95; 93 Pac. 685); and the duty imposed is not satisfied by simply calling in a judge who is not disqualified. Remy v. Olds, 5 Cal. Unrep. 182; 42 Pac. 239. This section applies to a proceeding in eminent domain, where the judge is disqualified for interest. John Heinlen Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 660; 121 Pac. 293. A disqualified judge may arrange the calendar and adjust the order of business, but it has no power to take any preliminary step in the prosecution of a criminal case. People v. Ehey, 6 Cal. App. 769; 93 Pac. 379.

§ 399. Papers to be transmitted. Costs, etc. Jurisdiction, etc. When an order is made transferring an action or proceeding for trial, the clerk of the court or justice of the peace, must transmit the pleadings and papers therein to the clerk or justice of the court to which it is transferred. The costs and fees thereof, and of filing the papers anew, must be paid by the party at whose instance the order was made when the action or proceeding was originally commenced in the proper county. In all other cases such costs and fees shall be paid by the plaintiff. The court to which an action or proceeding is transferred has and exercises over the same the like jurisdiction as if it had been originally commenced therein.

Costs.

1. On removal of criminal action, chargeable against county. See Pol. Code, §§ 4345–4347.
2. On changing place of trial, in justice's court. See post, § 836.

Legislation § 399. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Stats. 1909, c. 723, in sentence beginning "The costs," adding, after "was made," the words "when the action or proceeding was originally commenced in the proper county. In all other cases such costs and fees shall be paid by the plaintiff."

Order of transfer. An order for transfer gives jurisdiction to the court of the county to which the action is transferred; such jurisdiction is not affected by irregularities in the manner of transmitting the papers, and an objection thereto will not be heard for the first time on appeal. People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354; 75 Pac. 1093. It is not necessary that the court acting upon the motion in the case, shall have jurisdiction by a previous filing of the notice. Younglove v. Steinman, 80 Cal. 375; 22 Pac. 189.

Costs and fees. One party may pay the costs, and procure the transfer of the papers in the case, where they are properly chargeable to the other party. Brooks v. Douglass, 32 Cal. 208. The order changing the place of trial does not become void for non-payment of costs. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355. Before the amendment to this section in 1909, the costs and fees were payable by the party at whose instance the order was made. Modoc County v. Madden, 136 Cal. 134; 68 Pac. 491; Estep v. Armstrong, 69 Cal. 536; 11 Pac. 132. The order changing the place of trial divests the transferring court of jurisdiction, and vests it in the court to which the transfer is made. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355.

§ 400. Proceedings after judgment in certain cases transferred. When an action or proceeding affecting the title to or possession of real estate has been brought in or transferred to any court of a county other than the county in which the real estate, or some portion of it, is situated, the clerk of such court must, after final judgment therein, certify, under his seal of office, and transmit to the corresponding court of the county in which the real estate affected by the action is situated, a copy of the judgment. The clerk receiving such copy must file, docket, and record the judgment in the records of the court, briefly designating it as a judgment transferred from —— court (naming the proper court).

Legislation § 400. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Trial of issue in probate. The probate court of one county has jurisdiction to change the place of trial of an issue of fact to the probate court of another county; and the result of the trial can be certified to the former court. People v. Almy, 46 Cal. 245.

TITLE V.

MANNER OF COMMENCING CIVIL ACTIONS.

§ 405. Actions, how commenced.
§ 406. Complaint, how indorsed. When summons may be issued, and how waived.
§ 407. Summons, how issued, directed, and what to contain.
§ 408. Manner and time of issuing alias summons.
§ 409. Notice of the pendency of an action affecting the title to real property.
§ 410. Summons, how served and returned.
§ 411. Summons, how served.
§ 412. Cases in which service of summons may be by publication. Certificate of residence.
§ 413. Manner of publication.
§ 414. Proceedings where there are several defendants, and part only are served.
§ 415. Proof of service, how made.
§ 416. When jurisdiction of action acquired.

§ 405. Actions, how commenced. Civil actions in the courts of this state are commenced by filing a complaint.

Legislation § 405. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 22 (New York Code, § 127), as amended by Stats. 1855, p. 303, which read: "Civil actions in the district courts, superior court of the city of San Francisco, and the county courts, shall be commenced by the filing of a complaint with the clerk of the court in which the action is brought, and the issuing of a summons thereon; provided, that after the filing of the complaint a defendant in the action may appear, answer or demur, whether the summons has been issued or not, and such appearance, answer or demurrer shall be deemed a waiver of summons." When enacted in 1872, § 405 had the words "and the issuing of summons thereon" at the end of the section.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 296.

Actions, how commenced. Under the Practice Act, civil actions were commenced by filing the complaint with the clerk of the court, and the issuance of summons thereon (Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 318; People v. O'Neil, 47 Cal. 109; Ex parte Hollis, 59 Cal. 405; Huerstal v. Muir, 62 Cal. 479; Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122); and the action was not deemed commenced until summons was actually issued. Flandreau v. White, 18 Cal. 639; Green v. Jackson Water Co., 10 Cal. 374; Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577. The mode of commencing an action, and of acquiring jurisdiction of the parties, is controlled by the code, and not by the common law. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 238; Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122. Where no complaint is filed, an action cannot be considered as commenced. Tinn v. United States District Attorney, 148 Cal. 773; 113 Am. St. Rep. 354; 84 Pac. 152. An action was commenced when the original complaint was filed (Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165); but where the complaint did not state a cause of action until the amendment thereof, the suit was not deemed commenced until the filing of the amended complaint. Anderson v. Mayers, 50 Cal. 525. Where there is no evidence that the complaint was ever filed, the defendant, on an appeal taken by him, is estopped to deny that it was duly filed. Mahlstadt v. Blanc, 34 Cal. 577. The filing of the complaint operates to stop the running of the statute of limitations, only as to those who were made defendants at the time it was filed; the filing of a supplemental complaint is the commencement of a new action as to added defendants. Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147. The statute of limitations declares that the action shall be deemed commenced, within its meaning, "when the complaint has been filed in the proper court": the filing of the complaint, without the issuance of summons thereon, stops the running of the statute. Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165. The failure of a corporation to file its articles of incorporation, simply deprives it of the right to maintain an action until the statute is complied with. Riverdale Mining Co. v. Wicks, 14 Cal. App. 526; 112 Pac. 896.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Actions, when commenced. Actions are commenced by filing complaint and issuing summons. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 239. And an action is not commenced until the issuance of summons under the provisions of the statute limiting the time for the enforcement of mechanics' liens. Green v. Jackson Water Co., 10 Cal. 375. The provisions of § 350, that actions are commenced within the meaning of the statute of limitations, upon the filing of a complaint without the issuance of summons, does not apply to time of commencing an action for the enforcement of a mechanic's lien; such an action is not commenced until complaint is filed and summons issued. See Flandreau v. White, 18 Cal. 640.

2. Action commenced, within the meaning of statute of limitations. The action is commenced, within the meaning of the title as to time of commencing actions, as soon as the complaint is filed. See note to § 350, ante (statute of limitations), referring to Sharp v. Maguire, 19 Cal. 577; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165; Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 124.

§ 406. Complaint, how indorsed. When summons may be issued, and how waived. The clerk must indorse on the complaint the day, month, and year that it is filed, and at any time within one year thereafter, the plaintiff may have a summons issued, and if the action be brought against two or more defendants, who reside in different counties, may have a summons issued for each of such counties at the same time. But at any time within the year after the complaint is filed, the defendant may, in writing, or by appearing and answering or demurring, waive the issuing of summons; or, if the action be brought upon a joint contract of two or more defendants, and one of them has appeared within the year, the other or others may be served or appear after the year at any time before trial.

Admission of service by defendant. Post, § 415.
Alias summons. Post, § 408.
Appearance. Post, §§ 416, 1014.

Legislation § 406. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 23, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 298, which read: "The clerk shall indorse on the complaint, the day, month, and year, the same is filed, and at any time within one year after the filing of the same, the plaintiff may have a summons issued. The summons shall be signed by the clerk and directed to the defendant, and be issued under the seal of the court." When enacted in 1872, § 406 read: "The clerk must indorse on the complaint the day, month, and year that it is filed, and at any time within one year thereafter the plaintiff may have summons issued. But at any time after the complaint is filed the defendant may, in writing, or by appearing and answering or demurring, waive the issuing of summons."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 296.
3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 129; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Issuance of summons. The only object of the summons is to bring a party into court: if that object is attained by the appearance and pleading of the party, there can be no injury to him. Smith v. Curtis, 7 Cal. 584; Ford v. Bushard, 116 Cal. 273; 48 Pac. 119. A summons is to be issued, as a matter of course, upon application to the clerk; no order by the court or judge is required. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 238. The Practice Act required that a copy of the complaint, certified by the clerk, should be served with the summons; and it was held that the summons was not issued, within the meaning of that act, unless accompanied by a certified copy of the complaint, and all papers essential to a valid personal service on the defendant, duly attested. Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 296. If no summons is issued within a year after the filing of the complaint, the action may properly be dismissed. Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 296; Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585; 95 Am. Dec. 213; Carpentier v. Minturn, 39 Cal. 450; Linden etc. Mining Co. v. Sheplar, 53 Cal. 245; Cowell v. Stuart, 69 Cal. 525; 11 Pac. 57; Kubli v. Hawkett, 89 Cal. 638; 27 Pac. 57; First Nat. Bank v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626; 47 Pac. 595; People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704.

Time of issuance. The time within which a summons can be issued is limited to one year after the filing of the complaint. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 238. Before the amendment of § 23 of the Practice Act in 1860, a summons could be issued at any time after filing the complaint; but it was doubtless found that to permit summons to be issued at any time would indefinitely extend the statute of limitations. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 238; Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 296.

Service of summons. When the defendant is found and actually served, the court acquires jurisdiction of his person; and the question whether there has been reasonable diligence in making the service within the time limited, is left open, to be considered and decided by the court upon the facts of the case. Murray v. Gleeson, 100 Cal. 511; 35 Pac. 88.

Waiver of summons by appearance. Appearance by attorney, whether authorized or not, binds the party, except in case of the fraud or insolvency of the attorney (Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191; Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200); and answering is an appearance, and a waiver of the issuing of summons (Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51; Shay v. Superior Court, 57 Cal. 541); as is also consent to time of trial, after appearance. Cronise v. Carghill, 4 Cal. 120. Where counsel appears expressly for two named defendants, his signature to papers in the case, thereafter, as attorney for the defendants, will be considered as limited to those for whom he expressly appeared. Spangel v. Dellinger, 42 Cal. 148; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. Where one appears, and objects only to the consideration of the case, or to the procedure, for want of jurisdiction, the appearance is special; where he appears, and asks for any relief which could be given to a party only in a pending case, the appearance is general, no matter how carefully or expressly it may be stated that the appearance is special; it is the character of the relief asked, not the intention of the party that it shall or shall not constitute a general appearance, which is material. In re Clarke, 125 Cal. 388; 58 Pac. 22.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Summons is waived by voluntary appearance of defendant. Although the action is said, by § 405 of the code, to be commenced by the filing a complaint and issuing a summons, yet by § 416 it is provided that a voluntary appearance shall be equivalent to personal service of the summons. Putting in an answer is an appearance, and such appearance must be held to be a waiver of the mere formality of issuing a summons, the service of which, in such case, becomes unnecessary. The only purpose of the summons is to bring the defendant into court. It is constantly said by courts, when actions are commenced by the service of process, as by capias ad respondendum, that a voluntary appearance waives all defects of process, even when objection is taken in the same action. Under our practice, the plaintiff, by filing his complaint, goes himself into court; and although he may not choose to take out a summons, we think he cannot object to the defendant coming in and answering the complaint, any more than he could object to the defendant's voluntary appearance after the plaintiff had taken out a summons which he did not choose to serve. Quite as little can the defendant in a collateral action object that there was no action pending, after having voluntarily put in an answer to the complaint on file. Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 54.

2. Summons is waived by appearance of defendant's attorney. See Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280.

3. When appearance by mistake does not avoid issuance of summons. If an attorney, authorized to appear for a part, only, of several defendants, inadvertently files an answer for all, and, discovering his mistake, obtains an order allowing him to withdraw his answer and file a new one, limited to the defendants for whom he intended to answer, the court acquires jurisdiction only of those defendants for whom the attorney finally appears. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342.

4. Time when summons may issue. In 1860, this section was amended so as to read as follows: "And at any time within one year after the filing of the same, the plaintiff may have a summons issued." These are the only provisions prescribing the mode of commencing suits and authorizing the issue of a summons. The summons authorized by this section to be issued, whether one or more, issues as a matter of course upon application to the clerk. The party, upon filing his complaint and paying the costs, has a right to it, and no order by the court or judge is required. But the section was amended in 1860, and limited the time within which the summons provided for in that and the preceding section could be issued to one year after the filing of the complaint. This is an amendment which merely affects the mode of proceeding, and all proceedings thereafter taken must be in accordance with that provision. A summons thereafter to be issued as a matter of absolute right, must issue by virtue of the provisions of the section as amended, because there is no other provision authorizing the issue of any summons. Conceding, then, that under the provisions of §§ 405 and 406, a party may have more than one summons issued on the same complaint, they must all be issued within the time prescribed, for if he relies upon the provisions of that section to establish his right, he cannot have more than these provisions authorize. A technical alias summons is not known to our law, and, in fact, under our system of practice, there is no necessity for one. The summons specifies no return-day, and when it has once been issued, it may be served and returned at any time, without reference to the time of the commencement of the next term of court. It is served by delivering a copy to the defendant. If more than one summons is authorized by the Practice Act, the second has no necessary connection with or dependence upon the first. It is based upon the complaint alone. The capias ad respondendum, under the common-law system, was returnable at the next succeeding term of the court, and a return of the writ was a necessary prerequisite to the issuing of an alias. It was also necessary, on return of the capias, that a continuance-roll should be made up, and, unless there was a continuance, there was nothing to connect an alias, or pluries, with the capias upon which it depended, and the suit failed. Unless the continuity of the proceedings was kept up by a continuance-roll from the issuing of the capias to the issuing of the alias or pluries upon which the defendant was arrested, the issue of the capias within the time specified in the statute of limitations would not save the action, where the arrest was made on an alias issued after the statute had run upon the demand in suit. A party might, doubtless, issue as many writs of capias as he pleased on the same demand, without reference to the return of the prior writ; but in such case the suing out of such writ would be the institution of a new suit, and not be a process in the same suit. But these principles have no relevancy to our system. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 241.

5. Service of summons after notice of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution. If notice is given of a motion to dismiss an action for want of prosecution, before summons is served, and the plaintiff then serves the summons, and at the end of ten days takes a default, but judgment is not entered up, the entry of the default does not preclude the court from dismissing the action. The dismissal takes effect by relation back to the time of service of the motion. Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585; 95 Am. Dec. 213.

6. Dismissing action for want of prosecution. This court will not reverse a judgment dismissing an action for want of prosecution, unless there has been an abuse of discretion in the court below in giving the judgment; and it devolves upon the appellant to show such abuse of discretion; and allowing an action to rest without service of summons, for two years and eight months after the summons is issued, is such a want of diligence as to justify the court in dismissing the action. Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585; 95 Am. Dec. 213.

7. When the court must order summons to issue. If the court had any authority to direct a second summons to issue, after the expiration of a year from the filing of the complaint, it must be because, by filing the complaint, and issuing a summons thereon, a suit had been commenced, within the meaning of the provisions of the Practice Act, and there was thenceforth a suit pending and within the control of the court, which the court, by virtue of its general powers over the subject-matter, was authorized to dispose of; and, as incident to this power, it was authorized to direct process to issue for the purpose of acquiring jurisdiction of the person. We can perceive no other ground upon which to base the power of the court to make the order. Conceding this authority to exist, the exercise of the power rests in the sound legal discretion of the court. The order for the issue of the summons in the first instance (see facts) was made upon an ex parte application, and, doubtless, without much consideration. Afterwards, the question was more fully considered upon the motion to vacate the order and set aside the summons, when both parties were heard upon the merits. The court then came to the conclusion that the order had been made and the summons issued improvidently, and the summons was thereupon set aside. The court, upon a full hearing, exercised its judicial discretion, and we are not prepared to say it was not soundly exercised. Dupuy v. Shear, 29 Cal. 242.

8. Issuance of summons within one year. What constitutes issuance of summons. Section 410 provides that "at any time within one year after the filing of the same [the complaint] the plaintiff may have summons issued"; and § 28 provides that "a copy of the complaint shall be served with the summons." Under this last provision, the service of a copy of the complaint is held to be essential to a valid service. McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 373. What is intended by the terms "issuing a summons thereon," and "may have a summons issued"? Does this statute simply mean the delivery of the technical summons alone, duly signed and sealed? or does it mean that the summons shall be issued with the accompanying copy of the complaint, which is absolutely necessary to enable the plaintiff to procure a valid service? It is evident to our minds that the latter is the true construction. To adhere strictly to the letter in this instance, and hold the delivery of a summons sufficient, would truly be to stick in the bark. The issuing of the summons intended, is issuing it accompanied with everything necessary to enable the party, when he receives it, to make it available for the purpose of effecting a valid service. The issuing of a summons without a copy of the complaint would be a nugatory act, whereas something practical must have been intended. The summons cannot be said to be issued, within the meaning of the act, till it is in a condition to serve. Before the amendment of 1860, the summons might be issued at any time after filing the complaint; but by the amendment of that year it could only be issued within a year. It was doubtless found that to permit the summons to be issued at any time, without limitation, enabled plaintiffs to indefinitely extend the statute of limitations. At all events, the amendment was adopted, and it was evidently the intention to require parties to proceed with their litigation within a reasonable time—to place themselves, at least, in a condition to effect service of process. And we think the summons not issued, within the meaning of the act, till all the papers essential to enable the plaintiff to make a valid personal appearance on the defendants, duly attested, are placed at his disposal. Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 300; see also opinion of Rhoades, J., dissenting.

9. Generally. See note 2 to § 405.

§ 407. Summons, how issued, directed, and what to contain. The summons must be directed to the defendant, signed by the clerk, and issued under the seal of the court, and must contain:

1. The names of the parties to the action, the court in which it is brought, and the county in which the complaint is filed;

2. A direction that the defendant appear and answer the complaint within ten days, if the summons is served within the county in which the action is brought; within thirty days, if served elsewhere;

3. A notice that, unless the defendant so appears and answers, the plaintiff will take judgment for any money or damages demanded in the complaint as arising upon contract, or will apply to the court for any other relief demanded in the complaint.

Style of process. Const., art. vi, § 20.

Sovereignty, resides in the people. Pol. Code, § 30.

Legislation § 407. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 23, 24, 25, 26. (See ante, Legislation § 406, for § 23.) As amended by Stats. 1859, p. 39, § 24 read: "The summons shall state the parties to the action, the court in which it is brought, the county in which the complaint is filed, the cause and general nature of the action, and require the defendant to appear and answer the complaint within the time mentioned in the next section, after the service of summons, exclusive of the day of service, or that judgment by default will be taken against him, according to the prayer of the complaint, briefly stating the sum of money or other relief demanded in the complaint, and the clerk shall also indorse on the summons the names of the plaintiff's attorneys." Practice Act, § 25, read: "The time in which the summons shall require the defendant to answer the complaint, shall be as follows: 1. If the defendant is served within the county in which the action is brought, ten days: 2. If the defendant is served out of the county, but in the district in which the action is brought, twenty days; 3. In all other cases, forty days." Practice Act, § 26 (New York Code, § 129), read: "There shall also be inserted in the summons a notice, in substance, as follows: 1. In an action arising on contract for the recovery only of money or damages, that the plaintiff will take judgment for a sum specified therein, if the defendant fail to answer the complaint; 2. In other actions, that if the defendant fail to answer the complaint, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded therein." When enacted in 1872, § 407 read the same as at present to the end of subd. 1, and the remainder of the section read: "2. The cause and general nature of the action; 3. A direction that the defendant appear and answer the complaint within ten days, if the summons is served within the county in which the action is brought; within twenty days, if served out of the county but in the district in which the action is brought, and within forty days if served elsewhere; 4. In an action arising on contract, for the recovery of money or damages only, a notice that unless the defendant so appears and answers the plaintiff will take judgment for the sum demanded in the complaint (stating it); 5. In other actions, a notice that unless defendant so appears and answers the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint. The name of the plaintiff's attorney must be indorsed on the summons."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 13, (1) changing subd. 2 to read: "2. A statement of the nature of the action in general terms"; (2) changing subd. 3, after the words "brought," to read, "within thirty days, if served elsewhere."

3. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 53.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 129; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Signed by the clerk. The provision of this section, that the summons must be signed by the clerk, is sufficiently complied with by affixing a printed signature. Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777.

Names of the parties. The form of the summons is prescribed by law, and is mandatory, not directory; it must contain all that is required by the statute, whether deemed needful or not, and, among other things, it must state the names of all the parties (Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630; Ward v. Ward, 59 Cal. 139); but the name of the attorney is not a part of the summons. People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11; 76 Pac. 646. Where there are several defendants to the action, it is not sufficient to designate some as et al., which indicates that there are some parties who are not named. Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630; Ward v. Ward, 59 Cal. 139.

The court in which it is brought. A summons which wrongly designates the court of the county in which brought is sufficient in this regard, if issued under the seal and attested by the judge of the proper court. Crane v. Brannan, 3 Cal. 192.

Direction to appear. The date for the appearance of the defendant must be fixed as prescribed by the code (Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339); and where radically defective, the service must be set aside. State v. Woodlief, 2 Cal. 241; Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 619. The date of the appearance depends upon the date of the service. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347. The defendant must appear specially, and move to dismiss a defective summons (Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630; Kent v. West, 50 Cal. 185; Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54); for defects are waived by pleading. Sears v. Starbird, 78 Cal. 225; 20 Pac. 547.

Notice to be contained in summons. This section does not assume to declare the particulars of the summons, but it declares the matters it must contain; and a substantial compliance with its requirements is all that is required. Stanquist v. Hebbard, 122 Cal. 268; 54 Pac. 841; Granger v. Sherriff, 133 Cal. 416; 65 Pac. 873. A notice that the plaintiff will take judgment for the relief demanded in the complaint is, in substance, a notice that he will apply to the court for the relief. Clark v. Palmer, 90 Cal. 504; 27 Pac. 375; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203. A summons that does not apprise the defendant that, upon his failure to appear and answer, the plaintiff will take judgment against him, is fatally defective. Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 619; Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838. Reference to the complaint on file is sufficient, even though there is an amended complaint. Dowling v. Comerford, 99 Cal. 204; 33 Pac. 853. Formerly, the code required the summons to state the cause and general nature of the action (King v. Blood, 41 Cal. 314; Bewick v. Muir, 83 Cal. 368; 23 Pac. 389; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203); but it was then held that the summons was sufficient, if it stated the nature of the action in general terms (Bewick v. Muir, 83 Cal. 368; 23 Pac. 389; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203), or if the nature of the action was described by reference to the complaint served therewith (Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 151); it was sufficient, however, if it stated substantially the cause and general nature of the action set forth in the complaint (People v. Greene, 52 Cal. 577); and if defectively stated, it made the action voidable only. People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203. The summons is not void because the relief asked for is stated in the alternative. Stanquist v. Hebbard, 122 Cal. 268; 54 Pac. 841. If the summons is radically defective for want of legal sufficiency, the whole proceeding may be dismissed, but not for want of some immaterial recitation which does not affect the rights of the parties (Polock v. Hunt, 2 Cal. 193; Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54); but the court has power to amend a summons, pending its service. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714. While the Practice Act required the answer to be filed within a limited time after service of the summons, yet the defendant could put in an answer at any time before final judgment, even after default entered, and without application to the court for that purpose. Stevens v. Ross, 1 Cal. 94.

Amendment of summons. The summons is the process whereby parties defendant are brought into court so as to give the court jurisdiction of their persons. Nellis v. Justices' Court, 20 Cal. App. 394; 129 Pac. 472. The court has full power to amend its process, pending service thereof; and it must be presumed, where an amended summons is collaterally attacked, that it was properly issued upon an order of the court, where nothing appears to the contrary. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The preceding section embodies in a condensed form the substance of §§ 24, 25, and 26, and the last clause of § 23, of the Practice Act.

1. Form of summons. Proceeding by defendant on defective summons. "The summons is the process by which parties defendant are brought into court, so as to give the court jurisdiction of their persons. Its form is prescribed by law; and whatever the form may be, it must be observed, at least substantially. It may be that a summons, under our system, is required to state more than is necessary for the information of the defendant; that a copy of the complaint served by the sheriff or the attorney would have been all that is needful. If that be so, it is a matter for the legislature, and not for the courts. We entertain no doubt that a summons must contain all that is required by the statute, whether deemed needful or not, and, among other things, must state the parties to the action. It may be that when the defendant moved to quash the summons for insufficiency, the court might have entertained a counter-motion to have it amended, by inserting the omitted names of the defendants, and, on its being so amended, might have denied the original motion. In Polock v. Hunt, 2 Cal. 193, it was held that the court had power to amend the summons so as to make it conform to the law, when it operated no hardship or surprise to the defendants. No such counter-motion, however, was made in this case, and we cannot pass upon that question." Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630.

Motion to dismiss defective summons. "A defendant has a right to appear for the purpose of moving to dismiss a defective summons, and it is error in the court to refuse him that privilege. Nor does the fact that he afterwards appears and answers waive his right or cure the error." Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339; Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 569; Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630.

2. Defective summons. Summons must apprise defendant of what. In an action for fraudulently converting money of plaintiff, it was held that the summons was fatally defective in this, that it did not apprise the defendant that, upon his failure to appear and answer, the plaintiff would take judgment against him for fraudulently converting the property of the plaintiff. The notice in the summons was that "if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you for the said sum of $11,156.62, interest and costs," etc. Under such a notice the plaintiff could only take an ordinary judgment upon default for the money demanded. A defective summons will not sustain a judgment by default. State v. Woodlief, 2 Cal. 241; Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 625.

3. Defective summons will not support judgment by default. If the summons be extremely defective in not conforming to the provisions of the code, it is insufficient to support a judgment by default. State v. Woodlief, 2 Cal. 242.

4. Amendment of summons. Court has power to amend summons so as to make it conform to law, if it operates no hardship or surprise to defendants. Polock v. Hunt, 2 Cal. 194; Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630.

5. Object of summons. Appearance sufficient. The only object of a summons is to bring a party into court, and if that object be obtained by the appearance and pleading of a party, there can be no injury to him. Smith v. Curtis, 7 Cal. 587.

6. Time in which summons shall require defendant to answer. Subdivision 3 of this section allows a party ten days after the service of the summons to file his answer, if served in the county; twenty days if out of the county, but within the judicial district; and forty days in all other cases. A non-resident of the state would therefore come under the last clause, and be entitled to forty days after the service of the summons. Grewell v. Henderson, 5 Cal. 465.

Time to answer when summons is served by publication. And if summons is served by publication on defendant, non-resident of the state, he has forty days after the lapse of the period of publication. Grewell v. Henderson, 5 Cal. 465.

7. Judicial notice of local divisions of state, counties, etc., under subdivision 3. Courts take judicial notice of the territorial extent of the jurisdiction and sovereignty exercised de facto by their own government, and of the local divisions of the country, as into states, counties, cities, towns, and the like, so far as political government is concerned. People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9; see also § 1875, post.

8. Answer filed after time for answering has expired. It is perhaps not strictly regular to file the answer after the time for answering has expired, without leave of the court. But if the default of the defendant had not been entered, we think the filing was not a nullity. It was, at most, a mere irregularity, for which the answer might have been stricken out, but on account of which the plaintiff was not entitled to have it set aside, unless the court, in the exercise of its discretion, deemed such to be the proper course. The whole proceedings were in fieri, and our opinion is, that the court had absolute power, either to retain the answer or to permit another to be filed, or to pursue whatever course in that respect the justice of the case required. A defendant cannot, for these purposes, be considered in default until his default has been actually entered in accordance with the statute. Bowers v. Dickerson, 18 Cal. 421.

§ 408. Manner and time of issuing alias summons. If the summons is returned without being served on any or all of the defendants, or if it has been lost, the clerk, upon the demand of the plaintiff, may issue an alias summons in the same form as the original; provided, that no such alias summons shall be issued after the expiration of one year from the date of the filing of the complaint.

New summons, in action for forcible entry and detainer. See post, § 1167.

Legislation § 408. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If the summons is returned without being served on any or all of the defendants, the clerk, upon the demand of the plaintiff, may issue an alias summons in the same form as the original."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 90, adding the words "or if it has been lost."

3. Amended by Stats. 1887, p. 50.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 130; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Time for issuance of alias summons. The clerk cannot issue an alias summons after the time fixed by statute (White v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 245; 58 Pac. 450; Modoc Land etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 255; 60 Pac. 848; Siskiyou County Bank v. Hoyt, 132 Cal. 81; 64 Pac. 118; Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507; 64 Pac. 1080; Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270; 70 Pac. 88; Swortfiguer v. White, 141 Cal. 576; 75 Pac. 172); but this does not impair the power of the court to authorize a summons to be withdrawn for further service or service by publication. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732. An alias summons, issued at any time prior to the commencement of the publication service ordered, is sufficient to sustain a default judgment. Doyle v. Hampton, 159 Cal. 729; 116 Pac. 39. The issuance of an alias summons may be assumed from the recitals of the judgment. Doyle v. Hampton, 159 Cal. 729; 116 Pac. 39.

Form of alias summons. The provision of this section as to the form of an alias summons means no more than that it shall conform to the requirements of § 407, ante; it does not preclude the insertion therein of the name of a defendant, omitted, through a clerical error, from the original summons. Doyle v. Hampton, 159 Cal. 729; 116 Pac. 39. This section has no reference to the service of an alias summons, where parties are brought in by order of the court, or by stipulation, under the provision of § 389, ante, and does not preclude service by publication. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252. Unlike a summons, the length of personal notice, by citation, in a probate proceeding, may be prescribed by the court; otherwise it is five days. San Francisco Protestant Orphan Asylum v. Superior Court, 116 Cal. 443; 48 Pac. 379.

§ 409. Notice of the pendency of an action affecting the title to real property. In an action affecting the title or the right of possession of real property, the plaintiff, at the time of filing the complaint, and the defendant, at the time of filing his answer, when affirmative relief is claimed in such answer, or at any time afterwards, may record in the office of the recorder of the county in which the property is situated, a notice of the pendency of the action, containing the names of the parties, and the object of the action or defense, and a description of the property in that county affected thereby. From the time of filing such notice for record only, shall a purchaser or encumbrancer of the property affected thereby be deemed to have constructive notice of the pendency of the action, and only of its pendency against parties designated by their real names.

Lis pendens, in suit to quiet title. See post, § 749.

Partition. Recording notice of suit. Post, § 755.

Person in possession of real property, action against, cannot be prejudiced by any alienation made by him. Post, § 747.

Legislation § 409. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 27 (New York Code, § 132), which, as amended by Stats. 1871–72, p. 189, read: "In an action affecting the title to real property, or the right to the possession of real property, the plaintiff, at the time of filing his complaint, and the defendant, at the time of filing his answer, when affirmative relief is claimed in such answer, or at any time afterwards, may record with the county recorder of the county in which the property is situated, a notice of the pendency of the action, containing the names of the parties to and the object of the action, and a description of the property in that county affected thereby; and the defendant may also, in such notice, state the nature and extent of the relief claimed in the answer. From the time of filing for record only, shall the pendency of the action be constructive notice to a purchaser or encumbrancer of the property affected thereby." When enacted in 1872, (1) the words "the title to," before "real property," were omitted, (2) after the latter, the words "or the right to the possession of real property" were omitted, (3) before "complaint," the word "his" was changed to "the," (4) the words "record with the county recorder" were changed to "file with the recorder," (5) the words "or defense" were added before "and a description," (6) the clause beginning "and the defendant" and ending "answer" was omitted, (7) the words "filing for record only, shall" were changed to "filing, only, is," and (8) the word "be" was omitted before "constructive."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 297.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 130; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Notice of pendency of action. The common-law doctrine in reference to purchasers pendente lite is qualified by this section; and a purchaser pendente lite, though not a party, is not bound by the result of the controversy, unless notice of lis pendens is filed with the recorder. Richardson v. White, 18 Cal. 102; Ault v. Gassaway, 18 Cal. 205; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194; Corwin v. Bensley, 43 Cal. 253; Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470; 12 Pac. 480; Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166; McNamara v. Oakland Building etc. Ass'n, 132 Cal. 247; 64 Pac. 277. Notice of lis pendens is not jurisdictional. Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668.

Character of actions to which applicable. The common-law doctrine of lis pendens did not apply to proceedings before a board exercising quasi-judicial functions, but only to those before a court; and the statute has not so extended it. Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427. The object of the rule in equity was, not to restrict the right of alienation of the prevailing party, but to hold the interest of the losing party subservient to the judgment. Corwin v. Bensley, 43 Cal. 253; Welton v. Cook, 61 Cal. 481. It does not apply to proceedings in ejectment, but to proceedings in chancery, the purpose of which is to "affect titles" by turning equitable estates into legal ones, or to enforce liens upon legal estates (Wattson v. Dowling, 26 Cal. 124); nor does it apply to actions affecting the possession of real property, but only to actions which operate directly on the title, and by the result of which some change as to the title is wrought; examples of which are found in actions for the condemnation of real estate, and for the specific performance of contracts relating thereto, for the foreclosure of mortgages or other liens, and the like. Long v. Neville, 29 Cal. 131; Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470; 12 Pac. 480. The filing of a notice of lis pendens affects only those parties designated by their real names. Davidson v. All Persons, 18 Cal. App. 723; 124 Pac. 570. Notice of lis pendens, filed during the pendency of a divorce suit, has no legal significance. Mayberry v. Whittier, 144 Cal. 322; 78 Pac. 16. A purchaser of land is not affected by proceedings for its condemnation, where no notice of lis pendens is filed (Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306; 73 Am. Dec. 575), as this section applies to condemnation proceedings; and the word "purchaser" includes those who acquire a homestead interest in the property. Roach v. Riverside Water Co., 74 Cal. 263; 15 Pac. 776; McNamara v. Oakland Building etc. Ass'n, 132 Cal. 247; 64 Pac. 277. It also applies to an action to foreclose the lien of a street assessment. Page v. W. W. Chase Co., 145 Cal. 578; 79 Pac. 278. A defendant asking affirmative relief in a cross-complaint may file a lis pendens (Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668); and notice of an action affecting the title to real estate may be recorded. De Wolfskill v. Smith, 5 Cal. App. 175; 89 Pac. 1001.

Filing of notice for record. The plaintiff in an action to establish and enforce a trust, who has filed notice of lis pendens therein, is entitled to be made a party to the foreclosure of a lien upon the property. Randall v. Duff, 79 Cal. 115; 3 L. R. A. 754; 19 Pac. 532; 21 Pac. 610. The mere pendency of an action does not, as at common law, charge a subsequent purchaser; but notice of lis pendens must appear of record. Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166; Carpenter v. Lewis, 119 Cal. 18; 50 Pac. 925; Commercial Bank v. Pritchard, 126 Cal. 600; 59 Pac. 130. This section applies only to actions pending, not to judgments and decrees rendered, which, at common law, were notice to all persons. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16, 17; Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194. The filing of a notice of lis pendens in an action to foreclose a mortgage does not operate as notice to the grantees of the mortgagor; they must be made parties. Jeffers v. Cook, 58 Cal. 147.

Constructive and actual notice. The object of the notice is to give the opportunity of defense, and also to notify third persons of the litigation, that they may not purchase, except advisedly (Richardson v. White, 18 Cal. 102); and was intended as a substitute for the rule, that the pendency of the suit was itself constructive notice; and where a party has actual notice, he is as much bound by the judgment as if lis pendens had been filed. Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200; Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668. The rules of law relating to actual notice, and the effect thereof upon parties dealing with or taking possession of the property in litigation, are in no sense changed by this section. Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200. The filing of the notice of lis pendens does not operate as a prior recording of a subsequent conveyance; nor is the notice such an instrument as the statute contemplates. Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166. The word "instrument," as used in the code, will invariably be found to indicate some written paper or instrument, signed and delivered by one person to another, transferring the title to or creating a lien upon property, or giving a right to a debt or duty: it nowhere embraces a writ of any kind. Hoag v. Howard, 55 Cal. 564; Warnock v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; 31 Am. St. Rep. 209; 31 Pac. 166. Inquiry whether the purchaser had actual notice is unnecessary, for, by the terms of the statute, the notice of lis pendens filed with the recorder is the only notice of the pendency of the action that binds subsequent encumbrancers or purchasers. Corwin v. Bensley, 43 Cal. 253.

Subsequent purchaser or encumbrancer. If any defendant, against whom judgment is rendered, was in possession at the time of the commencement of the action, any other party who took possession after the filing of the notice of lis pendens, or with actual notice of the pendency of the action, is bound by the judgment, and may be dispossessed by execution, the same as though he were a party to the judgment. Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142. The effect of the notice of lis pendens is to make a subsequent purchaser a mere volunteer, affected by the judgment rendered in the action. Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591; Haynes v. Calderwood, 23 Cal. 409. In an action affecting title to real estate, the notice of lis pendens binds purchasers from the defendants, who can only take subject to the decree rendered in the action. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; Welton v. Cook, 61 Cal. 481. Notice of lis pendens is unnecessary, in an action to enforce a tax lien on property; the assessment creates a lien which is not extinguished until the tax is paid or the property is sold; and the lien of the judgment, by operation of law, relates back to and takes effect from the date of the assessment. Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643. Where a notice of lis pendens is filed, the defendant cannot, by transfer of his possession, defeat the action; if the law were otherwise, it would be in the power of the defendant to put the plaintiff to a new action as often as he thought proper to assign. Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200; Ferrea v. Chabot, 63 Cal. 564.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Construction of section. Applicable to suits in ejectment. Section 27 of the Practice Act reads as follows: "In an action affecting the title of real property, the plaintiff, at the time of filing the complaint, and the defendant, at the time of filing his answer, when affirmative relief is claimed in such answer, or at any time afterwards, may file with the recorder of the county in which the property is situated, a notice of the pendency of the action, containing the names of the parties to, and the object of, the action or defense, and a description of the property in that county affected thereby; and the defendant may also, in such notice, state the nature and extent of the relief claimed in the answer. From the time of filing, only, is the pendency of the action constructive notice to a purchaser or encumbrancer of the property affected thereby." This was held, however, to have no relation to proceedings in ejectment, but to proceedings in chancery, the purpose of which is to affect titles by turning equitable estates into legal ones or to dispose of legal estates by vendition for the purpose of satisfying liens upon them, etc. Wattson v. Dowling, 26 Cal. 125. So, also, it was held that the section did not apply to actions affecting the possession of real property, but only to actions affecting the title—it was held that the section only applied "to actions which operate directly upon the title, and by the result of which some change as to the title is wrought; examples of which are found in actions for the condemnation of real estate and the specific performance of contracts relating thereto, for the foreclosure of mortgages, or other liens and the like." Long v. Neville, 29 Cal. 135. In order to remedy this defect, if it could be so called, and make the section applicable to ejectment suits, the legislature of 1872 passed the following act: Stats. 1871–72, p. 189. "An Act to amend an act entitled An Act to regulate proceedings in civil cases in courts of justice of this state, passed April twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-one." Approved March 2, 1872. [Quoting the act.] But as this act is amendatory of an act which is repealed by the code, it does not affect § 409, and is repealed when the code takes effect, that is, on the first day of January, 1873. See § 18, ante. Section 409, however, accomplishes the same object by omitting the words "title to" between the words "affecting" and "real property." So that now the cases of Wattson v. Dowling, 26 Cal. 125, and Long v. Neville, 29 Cal. 135, so far as they hold that this section is not applicable to ejectment suits, etc., cease to be of any effect. It is clear that an action which affects the right to possession of real property certainly must be held as "affecting real property," and consequently this section is applicable to suits in ejectment and actions affecting the right to possession of real property in like manner with actions affecting the title to real property.

2. Application of section. In Richardson v. White, 18 Cal. 106, this section was held to apply to those purchasing or taking encumbrances upon the property after filing of notice of pendency of the action (Ault v. Gassaway, 18 Cal. 205); but this section only applies to actions pending, and not to judgments and decrees rendered, which, at common law, it would seem, were notice to all persons. Sorrell v. Carpenter, 2 P. Wms. 482; 24 Eng. Reprint, 825; Searle v. Lane, 2 Vern. 37, 88; 23 Eng. Reprint, 634, 667; Monell v. Lawrence, 12 Johns. 534; Watlington v. Howley, 1 Dessaus. (S. C.) 170; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 38.

3. Section not applicable to proceedings before supervisors. The common-law doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to the proceedings before a board of supervisors. Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 434.

4. Purchaser in good faith, with no notice of lis pendens. Where proceedings for the condemnation of property were pending, a purchaser in good faith, where no notice of pendency of action is filed, is unaffected by the proceedings. Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 307; 73 Am. Dec. 575.

5. Notice of pendency of suit must be filed, to have effect to charge purchaser. Under our statute, the mere pendency of a suit does not charge the purchaser of the subject of it as a purchaser pendente lite, at common law. A notice of lis pendens, to have that effect, must be filed or appear of record. Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 151. The general rule is, that one not a party to a suit is not affected by the judgment. The exception at common law is, that a pendente lite purchaser, though not a party, was so affected; the qualification of the doctrine made by our statute is, that such purchaser is not affected, unless notice of such lis pendens be filed with the recorder. It is not necessary to consider whether actual notice would not supply the place of this constructive notice, for the bill makes no such case. The common-law doctrine of lis pendens rests upon the fiction of notice to all persons of the pendency of suits; and to remedy the evils which might grow out of the transfer of apparent legal titles or rights of action to persons ignorant of litigation respecting them, this provision was inserted in our statute. We consider our statute, not as giving new rights to the plaintiff, but as a limitation upon the rights which he had before. If no lis pendens be filed, the party acquiring an interest or claim, pendente lite, stands wholly unaffected by the suit. If he has any rights which, but for the suit, he could set up, he may still maintain those rights. But he would not be foreclosed by a judgment against the party to the suit, from whom he obtained his assignment. The object of the statute evidently was to add to the common-law rule a single term, to wit, to require for constructive notice not only a suit, but filing a notice of it; so that this rule is as if it read: "The commencement of a suit and the filing of notice of it are constructive notice to all the world of the action, and purchasers or assignees, afterwards becoming such, are mere volunteers, and bound by the judgment. Richardson v. White, 18 Cal. 106. The rule of law was settled, that "every man is presumed to be attentive to what passes in the courts of justice of the state or sovereignty where he resides. And therefore a purchase made of property actually in litigation, pendente lite, for a valuable consideration, and without any express or implied notice, in point of fact, affects the purchaser in the same manner as if he had such notice; and he will accordingly be bound by the judgment or decree in the suit." 1 Story's Equity, § 405. This rule sometimes operated as a hardship upon parties who had no actual notice, and the code (§ 409) provides that the plaintiff or defendant may file a notice of the pendency of the action with the recorder of the county in which the property is situated, and the law provides, that, "from the time of filing only shall the pendency of the action be constructive notice to a purchaser or encumbrancer of the property affected thereby." In no other respect are the rules of law relating to the subject changed by the statute. A purchaser or encumbrancer of property, instead of being required to examine all the suits pending in the several courts, to ascertain whether any of them relate to or affect the real estate he is negotiating about, has now only to examine the notices of lis pendens filed in the recorder's office of the county where the real estate is situated, and he is only bound by constructive notice of what may there appear. The rules of law relating to actual notice of a pending action, and the effect of such actual notice upon parties dealing with or taking possession of property in litigation, are in no sense changed by this section of the Practice Act, but remain the same as before this law was passed. Richardson v. White, 18 Cal. 102; Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306; 73 Am. Dec. 575; Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149; Ault v. Gassaway, 18 Cal. 205; Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 210.

6. Purchaser during pendency of action, but where no notice is filed. If a party purchases land during the pendency of an action to foreclose a mortgage on it, but where no notice of lis pendens has been filed, and he purchase without notice, after entry of default but before final judgment, he is not bound by the judgment, even if final judgment gives constructive notice to parties dealing with the subject-matter. Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 400.

7. Effect of a notice of pendency of action upon subsequent purchasers. It was held that the effect of the lis pendens was to make a subsequent purchaser a mere volunteer, affected by the judgment rendered, or which might be rendered, in the suit, of the pendency of which notice was given. Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 594; see also Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 446; and these cases are affirmed in Haynes v. Calderwood, 23 Cal. 410; see also Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 263. Where an action to set aside a fraudulent deed was commenced, and a notice of the pendency of the action was filed, it was held that a party who bought of the defendant subsequent to the filing of the notice of lis pendens was bound by the decree. Hurlbutt v. Butenop, 27 Cal. 56. And in an action to foreclose a mortgage, a purchaser, subsequent to notice of lis pendens filed, was held to stand in the same position as his grantor, as to the issuance of a writ of assistance in favor of a purchaser under the decree of foreclosure. Montgomery v. Byers, 21 Cal. 107. A notice of lis pendens having been duly filed, a party purchasing from the defendant while the action was pending, and after the notice was filed, is bound and estopped by the judgment therein. Calderwood v. Tevis, 23 Cal. 337.

8. Subsequent purchaser with notice of lis pendens. A purchaser of land, with notice of the pendency of an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage on it, or a purchaser after final judgment, in either case is bound by the judgment. Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 399.

9. Purchaser pendente lite, estopped by the decree. If an action is brought against a corporation to foreclose a mortgage, purporting to have been executed by it, and a lis pendens is filed, and a decree is rendered enforcing the mortgage, a party who buys the mortgaged property, pendente lite, at sheriff's sale, made on a judgment which does not enforce a lien older than the lis pendens, is estopped from saying that the mortgage was not the act of the corporation. A party who has no interest in mortgaged property at the time an action is brought to foreclose the mortgage, and who buys, pendente lite, and after a lis pendens has been filed, is not a necessary party to the foreclosure. Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194.

10. Actual notice of pendency of action, of same effect as filing of notice of lis pendens. If notice of lis pendens is filed, there can be no doubt that every party acquiring an interest in the premises subsequent to the filing would have been bound by the judgment in the foreclosure suit without being made a party. Hurlbutt v. Butenop, 27 Cal. 56; Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194; Haynes v. Calderwood, 23 Cal. 409. It does not appear in this case that a notice of lis pendens was in fact filed. But the object of filing such a notice is to afford constructive notice of the pendency of the action. This is the only effect indicated by the code (§ 409). The object being to afford notice, actual notice must certainly be as effectual as constructive notice under the statute. We can perceive no good reason why a party taking an interest in a tract of land, pending a proceeding to foreclose a mortgage upon it, with actual notice of the action, should not be bound by the judgment, although no notice of lis pendens has been filed. We think he is, and so hold the law to be. Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 615; see also Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 210.

11. What constitutes actual notice of pendency of action. In this case a foreclosure suit was commenced before the petition in insolvency was filed. In the schedule attached to the petition in insolvency, the debt, and the mortgage upon the land in controversy to secure it, were specifically described, and this statement appended: "Suit for foreclosure commenced." And the order of the judge expressly provided "that all actions now pending may be prosecuted to judgment." This order allowed the action for foreclosure to proceed; and the assignee in insolvency, and all parties purchasing from him, had notice of the pendency of the foreclosure suit, and they are bound by the judgment. Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 615.

Sufficient notice to put one on inquiry as to pendency of action. See Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 38.

12. When an action is considered pending. An action is still pending, after a default, until final judgment has been entered. Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 400.

§ 410. Summons, how served and returned. The summons may be served by the sheriff of the county where the defendant is found, or by any other person over the age of eighteen, not a party to the action. A copy of the complaint must be served, with the summons, upon each of the defendants. When the summons is served by the sheriff, it must be returned, with his certificate of its service, and of the service of any copy of the complaint, where such copy is served, to the office of the clerk from which it issued. When it is served by any other person, it must be returned to the same place, with an affidavit of such person of its service, and of the service of a copy of the complaint, where such copy is served.

Process, how returnable to another county. See Pol. Code, § 4158.

Return of sheriff, prima facie evidence. See Pol. Code, § 4159.

Delay of sheriff in making return, liability. See Pol. Code, § 4160.

Legislation § 410. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 28, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 574, which read: "The summons shall be served by the sheriff of the county where the defendant is found, or by his deputy, or by a person specially appointed by him or appointed by a judge of the court in which the action is brought, or by any white male citizen of the United States over twenty-one years of age, who is competent to be a witness on the trial of the action, except as hereinafter provided; a copy of the complaint shall be served with the summons. Where the summons is served by the sheriff or his deputy, it shall be returned, with the certificate or affidavit of the officer of its service and of the service of the copy of the complaint, to the office of the clerk from which the summons issued. When the summons is served by any other person, as before provided, it shall be returned to the office of the clerk from which it issued, with the affidavit of such person of its service, and of the service of a copy of the complaint. If there be more than one defendant in the action, and such defendants reside within the county, a copy of the complaint need be served on only one of the defendants." When enacted in 1872, § 410 read: "The summons may be served by the sheriff of the county where the defendant is found, or by any other person not a party to the action. A copy of the complaint must be served with the summons, unless there is more than one defendant residing in the same county, in which case a copy of the complaint must be served upon one of them. When the summons is served by the sheriff it must be returned, with his certificate of its service, and of the service of a copy of the complaint, to the office of the clerk from which it issued. When it is served by any other person it must be returned to the same place, with an affidavit of such person of its service, and of the service of a copy of the complaint."

2. Amended by Stats. 1873–74, p. 297, to read as at present, except that the words "upon each of the defendants" were changed from "unless two or more defendants are residents of the same county, in which case a copy of the complaint need only be served upon one of such defendants."

3. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 207.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 130; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Copy of complaint must be served. A copy of the complaint must be served with the summons. Southern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471. The Practice Act did not require a copy to be served on each defendant: service of a copy on one of the defendants residing in the county was sufficient. Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 151. Where the summons has never been served upon the defendant, the service of an amended complaint upon him is void. Powers v. Braly, 75 Cal. 237; 17 Pac. 197.

Return of sheriff. In making service of the summons, and in the return thereof, the provisions of the statute must be, and must appear to have been, substantially observed and followed by the officer; otherwise the proceedings cannot be supported upon a direct appeal. People v. Bernal, 43 Cal. 385. The failure of the return to show that a copy of the complaint was served is a mere irregularity, and does not affect the validity of the judgment. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405; 132 Pac. 88, 454. The officer may always amend his return so as to conform to the facts, if there are no intervening rights to be affected. Newhall v. Provost, 6 Cal. 85; Gavitt v. Doub, 23 Cal. 78; Rousset v. Boyle, 45 Cal. 64; Hewell v. Lane, 53 Cal. 213; People v. Murback, 64 Cal. 369; 30 Pac. 608; Allison v. Thomas, 72 Cal. 562; 1 Am. St. Rep. 89; 14 Pac. 309; Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328; 19 Pac. 161; McGrath v. Wallace, 116 Cal. 548; 48 Pac. 719. A mistake in the date of the sheriff's return may be corrected at any time. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238; 70 Am. Dec. 775; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. It will be presumed in favor of the officer who has the general power of making the service, that he discharged his duty in the legal mode. Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117; 73 Am. Dec. 632. A defendant who was legally served, and who did not defend, on the ground that he was not the party intended to be served, cannot, after judgment against him, resist its enforcement on that ground. Brum v. Ivins, 154 Cal. 17; 129 Am. St. Rep. 137; 96 Pac. 876. A return, that the defendant cannot be found within the county, is sufficient. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732.

Service by one other than sheriff. The right to serve process does not belong to every private individual; it is restricted to a particular class, and as to them, it is given to be exercised only under particular circumstances, and, to be legal, the service must be by some one authorized, as well by personal capacity to act as by the existence of the particular facts which impart the authority or control the mode of action; the validity of the act of service depends upon its being authorized, and it must appear in the record. McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 372. The provision authorizing service by one other than the sheriff has been held constitutional. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742.

Affidavit of service. A certificate by a constable is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction (Berentz v. Belmont Oil Mining Co., 148 Cal. 577; 113 Am. St. Rep. 308; 84 Pac. 47; Berentz v. Kern King Oil etc. Co., 7 Cal. Unrep. 214; 84 Pac. 45); nor is one by a deputy sheriff. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Where the service is made by one other than the sheriff, or the person appointed by the judge, the affidavit should show that such person possessed the qualifications enumerated in the section; but an objection goes only to the formality of the return, which may be amended; and the judgment is good against a collateral attack for a mere irregularity of service. Dorente v. Sullivan, 7 Cal. 279; Pellier v. Gillespie, 67 Cal. 582; 8 Pac. 185. The statute does not require the summons to be filed, but only returned with the affidavit of service to the office of the issuing clerk; and where returned and filed with the affidavit annexed, this is sufficient. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425. The affidavit, when made by a person other than the sheriff, must state that at the time of service the person making the same was over eighteen years of age. Maynard v. MacCrellish, 57 Cal. 355; Howard v. Galloway, 60 Cal. 10; Weil v. Bent, 60 Cal. 603; Doerfler v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 265; 30 Pac. 816; Lyons v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 42; 4 Pac. 938; Barney v. Vigoureaux, 75 Cal. 376; 17 Pac. 433; Horton v. Gallardo, 88 Cal. 581; 26 Pac. 375; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. Where a person other than the sheriff attempts to make service upon a defendant within the county, he should, as a rule, be required to show, in his affidavit, the nature of the effort made by him to serve the party, and, where practicable, give the reasons why service could not be made. Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698. An affidavit of service of summons may be amended nunc pro tunc. Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2, 542. It need not appear by the return that the party serving a summons in unlawful detainer did so at the request of the plaintiff or his attorney. Block v. Kearney, 6 Cal. Unrep. 660; 64 Pac. 267. It is the fact of proper service, and not the proof thereof, that gives the court jurisdiction. Morrissey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390; 117 Pac. 438.

Amendment of return. The power of the court to order returns amended is not affected by mere lapse of time, or by the fact that the officer making the return is, at the time of the proposed amendment, out of office. Morrissey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390; 117 Pac. 438. The amendment of the return is permitted in support of the judgment actually given, but not where the effect would be to avoid the judgment, or render it erroneous, or subject it to reversal. Morrissey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390; 117 Pac. 438. Where the facts conferring jurisdiction exist, but the record of them, by way of the return, is defective, great liberality is allowed in permitting an amended return to be filed. Morrissey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390; 117 Pac. 438.

Service of process by attorney or agent of plaintiff. See note 102 Am. St. Rep. 694.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Service of summons by person other than the sheriff. Formerly § 28 of the Practice Act provided that "service of summons might be made by," among other persons, "any white male citizen over twenty-one years of age, who is competent to be a witness on the trial of the action," etc., and "a copy of the complaint, certified by the clerk, should be served with the summons." Under these provisions, affidavits of service of summons were held to be defective, which did not state that the person serving it was a white male citizen, and over twenty-one years of age, and competent to testify; and that a certified copy of the complaint accompanied the summons. See McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 378; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 404; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 299; Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 119; 73 Am. Dec. 632. It will be observed, however, that § 410 of the code omits the requirements, that the person making service shall be a "white male citizen of the age of twenty-one years," and also that the copy of the complaint shall be certified by the clerk, etc. The only requirement is, that he shall not be a party to the action. Of course, as a matter of proof of service, he must be competent to make an affidavit. See also Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 239; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742, affirmed in Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458; see also Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 299.

2. Service by deputy, and his return thereon. The return of the service of summons issued in an action was signed Elijah T. Cole, D. S., and it was held that such a return was insufficient to prove service, and that the act and return of a deputy is a nullity, unless done in the name and by the authority of the sheriff. Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 403, affirming Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449; and, to the same effect, see Lewes v. Thompsen, 3 Cal. 266.

3. Return by sheriff. Amendments thereto. Correction of mistakes. The sheriff has no right, after making a return, to amend it so as to affect rights which have already vested. Newhall v. Provost, 6 Cal. 87. But a mistake in the date may be corrected any time. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 249; 70 Am. Dec. 775.

4. Service where there are more than one defendant residing in same county. Where the affidavit states the county in which service was made, and one of defendants makes default, it will be presumed that he was a resident of the county where service was made. A copy of the complaint need be served on but one of several defendants residing in same county. Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 153.

5. Proof of service of summons and complaint. See § 415, post, and notes.

§ 411. Summons, how served. The summons must be served by delivering a copy thereof as follows:

1. If the suit is against a corporation formed under the laws of this state: to the president or other head of the corporation, vice-president, secretary, assistant secretary, cashier or managing agent thereof.

2. If suit is against a foreign corporation, or a non-resident joint-stock company or association, doing business and having a managing or business agent, cashier or secretary within this state: to such agent, cashier or secretary.

3. If against a minor, under the age of fourteen years, residing within this state: to such minor, personally, and also to his father, mother, or guardian: or if there be none within this state, then to any person having the care or control of such minor, or with whom he resides, or in whose service he is employed.

4. If against a person residing within this state who has been judicially declared to be of unsound mind, or incapable of conducting his own affairs, and for whom a guardian has been appointed: to such person, and also to his guardian.

5. If against a county, city or town: to the president of the board of supervisors, president of the council or trustees, or other head of the legislative department thereof.

6. In all other cases to the defendant personally.

Association, service may be on one of members of. Ante, § 388.

Return of summons. Post, § 581a.

Telegraph, service by. Post, § 1017.

Legislation § 411. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 29, as amended by Stats. 1861, p. 496), and then read: "§ 411. The summons must be served by delivering a copy thereof, as follows: 1. [Same as the present amendment (1915)]; 2. If the suit is against a foreign corporation, or a non-resident joint-stock company or association doing business and having a managing or business agent, cashier, or secretary within this state: to such agent, cashier, or secretary; 3. If against a minor under the age of fourteen years: to such minor personally, and also to his father, mother, or guardian; or if there be none within the state, then to any person having the care or control of such minor, or with whom he resides, or in whose service he is employed; 4. If against a person judicially declared to be of unsound mind or incapable of conducting his own affairs, and for whom a guardian has been appointed: to such guardian;" [subds. 5 and 6 reading the same as the present amendment (1915).]

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 298.

3. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 943, (1) in subd. 1, inserting "vice-president" and "assistant secretary"; (2) in subd 2, striking out "the" in the phrase "If the suit"; (3) in subd. 3, second clause, "this" substituted for "the," in the phrase "within the state." The other changes are in matters of punctuation, probably the result of carelessness.

Kinds of service. Service of summons may be personal, or, in some cases, by publication. People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81. "Personal service" means the actual delivery of the process to the defendant in person. Holiness Church v. Metropolitan Church Association, 12 Cal. App. 445; 107 Pac. 633. Personal service of writs and process can only be made by delivery to the person (Edmondson v. Mason, 16 Cal. 386); and where the return shows that the summons was served upon one not designated as the defendant, it is insufficient. Adams v. Town, 3 Cal. 247. "Personal service" upon a corporation, domestic or foreign, is made, under this section, by delivering a copy of the summons, together with a copy of the complaint, to certain designated officers thereof. Holiness Church v. Metropolitan Church Association, 12 Cal. App. 445; 107 Pac. 633. A party regularly served, though by a wrong name, is bound, unless he comes in and sets up the misnomer and whatever defense he may have. Brum v. Ivins, 154 Cal. 17; 129 Am. St. Rep. 137; 96 Pac. 876. Service on a foreign corporation, in a manner other than that authorized by § 405 of the Civil Code, though a person designated by such corporation, resident in the state, is a constructive and not a personal service. Holiness Church v. Metropolitan Church Association, 12 Cal. App. 445; 107 Pac. 633.

Service in suit against domestic corporation. In a suit against a domestic corporation, service must be upon its president or other head, or on its secretary, cashier, or managing agent; service upon "J. S., one of the proprietors of the company," is insufficient. O'Brien v. Shaw's Flat etc. Canal Co., 10 Cal. 343. Service must be made upon one of the officers named in the statute. Aiken v. Quartz Rock etc. Mining Co., 6 Cal. 186; O'Brien v. Shaw's Flat etc. Canal Co., 10 Cal. 343. Service on the receiving and paying teller of a bank cannot bind the corporation (Kennedy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 38 Cal. 151; Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765); but service upon a president de jure is sufficient. Eel River Nav. Co. v. Struver, 41 Cal. 616. While the service may be on the president, yet the sheriff making the service must make the return according to the fact. People v. Lee, 128 Cal. 330; 60 Pac. 854.

Action against a foreign corporation. A foreign corporation must be "doing business" in this state, to justify service upon it through a managing agent. Dickinson v. Zubiate Min. Co., 11 Cal. App. 656; 106 Pac. 123. A single transaction by a foreign corporation does not constitute doing business within the state, so as to authorize the service of summons. Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co., 2 Cal. App. 582; 84 Pac. 289. The service must be upon the person designated by the corporation as its agent, cashier, or secretary. Eureka etc. Canal Co. v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 311; 5 Pac. 490; Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co., 2 Cal. App. 582; 84 Pac. 289. Service upon a traveling solicitor, not shown to be a partner or managing agent of a copartnership, is not sufficient. Booth v. Gamble-Robinson Commission Co., 139 Cal. 175; 72 Pac. 908. Service is also insufficient, when made on a person whose name is appended to advertisements as general manager of a railroad "route," and who is not a party to the action, nor has ever been the managing or business agent, cashier, or secretary of the defendant, within this state. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. The term "business agent" does not mean every person intrusted with a commission or an employment by a foreign corporation: it means one performing the duties of managing agent, cashier, or secretary of the corporation. Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co., 2 Cal. App. 582; 84 Pac. 289. The service of summons, in this state, upon the president of a foreign corporation, is insufficient to support a judgment by default, where neither the complaint nor the affidavit of service of summons shows the required statutory facts. R. H. Herron Co. v. Westside Electric Co., 18 Cal. App. 778; 124 Pac. 455.

Service in action against a minor. The third subdivision of this section, providing for service upon an infant, has no application to the service of a notice in a special proceeding. Estate of Hamilton, 120 Cal. 421; 52 Pac. 708. The provision requiring personal service upon an infant under the age of fourteen, and also upon his guardian, is mandatory. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616. An infant under the age of fourteen years, not served with process, cannot nominate the attorney, nor can the court appoint a guardian ad litem until after service upon him (McCloskey v. Sweeney, 66 Cal. 53; 4 Pac. 943; Redmond v. Peterson, 102 Cal. 595; 41 Am. St. Rep. 204; 36 Pac. 923; Johnson v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 63 Cal. 554), as the court has no right to appoint a guardian until the infant is brought into court. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. Sufficiency of service of summons upon minors. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

Service in action against person of unsound mind. In an action against an incompetent person, service must be upon both the incompetent and his guardian (Justice v. Ott, 87 Cal. 530; 25 Pac. 691); but where, although the person is alleged to be insane, it does not apear that any guardian has been judicially appointed, service upon the defendant personally is sufficient. Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Spencer, 53 Cal. 737. No valid judgment can be rendered against an insane person, unless he has been served with summons. In re Lambert, 134 Cal. 626; 86 Am. St. Rep. 296; 55 L. R. A. 856; 66 Pac. 851.

Right to serve process in action against corporation upon non-resident officer who is within state as party or witness. See note 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Service of summons on officers of corporation. Service must be on one of the officers mentioned in subdivision 1 of this section. Aiken v. Quartz Rock Mariposa Mining Co., 6 Cal. 186; and a return is sufficient which states that service was made on

J. S., one of the "proprietors" of a company; it must state that such person was either "president or head of the corporation, secretary, cashier, or managing agent thereof." O'Brien v. Shaw's Flat etc. Canal Co., 10 Cal. 343; Adams v. Town, 3 Cal. 247.

2. Service of summons on officers of corporation. Where the return of the sheriff stated that service was made "on A and B, the president and secretary of the corporation," it was held that it was primary evidence that the persons named were such officers, and that the return was not erroneous on account of its form. Rowe v. Table Mountain Water Co., 10 Cal. 441; Wilson v. Spring Hill Quartz-Mining Co., 10 Cal. 445.

3. Service on officers of corporation. Managing agent, defined. In a case where the corporation was a banking firm, it was held that service on the "teller" of the bank was not sufficient. It must be strictly on the president, or other head of the corporation, secretary, cashier, or managing agent. Kennedy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 38 Cal. 154. If service is made on an agent of a corporation, it must be on the managing agent, and not on one of its general business agents. See Kennedy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 38 Cal. 154. At common law, service was required on the president or principal officer of the corporation. Angell and Ames on Corporations, § 637; 1 Tidd's Practice, p. 116; McQueen v. Middletown Manufacturing Co., 16 Johns. 6.

4. Infant under fourteen years of age, how served. When the suit is against a minor under the age of fourteen, service is to be made by delivering a copy of summons and complaint to him personally, and, also, to his father, mother, or guardian, etc.; and in cases where such infant resides out of the state, and his residence is known to plaintiff, a copy of the summons should be deposited in the post-office, directed to the infant, in the same manner as if he were over fourteen. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 638.

5. What constitutes personal service. The personal service of writs and process can only be made by delivering a copy to the party upon whom the service is required. So far as summons is concerned, the statute designates the mode (§ 411). Independently of the statute, the mode would be by showing the original under the seal of the court, and delivering a copy. Edmondson v. Mason, 16 Cal. 388.

6. Service of summons. Redelivery and service after return. After a summons has been served on some of the defendants and returned, the court may order that it should be redelivered to plaintiff for further service on other defendants, either in the same or another county. Hancock v. Preuss, 40 Cal. 572.

§ 412. Cases in which service of summons may be by publication. Certificate of residence. Where the person on whom service is to be made resides out of the state; or has departed from the state; or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state; or conceals himself to avoid the service of summons; or is a corporation having no managing or business agent, cashier or secretary, or other officer upon whom summons may be served, who, after due diligence cannot be found within the state, and the fact appears by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, or a judge thereof; and it also appears by such affidavit, or by the verified complaint on file, that a cause of action exists against the defendant in respect to whom the service is to be made, or that he is a necessary or proper party to the action; or when it appears by such affidavit, or by the complaint on file [t]herein, that it is an action which relates to or the subject of which is real or personal property in this state, in which such person defendant or corporation defendant has or claims a lien or interest, actual or contingent, therein, or in which the relief demanded consists wholly or in part in excluding such person or corporation from any interest therein, such court or judge may make an order that the service be made by the publication of the summons; provided, that where service is sought to be made upon a person who cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state it must first appear to the court by the affidavit aforesaid that there has not been filed, on behalf of such person, in the county where such action is pending, the certificate of residence provided for by section one thousand one hundred and sixty-three of the Civil Code in the county in which the action is brought; or that said certificate was so filed and that the defendant cannot be found at the place named in said certificate, which latter fact must be made to appear by the certificate of the sheriff of the county wherein said defendant claims residence in and by said certificate of residence, and which certificate of said sheriff must show that service of said summons was attempted upon said defendant at the place named in said certificate of residence but that said defendant was not to be found thereat.

Summons.

1. Publication of, in suit to quiet title, when authorized. See post, §§ 749, 750.

2. Service of, in justice's court, by publication. See post, § 849.

Legislation § 412. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 30 (New York Code, § 135); and the section then read: "Where the person on whom the service is to be made resides out of the state, or has departed from the state, or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state, or conceals himself to avoid the service of summons, or is a foreign corporation having no managing or business agent, cashier, or secretary within the state, and the fact appears by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, or a judge thereof, or a county judge, and it also appears by such affidavit, or by the verified complaint on file, that a cause of action exists against the defendant in respect to whom the service is to be made, or that he is a necessary or proper party to the action, such court or judge may make an order that the service be made by the publication of the summons." When enacted in 1872, (1) the phrase was added, "or is a foreign corporation having no managing or business agent, cashier, or secretary within the state"; (2) "also appears by such affidavit, or by the verified complaint on file," was substituted for "shall in like manner appear"; and the words "judge may make" were substituted for "judge may grant."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 13, striking out the words "or a county judge."

3. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 285, adding, before "such court or judge," and after "party to the action," near the end of the section, "or when it appears by such affidavit, or by the complaint on file [t]herein, that it is an action which relates to or the subject of which is real or personal property in this state, in which such person defendant, or foreign corporation defendant has or claims a lien or interest, actual or contingent, therein, or in which the relief demanded consists wholly or in part in excluding such person or foreign corporation from any interest therein."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 130; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 141, (1) substituting semicolons for commas, in the first part of the section, before the phrases beginning "or has departed," "or cannot," "or conceals himself," "or is a foreign corporation"; (2) adding the proviso.

6. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 69 (approved April 23, 1913), (1) after the words "or secretary within the state," adding "or is a domestic corporation the officers and agents of which, upon whom, under the law, service may be made binding upon the corporation, cannot after due diligence, be found within the state"; (2) substituting a semicolon for a comma before "provided," and adding a comma after that word.

7. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 1422 (approved May 20, 1913), (1) striking out the word "foreign" before "corporation" in the three instances; (2) recasting the amendment of April 23d, noted supra.

Service by publication. This section is general, and in terms applies to all actions; it is not invalid because it includes proceedings purely in personam as well as proceedings in rem. Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 580; 21 Am. St. Rep. 67; 25 Pac. 51. Service of summons by publication is set on foot by an affidavit showing the existence of the statutory facts. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. The facts may appear either by affidavit or verified complaint, or by both (Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777); but where the complaint is unverified, the affidavit must state facts showing that a cause of action exists against the defendant. Yolo County v. Knight, 70 Cal. 430; 11 Pac. 662. All of the required facts must appear; the existence of one condition is not enough (Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610); but where the affidavit is sufficient in form, the court must accept the statements as true, and make the order as demanded. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. The existence of a cause of action against the defendant is a jurisdictional fact. Columbia Screw Co. v. Warner Lock Co., 138 Cal. 445; 71 Pac. 498; Estate of McNeil, 155 Cal. 333; 100 Pac. 1086.

Where defendant conceals himself. Where the defendant conceals himself to avoid service, he cannot complain of want of personal service (Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal. 107); nor, where the facts of concealment and residence appear to exist, has he the right to question the truth of the allegations after the expiration of six months; he is deemed to be in court, under such circumstances, and must be held to know the allegations of the complaint, and to admit them to be true (Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal. 107; Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100); and where the affidavit shows that he resides within the state, but has disappeared, and cannot be found therein, and it appears that he is concealing himself to avoid service, an order of publication is properly made. Bradford v. McAvoy, 99 Cal. 324; 33 Pac. 1091. Proof that the defendant secreted himself to avoid service may be made, to avoid a dismissal under § 581a; but, where the evidence is conflicting, a finding that he did so secrete himself is conclusive upon appeal. Wilson v. Leo, 19 Cal. App. 793; 127 Pac. 1043. The return of the officer is sufficient evidence of due diligence; and where the affidavit shows that the defendant resides in the township or county, and sets out the facts respecting his absenting himself from his home, there is a sufficient showing to justify an order of publication. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

Where the defendant is absent or is a nonresident. Where the affidavit shows that the plaintiff has a cause of action against the defendant, and refers to his verified complaint containing a like showing, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the state, it is sufficient to warrant an order of service of summons by publication. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. Where the affidavit shows that the person upon whom service is to be made resides out of the state, it is not necessary to set forth that such person cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state. Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007. While the provisions of this section for service upon nonresidents by publication are general, and in terms apply to all actions, yet the section is not invalid because it includes proceedings purely in personam. Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 580; 21 Am. St. Rep. 67; 25 Pac. 51. A corporation is deemed to have departed from the state when all its agents and officers, upon whom service can be made, have departed therefrom. McKendrick v. Western Zinc Mining Co., 165 Cal. 24; 130 Pac. 865.

Actions relating to real estate. An action for the specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of real estate is an action for the determination of a right or interest in real property. Tutt v. Davis, 13 Cal. App. 715; 110 Pac. 690. Service of process, in an action for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property, may be made by publication. Tutt v. Davis, 13 Cal. App. 715; 110 Pac. 690. In an attachment suit against a wife's separate estate, jurisdiction of her husband, as a co-defendant, may be obtained by publication of summons against him, where he cannot be personally served. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252.

Service on foreign corporation. Where a foreign corporation defendant has no agent in this state, service may be made upon the secretary of state. Olender v. Crystalline Mining Co., 149 Cal. 482; 86 Pac. 1082.

Service under McEnerney Act. The method of giving notice prescribed in this section is valid. Title etc. Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan, 150 Cal. 289; 119 Am. St. Rep. 199; 88 Pac. 356; 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 682.

Service under Torrens Act. Service of notice, under the Torrens Act, must be personal, except where, under this section and § 413, post, service may be made by publication. Robinson v. Kerrigan, 151 Cal. 40; 121 Am. St. Rep. 90; 12 Ann. Cas. 829; 90 Pac. 129.

Order for publication. An order for the publication of summons will be upheld, where the necessary facts are set forth in the affidavit. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732; Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58; Emery v. Kipp, 154 Cal. 83; 129 Am. St. Rep. 141; 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 983; 97 Pac. 17; Roberts v. Jacob, 154 Cal. 307; 97 Pac. 671; 223 U. S. 261; 56 L. Ed. 429; 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303. Otherwise, the trial judge does not abuse his discretion in refusing to make such order. Bender v. Hutton, 160 Cal. 372; 117 Pac. 322.

Service in divorce cases. A provision for alimony, in a decree of divorce, obtained against a husband in another state, upon substituted service of summons, is void for want of jurisdiction of the husband. In re McMullin, 164 Cal. 504; 129 Pac. 773; Application of McMullen, 19 Cal. App. 481; 126 Pac. 368.

Necessity of affidavit. Where the facts in the affidavit are sufficient to justify a finding, that the defendant cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state, an order of service by publication is proper. Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. An affidavit for the publication of summons, in an action in which the complaint is not verified, must state probative facts upon which the court can ultimately conclude that a cause of action against defendant exists and that he is a necessary and proper party. People v. Mulcahy, 159 Cal. 34; 112 Pac. 853. This section is not effective, unless strictly pursued. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149. A judgment by default, based on insufficient service by publication, will be set aside on motion. Wilson v. Leo, 19 Cal. App. 793; 127 Pac. 1043. A money judgment cannot be rendered against a non-resident upon service by publication, where there is no showing of jurisdiction of the court over property of such non-resident within the state. Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. The rendition of a judgment upon service by publication, where the affidavit is sufficient, is not a violation of any constitutional guaranty of due process of law. Roberts v. Jacob, 154 Cal. 307; 97 Pac. 671; 223 U. S. 261; 56 L. Ed. 429; 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303. Where the affidavit is insufficient, an order for service by publication, inadvertently and improperly made, is properly quashed. Wilson v. Leo, 19 Cal. App. 793; 127 Pac. 1043. There is no provision, in terms, in this section, that the date of the affidavit shall be disclosed therein, but it is indicated clearly that the affidavit must be presented and verified at the time of the application for the order. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252. The plaintiff, to avail himself of constructive service of summons, must in fact have exercised due diligence: a mere formal compliance with the provisions of the statute, or a statement to that effect in his affidavit, will not suffice. Stern v. Judson, 163 Cal. 726; 127 Pac. 38. The affidavit must be filed before trial, and the order of publication may be made only upon a sufficient affidavit, otherwise the court has no jurisdiction; but, where the order is not void, the court cannot set it aside, except upon notice. Zumbusch v. Superior Court, 21 Cal. App. 76; 130 Pac. 1070.

Contents of affidavit. An affidavit which fails to show whether the residence of the defendant was known to the plaintiff, or that he did not know where he might be found, is insufficient. Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610. The facts set forth in the affidavit must show that due diligence was used to find the defendant within the state, and that he could not be found. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732; Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. The affidavit must show with accuracy the efforts made to serve the defendant (Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698); and such an inquiry should be shown as that the court may say that due diligence has been exercised (Roberts v. Jacob, 154 Cal. 307; 97 Pac. 671; Jacob v. Roberts, 223

U. S. 261; 56 L. Ed. 429; 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303); but where the exercise of diligence was merely an inquiry of one friend of the defendant, as to his whereabouts, the showing is insufficient. Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283. Where the defendant is alleged to be a non-resident, the affidavit need not show diligence. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73; Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007; Johnson v. Miner, 144 Cal. 785; 78 Pac. 240. A showing that the defendant resides out of the state is sufficient. Furnish v. Mullan, 76 Cal. 646; 18 Pac. 854. Where the affidavit gives in detail the facts showing the attempts to serve the defendant in several counties specified, the court is authorized to infer diligence therefrom. Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777; Chapman v. Moore, 151 Cal. 509, 513; 121 Am. St. Rep. 130; 91 Pac. 324. It is not required by this section that the affidavit shall state that the residence of the defendant is not known to the affiant (Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777); but an affidavit in the language of the statute is not sufficient. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149. Unless the affidavit contains some evidence tending to establish every material jurisdictional fact, the judge has no legal authority to make the order. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342. The affidavit should be prepared with reference to the condition of things as they exist at the time the order for publication is made. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Cohn v. Kember, 47 Cal. 144. In a proceeding based upon constructive service, the conditions of the statute must be strictly pursued. Cohn v. Kember, 47 Cal. 144. It is not required that it shall appear that a writ of attachment has been levied as a preliminary step to the order of publication; the court may not require anything in addition to the requirements of the code. Johnson v. Miner, 144 Cal. 785; 78 Pac. 240. To authorize service by publication, it must appear that a cause of action exists against the defendant. Estate of McNeil, 155 Cal. 333; 100 Pac. 1086. Facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action must be shown, either by the complaint or the affidavit. Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610; Yolo County v. Knight, 70 Cal. 430; 11 Pac. 662; Columbia Screw Co. v. Warner Lock Co., 118 Cal. 445; 71 Pac. 498. Where no affidavit is filed, the complaint must be verified. People v. Mulcahy, 159 Cal. 34; 112 Pac. 853. Where the complaint is not verified, an affidavit, made by the attorney, in order to show the existence of a cause of action, must state that the facts are within his knowledge. Columbia Screw Co. v. Warner Lock Co., 138 Cal. 445; 71 Pac. 498. Where the plaintiff is absent from the county, his attorney may make the affidavit, if the facts are known to him, and it may be made upon information and belief. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732. An affidavit, by the attorney for the plaintiff, on information and belief, that the defendant is in fact within the state, and conceals himself to avoid service of summons, is only prima facie evidence of these facts; if untrue in point of fact, the defendant may, at any time, institute suit to set aside the judgment, on the ground of fraud. Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal. 107. The ultimate facts of the statute are to be found from the probative facts in the affidavit. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149; Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610; Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Yolo County v. Knight, 70 Cal. 430; 11 Pac. 662. Where the affidavit is false, the judgment by default is properly vacated. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563; Fealey v. Fealey, 104 Cal. 354; 43 Am. St. Rep. 111; 38 Pac. 49; Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 664; 50 Pac. 777; Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007. The judgment of the superior court imports absolute verity; and defects in or the insufficiency of the affidavits and order showing service by publication cannot be considered in a collateral attack upon a judgment which recites the service of summons by publication. McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355. The primary object and purpose of the signature of the officer to the jurat is to witness the signature of the affiant. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252. An obvious mistake appearing in the jurat does not vitiate either the affidavit or the order. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252. Where the date is omitted in the jurat, it will be presumed that the affidavit was made at the time of presentation, nothing to the contrary appearing. Bank of Venice v. Hutchinson, 19 Cal. App. 219; 125 Pac. 252.

Affidavit and order not part of judgment roll. People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9.

Sufficiency of affidavit. Roberts v. Jacob, 154 Cal. 307; 97 Pac. 671.

Showing of diligence necessary. Chapman v. Moore, 151 Cal. 509; 121 Am. St. Rep. 130; 91 Pac. 324.

Constructive or substituted service on resident in action in personam as due process of law. See note 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 292.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Applicable to corporations. This section would have been applicable to corporations without specially mentioning them, the word "person" covering artificial as well as natural persons. See Douglass v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 4 Cal. 304.

2. Section to be strictly pursued. It has been held that the sections providing for the service of summons on a defendant by publication, were in derogation of the common law, and must be strictly pursued. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 152; Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 102; Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 617; Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 309; but see § 4, ante, and see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742.

3. Requisites of affidavit for order of publication. Sections 412 and 413 treat of the same general subject, and they must be read together, for the purpose of ascertaining what the affidavit and order should contain, in order to satisfy the law and make the service complete. It must appear from the affidavit that the person upon whom service is to be made either resides out of the state or has departed from the state, or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state; or that he conceals himself to avoid service, and that the plaintiff has a cause of action against him; or that he has a cause of action, to the complete determination of which he is a necessary or proper party; and also whether his residence is known, and if known, it should be stated. An affidavit which merely repeats the language or substance of the statute is not sufficient. Unavoidably, the statute cannot go into details, but is compelled to content itself with a statement of the ultimate facts, which must be made to appear, leaving the detail to be supplied by the affidavit from the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Between the statute and the affidavit there is a relation which is analogous to that existing between a pleading and the evidence which supports it. The ultimate facts of the statute must be proved, so to speak, by the affidavit, by showing the probatory facts upon which each ultimate fact depends. These ultimate facts are conclusions drawn from the existence of other facts, to disclose which is the special office of the affidavit. To illustrate: It is not sufficient to state generally, that, after due diligence, the defendant cannot be found within the state, or that the plaintiff has a good cause of action against him, or that he is a necessary party; but the acts constituting due diligence, or the facts showing that he is a necessary party, should be stated. To hold that a bald repetition of the statute is sufficient, is to strip the court or judge to whom the application is made of all judicial functions, and allow the party himself to determine, in his own way, the existence of jurisdictional facts,—a practice too dangerous to the rights of defendants to admit of judicial toleration. The ultimate facts stated in the statute are to be found, so to speak, by the court or judge from the probatory facts stated in the affidavit, before the order for publication can be legally entered. The affidavit must show whether the residence of the person upon whom service is sought is known to the affiant, and if known, the residence must be stated. It is true that this is not required, in terms, in § 412, which is more especially devoted to the affidavit; but, as we have already said, the whole statute upon the subject of service by publication is to be read together, and § 413 requires that, where the residence is known, the order shall direct a copy of the summons and complaint to be forthwith deposited in the post-office, directed to the person, to be served at his place of residence. In granting the order, the court or judge acts judicially, and can know nothing about the facts upon which the order is to be granted, except from the affidavit presented by the applicant. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 152. See also Brady v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 617; Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100.

4. Affidavits to obtain order of publication, what facts must be stated therein. Section 412 provides, that "When the person on whom the service is to be made resides out of the state, . . . and the fact shall appear by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, or a judge thereof, . . . such court or judge may grant an order that the service be made by publication of summons." The fact must appear by affidavit, before jurisdiction to make the order attaches. That is to say, there must be an affidavit containing a statement of some fact which would be legal evidence, having some appreciable tendency to make the jurisdictional fact appear, for the judge to act upon, before he has any jurisdiction to make the order. Unless the affidavit contains some such evidence, tending to establish every material jurisdictional fact, the judge has no legal authority to be satisfied, and, if he makes the order, he acts without jurisdiction, and all proceedings based upon it are void. But he is only to be satisfied upon some evidence presented in the form prescribed; and if the affidavit presents legal evidence which has an appreciable tendency to prove every material jurisdictional fact, and the mind of the judge is too easily satisfied, this is but error, for he was authorized to weigh the testimony, and if satisfied, make the order. It is therefore not void, but erroneous. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 350.

5. Affidavit must show cause of action. The statute provides that "When the person on whom the service is to be made resides out of the state, . . . and the fact shall appear by affidavit, . . . and it shall in like manner appear, that a cause of action exists against the defendant in respect to whom the service is to be made, or that he is a necessary or proper party to the action, such court or judge may grant an order," etc. The existence of a cause of action, etc., then, is also a jurisdictional fact which must appear "in like manner," that is to say, by affidavit. The statute as clearly makes a cause of action, as non-residence, a jurisdictional fact, and we can no more disregard the one than the other. If this fact does not appear by the affidavit upon which the order for publication was founded, then there was a want of jurisdiction, and the order and publication are void. The only statement in the affidavit is the following: "Deponent further says, that he is a counselor at law and resides in this city, and that he has a good cause of action in this suit against the said defendant, and that he is a necessary and proper party defendant thereto, as he verily believes." What "fact appears by affidavit" here? Simply that the affiant believes he has a good cause of action in this suit against defendant, and believes that Harris is a necessary and proper party defendant. But such an averment is neither the statement of an ultimate fact, such as is required to be stated in a pleading, nor of a probative fact from which such ultimate fact may be deduced, nor a fact of any sort which in any way legally tends to prove such ultimate or probative fact, or from which it may be inferred. It is not the statement of a fact at all. It is merely the statement of the opinion of the witness in relation to a point upon which the judge is required to form his own opinion upon facts which must appear by affidavit. The judge may have entire confidence in the ability of the affiant as a lawyer, and in his opinion upon a question of law, and the witness may be equally well qualified to determine the point; but the law does not permit him to act upon such confidence or qualifications. Facts are the proper, and only proper, subjects to be set out in affidavits, under the provisions of the statute, to serve as the basis of judicial action. The affiant's general expression of opinion or belief, without the facts upon which it is founded, is in no sense legal evidence, and does not tend, in any degree, to prove the jurisdictional facts, without which the judge had no authority to make the order. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 353. Under this section of the code, the complaint, if verified, may be used to show that a cause of action exists.

6. Affidavit that defendant was concealing himself. Could not be found after due diligence, etc. An affidavit of an attorney for the plaintiff, for an order of publication of summons on defendant, which shows that diligent search had been made for him by the sheriff, and that he was concealing himself to avoid service, was held to be sufficient. Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 201. The affidavit states that the defendant, D. C. Seaver, was at the time a resident of the first township, in the county of Contra Costa; that he had occupied a house on a tract of land claimed by him to be his own and which he had cultivated up to the commencement of the suit, and for a long time previous; that on the twenty-second day of October, the day before the commencement of the suit, he left his residence, informing his servants that he would be back that evening or the next day; that the summons in the suit was put in the hands of a proper constable, who made diligent search and was wholly unable to serve it; that Seaver had not returned to his residence, and that he believed he concealed himself for the purpose of avoiding the service of the summons; and that the claim sued on is a just debt. The return of the summons by the constable is, "Not found in the county." The return of the officer, that the party could not be found, is sufficient evidence of proper diligence, and the affidavit of the plaintiff in that action, showing that the defendant resided in the township and county, and the facts respecting his absenting himself from his home, show sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to the order of publication. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 90. An affidavit for order of publication of summons, stating that defendant C. could not, after due diligence, be found in the county; that inquiry had been made of one F., an intimate friend of defendant, as to his whereabouts, and F. was unable to give the information; and that plaintiff did not know where defendant could be found within the state,—was held to be insufficient. The affidavit does not show that defendant had left the state, or that any diligence had been used to ascertain his whereabouts, beyond inquiry of a single individual, and no pretense was made that defendant was concealing himself to avoid service. Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 285.

7. Residence, when known, to be stated. Residence, if known, should be stated in the affidavit. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 637.

8. Affidavit made a long time before order of publication. Objection was made that it was incompetent for the court to make the order upon affidavits some four months old—it is plain, to our minds, from an examination of §§ 412 and 413 of the code, that the affidavits should be prepared with reference to the condition of things as they exist at the time when the order for publication is applied for—the residence of the defendant, or the inability to find him at that time. The proceedings are to follow each other in reasonably quick succession. The order for publication, when made, must "direct a copy of the summons and complaint to be forthwith deposited in the post-office, directed to the person to be served, at his place of residence," when known. It must not only be deposited, but it must be done forthwith. The object of the statute is, if possible, to secure actual notice of the pendency of the action. In this and the neighboring states and territories, the residences of a large portion of the people are notoriously temporary. It is important, therefore, that the inquiry as to residence should be directed to the time when the order and deposit in the post-office is to be made; and we have no doubt that it was so intended by the legislature. If an affidavit can be used as the basis of an order which was made four months before the order, it can be used when made four years before; and in both cases there would be great probability that the notice contemplated by the statute would fail of reaching the defendant. In many instances the party to be served may have returned, and could be easily, if inquiry were to be made at a later period. In People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 82, the court say: "The Practice Act contemplates that the judge must be satisfied, by affidavit, of the absence of the defendant at the time when he is applied to for his order, and when it is to take effect. If an order might be procured in advance, and held four days before taking out the summons, it might be so held for a much longer time, and so that when the summons actually issues the defendant may have returned to the state." We have no doubt of the correctness of this view. If the question were presented to us on appeal from the judgment, we should not hesitate to reverse it, on the ground that the affidavits, made so long a time before obtaining the order for publication based on them, would be totally insufficient to show a non-residence, or absence from the state, or that the defendant could not, after due diligence, be found within the state at the time of procuring the order. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 351.

§ 413. Manner of publication. The order must direct the publication to be made in a newspaper, to be designated, as most likely to give notice to the person to be served, and for such length of time as may be deemed reasonable, at least once a week; but publication against a defendant residing out of the state, or absent therefrom, must not be less than two months. In case of publication, where the residence of a non-resident or absent defendant is known, the court or judge must direct a copy of the summons and complaint to be forthwith deposited in the post-office, directed to the person to be served, at his place of residence. When publication is ordered, personal service of a copy of the summons and complaint out of the state is equivalent to publication and deposit in the post-office, and in either case the service of the summons is complete at the expiration of the time prescribed by the order for publication.

Judgment by default. Post, § 585, subd. 3.

Legislation § 413. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; identical with Practice Act, § 31 (New York Code, § 135), as amended by Stats. 1871–72, p. 190.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 299, (1) adding the word "and" before the words "in either case," which, in the original, began a sentence; and (2) omitting after "order for publication" (the end of the present section) the sentence, "In actions upon contracts for the direct payment of money, the court in its discretion may, instead of ordering publication, or may after publication, appoint an attorney to appear for the non-resident, absent, or concealed defendant, and conduct the proceedings on his part."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 131; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Constructive service. The power of the legislature to provide for constructive service of process is well settled. Eitel v. Foote, 39 Cal. 439; Crall v. Poso Irrigation Dist., 87 Cal. 140; 26 Pac. 797.

The order of publication. Where the affidavit is sufficient to sustain the order, it is immaterial that the judge had other sources of information (Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777), but the order must be based solely on facts stated. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149. The provision that the order must direct a copy to be deposited in the post-office, where the residence of a non-resident or absent resident is known, is applicable only in these cases. Ligare v. California Southern R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 610; 18 Pac. 777. Where the affidavit shows that the residence of the person to be served is known, the court must also direct a copy of the complaint to be deposited in the post-office, directed to him, at such place of residence; and it must appear that this direction has been complied with. Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007. The deposit of summons and complaint may be made in any post-office. Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147. Where the plaintiff fails to procure the service within the time fixed for its return, he is entitled to a new summons, and a continuance of the case until he can procure service, by publication or otherwise. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

Personal service out of the state. Personal service out of the state may be made, only after publication has been ordered. McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 507; 20 Pac. 61. To be effective, this section must be strictly pursued. Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149.

Sufficiency of affidavit. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299.

The publication. Publication affects only the service of summons, and the defendant has forty days to answer after the lapse of the period of publication. Grewell v. Henderson, 5 Cal. 465; Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176. A publication once every week, for fourteen weeks, consecutively, answers the requirement of an order for publication for the period of three calendar months. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347; Derby & Co. v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900. Where, at the time of the institution of the suit, and for several days afterwards, the defendant was a resident of the state, but at the time of filing the affidavit he was beyond its limits, a publication for the period of thirty days was insufficient, where the statute required three months. Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100. A publication against a defendant residing out of the state, or absent therefrom, must not be less than two months, and thirty days must elapse after that time, before default can be taken. Foster v. Vehmeyer, 133 Cal. 459; 65 Pac. 974. Where, pending publication, an order is made, substituting attorneys, the publication may be completed as commenced, with the original attorney's name indorsed on the summons. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. Publication made in a daily paper, regularly issued on Sundays, does not vitiate the service, on the ground that Sunday is dies non. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347; Derby & Co. v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900; Smith v. Hazard, 110 Cal. 145; 42 Pac. 465. That the paper designated is the one most likely to give notice to the person to be served, need not be stated in the order. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

Deposit of copy in post-office. The summons must not only be deposited, but it must also be done "forthwith" (Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342); that is, as soon as, by reasonable exertion, it may be, which will vary according to the circumstances of each particular case; like the term "immediately," "forthwith" is not, in law, necessarily construed as the time immediately succeeding, without an interval, but an effectual and lawful time, allowing all the adjuncts and accomplements necessary to give an act to be performed full legal effect. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. Where the deposit of a copy is made on the day the order is signed, the omission therefrom of the word "forthwith," does not render the proceedings void, where the jurisdictional facts are stated. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Additional requirements under Statute 1871–72. The legislature of 1871–72 passed the following act: Stats. 1871–72, p. 392. "An Act concerning service of summons upon absent defendants by publication." Approved March 15, 1872. [Quoting the act.]

2. Form of order for publication. When it may be issued, and what facts must be stated. An order to publish a summons cannot be made in advance of the issuance of the summons. If, after complaint filed, and before any summons was issued, the judge ordered that "summons do issue," and that it be published, and without any further order summons was subsequently issued and published, the court did not require jurisdiction, and the order was a nullity. A judge cannot order a summons to issue, but can only order a summons already issued to be served in a special manner. People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81.

3. Publication of summons on supplemental complaint, where summons was published on original complaint. If an order is made for publication of summons, and a summons is issued, and a supplemental complaint was afterwards filed and a summons issued thereon, the original action becomes merged in the action as supplemented, and the court will not acquire jurisdiction of the person of absent defendants by publication of the original summons, but the summons issued on the supplemental complaint must be published also. McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300; see also Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81; see also Lawrence v. Bolton, 3 Paige, 295; Scudder v. Voorhis, 1 Barb. 55.

4. Order designating newspaper need not state what. The order of publication is not defective because in designating the newspaper in which to publish the summons, it did not state that such paper was "most likely to give notice to the person to be served," or which summons was to be thus published. The order directs the summons to be published in a certain newspaper, with the time it was to be thus published, and the presumption is, that the justice designated such particular paper because it was most likely to give notice to the person to be served, but it was not necessary for him to state in the order that such was his reason. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 91.

5. Published summons must agree with original summons. The summons cannot be altered, and no new matter can be interpolated, after the order for its publication is made. It must be published in the form in which it existed when the order for its publication was made. McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 314. But if a comparison of the published summons with the original shows that the difference between the two are purely literal, and the sense and meaning of the original and of the published version of the summons are identical, that is enough. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 513.

6. Constitutionality of section, so far as it relates to appointment of attorney, etc. It has been contended that this section, so far as it allows the court to appoint attorneys for defendants in lieu of publication, was "unconstitutional and against the principles of free government," under the provision in the constitution, that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." But the constitutionality of this section was upheld by the court, in Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal. 111.

7. When the court may appoint attorney. If the defendant is concealed for the purpose of avoiding service. See Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal.

107. Where the defendant cannot, after due diligence, be found. See Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100. See also, as to judgment against defendants in such cases, § 473, post, where, within six months of rendition of judgment, the court may allow defendant to answer to the merits of original action; and in this connection see Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100.

8. How time of publication is computed. Formerly, publication was required (against a non-resident of the state) to be at least once a week, and for a time "not less than three months." Under the law as it then stood, it was held that a summons published "from the 10th of January to the 9th of April, inclusive," was published for the period of three full calendar months. The 9th of January and the 10th of April cannot be included. The summons had been published for three calendar months at the close of the 9th day of April, and the first day of the forty within which defendant was required to answer was on the 10th of April. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 350. Where the last day of the publication of a summons occurs in the same week in which the three months expires, the publication was held to have been made for a sufficient time, and the court has acquired jurisdiction, although this day is not fully three months from the first day of publication. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 352; see also Ronkendorff v. Taylor's Lessees, 4 Pet. 361; 7 L. Ed. 886. The month contemplated by this section (§ 413) is a calendar, not a lunar, month. Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 350; Sprague v. Norway, 31 Cal. 173; see § 17, ante, subd. 6.

9. Mailing summons and complaint, directed to residence of defendant. If the residence of a non-resident of the state or an absentee is known, a copy of the complaint and summons must be put into the post-office, directed to such defendant at his place of residence, and this is the case also as to an infant under the age of fourteen years. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 638.

10. Defendant has forty days after last day of publication to answer. The defendant, after the last day of publication, has forty days in which to file answer. Service of summons is complete at the expiration of the period of publication, and the time for answering commences to run at that time. Grewell v. Henderson, 5 Cal. 465; see also Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 352.

11. Justices' practice. Order of publication made by justice of the peace. This and the following section are made specially applicable to justices' courts. See § 849, post. Section 845, post, relating to practice in justices' courts, fixes twelve days as the time within which summons must require defendant to answer; but § 849, by permitting service to be made by publication, necessarily requires that the time should exceed ten days, and that the provisions of this section (§ 412) and the following section (§ 413) should be pursued in justices' courts. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 646; see also Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 86.

12. General effect of judgment obtained by publication of summons, etc. A judgment obtained by publication of summons against a defendant out of the state in which the judgment is rendered, though it may be enforced against his property in that state, has no binding force in personam, and is a mere nullity when attempted to be enforced in another state. Kane v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449; see note to § 415, post.

13. When judgment may be attacked for defect in affidavit or order for publication. See the very elaborate opinions in the case of Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742, contained in note to § 415, post; also Jordan v. Giblin, 12 Cal. 100; People v. Huber, 20 Cal. 81; Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 610.

§ 414. Proceedings where there are several defendants, and part only are served. When the action is against two or more defendants jointly or severally liable on a contract, and the summons is served on one or more, but not on all of them, the plaintiff may proceed against the defendants served in the same manner as if they were the only defendants.

Joining persons severally liable upon instruments. Ante, § 383.

Joint debtors, proceedings against, after judgment against some. Post, §§ 989 et seq.

Legislation § 414. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 32 (New York Code, § 135), which read: "Where the action is against two or more defendants, and the summons is served on one or more, but not on all of them, the plaintiff may proceed as follows: 1. If the action be against the defendants jointly indebted upon a contract, he may proceed against the defendant served, unless the court otherwise direct; and if he recover judgment, it may be entered against all the defendants thus jointly indebted, so far only as that it may be enforced against the joint property of all, and the separate property of the defendant served; or, 2. If the action be against defendants severally liable, he may proceed against the defendants served, in the same manner as if they were the only defendants."

Construction of section. This section does not apply to actions for the foreclosure of mortgages on real estate. Bowen v. May, 12 Cal. 348.

Defendants jointly and severally liable. In an action against two or more defendants, the plaintiff, failing to make out the joint liability of all, may take judgment against one or more. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167; Sterling v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 478; Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399; People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402; Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577; 23 Pac. 198. In an action against a married woman, the husband is a necessary party defendant, and must also be served; he is joined solely for the protection of the wife. McDonald v. Porsh, 136 Cal. 301; 68 Pac. 817. The bringing of an action against all the guarantors upon a joint and several obligation is not a waiver of the right to their several liability, although judgment is obtained against some, and others have not been served. Melander v. Western National Bank, 21 Cal. App. 462; 132 Pac. 265.

Service on all essential to a several judgment. Service upon all the defendants, whether charged as joint or several debtors, is essential to the validity of a several judgment against each. Treat v. McCall, 10 Cal. 511; Bowen v. May, 12 Cal. 348; Schloss v. White, 16 Cal. 65. Where only one of two defendants, jointly indebted, is served, a several judgment may be entered against him. Hirschfield v. Franklin, 6 Cal. 607. In an action against partners, the plaintiff may proceed against the defendants alone who are served; to sustain a judgment against a defendant, he must have been served with process, or brought into court through some form of law. Ingraham v. Gildemeester, 2 Cal. 88; Schloss v. White, 16

Cal. 65. In an action against three copartners, where one did not appear, and no default was entered against him, and it appeared that he died after the action was commenced, the verdict should have been entered only against the others, who answered; if he was served and failed to answer, his default should have been regularly entered; if he was not served, the action should have regularly proceeded against the defendants who were served, or who appeared and answered. Alpers v. Schammel, 75 Cal. 590; 17 Pac. 708. At common law, where a joint action was brought against several defendants, and one of them was not served, no judgment could be effective against the rest until such defendant was driven to outlawry. Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176.

Proper judgment, where all not served. In an action upon a joint and several promissory note, where one of the defendants makes default, and the other answers, it is error to enter final judgment against the defaulting defendant, pending the proceeding. Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176; Ware v. Robinson, 9 Cal. 107. When the action is against several defendants jointly, only a portion of whom are served, judgment may be taken against those who are served, and proceedings afterwards had against those not served. Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 108; 9 Pac. 180; 11 Pac. 599. In an action against defendants severally liable, the clerk may, upon the application of the plaintiff, enter judgment, upon default, against the parties served, without regard to the other parties named in the complaint. Kelly v. Van Austin, 17 Cal. 564. In an action against several defendants on their joint contract, for the recovery of damages only, the clerk has power to enter the separate defaults of those defendants who have been served and have not answered, and to enter a joint judgment by default against all of those served, although other of the defendants have not been served; but he has no power to enter a judgment by default against a part only of the defendants, who have been served and have not answered. Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727. In an action on a joint demand against two defendants, where service was made on one, who answered, but service was not made on the other, who did not appear, judgment entered against the former is not void. Kelly v. Bandini, 50 Cal. 530. In an action against defendants jointly and not severally liable, where all are not served, the clerk may, upon application of the plaintiff, enter judgment against all, to be enforced against the joint property of all, and the separate property of those served; entry in any other form is unavailing for any purpose. Kelly v. Van Austin, 17 Cal. 564; Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495; and see Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85; Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598; Sacramento County v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal. 250; Junkans v. Bergin, 64 Cal. 203; 30 Pac. 627; Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089; Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1046; Kennedy v. Mulligan, 136 Cal. 556; 69 Pac. 291. The party not served is not a proper party defendant in an action on the judgment against the party served. Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 93; Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264; 13 Pac. 661; Cooper v. Burch, 140 Cal. 548; 74 Pac. 37. In an action against two or more defendants, where all are not served, the judgment must bind the joint property of all. Bowen v. May, 12 Cal. 348. Where the action is upon a joint and several contract, the court may proceed against one defendant, who voluntarily appears, and render judgment against him. Bell v. Adams, 150 Cal. 772; 90 Pac. 118. In an action against the defendants jointly, on a joint and several obligation, the entry of final judgment, upon default, against one, is a discharge of the other. Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 176. In an action against two partners, both of whom were served, where the answer denied the indebtedness, and the plaintiff failed to establish a joint indebtedness, a verdict in favor of one and against the other is valid. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167. In an action against copartners, in which all the individuals composing the firm are set forth in the complaint and summons, judgment cannot be rendered against those who have not been served and who do not appear. Davidson v. Knox, 67 Cal. 143; 7 Pac. 413; Feder v. Epstein, 69 Cal. 456; 10 Pac. 785. Evidence that an action is against the individual members of a partnership, doing business under a particular firm name, cannot serve as an allegation of that fact. San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111. If a complaint is against persons individually named, the addition of words describing a partnership cannot make the partnership described a party defendant to the action. Maclay Co. v. Meads, 14 Cal. App. 363; 112 Pac. 195. A partnership is properly sued, where the action is expressly brought against it as such. Maclay Co. v. Meads, 14 Cal. App. 363; 112 Pac. 195.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Construction of section generally. Section 32 of the Practice Act, from which this section is taken, reads as follows: "§ 32. Where the action is against two or more defendants, and the summons is served on one or more, but not on all of them, the plaintiff may proceed as follows: 1. If the action be against the defendants jointly indebted upon a contract, he may proceed against the defendant served, unless the court otherwise direct; and if he recover judgment, it may be entered against all the defendants thus jointly indebted, so far only as that it may be enforced against the joint property of all, and the separate property of the defendant served; or, 2. If the action be against defendants severally liable, he may proceed against the defendants served, in the same manner as if they were the only defendants." This section provides that: "If the action be against defendants jointly indebted upon a contract, he may proceed against the defendants served, unless the court otherwise direct,"—that is to say, unless the court requires the other defendants to be served before proceeding to trial and judgment. If he does "proceed against the defendants served," the section provides that he shall take judgment against all of the defendants, to be enforced against the joint property of all the defendants, and the separate property of those served. By the terms of the statute, the plaintiff proceeds only against the defendants served, and judgment is entered against them, but not against those who were not served. The defendants not served are not bound by the judgment, nor are they personally liable for its satisfaction; but the statute provides that the property in which they are jointly interested with the other defendants may be taken in execution for the satisfaction of the judgment. This provision of the statute will hereafter be noticed. When cases involving this or similar provisions of the statutes of other states have been under consideration, it has been repeatedly held that the statute changed the common-law rule, which is, that, in an action upon a joint contract, the plaintiff must recover against all or none. People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402; Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399. The language of those cases clearly indicates that, under the statutory rule, the plaintiff may recover upon a joint contract against one, or any number less than all of the joint debtors, that is to say, he may take judgment in the usual form against those served, and, in addition, the judgment may be enforced against the joint property of all the joint debtors. But the judgment is against those only who were served with process. The statute provides that the "joint property" of all the defendants may be taken in execution for the satisfaction of the judgment, but none of the cases in this court defines such joint property. We have not noticed in any of the cases in New York that the question has been distinctly passed upon as to what property constitutes the "joint property" mentioned in the statute; but it is assumed in several cases that it is partnership property which is meant by that term. Mason v. Denison, 15 Wend. 64; Mervin v. Kumbel, 23 Wend. 293; Sterne v. Bentley, 3 How. Pr. 331. In Mason v. Denison, it is said that the term applies to the property which one defendant might apply to the satisfaction of the debt, without consulting his co-contractor. Accepting the restriction indicated in that case, or even limiting the meaning of "joint property" to partnership property of the persons alleged to be joint debtors, we are utterly unable to see how a judgment that is to be enforced against the interest in such property of a person who has not been served with process, and has not appeared in the action, can be maintained. It is a cardinal principle of jurisprudence, that a judgment shall not bind or conclude a man, either in respect to his person or property, unless he has had his day in court. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, says the constitution; but this principle is older than written constitutions, and, without invoking the constitutional declaration, every person may, as a matter of common right, insist that he be heard in his own defense before judgment passes which binds, charges, or injuriously affects his person or his estate. It is no answer to say that the judgment affects only the joint property of the defendants,—property that either of the debtors might apply to the satisfaction of the common debt,—for that assumes that the defendants are joint debtors, and that may be to the defendant who is not served the vital point of the controversy. He may be ready to admit every allegation of the complaint, except that he is a party to the contract; or he may even admit the contract, and yet be ready, if an opportunity were presented, to make a successful defense, on the ground of fraud, failure of consideration, payment, accord and satisfaction, etc. The defendant who is served may be ignorant of the defenses upon which his co-defendants would rely; or he may, either negligently or purposely, omit to present them. And, whatever his answer may be, he only appears for himself; and there is nothing in the law regulating the acquisition or disposition of joint property which confers upon one joint owner the right to defend actions for his fellows. Unless it can be shown that such property is under the ban of law, a judgment which subjects to execution the interest of a person who has no opportunity to be heard in the action cannot be upheld without violating principles which lie at the base of all judicial proceedings. Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 95.

2. Constitutionality of section. See note 1. There have been several cases in this court involving the consideration of this statute, and this question does not seem to have been presented or considered, but the validity of the statute seems to have been tacitly assumed. In New York the validity of a similar statute is recognized, and actions on the judgment have been maintained against the defendants not served. Dando v. Doll, 2 Johns. 87; Bank of Columbia v. Newcomb, 6 Johns. 98; Taylor v. Pettibone, 16 Johns. 66. In the subsequent case of Mervin v. Kumbel, 23 Wend. 293, it was considered that the authority of those cases was binding upon the court; but it is evident from the opinions delivered in the case, and particularly that of Mr. Justice Bronson, that the judgment, so far as it affects the defendants not served, cannot be sustained on any sensible or even plausible ground. To say that a person is liable to an action on a judgment, but that he may, in that action, litigate the cause of action upon which the judgment was rendered—to hold that he may be sued upon the judgment, but that if he pleads the proper matters in defense, the judgment is not even prima facie evidence against him—is, to our minds, altogether unsatisfactory and illogical. There is a further ground for holding that the defendant who was not served is not a proper party to an action on the judgment. Provision is made in the code, by which a defendant who was not originally served with the summons may be bound by the judgment. (§§ 989 to 994.) He is summoned to show cause why he should not be bound by the judgment, and he may answer the complaint, as he might have done had he been originally served, or he may deny the judgment, or may set up any defense that may have arisen subsequently to the judgment. These proceedings furnish, in our opinion, the exclusive mode by which he can be bound by the judgment, and they necessarily imply that he is not already bound by it. The action is really an action on the original joint contract, and matters of defense in respect to the judgment are merely incidental to the action. Were it not for the statute, no action could be maintained against him on the contract, for the reason that it would become merged in the first judgment; and the merger is restrained, only for the purpose and to the extent of enabling the proceedings to be had as prescribed in the statute. Those provisions of the statute are useless if it is true that an action can be maintained on the judgment against a defendant not served in the former action. Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 97.

3. Personal judgment cannot be entered against one of several defendants jointly liable. In an action against defendants jointly liable, it was held to be error to enter a personal judgment against one of the defendants who was not served with process. Treat v. McCall, 10 Cal. 512. And where all defendants were jointly liable and all served, judgment by default cannot be entered against one of them. This section of the code applies only where all of the defendants have not been served. Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 449.

4. Section not applicable to foreclosing suits. It was held that this provision, which, in an action against two or more defendants, all of whom were not served with process, authorized judgment to be entered to bind the joint property of all, did not apply to proceedings for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon real estate. Bowen v. May, 12 Cal. 351.

5. Appearance recited in record confined to parties served. Where the record recites, in general terms, the appearance of the parties, such appearance will be confined to those parties served with process. Miller v. Ewing, 8 Smedes & M. 421; Torrey v. Jordan, 4 How. (Miss.) 401; Dean v. McKinstry, 2 Smedes & M. 213; Edwards v. Toomer, 14 Smedes & M. 76; Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 560.

6. Where plaintiff waives right to delay trial until all the defendants were served. See Meagher v. Gagliardo, 35 Cal. 602.

7. Judgment cannot be had against defendant not served. In an action against defendant sued as partners it was held that to sustain a judgment against a defendant he must be served with process, or brought into court through some of the forms of law. Ingraham v. Gildemester, 2 Cal. 89; see also Estell v. Chenery, 3 Cal. 468. And where process was not served on a party in a suit against several defendants jointly liable, he cannot be made a defendant in a suit upon the judgment against the party served. Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 93.

8. Actions against defendants severally liable, and action against defendants jointly liable. It was held that "if the action be against defendants severally liable, the clerk can, upon application of the plaintiff, enter judgment upon default against the parties served, without regard to the other parties named in the complaint. If the action be against defendants jointly and not severally liable, and only a portion of them are served, the clerk can also, upon like application, enter judgment; but in that case it must be entered against all the defendants, and so as to be enforced against the joint property of all, and the separate property of those served." Kelly v. Van Austin, 17 Cal. 566. But see Tay v. Hawley, supra.

9. For several judgments against defendants, etc., see §§ 578, 579, post.

10. When one or more may sue or defend for all. See §§ 382, 383, 384, ante.

11. For proceedings against joint debtors, see §§ 989–994.

§ 415. Proof of service, how made.

Proof of the service of summons and complaint must be as follows:

1. If served by the sheriff, his certificate thereof;

2. If by any other person, his affidavit thereof; or,

3. In case of publication, the affidavit of the printer, or his foreman, or principal clerk, showing the same; and an affidavit of a deposit of a copy of the summons in the post-office, if the same has been deposited; or,

4. The written admission of the defendant.

In case of service otherwise than by publication, the certificate or affidavit must state the time and place of service.

Proof of service by affidavit. See post, § 2009.

Legislation § 415. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 33, 34 (New York Code, § 138). When enacted in 1872, (1) in the first paragraph, the words after "service" were changed from "of the summons shall be as follows"; (2) in subd. 2, the clause, "or his deputy, the affidavit or certificate of such sheriff or deputy," was omitted, and "his certificate thereof" inserted; (3) in subd. 3, the word "has" was changed from "shall have"; in subd. 5 (which was § 34), the word "must" was changed from "shall," and the word "the" omitted before "service."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 131; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Return of service by sheriff. The sheriff's return is prima facie evidence of service (People v. Lee, 128 Cal. 330; 60 Pac. 854); and a description, in the return, of the party served as an officer of a corporation, is prima facie evidence of the status of that person. Rowe v. Table Mountain Water Co., 10 Cal. 441; Wilson v. Spring Hill Quartz Mining Co., 10 Cal. 445; Golden Gate Consol. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628; Keener v. Eagle Lake Land etc. Co., 110 Cal. 627; 43 Pac. 14. A deputy's return must be in the name of the sheriff. Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. A certificate return by a constable is sufficient, only in a justice's court. Cardwell v. Sabichi, 59 Cal. 490; Berentz v. Belmont Oil Mining Co., 148 Cal. 577, 580; 113 Am. St. Rep. 308; 84 Pac. 47. The return may be amended. Pico v. Sunol, 6 Cal. 294; Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455; Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. The presumption is in favor of the validity of the return (Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117; 73 Am. Dec. 632; Brown v. Lawson, 51 Cal. 615), unless it appears on the face thereof that it is insufficient (People v. Bernal, 43 Cal. 385); and the presumption of the legality of service will not overcome facts to the contrary in the return (Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742); as where, in an action against a domestic corporation, the return shows the defendant to be a foreign corporation. Elder v. Grunsky, 127 Cal. 67; 59 Pac. 300. The sheriff's return is not traversable; nor will the court permit it to be collaterally attacked, even where he is shown to be guilty of fraud and collusion; the law presumes that every officer will fully perform his duty, and that he has done so in every instance, until the contrary is shown; a fortiori, it will never bend this principle upon the hypothesis that a sworn officer of the law will commit perjury. Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 53; Johnson v. Gorham,

6 Cal. 195; 65 Am. Dec. 501. The sheriff's return is sufficient to show the date of admission of service. Crane v. Brannan, 3 Cal. 192; Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315; Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307. The official capacity of the officer making the service must be stated in the return. Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401. The court may allow proof of service to be amended and filed nunc pro tunc as of the date of judgment, if the return is omitted or incorrectly made, but the facts exist which give the court jurisdiction. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509; overruling Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089; Howard v. McChesney, 103 Cal. 536; 37 Pac. 523; Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2, 542; Bank of Orland v. Dodson, 127 Cal. 208; 78 Am. St. Rep. 42; 59 Pac. 584. The clerk, in the absence of proof of service, cannot enter default of defendant. Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 443; Kelly v. Van Austin, 17 Cal. 564; Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85; Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530; Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Where the original summons, with proof of service, is lost from the files of the court, the order of the court, upon proof of the loss, that a copy thereof may be filed and used in place of the original, is a determination that such copy is a correct copy of the original, and it is entitled to the same weight as original. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 424; 48 Pac. 370.

Affidavit of return by other person. The return must show that the person making service is properly qualified. McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 372. A return stating that a copy of the summons was personally served on the defendant is proof that a copy of the summons was delivered to defendant personally, and is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction. Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455. The return, where service was by another than the sheriff, may be amended. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. A return, which states the facts making the affiant a competent witness, is sufficient, without stating that he is competent. Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238. There is a presumption that the defendant resides in the county in which he is served with process. Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 151; King v. Blood, 41 Cal. 314; Pellier v. Gillespie, 67 Cal. 582; 8 Pac. 185. The affidavit of the person making the service, where it is the only evidence of service, must show the facts required by the statute, and must be sworn to before it can be used as evidence. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 20 Cal. App. 117; 128 Pac. 338. The affidavit being the only evidence of service, the court acquires no jurisdiction unless it is made as required by law. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 20 Cal. 117; 128 Pac. 338. If the summons was duly and regularly served, a defendant admitting the fact in his application to vacate a default judgment, is in no position to object to defects in the affidavit of service. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 20 Cal. App. 117; 128 Pac. 338.

Return in cases of service by publication. The affidavit and the order, directing the publication of the summons, constitute no part of the judgment roll. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Proof that the order of publication was complied with, and showing a compliance with the law, is a sufficient showing of such service. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505. Where the affidavit of proof of publication shows the time and place of the hearing, that it was made by the "principal clerk" of the designated newspaper, and that he had charge of all the advertisements therein, there is a substantial compliance with the requirements of this section. Pool v. Simmons, 134 Cal. 621; 66 Pac. 872. Where it is clear from the affidavit that there is but one clerk in the newspaper-office, it is unnecessary that he should describe himself as principal clerk. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616. An affidavit showing that the summons was printed weekly, for the required time, in a newspaper published both daily and weekly, is sufficient. Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2, 542. Where the affidavit of the printer states that the summons was published one month, but the judgment states that it was published three months, or that service has been had upon the defendant, it will be presumed that other proof than that contained in the judgment roll was rendered; to presume to the contrary would be to deny to the record that absolute verity which must be accorded to it. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Where proof is made of service by publication, proof of service by the sheriff is unnecessary. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85. Proof of service by publication is by the affidavit of the printer, or his foreman or principal clerk, setting forth the fact, and where and how long, and an affidavit showing a deposit in the post-office, if such deposit was made. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. It is immaterial by whom the deposit of summons in the post-office is made. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505.

Admission of service. An acknowledgment of service is sufficient, only when reduced to writing and subscribed by the party; a verbal acknowledgment to the sheriff will not suffice. Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307. When the proof of service consists of written admissions of the defendants, such admissions, to be available, should be accompanied by some evidence of the genuineness of the signatures of the parties; in the absence of such evidence, the court cannot notice them (Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742); but where the judgment recites that the defendant was regularly served with process, the presumption follows, that there existed every fact essential to the jurisdiction of the person. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405; 132 Pac. 88, 454.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. What is meant by proof of service. Effect of judgment on defective service. Said Sanderson, J., in his elaborate and able opinion in the case of Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 403, 94 Am. Dec. 742: "There are two modes" [reprinting to the last paragraph of the opinion on p. 41]. See also, as to jurisdiction of defendant by service of summons and in support of the case of Hahn v. Kelly, above cited, the following cases: Sharp v. Brunnings, 35 Cal. 528; Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458.

2. Judgment cannot be attacked collaterally on defective return. If the return is defective, the defendant must appeal from the judgment. A mere irregularity of service is not sufficient to enable him to attack the judgment collaterally. Dorente v. Sullivan, 7 Cal. 280; see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 403; 94 Am. Dec. 742 (note 1, supra); Peck v. Strauss, 33 Cal. 678.

3. A sheriff's return is not traversable, and a court will not permit it collaterally to be attacked, even if the officer is shown to have been guilty of fraud and collusion. Sewell on Sheriffs, p. 387; Watson on Sheriffs, p. 72; Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 56.

4. Service by sheriff on officers of a corporation. See § 411, ante, notes 1, 2, 3.

5. Presumption in favor of return, when place where served is not stated. When the place where the writ was served is not stated in the return, the court should assume that it was served within the jurisdiction of the sheriff to whom it was directed. Crane v. Brannan, 3 Cal. 194; Pico v. Sunol, 6 Cal. 294.

6. Return by deputy to be made in name of principal. If a return is made by a deputy, it must be made in the name of the sheriff. Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; see [code commissioners'] note to § 410, ante.

7. Affidavit of service by person other than sheriff or deputy. The affidavit of the person serving the summons must show all the facts which are required to make a valid service under the provisions of the four preceding sections. The facts necessary to show a valid service must appear affirmatively. See McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 372; Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238; see also Peck v. Strauss, 33 Cal. 678.

8. Proof of service by publication. The publication of summons may be proved by the affidavit of the clerk, of the publisher of the paper, and the fact that the summons was deposited in a post-office may also be proved by affidavit; nor is it necessary that the constable (in justice's court) state in his return on the summons that such publication was made and such deposit made in the post-office. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 86.

9. Affidavit of publication by printer. An affidavit in the following terms, "H. F. W., principal clerk in the office of the Union," etc., "deposes and says that the notice," etc., was held insufficient. By the third subdivision of this section the fact that service has been made by publication is to be proved by the "affidavit of the printer, his foreman, or principal clerk." These are the only persons competent to testify on the subject. That the affiant was one of the three is itself a substantive fact, and must be proved as such before the court in which the action is pending can render judgment against the parties to whom notice is intended to be given. In the affidavit above given the affiant swears to nothing except as to matters set forth after the word "deposes." He names himself as principal clerk, but he does not swear that such was his position in fact. Ex parte Bank of Monroe, 7 Hill, 178; 42 Am. Dec. 61; Cunningham v. Goelet, 4 Den. 71; Staples v. Fairchild, 3 N. Y. 44; Payne v. Young, 8 N. Y. 158; see particularly, for correct form, 2 Barb. Ch. Prac. 706; and Hill v. Hoover, 5 Wis. 370; Steinbach v. Leese, 27 Cal. 299. But it was held that if there is but one clerk in a printing-office he need not be described in the affidavit of publication as "principal" clerk. See Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616. And it was held that an objection that the affidavit was made by a publisher and proprietor, and not by the "printer, foreman, or principal clerk," was fully met by Bunce v. Reed, 16 Barb. 347. It was held in that case that for the purposes of the question, printers and publishers might be considered synonymous, the latter being within the spirit of the statute. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 513. And so, also, the affidavit of the "proprietor" of a printing-office was held sufficient. Proprietor and printer are regarded as synonymous terms. Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 464. Where the affidavit of the printer was to the effect that publication had been made one month, but the judgment of the court recites that it was published three months, the recital imparts absolute verity, and it must be presumed that some additional proof had been made to the court before judgment. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 403; 94 Am. Dec. 742.

10. Affidavit of deposit of summons in post-office. It is not a ground for objection to the affidavit that it does not state that the deposit was made in a United States post-office, nor that there was communication by mail between the place of deposit and the place to which the package was addressed. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 514. And a copy of summons and complaint must be mailed to a minor under fourteen years of age. A failure to do so cannot be rectified by the appearance of the mother of the child on her own behalf. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616.

11. Admission of service by defendant. An admission of service must be in writing, signed by the defendant; an oral admission will not be sufficient. Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307. The place of service need not be stated in the admission. The statute does not require an admission of service to designate the place where the service was made. The object of such designation, when required, is to determine the period within which the answer must be filed, or when default may be taken. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 321; Crane v. Brannan, 3 Cal. 194. And generally, as to admission of service, see Sharp v. Brunnings, 35 Cal. 533; Crane v. Brannan, 3 Cal. 194.

12. Evidence of genuineness of written admissions of defendants. Proof of signatures. It is well settled that courts will take judicial notice of the signatures of their officers, as such, but there is no rule which extends such notice to the signatures of parties to a cause. When, therefore, the proof of service of process consists of the written admissions of defendants, such admissions, to be available in the action, should be accompanied with some evidence of the genuineness of the signatures of the parties. In the absence of such evidence, the court cannot notice them. Litchfield v. Burwell, 5 How. Pr. 346; Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 321.

§ 416. When jurisdiction of action acquired. From the time of the service of the summons and of a copy of the complaint in a civil action, where service of a copy of the complaint is required, or of the completion of the publication when service by publication is ordered, the court is deemed to have acquired jurisdiction of the parties, and to have control of all the subsequent proceedings. The voluntary appearance of a defendant is equivalent to personal service of the summons and copy of the complaint upon him.

Admission of service. Ante, § 415.
Appearance. Post, § 1014.
Waiver of summons. Ante, § 406.

Legislation § 416. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 35 (New York Code, § 139), which read: "From the time of the service of the summons and copy of complaint in a civil action, the court shall be deemed to have acquired jurisdiction, and to have control of all the subsequent proceedings. A voluntary appearance of a defendant shall be equivalent to personal service of the summons upon him." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "is," in both instances, was changed from "shall be," and (2) the last sentence was changed to begin with "The" instead of "A."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 299.

Jurisdiction of the parties. A judgment obtained by fraud, or rendered by a court not having jurisdiction, may be treated as an absolute nullity from the start. Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439. Where the defendant, in an action upon a domestic judgment, was not served with summons in the original action, evidence to impeach the judgment for want of service is admissible; but if the parties stipulate that there was no service, and evidence is admitted to that effect, without objection, it is the duty of the court to declare the judgment void, upon the admitted facts. People v. Harrison, 107 Cal. 541; 40 Pac. 956. The court has no jurisdiction to grant relief against defendants, without service upon them of a cross-complaint filed in the action, although they made default. White v. Patton, 87 Cal. 151; 25 Pac. 270. Want of jurisdiction may be raised at any time. Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 137; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Pearson v. Pearson, 46 Cal. 609; People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9. Until fraud or want of jurisdiction is shown in the proper mode, and according to the proper rules of evidence, a judgment obtained by fraud, or rendered by a court not having jurisdiction, is not void; for it has the form and semblance of a valid judgment, and it may be enforced as such until reversed or set aside by some proceedings. Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439. The power of a court of law to inquire into jurisdiction is limited to an inspection of the record. Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Hodgdon v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 75 Cal. 642; 17 Pac. 928; Hill v. City Cab etc. Co., 79 Cal. 188; 21 Pac. 728; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278; 33 Pac. 878; Estate of Eichhoff, 101 Cal. 600; 36 Pac. 11; Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601; People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773. The presentations of a false affidavit, for the purpose of obtaining an order for service of summons by publication, is an act of fraud, and any judgment which rests upon it must be set aside. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. The first point decided by any court, although it may not be in terms, is that the court has jurisdiction; otherwise it would not proceed to determine the rights of the parties. Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 685; Coulter v. Stark, 7 Cal. 244. In suits in personam, in courts other than admiralty, no man can be deprived of his property without first having been personally cited to appear and make his defense, except by virtue of some positive statutory enactment. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24; Parsons v. Davis, 3 Cal. 321; Schloss v. White, 16 Cal. 65; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687; Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54; Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505. The fact of service is material, and from the time service is made, the court is deemed to have acquired jurisdiction; the return of service may be formal or informal, perfect or imperfect, still, if it is in fact made, the court acquires jurisdiction of the person of defendant, and the judgment thereafter rendered cannot be attacked collaterally. Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455; Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Spencer, 53 Cal. 737; Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838; Estate of Eichhoff, 101 Cal. 600; 36 Pac. 11; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. Jurisdiction is given, in this state, by a form of notice prescribed by statute, which, in such cases, must be substantially pursued; and where a general power of serving process is given to an officer, a general return of service is sufficient, but where the power to serve process is exceptional, and given only on prescribed conditions, there the authority is special, and the particular facts must be shown, in order to give effect to the service. McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 372; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505; Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687. It is immaterial whether the jurisdiction of the court appears affirmatively upon the judgment roll or not, for, if it does not, it will be conclusively presumed. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601; People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773.

Effect of irregularities. Presumptions in favor of judgment. Where the order of service by publication fails to direct the summons to be deposited "forthwith" in the post-office, but the summons was so deposited, the omission of the word "forthwith" from the order is a mere irregularity, which might, perhaps, be good cause to set aside the proceedings on a direct motion for that purpose, but would not affect the judgment. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. Where service is made by publication of summons against an absent defendant, a personal judgment cannot be entered against him. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73; Blumberg v. Birch, 99 Cal. 416; 37 Am. St. Rep. 67; 34 Pac. 102; De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 101; 53 Am. St. Rep. 165; 32 L. R. A. 82; 44 Pac. 345. The jurisdiction of all our courts is special and limited, as defined by the constitution, and they do not proceed according to the course of the common law, but according to the course of the code, which prescribes, in almost every particular, a course very different from that of the common law. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Where there is no proof in the record, of what was done in obtaining service, it will be presumed that legal service was in fact made; but where the record shows what was done to obtain service, it cannot be presumed that something different was in fact done. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844. Unless the record shows to the contrary, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment, that a court of general jurisdiction acquired the necessary jurisdiction over the parties; in this respect, the record cannot be impeached, in a collateral proceeding, by proof aliunde. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Sharp v. Brunnings, 35 Cal. 528; Reily v. Lancaster, 39 Cal. 354, 356; Eitel v. Foote, 39 Cal. 439; Branson v. Caruthers, 49 Cal. 374; McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355. The presumptions of law are in favor of the jurisdiction and of the regularity of proceedings of superior courts, or courts of general jurisdiction, but they are not in favor of the jurisdiction and regularity of the proceedings of inferior courts, or courts of limited jurisdiction, and parties who claim any right or benefit under their judgments must show their jurisdiction affirmatively; the only limitation put upon the rule is founded upon a distinction between courts. Barrett v. Carney, 33 Cal. 530; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69; Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458; Mahoney v. Middleton, 41 Cal. 41; McKinley v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570; Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455; Wood v. Jordan, 125 Cal. 261; 57 Pac. 997. Upon a collateral attack, recitals, in the judgment, of service upon defendant, are conclusive of the question of jurisdiction of his person, where the judgment is rendered by a court of superior jurisdiction. McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355; Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73; Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887. The recitals in a judgment are the court's record of its own acts, and although, upon a direct appeal, the jurisdiction of the court is not to be established by its mere assertion, in the judgment, that it acquired jurisdiction, yet if such recital finds support in other portions in the record, which, under any condition of facts, could exist, it will be presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that such condition of facts existed. Siehler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220. The validity of a tax judgment is to be ascertained by the same tests, has the benefit of the same presumptions, is subject to attack in the same mode and by the same means, as the judgment in an action of any other class. Eitel v. Foote, 39 Cal. 439; Mayo v. Haynie, 50 Cal. 70; Wood v. Jordan, 125 Cal. 261; 57 Pac. 997; People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773. The validity of the judgment is to be conclusively presumed from the existence of the judgment itself, unless it affirmatively appears from the record that the court had not jurisdiction. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. The summons to be served is any legal summons issued in the case; and where the first summons has been returned not served, the second summons is the one to be served by publication, the first one having no longer any force. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 86. A summons which does not comply with the requirements of law will not support a judgment by default. State v. Woodlief, 2 Cal. 241; Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 619; People v. Weil, 53 Cal. 253. Where no summons is issued, and no service made until four years after the filing of the complaint, the court does not obtain jurisdiction. Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 296. There is, however, a very decided distinction between want of jurisdiction and irregularity in procuring jurisdiction; the true test in such cases is, whether the omission complained of is of substance or of form; if of substance, the judgment is a nullity; if of form, only an irregularity. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54. Irregularities and defects in the summons, or in the service or return thereof, are immaterial, when the defendant appears in the action. Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668. Upon the appearance of a defendant, the court acquires jurisdiction. Hodgkins v. Dunham, 10 Cal. App. 690; 103 Pac. 351. A defective statement in a summons does not render judgment by default, after personal service, susceptible to collateral attack. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838; Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 73 Pac. 621; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203. In case of collateral attack upon a judgment for lack of jurisdiction, all presumptions not contradicted by or inconsistent with the record are in favor of the correctness of the judgment; the main difference between a collateral attack and a direct attack is, that, in the former, the record alone can be inspected, and is conclusively presumed to be correct; while on direct attack the true facts may be shown, and thus the judgment itself, on appeal, may be reversed or modified. Lyons v. Roach, 84 Cal. 27; 23 Pac. 1026; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220; Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698. Where the appearance is general, although stated to be special, it must be considered as a general appearance in the case. Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. Where the court acquires jurisdiction by service of its process, it does not lose it by neglect to make proof of such service a matter of record; the subsequent amendment of the record, by supplying such proof, will support the judgment. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 424; 48 Pac. 370. And if judgment is prematurely entered thereafter, it is only an irregularity: it will not be set aside, unless it appears that the result will be different from that already reached. California Casket Co. v. McGinn, 10 Cal. App. 5; 100 Pac. 1077, 1079. In an action for divorce, the court has no jurisdiction to award alimony, where the defendant was not in the state when the action was begun, nor afterwards made any appearance in the action; the court has jurisdiction, in such cases, only to decree dissolution of the marriage. De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 101; 53 Am. St. Rep. 165; 32 L. R. A. 82; 44 Pac. 345.

When jurisdiction of the person is acquired. The affidavit for service by publication should show with accuracy the efforts made to serve the defendant with summons, and the reason why such service could not be made. Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698; Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732. The affidavit must show two facts: 1. The exercise of due diligence to find the defendant within the state; and 2. The failure to find him, after due diligence. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651, 655; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732. The fact of service, not the proof thereof, gives the court jurisdiction, and it has authority to receive an amended affidavit of service after judgment, and before the roll is made up. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509; Bank of Orland v. Dodson, 127 Cal. 208; 78 Am. St. Rep. 42; 59 Pac. 584. The court does not acquire jurisdiction, by constructive service of summons by publication in a foreclosure suit, to enter or docket a personal judgment against the defendant for any deficiency left unpaid by the proceeds of the sale. Blumberg v. Birch, 99 Cal. 416; 37 Am. St. Rep. 67; 34 Pac. 102; Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844. The return need not show anything not required by the statute. Williamson v. Cummings Rock Drill Co., 95 Cal. 652; 30 Pac. 762. Where the affidavit is insufficient, the clerk has no authority to enter default, and the court has no jurisdiction to enter judgment: both default and judgment, so entered, are void. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. The service of the summons and complaint gives the court jurisdiction in personam to try and determine every description of question, whether dilatory or in chief, that can possibly arise in the action, and if the affidavit showing service fails to show that the affiant was competent at the date of the service, it is but an irregularity, to be disposed of by motion to quash, or by grant of further time to answer, or to be the basis of a motion in arrest, or for a new trial, or of proceedings in error, but it does not show a want of jurisdiction. Peck v. Strauss, 33 Cal. 678; Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455; Ex parte Ah Men, 77 Cal. 198; 11 Am. St. Rep. 263; 19 Pac. 380; Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617. Defendants not served are not bound by the judgment, nor are they personally liable for its satisfaction; the statute provides that property in which they are jointly interested with other defendants may be taken in execution to satisfy the judgment. Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 93; Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264; 13 Pac. 661. The purpose in effecting service of summons upon a defendant in a civil action, whether personal or merely constructive, is to acquire that jurisdiction of his person which is ordinarily indispensable to enable the court to proceed to judgment; and if such service, of the one character or the other, is effected pursuant to the provisions of law, in a case where the subject-matter is itself one cognizable by the court before which the defendant is cited to appear, it results, upon general principles, that the court may rightly proceed to determine the case, and that its judgment cannot be questioned for mere lack of jurisdiction to render it. People v. Bernal, 43 Cal. 385. Defendants, by pleading to the merits of the case, waive any objection they may have to defects in the process and its service. Desmond v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 274; Sears v. Starbird, 78 Cal. 225; 20 Pac. 547. The presumption of service by delivery to the defendant personally arises from the affidavit that the affiant "personally served" the defendant. Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455. The code requires that the summons shall be embodied in the judgment roll; but, where absent therefrom, if it appears that it was in fact issued, that it was sufficient in form, and that it was duly served, a sufficient prima facie showing is made to give the court jurisdiction of the person of defendant, and to support the judgment upon direct attack by appeal. Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698. A recital in the judgment that the defendant was duly served is a direct adjudication upon the point, and is as conclusive upon the parties as any other fact decided, if it does not appear affirmatively, from other portions of the record, that the recital is untrue. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Where the defendant was never served, the court never acquired jurisdiction to enter judgment against him. Barney v. Vigoureaux, 75 Cal. 376; 17 Pac. 433. Service upon the attorney in fact of the defendant is not service upon the defendant, and the court does not acquire jurisdiction over the defendant. Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455. Where, in an action in a justice's court, the complaint was filed against a corporation, and the return showed service of summons, addressed to the corporation, upon a member of the corporation, the court did not acquire jurisdiction over the defendant corporation. King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318. The defendant is presumed to be a resident of the county wherein he is served. King v. Blood, 41 Cal. 314.

Voluntary appearance. Courts will not take judicial notice of the signatures of the parties to the cause: when proof of service consists of the written admission of the defendants, such admission, to be available, should be accompanied with some evidence of the genuineness of the signatures. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315. An appearance entered by the attorney of the party, whether authorized or not, is a good and sufficient appearance to bind the party, except where fraud is used, or the attorney is unable to respond in damages. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280. When attorneys inadvertently appear and answer for all the defendants, intending to appear and answer for only part of them, and, upon discovery of the mistake, the answer and appearance are, by order of the court, withdrawn, the court has no jurisdiction, in consequence of inadvertence. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342. Although no summons is issued, the authority of the attorney to appear will be presumed, although there is no evidence of such authority, if nothing to the contrary appears. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431; Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51; Ventura County v. Clay, 119 Cal. 213; 51 Pac. 189; Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4; 74 Pac. 352. The appearance of a licensed attorney and counselor is prima facie evidence that he has been retained in the cause: it would be a dangerous practice to afford litigants the opportunity to avail themselves of, or to escape from the judgments of courts upon, such a plea. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Holmes v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 191; Sampson v. Ohleyer, 22 Cal. 200. A special appearance may be made for the purpose of quashing the summons or proof of service, but a demurrer to the complaint is a submission to jurisdiction. McDonald v. Agnew, 122 Cal. 448; 55 Pac. 125. The appearance of the defendant after judgment, to move to dismiss the case, does not cure the fatal defect of want of jurisdiction. Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339. Where a party is not brought into court, nor does he come in and thus waive the necessity of service, the court has no jurisdiction over him, and a judgment against him is a nullity. Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562. Where an attorney appears, and objects only because the court has not acquired jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, the appearance is special, and no statement to that effect, in notice or motion, is required, or can have any effect if made. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296; Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. The recital of appearance in the record is never conclusive; and where the expression is general, it is confined to those parties who have been served. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 558. Where an attorney appears for a defendant in a court of general jurisdiction, the court thereby acquires jurisdiction of the person of the defendant; if such appearance was without authority, that fact cannot be shown, as a defense at law, in a suit upon the judgment: the defendant is left to his remedy against the attorney for damages if solvent, or to his remedy in equity if insolvent. Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439. Where the answer has the signature of the attorney of record and that of an associate attorney attached to it, the court is not bound to determine whether the signature of the attorney of record was put there by the associate without his authority. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. Where the defendant appears and asks some relief which can only be granted on the hypothesis that the court has jurisdiction of the cause and of his person, a special appearance is converted into a general one: it is a submission to the jurisdiction of the court, as completely as if he had been regularly served with process, whether such an appearance, upon its terms, is limited to a special appearance or not. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296; Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. It is the character of the relief asked, and not the intention of the party that it shall or shall not constitute a general appearance, that is material. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296. The voluntary appearance of the defendant is equivalent to personal service of summons and a copy of the complaint upon him, and an appearance without being summoned confers jurisdiction equally with appearance after being summoned; under our practice, a person who is not named in the complaint nor served with summons, and who is interested in the matter in litigation, may become a party by obtaining leave to file a complaint in intervention. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 67 Cal. 1; 6 Pac. 867. Jurisdiction of the persons of original defendants may be acquired by the service of the summons or by their voluntary appearance: whatever jurisdiction is acquired by service is therefore acquired by voluntary appearance. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Cochran, 141 Cal. 653; 75 Pac. 315. Putting in an answer is an appearance, and such appearance is a waiver of the mere formality of the issuing of the summons: the only purpose of the summons is to bring the defendant into court. Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51; Shay v. Superior Court, 57 Cal. 541. Where the complaint is filed, and the attorneys for the defendant appear for him, and file a notice, "We have been retained by and hereby appear for the above-named defendant in the above-entitled action," the court thereby acquires jurisdiction of the defendant, although no summons is issued. Dyer v. North, 44 Cal. 157. Where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and all the parties are before it, the filing of a cross-complaint, ordered by the court, does not affect its jurisdiction. Hansen v. Wagner, 133 Cal. 69; 65 Pac. 142. The voluntary appearance of a defendant, by his attorney, is equivalent to personal service of the summons and complaint. Western Lumber etc. Co. v. Merchants' Amusement Co., 13 Cal. App. 4; 108 Pac. 891.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. When the court acquires jurisdiction. In order to give a court jurisdiction of the subject-matter, so as to enable it to issue orders or process, it is necessary that the action should be commenced as prescribed by § 405, ante. Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 320.

2. Appearance defined. See § 1014, post.

3. Voluntary appearance of defendant. The only object of a summons is to bring a party into court; and if that object be attained by the appearance and pleading of a party, there can be no injury to him. Smith v. Curtis, 7 Cal. 587. And if no summons was issued, and yet the defendant appears, the court by his appearance acquired jurisdiction. Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 54. A voluntary appearance is sufficient to confer jurisdiction. See Mahlstadt v. Blanc, 34 Cal. 577.

4. Appearance by attorney. An appearance entered by attorney, whether authorized or not, was held a good and sufficient appearance to bind the party, except in those cases where fraud has been used, or it is shown the attorney is unable to respond to damages. An appearance by attorney at common law, and by the express letter of our statute, amounts to an acknowledgment or waiver of service. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280. And the authority of an attorney to appear is presumed. Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 54; see also Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439.

5. Appearance by attorney. Attorney has management of case. A party to an action may appear in his own proper person, or by attorney, but he cannot do both. If he appears by attorney, he must be heard through him, and such attorney has the management and control of the action. Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 149; 87 Am. Dec. 164.

6. Appearance by mistake of attorney. Where an attorney only authorized to appear for a few of several defendants inadvertently files an answer for all, and discovering the mistake obtains an order to withdraw his answer and file a new one limited to the defendants for whom he intended to answer, the court has jurisdiction only of those defendants for whom the attorney finally appears. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 346.

7. Genuineness of signature of attorney of record. If the signature of the attorney of record, and that of an associate attorney is affixed to the pleadings, the court will not strike it out. The court will not try the question, whether the signature of the attorney of record was genuine or put there by his associate without his authority. Wilson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 200.

8. Defendant served with process, but not given statutory time for appearance. In case that the defendant, although served with process, was not given the time allowed by statute to appear and answer, this would be good reason in the court below to have quashed the writ upon motion by amicus curiæ, or for extension of time to appear and answer on motion of defendant; it would have been a good objection also on error, arrest of judgment, or motion for a new trial, but the defendant having been summoned to appear on a day certain, it cannot be said that the court had no jurisdiction of the person, so as to render its judgment a nullity. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 64.

9. Defendant must have been cited to appear, before judgment can be entered against him. In suits in personam in courts other than admiralty courts, no man can be deprived of his property without having been first personally cited to appear and make his defense, unless by virtue of some positive statutory enactment. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 29.

10. Judgment cannot be sustained if defendant was not served and did not appear. See opinion in case of Hawkins v. Abbott, 40 Cal. 640.

VII. General Rules of Pleading. §§ 452–465.
VIII. Variance. Mistakes in Pleadings and Amendments. §§ 469–476.

CHAPTER I.

PLEADINGS IN GENERAL.

§ 420. Definition of pleadings.
§ 421. This code prescribes the form and rules of pleadings.
§ 422. What pleadings are allowed.

§ 420. Definition of pleadings. The pleadings are the formal allegations by the parties of their respective claims and defenses, for the judgment of the court.

Legislation § 420. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 36.

Pleadings or formal allegations. The term "pleading" includes a sworn petition, complaint, or affidavit, without regard to what it may be termed, upon which an order to show cause is made (California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Consolidated Piedmont Cable Co., 117 Cal. 237; 49 Pac. 1; Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513; 12 Pac. 570), and also a petition for letters of administration. Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513; 12 Pac. 570. While the word "practice" includes all "pleadings," yet "pleadings" never includes all "practice." People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 83 Cal. 393; 23 Pac. 303.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. As to parties intervening, see § 387, ante.

§ 421. This code prescribes the form and rules of pleadings. The forms of pleading in civil actions, and the rules by which the sufficiency of the pleadings is to be determined, are those prescribed in this code.

One form of action. Ante, § 307.
Rules of pleading, generally. Post, §§ 452 et seq.

Legislation § 421. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 37 (New York Code, § 140), which read: "All the forms of pleadings in civil actions, and the rules by which the sufficiency of the pleadings shall be determined, shall be those prescribed in this act."

Rules prescribed by the code. The words "this code," in this section, refer to the Code of Civil Procedure. People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 83 Cal. 393; 23 Pac. 303. The character and sufficiency of a pleading will be determined by the court from the facts alleged in it. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278. It is not what a pleading is called, but the facts which it sets up, that determines its character. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278.

Forms of actions abolished. Under the code, we have but one system of rules respecting pleadings, which governs all cases, both actions at law and suits in equity: the former distinctions between common-law pleading and equity pleading no longer exist. Bowen v. Aubrey, 22 Cal. 566. There is only one form of action in this state: it has no name, and no action can be defeated because not properly named. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463. All actions are now, in effect, special actions on the case. Rogers v. Duhart, 97 Cal. 500, 505; 32 Pac. 570. It was the design of the framers of the new system to make the pleadings conform, so far as possible, to the old chancery, rather than to the common-law, forms, for the obvious reason that the chancery forms are better adapted to the new system, which requires the pleader to state, in ordinary and concise language, the facts constituting his cause of action or defense. Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240; 33 Pac. 908. The common-law system of procedure has been abolished, with a view to the removal of all stumbling-blocks, and to substitute simplicity and directness for complexity and circuity of action. Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154. The complaint now merely consists of a statement of the facts constituting the cause of action, in ordinary and concise language (Wright v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 469; 73 Pac. 145); but the defendant may set out the statement in two separate forms, where there is a doubt as to his ability safely to plead the case in one mode only. Wilson v. Smith, 61 Cal. 209. While the distinctions in the form of actions ex delicto and ex contractu are abolished, and one form of action, only, is substituted, yet the principles of law which govern such actions are retained. Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 458; 58 Am. Dec. 415. Relief is administered without reference to the technical and artificial rules of the common law upon this subject, and the only restrictions upon the pleader, in respect to stating the different causes of action in the same complaint, are those imposed by statute. Jones v. Steamship Cortes, 17 Cal. 487; 79 Am. Dec. 142. In an action for the conversion of personal property, it is immaterial in which mode the plaintiff seeks redress; he may waive the tort and sue in assumpsit; whether he claims in assumpsit, as upon a sale, or for the value of the goods, as by conversion, he can establish only a pecuniary obligation, which the defendant may controvert by any facts connected with the transaction out of which the plaintiff's claim arose. Story etc. Commercial Co. v. Story, 100 Cal. 30; 34 Pac. 671. It is error to suppose, that, because the statute abolishes the distinctions in the form of actions, it is immaterial what the substantial allegations of pleadings are, or that all the distinctions which the law makes in causes of action are swept away. Sampson v. Shaeffer, 3 Cal. 196; Miller v. Van Tassel, 24 Cal. 459; Story etc. Commercial Co. v. Story, 100 Cal. 30; 34 Pac. 671; Marsteller v. Leavitt, 130 Cal. 149; 62 Pac. 384. While the mere forms of pleadings are simplified, yet the body of the law is preserved, with those general principles and unerring rules, those sound and logical conclusions, which constitute its justice and justify its glory as a science. Sampson v. Shaeffer, 3 Cal. 196. Where the allegations in the complaint were not supported by the evidence, because the plaintiff had mistaken his form of action, yet, his remedy being in contract and not in tort, such a variance, under the former practice, was ground for reversal. Butler v. Collins, 11 Cal. 391. The statute makes no distinction between the rules of pleading applicable to natural persons and those applicable to artificial persons: it does not give one rule to determine the effect of a pleading when the defendant is an individual, and another and different rule when the defendant is a corporation. San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Under the code, we have but one system of rules respecting pleadings, which govern all cases, both at law and in equity. Bowen v. Aubrey, 22 Cal. 569; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 243; see also Easterly v. Bassignano, 20 Cal. 489; Goodwin v. Hammond, 13 Cal. 169; 73 Am. Dec. 574; Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 302; Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 27; 70 Am. Dec. 692.

§ 422. What pleadings are allowed. The only pleadings allowed on the part of the plaintiff are:

1. The complaint;
2. The demurrer to the answer;
3. The demurrer to the cross-complaint;
4. The answer to the cross-complaint.

And on the part of the defendant:

1. The demurrer to the complaint;
2. The answer;
3. The cross-complaint;
4. The demurrer to the answer to the cross-complaint.

Legislation § 422. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 38, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 701, which read: "The pleadings on the part of the plaintiff shall be the complaint or demurrer to the defendant's answer; the pleadings on the part of the defendant to the original complaint or cross-complaint of a co-defendant shall be the demurrer or answer. When a defendant is entitled to relief as against the plaintiff alone, or against the plaintiff and a co-defendant, he may make a separate statement in his answer of the necessary facts, with a prayer for the relief sought, instead of bringing a distinct cross-action. All pleadings subsequent to the original complaint shall be filed with the clerk, and a copy thereof served on the adverse party or his attorney, if the adverse party or his attorney live within the county where the action is pending; provided, that when the answer contains a cross-complaint, the parties plaintiff or defendant, or his or their attorney thereto, shall be served with a copy thereof, and shall have the same time thereafter to plead thereto that is allowed for pleading to the original complaint after service of the summons." When enacted in 1872, § 422 read as at present, except that it did not contain subds. 3, 4, in either place.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 132; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1907, p. 705.

The only pleadings allowed. The only pleadings allowed are prescribed in this section. Estate of Wooten, 56 Cal. 322; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. A replication has no place under our system of pleading (Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 429; 51 Pac. 630); and dilatory pleas are made causes of demurrer (Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82); and a cross-complaint is a pleading on the part of the defendant. Wood v. Johnston, 8 Cal. App. 258; 96 Pac. 508.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In their report to the legislature, the commissioners say: "We have been urged to restore the 'reply,' and the arguments in favor of its restoration are convincing. Were we making the law, instead of drafting a bill to be passed upon by the law-making power, we would feel no hesitation whatever as to our course. The 'reply' once formed a part of our system of pleading, and after a short trial it was abandoned. Were we to restore it, we would be met with this fact as an objection. After careful consideration we have determined not to move in the premises. The 'cross-complaint' has been omitted, for we think it may be safely said that no member of the profession has ever found any use for it. Nothing can be brought into a case by 'cross-complaint' that could not, under our system, be brought in by answer."

CHAPTER II.

COMPLAINT.

§ 425. Complaint, first pleading.
§ 426. Complaint, what to contain.
§ 426a. Statement of facts in divorce complaint.
§ 427. What causes of action may be joined.

§ 425. Complaint, first pleading. The first pleading on the part of the plaintiff is the complaint.

Legislation § 425. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 426. Complaint, what to contain. The complaint must contain:

1. The title of the action, the name of the court and county in which the action is brought, and the names of the parties to the action;

2. A statement of the facts constituting the cause of action, in ordinary and concise language;

3. A demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims. If the recovery of money or damages be demanded, the amount thereof must be stated.

Title. Papers defectively entitled. Post, § 1046.
Venue. Ante, §§ 392–400.
Parties. Ante, §§ 367–390.
Parties, misjoinder or non-joinder. Post, § 430.
Association may be sued under common name. Ante, § 388.
Intervention. Ante, § 387.
Fictitious names for defendants. Post, § 474.
Abbreviations and numerals. Ante, § 186.
Construction of pleadings to be liberal. Post, § 452.
Errors and defects to be disregarded. Post, § 475.
Material allegations, not controverted, taken as true. Post, § 462.
Service of complaint. Ante, § 410.
Several causes of action, uniting. Post, § 427.
Pleading, in particular cases. See specific title.
Amendment.
1. Of pleadings. Post, §§ 472, 473.
2. Of complaint. Post, § 432.
Effect of setting out written instrument, if genuineness not denied on oath. Post, §§ 447–449.
Variance. Post, §§ 469 et seq.
Gold coin, allegations to obtain judgment in. Post, § 667.
Supplemental complaint. Post, § 464.
Verification of pleadings. Post, § 446.

Legislation § 426. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 39 (New York Code, § 142). When enacted in 1872, (1) in the introductory paragraph, "must" was changed from "shall"; (2) in subd. 1, (a) "specifying" was omitted before "the name," (b) the words "the name of" were omitted before "county," (c) and the words "plaintiff and defendant" were omitted at the end of the subdivision; (3) in subd. 3, "must" was changed from "shall."

The title of the action. The caption is no part of the complaint, unless referred to by appropriate allegations in the body thereof; but where the caption of the complaint conflicts with the facts stated in the body thereof, a demurrer for uncertainty and ambiguity should be sustained. Hawley Bros. Hardware Co. v. Brownstone, 123 Cal. 643; 56 Pac. 468. A mistake in the designation of the court, however, is not such irregularity as will affect substantial rights, and may be disregarded. Ex parte Fil Ki, 79 Cal. 584; 21 Pac. 974.

Statement of cause of action. The "cause of action" is a present, subsisting cause of action, entitling the plaintiff to judgment, at the time the action is commenced. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. A complaint, to be good, must show a cause of action in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, existing at the time the action is commenced. Affierbach v. McGovern, 79 Cal. 268; 21 Pac. 837. Where only the facts constituting the cause of action are to be alleged, under the code, it is not requisite to aver either the consideration or the promise, when liability is implied from the facts alleged. McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. The complaint should state expressly and in direct terms the facts constituting the cause of action; inference, argument, and hypothesis are not permitted. Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. Argumentative pleading is not permissible under the code, any more than it was at common law. Burkett v. Griffith, 90 Cal. 532; 25 Am. St. Rep. 151; 13 L. R. A. 707; 27 Pac. 527. Where the facts stated in the complaint are substantially those required to support a particular common-law action, the principles of pleading and practice which apply to such common-law action are applicable to the facts pleaded. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463. The complaint should be founded upon the theory under which the plaintiff is entitled to recover, and should state all the facts essential to support that theory; failing in these respects, it is radically defective, and does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Buena Vista Fruit etc. Co. v. Tuohy, 107 Cal. 243; 40 Pac. 386. The cause of action is made up of facts upon which the plaintiff's right to sue is based, and upon which the defendant's duty has arisen, coupled with facts which constitute the latter's wrong. Hutchinson v. Ainsworth, 73 Cal. 452; 2 Am. St. Rep. 823; 15 Pac. 82. Evidence of facts, or stipulations as to the facts of the case, cannot make a case broader than it appears from the allegations of the pleadings, nor do they entitle a party to any relief beyond that to which he is entitled by the averments. Hicks v. Murray, 43 Cal. 515. The facts set up in the pleading determine its character and sufficiency. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278.

Ordinary and concise language. The ultimate, and not the probative, facts are to be alleged in a pleading (McCaughey v. Schuette, 117 Cal. 223; 59 Am. St. Rep. 176; 46 Pac. 666; 48 Pac. 1088); and words should be given their ordinary meaning, unless modified by the context. Christensen v. Cram, 156 Cal. 633; 105 Pac. 950. The defendant is entitled to a distinct statement of the facts asserted by the plaintiff to exist: alternative allegations are not permitted. Jamison v. King, 50 Cal. 132. A complaint, to be sufficient, must contain a statement of facts which, without the aid of conjectured facts not stated, shows a complete cause of action. Going v. Dinwiddie, 86 Cal. 633; 25 Pac. 129. In pleading, the essential facts, upon which the legal points in the controversy depend, should be stated with clearness and precision, so that nothing is left for the court to surmise. Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 392. This section contemplates the English language; a foreign language is not "ordinary language," within the meaning of that provision. Stevens v. Kobayshi, 20 Cal. App. 153; 128 Pac. 419. It is sufficient to state in ordinary and concise language the facts constituting the cause of action: if the defendant desires further particulars, he may call for them, and they must be given to him within a reasonable time. Aydelotte v. Bloom, 13 Cal. App. 56; 108 Pac. 877.

Sufficiency of facts. Every fact which a plaintiff will be called upon to prove at the trial must be averred in his complaint. Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089. Where a complaint sets forth a number of causes of action, in separate counts, a general demurrer interposed to the complaint, as a whole, will not be sustained, if any single count states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. Though the averments of a complaint do not involve the statement of an express promise to pay a stipulated sum for merchandise furnished, yet they may still be sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment for whatever the evidence may disclose that the merchandise is reasonably worth. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. In an action by a vendor to recover damages for the breach of a contract for the sale and purchase of real estate, where the vendor agreed to put the vendee in possession, allegations, in the complaint, of contemporaneous oral understandings, do not excuse the necessity of an allegation of actual delivery of possession by the vendor. Pierce v. Edwards, 150 Cal. 650; 89 Pac. 600. A complaint in an action upon a note, set forth therein, which shows that it was made payable to the order of a bank, and not to the plaintiff, and which does not allege any indorsement or transfer of the note to the plaintiff, does not state a cause of action. Ball v. Lowe, 135 Cal. 678; 68 Pac. 106. Unless there is a contract in writing, signed by the party to be charged, authorizing a real-estate broker to sell or exchange real property, the broker cannot recover his commissions. Zeimer v. Antisell, 75 Cal. 509; 17 Pac. 642; McPhail v. Buell, 87 Cal. 115; 25 Pac. 266; Dolan v. O'Toole, 129 Cal. 488; 62 Pac. 92; Jamison v. Hyde, 141 Cal. 109; 74 Pac. 695; Dreyfus v. Richardson, 20 Cal. App. 800; 130 Pac. 161; Naylor v. Ashton, 20 Cal. App. 544; 130 Pac. 181; Holland v. Flash, 20 Cal. App. 686; 130 Pac. 32. A general authority given to brokers, to negotiate a loan upon the defendant's property, at a specified rate of interest, which is not successfully negotiated, cannot be construed as a general authority to negotiate a sale or exchange of the property. Holland v. Flash, 20 Cal. App. 686; 130 Pac. 32. A complaint against a judicial officer for false imprisonment must aver, in terms, that the acts constituting the imprisonment were without or in excess of his jurisdiction, or facts from which a want of jurisdiction appears. Going v. Dinwiddie, 86 Cal. 633; 25 Pac. 129. In an action of forcible entry and unlawful detainer, it is not necessary for the plaintiff specially to plead punitive damages. San Francisco etc. Society v. Leonard, 17 Cal. App. 254; 119 Pac. 405. One who claims that his conduct has been influenced, to his prejudice, by alleged false statements of another, must allege that he believed them to be true, and relied on them in his subsequent actions relating to the subject thereof. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. One who seeks equity must do equity: a complaint in equity which does not offer to do equity, is demurrable. Buena Vista Fruit etc. Co. v. Tuohy, 107 Cal. 243; 40 Pac. 386. An allegation in the complaint, "that the said defendant executed to this plaintiff a promissory note," is equivalent to an allegation "that the defendant made his note payable to the plaintiff"; and an averment that the defendant executed to the plaintiff his note in writing includes and imports a delivery of the same to the plaintiff. Hook v. White, 36 Cal. 299. The common counts for money had and received may be used to recover money obtained by false and fraudulent representations. Minor v. Baldridge, 123 Cal. 187; 55 Pac. 783; Winkler v. Jerrue, 20 Cal. App. 555; 129 Pac. 804. If money, according to the allegations of a complaint to recover money paid for a subscription to stock, is paid on account of a subscription for the purchase of stock in one corporation, but is diverted to payment on account of stock in another corporation, and it is shown that certain named defendants acted as agents of both corporations in the matter, the complaint states a good cause of action against both the corporation defendant and the agents. Gray v. Ellis, 164 Cal. 481; 129 Pac. 791. The annexing of a contract to complaint, and making it a part thereof, cannot supply the want of the essential averments in the pleading. Hayt v. Bentel, 164 Cal. 680; 130 Pac. 432. A complaint in an action to recover damages for an assault and battery is sufficient, where the assault, the means employed, and the character thereof are fully set forth. Jones v. Lewis, 19 Cal. App. 575; 126 Pac. 853. Where the complaint, in an action for goods sold and delivered, alleges a sale and delivery to defendants other than the corporation defendant, and that such corporation assumed the liability of such other defendants, the sale and delivery alleged is material to the alleged liability of the corporation, and the plaintiff is bound by the material allegations of his complaint. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. Where the terms of a special contract have been varied or modified by the agreement of the parties, an action for the amount earned should be in the form of indebitatus assumpsit, and not upon the contract. Naylor v. Adams, 15 Cal. App. 548; 115 Pac. 335. In a complaint for the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien, an allegation of the agreed price, both in the claim of lien and in the complaint, is a sufficient prima facie allegation of value, and is sufficient, in the absence of a demurrer for uncertainty. Coghlan v. Quartararo, 15 Cal. App. 662; 115 Pac. 664. The rule which permits the pleader to declare upon a contract in hæc verba is, and must be, limited to cases where the instrument set out contains the formal contract, showing in express terms the promises and undertaking on both sides. Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250. A contract in writing may be declared on according to its legal effect, or in hæc verba. Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250. A complaint for relief against a judgment or decree, on the ground of alleged fraud in its procurement, which does not state nor show any fact constituting a defense to the merits of the original action, and which does not show that the moving party is able to present to the court the evidence constituting that defense, does not state a cause of action. Bell v. Thompson, 147 Cal. 689; 82 Pac. 327. The complaint, in an action to recover upon an assigned claim, should state that the plaintiff is the owner of the claim. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. The allegation that a certain condition exists because of a certain fact, necessarily carries with it the implication that that fact also exists. Bank of Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 14 Cal. App. 208; 111 Pac. 507. The use of adverbs, such as "willfully," "unlawfully," "wrongfully," "illegally," "groundless," etc., cannot supply omitted facts. Going v. Dinwiddie, 86 Cal. 633; 25 Pac. 129. The use of the terms "wrongfully," "unlawfully," "illegally," and "without authority of law," are mere conclusions of law. Hedges v. Dam, 72 Cal. 520; 14 Pac. 133. The word "due," in a finding, is not the equivalent of "unpaid." Ryan v. Jacques, 103 Cal. 280, 37 Pac. 186. The time of alleged ouster is not material in a complaint in ejectment. Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414; Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183. Where the pleading shows that a cause of action would not arise until the expiration of a certain period, it must appear that such time had elapsed before suit was commenced. Doyle v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 44 Cal. 264. The allegation of unnecessary matter may be treated as surplusage. Rogers v. Duhart, 97 Cal. 500; 32 Pac. 570. An allegation of actual fraud is not sustained by proof of mistake; nor can it be said that mistake, as a legal proposition, amounts to constructive fraud. Mercier v. Lewis, 39 Cal. 532. An allegation as to the filing of a bond is sufficient, without an averment of its execution and delivery. Sacramento County v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66. Where the complaint alleged that the plaintiff was entitled, by virtue of a prior appropriation, to all the water flowing in a cañon at the head of a ditch, and that the defendant diverted the water to the plaintiff's damage, it is not necessary to state whether the water was supplied at the head of the ditch by one or more smaller streams. Priest v. Union Canal Co., 6 Cal. 170. In an action brought on a stockholder's liability, an averment that the corporation became indebted to a certain amount is a sufficient allegation of the creation of the indebtedness, as against a general demurrer: and any ambiguity or uncertainty is waived by failure to demur on these grounds. Duke v. Huntington, 130 Cal. 272; 62 Pac. 510; Whitehurst v. Stuart, 129 Cal. 194; 61 Pac. 963. Allegations must be accepted as true upon demurrer, so far, only, as they relate to matters of fact, as distinguished from matters of law. Ohm v. San Francisco, 92 Cal. 437; 28 Pac. 580. The complaint of a married woman, in an action to recover damages for an alleged wrongful seizure of her personal property, which fails to state that the property was her separate property, is defective. Thomas v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 426. A complaint, although insufficient to correct a mistake in a deed, may yet be sufficient as a complaint in an action to quiet title. Smith v. Matthews, 81 Cal. 120; 22 Pac. 409. An allegation that the plaintiff is seised in fee, is of an ultimate fact, and is a sufficient statement of the right of the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment or to quiet title. Heeser v. Miller, 77 Cal. 192; 19 Pac. 375; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220; Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216; Ferrer v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416; Rough v. Simmons, 65 Cal. 227; 3 Pac. 804; 15 Morrison's Min. Rep. 298. Ultimate facts, only, should be pleaded: neither evidence nor conclusions of law should be set forth. Hubbell v. Hubbell, 7 Cal. App. 661; 95 Pac. 664. Pleadings are to be most strictly construed against the party making them. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507. The sufficiency of the complaint to support the judgment must be reviewed upon an appeal from the judgment. Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy, 5 Cal. App. 301; 90 Pac. 203.

Evidence and law not to be pleaded. The facts must be distinguished from evidence of the facts; the latter pertains to the trial, and has no place in the pleadings. Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492. There is no necessity to put the law into the pleading (People v. Common Council, 85 Cal. 369; 24 Pac. 727), nor is it necessary to allege matter of law in the complaint (Board of Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66); nor need matters implied by law be pleaded (Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675; Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137); nor need probative facts be averred in the complaint (Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439), and they will be stricken out as surplusage, on motion (Miles v. McDermott, 31 Cal. 270; Gates v. Salmon, 46 Cal. 361); nor should presumptions of law be stated. Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089.

Presumptions need not be averred. Presumptions of law need not be averred. Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089; Cuthill v. Peabody, 19 Cal. App. 304; 125 Pac. 926. Where a contract is required to be in writing, the presumption that it was in writing necessarily follows the allegation of its making. Cuthill v. Peabody, 19 Cal. App. 304; 125 Pac. 926. Fraud is not presumed; and whenever it constitutes an element of a cause of action of an affirmative nature, or is invoked as conferring a right, it must be alleged. Estate of Yoell, 164 Cal. 540; 129 Pac. 999. The plaintiff, in an action on a promissory note, is presumed to be the owner and holder of the note at the commencement of the action: no allegation as to ownership is required. Pryce v. Jordan, 69 Cal. 569; 11 Pac. 185; Kirk v. Roberts, 3 Cal. Unrep. 671; 31 Pac. 620; Hook v. White, 36 Cal. 299. Whatever is an essential element to a cause of action must be presented by a distinct averment; it cannot be left to an inference to be drawn from the construction of an instrument, whether set forth by copy in the body of the complaint, or attached thereto as an exhibit. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573.

Legal conclusions. In legal proceedings, it is the means by which a result is to be reached which must determine whether a given conclusion is one of fact or law; if from the facts in evidence the result can be reached by that process of natural reasoning adopted in the investigation of truth, it becomes an ultimate fact, to be found as such; if, on the other hand, resort must be had to artificial processes of law in order to reach a final determination, the result is a conclusion of law. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273; 12 Pac. 161. An averment or a statement may be of a fact or of a conclusion of law, according to the context. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273; 12 Pac. 161; Turner v. White, 73 Cal. 299; 14 Pac. 794; Lataillade v. Oreña, 91 Cal. 565; 25 Am. St. Rep. 219; 27 Pac. 924. A conclusion of law tenders no issue: a complaint depending upon such an allegation is insufficient and demurrable. Callahan v. Broderick, 124 Cal. 80; 56 Pac. 782; Branham v. Mayor and Common Council, 24 Cal. 585; Aurrecoechea v. Sinclair, 60 Cal. 532; Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482; 4 Pac. 458; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286; 16 Am. St. Rep. 116; 6 L. R. A. 756; 22 Pac. 910, 1046; Glide v. Dwyer, 83 Cal. 477; 23 Pac. 706; Ohm v. San Francisco, 92 Cal. 437; 28 Pac. 580. A conclusion of law is not required to be denied in the answer. People v. Hastings, 29 Cal. 449. A statement of conclusions of law is not the statement of an issuable fact, and should be avoided. Going v. Dinwiddie, 86 Cal. 633; 25 Pac. 129; Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. Los Angeles, 164 Cal. 156; 128 Pac. 19. A statement that the parties entered into a parol contract of partnership is not the statement of a mere legal conclusion; it presents an issuable fact. Doudell v. Shoo, 20 Cal.

App. 424; 129 Pac. 478. An averment that one is the "owner and holder" of an instrument, is simply the averment of a conclusion of law. Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569; Poorman v. Mills & Co., 35 Cal. 118; 95 Am. Dec. 90; Hook v. White, 36 Cal. 299; Kennedy etc. Lumber Co. v. S. S. Construction Co., 123 Cal. 584; 56 Pac. 457; Curtin v. Kowalsky, 145 Cal. 431; 78 Pac. 962; People's Home Sav. Bank v. Stadtmuller, 150 Cal. 106; 88 Pac. 280. An allegation of joint liability is but a legal conclusion (Ghiradelli v. Bourland, 32 Cal. 585); as is also an allegation, made on information and belief, that no notice was given: it is not an averment of a fact. Stokes v. Geddes, 46 Cal. 17. Where the pleader, in an action to quiet title, sets forth specifically the links in his chain of title, a general allegation of ownership will be treated as a mere conclusion of law from the facts stated. Gruwell v. Seybolt, 82 Cal. 7; 22 Pac. 938; Kidwell v. Ketler, 146 Cal. 12; 79 Pac. 514; and see Dye v. Dye, 11 Cal. 163; Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273; 12 Pac. 161; Turner v. White, 73 Cal. 299; 14 Pac. 794; Heeser v. Miller, 77 Cal. 192; 19 Pac. 375; Savings and Loan Society v. Burnett, 106 Cal. 514; 39 Pac. 922. The words, "there is now due," etc., present but a conclusion of law, and not an averment of a fact; the breach of the contract to pay is of the essence of the cause of action, and must be alleged; a failure to allege which is a defect, going to the statement of the cause of action, which is not waived by a failure to demur. Ryan v. Holliday, 110 Cal. 335; 42 Pac. 891; Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71; Roberts v. Treadwell, 50 Cal. 520; Scroufe v. Clay, 71 Cal. 123; 11 Pac. 882; Barney v. Vigoreaux, 92 Cal. 631; 28 Pac. 678. Where the complaint shows that the defendant threatened to sell the property of the plaintiff for the non-payment of an illegal tax, but fails to show that the defendant was at that time armed with any authority, real or apparent, to carry out his threat, there is no showing of any legal duress of person or property, sufficient to establish compulsion or coercion. Bank of Santa Rosa v. Chalfant, 52 Cal. 170. In the absence of all explanation, the court is justified in directing the jury to infer a conversion or an ouster from the fact of demand and refusal of a co-tenant to be let into possession. Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484; 87 Am. Dec. 135. The right to possession follows as a conclusion of law from seisin, and need not be alleged. Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220; Boles v. Weifenback, 15 Cal. 144; Salmon v. Symonds, 24 Cal. 260; Keller v. De Ocana, 48 Cal. 638; Hihn v. Mangenberg, 89 Cal. 268; 26 Pac. 968; F. A. Hihn Co. v. Fleckner, 106 Cal. 95; 39 Pac. 214; McCaughey v. Schuette, 117 Cal. 223; 59 Am. St. Rep. 176; 46 Pac. 666; 48 Pac. 1088; Fredericks v. Tracy, 98 Cal. 658; 33 Pac. 750.

Defective statement of facts. Statements of facts must be concisely made, and, when once made, should not be repeated. Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492. Only the ultimate facts need be pleaded. Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488. Pleadings do not subserve the purpose intended, where the court is compelled to surmise essential facts. Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 392. If facts are stated, although imperfectly, showing the liability of the defendant, the complaint must be sustained. Ryan v. Jacques, 103 Cal. 280; 37 Pac. 186; Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57; 8 Pac. 673; Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888; Brown v. Weldon, 71 Cal. 393; 12 Pac. 280; Hughes v. Alsip, 112 Cal. 587; 44 Pac. 1027. Irrelevant and surplus matter, although objectionable, will not vitiate the complaint, if otherwise sufficient. Smith v. Matthews, 81 Cal. 120; 22 Pac. 409. Irregularities or defects in the statement of a cause of action may be waived by failing to answer, or by answering to the merits; but a defective cause of action is not cured by failure to answer or by verdict. Harmon v. Ashmead, 60 Cal. 439; Abbe v. Marr, 14 Cal. 210; Choynski v. Cohen, 39 Cal. 501; 2 Am. Rep. 476. Where one count in the complaint is defective, the judgment must be reversed, notwithstanding the other counts may be good, where the verdict is general, and it is not certain upon which count it was founded. Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 486. The judgment cannot be sustained, unless the proof establishes the cause of action alleged in the complaint, even though a different cause of action is fully proven. Nichols v. Randall, 136 Cal. 426; 69 Pac. 26; Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332; Stout v. Coffin, 28 Cal. 65; Mondran v. Goux, 51 Cal. 151; Devoe v. Devoe, 51 Cal. 543; Murdock v. Clarke, 59 Cal. 683; Bryan v. Tormey, 84 Cal. 126; 24 Pac. 319. One good count in the complaint, sustained by the findings, will support the judgment, which will not be reversed because of the insufficient statement of other causes of action. Terrill v. Terrill, 109 Cal. 413; 42 Pac. 137; Hunt v. San Francisco, 11 Cal. 250; Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 486; Bernstein v. Downs, 112 Cal. 197; 44 Pac. 557. A substantial averment of facts, although defective in form, will support the verdict or a default judgment. People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127. Where each count is sufficient as against a general demurrer, the complaint is sufficient to support the verdict and judgment. Bernstein v. Downs, 112 Cal. 197; 44 Pac. 557.

Defective allegations, how cured. Defective allegations are cured by verdict; all intendments will be made in support of the judgment thereon. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127; San Francisco v. Pennie, 93 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 66; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. Defects in manner, rather than in matter, of averment do not render the complaint so radically insufficient as not to sustain the judgment. Russell v. Mixer, 42 Cal. 475. Averments lacking in the complaint cannot be supplied by a general reference to recitals of facts in an exhibit annexed to and made a part of the complaint. Mayor and Common Council v. Signoret, 50 Cal. 298. The entire absence of any allegation whatever is not within the rule that the defective allegation of a fact may be cured by default or verdict. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 505; 22 Pac. 939. A defective complaint is cured by the judgment, as to all such averments as may, by fair and reasonable intendment, be found to have been pleaded. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 44. Tender of issue of seisin or ownership at the date of bringing suit in ejectment should be made; but the defendant may tender the issue in his answer, and where this is done, the defect in the complaint is cured. Vance v. Anderson, 113 Cal. 532; 45 Pac. 816; Schenck v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 71 Cal. 28; 11 Pac. 807; Cohen v. Knox, 90 Cal. 266; 13 L. R. A. 711; 27 Pac. 215; Diefendorff v. Hopkins, 95 Cal. 343; 28 Pac. 265; 30 Pac. 549; San Diego County v. Seifert, 97 Cal. 594; 32 Pac. 644.

Breach of duty. An action upon a contract must show a breach thereof. Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 505; 22 Pac. 939; Morgan v. Menzies, 60 Cal. 341; Du Brutz v. Jessup, 70 Cal. 75; 11 Pac. 498. If there is not an entire failure to state the fact of a breach of the contract sued upon, or to allege the non-payment of money sought to be recovered, and the averment is simply uncertain and defective, the defect can be reached only by special demurrer, particularly designating the specific point at which it is aimed. Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197; 23 Pac. 1094. Where each count of the complaint alleges that the defendant "has not paid any part of the amount due, as aforesaid," this is not a legal conclusion, but a sufficient averment of non-payment. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. A complaint to recover a deposit made upon a contract to sell land is sufficient, where the facts stated therein show that the plaintiff has done all that was required of him. Snowden v. Derrick, 14 Cal. App. 309; 111 Pac. 757. A complaint to recover damages for the breach of a contract to construct a building, which alleges a failure to do the work, an abandonment thereof in an uncompleted condition, a refusal by the defendant to perform the contract, and the reasonable cost of completing the building, states a sufficient cause of action as against a general demurrer. Bacigalupi v. Phœnix Bldg. etc. Co., 14 Cal. App. 632; 112 Pac. 892. In an action to enjoin a continuous trespass on a right of way, it is not necessary to allege, in the complaint, that the plaintiff was the owner of the right of way at the time the right to the use thereof was first violated. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 154 Cal. 785; 99 Pac. 179. The complaint in an action on a contract to sell a crop, estimated to contain twenty carloads, more or less, alleging the delivery to the defendant of nine car-loads, and the acceptance thereof and part payment therefor by him, and seeking to recover the balance due, states a cause of action. Hills v. Edmund Peycke Co., 14 Cal. App. 32; 110 Pac. 1088. Where, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, the building contract provides for the submission of disputes to arbitration, the complaint must show a compliance with such provision; but where it avers the completion of the contract, the acceptance of the building, and states no dispute, there is a waiver, by such acceptance, of the defendant's right to have any dispute settled by arbitration. Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. An averment in a complaint, that a specified sum "is now due and owing," etc., though the statement of a legal conclusion, in which the material fact of non-payment is implied, is sufficient to sustain a judgment by default. Penrose v. Winter, 135 Cal. 289; 67 Pac. 772 (overruling Ryan v. Holliday, 110 Cal. 335; 42 Pac. 891); and see Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. A complaint for a judgment against the estate of a deceased executrix cannot be held good as a complaint in equity to follow a trust fund, and to obtain an order on the administrator of her estate to turn over to the plaintiff the share of the trust fund claimed by the plaintiff, when no breach of trust is alleged in the complaint, made by either the executrix or her administrator. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. In an action to recover money alleged to be due on a contract, an averment that the defendant has "failed, neglected, and refused to pay," said money, or any part thereof, is a sufficient allegation of non-payment, when tested by general demurrer. O'Hanlon v. Denvir, 81 Cal. 60; 15 Am. St. Rep. 19; 22 Pac. 407; Rankin v. Sisters of Mercy, 82 Cal. 88; 22 Pac. 1134; Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197; 23 Pac. 1094; Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072; Irwin v. Insurance Company, 16 Cal. App. 143; 116 Pac. 294. Such an averment was held not sufficient, in Scroufe v. Clay, 71 Cal. 123; 11 Pac. 882. A complaint which alleges, in effect, that the defendant cut a canal through the natural bank of a river, and, after so doing, failed to take proper precautions to prevent the waters of the river from flooding the plaintiff's land, and also alleges that the waters of the river did in fact flood his land to his injury, sufficiently states a cause of action as against a general demurrer. Perkins v. Blauth, 163 Cal. 782; 127 Pac. 50. A complaint on a contract to sell and improve a lot states no cause of action, where it does not allege any contract to convey. Hoffman v. Osborn, 15 Cal. App. 125; 113 Pac. 705. Where a contract is payable in installments, and suit is brought for a breach of such contract, the complaint should not only allege that the defendant has made default in the payment of one or more of the installments, but also that such default has continued for the prescribed period. Southern California Music Co. v. Skinner, 17 Cal. App. 205; 119 Pac. 106.

Allegations must be direct. Material allegations must be distinctly stated in pleadings, and are not to be inferred from doubtful or obscure language. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507. It is not sufficient to state a material fact, in a complaint, by way of recital; it should be directly averred. Denver v. Burton, 28 Cal. 549. A complaint should allege a material fact by way of direct averment, and not by inference. Stringer v. Davis, 30 Cal. 318.

Consideration. A written contract carries with it the presumption of a consideration, as a matter of law; and the burden is cast upon the defendant to show the contrary, to avoid the contract. Cuthill v. Peabody, 19 Cal. App. 304; 125 Pac. 926. It is not necessary to a good complaint that the consideration of a contract should be alleged. Cuthill v. Peabody, 19 Cal. App. 304; 125 Pac. 926. It is not necessary to aver a consideration in a complaint, where it is implied by law (Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089); nor is it necessary to aver either a consideration or a promise, where either is implied as a legal conclusion from the facts alleged. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. No special averment of a consideration is necessary in support of an instrument in writing importing a consideration; the necessity of pleading a consideration is obviated, not by the mode of pleading it, but by the fact that it is in writing. Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089; and see McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461; Wills v. Kempt, 17 Cal. 98; Goddard v. Fulton, 21 Cal. 430. A complaint for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land must allege the adequacy of the consideration received by the defendant. Sunrise Land Co. v. Root, 160 Cal. 95; 116 Pac. 72.

Anticipating defenses. It is not necessary, in a complaint, to anticipate or negative any defense or counterclaim. Hills v. Edmund Peycke Co., 14 Cal. App. 32; 110 Pac. 1088; Kirk v. Roberts, 3 Cal. Unrep. 671; 31 Pac. 620. If relief and discharge is set out in bar of the action, still, under our system of pleading, which permits no replication, the defense of fraud is open to the plaintiff, without special averment; and it is equally open to him to rebut the effect of a release, by the same evidence, when, though not pleaded by the defendant, it is offered and admitted in evidence. Montgomery v. Rauer, 125 Cal. 227; 57 Pac. 894. The anticipation of a defense may render the complaint objectionable for uncertainty. Munson v. Bowen, 80 Cal. 572; 22 Pac. 253. If there was a mistake in inserting the name of the payee of a note sued upon, the facts constituting such mistake must be set forth in the complaint. Ball v. Lowe, 135 Cal. 678; 68 Pac. 106. Where the complaint states a cause of action, the defendant, if he admits such facts, must, to set up a defense, allege new matter sufficient to defeat the legal operation of the facts stated in the complaint. McDonald v. Davidson, 30 Cal. 173.

Allegations on information and belief. Where the allegations of the complaint relate to facts, the truth of which is particularly within the knowledge of the defendant, there can be no valid objection to their being based on information and belief; and § 446 seems to contemplate that the averments of a pleading may be so based; the fact that the records of the defendant, a corporation, were open to the inspection of the plaintiff does not affect the rule, for the reason that such records may be contradicted, if they do not speak the truth. McDermont v. Anaheim Union Water Co., 124 Cal. 112; 56 Pac. 779. A complaint alleging that certain services were to be performed for the plaintiff by the defendant, implies an agreement to pay a quantum meruit, and is good, as against a general demurrer, so far as the question of consideration is concerned. Semi-Tropic Spiritualists' Ass'n v. Johnson, 163 Cal. 639; 126 Pac. 488. If a verified complaint alleges facts "on information and belief," such averments do not present anything more than hearsay testimony, incompetent for the proof of a fact. Kullman v. Superior Court, 15 Cal. App. 276; 114 Pac. 589.

Pleading a written instrument. A contract may be declared on according to its legal effect, or in hæc verba; and where the latter is the case, it must be taken and considered as a part of the complaint (Murdock v. Brooks, 38 Cal. 596; Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327; White v. Soto, 82 Cal. 654; 23 Pac. 210); and this course is more consistent with the mode of pleading adopted in this state Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250. A copy of a note annexed to the complaint, and referred to therein, forms a part of the complaint. Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227; Whitby v. Rowell, 82 Cal. 635; 23 Pac. 40, 382; Savings Bank v. Burns, 104 Cal. 473; 38 Pac. 102. Matters of substance must be alleged in direct terms, and not by way of recital or reference, much less by exhibits, merely attached to the pleading; whatever is an essential element to the cause of action must be presented by a distinct averment, and cannot be left to an inference to be drawn from the construction of a document attached to the complaint. Burkett v. Griffith, 90 Cal. 532; 25 Am. St. Rep. 151; 13 L. R. A. 767; 27 Pac. 527; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. To plead an instrument by setting it forth in full is a recognized mode of pleading in this state; the instrument must be one on which an action or defense is founded, and must be free from defect or ambiguity; and if not, the pleader must put some construction upon it by averment; all that is accomplished by setting forth the instrument in full is to allege its existence and character; it does not involve an assertion of the truth of preliminary or collateral matters recited therein. Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327. Where a subsequent count refers to a preceding count, which is definite and certain, and prays that it be deemed and taken as a part of the cause of action as though set out at length, such reference is sufficient, and it is unnecessary to repeat at length, in each of the succeeding counts, the facts therein. Treweek v. Howard, 105 Cal. 434; 39 Pac. 20. Records and papers cannot be made a part of the pleading by merely referring to them, and praying that they may be made a part of such pleading, without annexing the originals or copies as exhibits, or incorporating them with it, so as to form a part of the record in the case. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; Mayor and Common Council v. Signoret, 50 Cal. 298; Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327; Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227; Whitby v. Rowell, 82 Cal. 635; 23 Pac. 40, 382. The rule as to exhibits is the same, whether the instrument is set forth by a copy in the body of the complaint or is attached thereto as an exhibit. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. There is no difference between setting forth an exhibit in an instrument, such as an undertaking in the body of the pleading, or in annexing it as an exhibit and making it part of the pleading by proper reference; in each case the copy is a part of the pleading. Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327. Where a note is sued upon, a copy thereof in the complaint need not show the internal-revenue stamp required upon the original note; in order to defeat recovery on an unstamped note, it must appear not only that it is unstamped, but also that the stamp has been fraudulently omitted, which can be done only by answer. Hallock v. Jaudin, 34 Cal. 167.

Demand of relief. The theory of the provision that the complaint must contain a demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims, is, that the plaintiff shall not only state the specific facts which constitute his cause of action, but that he shall also state the specific relief to which he considers himself entitled; the policy is, to apprise the opposite party of the precise nature of the demand, in order that he may come prepared to meet it. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282.

Any relief embraced in the issues may be granted. Where the issues are clearly shown in the complaint and answer, the court is authorized to grant any relief embraced therein. Hurlbutt v. Spaulding Sav. Co., 93 Cal. 55; 28 Pac. 795; Blumberg v. Birch, 99 Cal. 416; 37 Am. St. Rep. 67; 34 Pac. 102. The complaint, while setting forth a single cause of action, may, at the same time, ask for different relief from different defendants; the character of the complaint is to be determined from its contents, rather than from a misnomer on the part of the pleader. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Mattern, 131 Cal. 326; 63 Pac. 482. Legal and equitable relief are administered in the same forum, according to the same general plan; and a party cannot be denied his rights, merely because he is not entitled to relief at law or in equity, as the case may be; he can be sent out of the court only where, upon his facts, he is entitled to no relief, either at law or in equity. Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. The amount for which judgment is demanded in the complaint determines the jurisdiction (Rodley v. Curry, 120 Cal. 541; 52 Pac. 999); but the prayer of the complaint does not conclude the question of jurisdiction, regardless of the allegations on which it is founded. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195; Jackson v. Whartenby, 5 Cal. 94. Where the facts may constitute two or more different causes of action, and may authorize different judgments, the prayer becomes significant, and may determine the nature of the action. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282; People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61; Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. A court of equity will not, even under a prayer for general relief, permit a party to go beyond the scope of the case made by the bill; nor will it, ordinarily, permit a bill, framed for one purpose, answer for another and distinct purpose, especially if the defendant might be surprised or prejudiced thereby. Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240; 33 Pac. 908. Where the allegations of the complaint are insufficient to entitle the plaintiff to introduce proofs as to any damages suffered by him, that fact does not impair its sufficiency to establish his right to equitable relief; nor is it any objection to the complaint, that a judgment for damages and for preventive relief is sought in the same action. Bradley v. Anglo-American Gas etc. Co., 102 Cal. 627; 36 Pac. 1011. The legislature is not prohibited from regulating the practice and proceedings in suits in equity because the constitution has conferred upon the superior court jurisdiction in such cases; and having such power, it cannot be doubted that it has also the power to regulate the practice of granting preventive relief. Wright v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 469; 73 Pac. 145. Where the complaint sets forth only one cause of action, and the relief sought has reference only to this cause of action, it is no objection to the complaint that the relief sought is not single. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; 28 Pac. 788; and see Montgomery v. McLaury, 143 Cal. 83; 76 Pac. 964. The right to both legal and equitable relief is based upon the same facts. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego Flume Co., 108 Cal. 549; 29 L. R. A. 839; 41 Pac. 495. In a case of an equitable character, the prayer of the complaint may be disregarded, where the facts stated are sufficient to support the decision. Wakefield v. Wakefield, 16 Cal. App. 113; 116 Pac. 309. The relief demanded in the complaint does not indicate the character of the action; the substance of the action determines its character, and this must generally be ascertained by a reference to the allegations of the complaint, without regard to the nature of the relief prayed for. Bartley v. Fraser, 16 Cal. App. 560; 117 Pac. 683.

Amendments. An amended complaint supersedes the original. Bray v. Lowery, 163 Cal. 256; 124 Pac. 1004. Where no attempt is made to state a new cause of action in an amended complaint, the amendment, though made after the expiration of the period of limitation for the action, relates back to the time of its commencement. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. The complaint, whether original or amended, can properly speak only of things which occurred either before or concurrently with the commencement of the action. California Farm etc. Co. v. Schiappa-Pietra, 151 Cal. 732; 91 Pac. 593. Where, in order to prevent the bar of the statute, the complaint was filed on the last day, the statute is not pleadable, either by demurrer or answer, merely because the signature to the complaint is omitted; an unsigned complaint is not void. Canadian Bank v. Leale, 14 Cal. App. 307; 111 Pac. 759. In an action of forcible entry and unlawful detainer, it is an abuse of discretion to refuse to allow the plaintiff to amend his complaint so as to set up special damages, where the application to amend is made before trial, and there is no objection of surprise on the part of defendant. San Francisco etc. Building Society v. Leonard, 17 Cal. App. 254; 119 Pac. 405. A cause of action to quiet title is not changed by an amendment, where the first complaint states the wrongful claim of defendant in general terms, while the second gives the details. Henry v. Phillips, 163 Cal. 135; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 39; 124 Pac. 837. Where the complaint, with proposed amendments, states a cause of action, refusal to allow the amendments is error. Campbell-Kawananakoa v. Campbell, 152 Cal. 201; 93 Pac. 184. A cause of action to recover damages for the breach of a contract, as set forth in an original complaint, in which the plaintiffs are described as "formerly copartners," is not changed by an amendment which avers that the plaintiffs continued to be copartners in the subject-matter of the litigation. CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. General rules of pleading under the code. The court, in the case of Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 414, 76 Am. Dec. 492, lay down the following valuable rules to be observed in pleading:

[We give the entire manual written by David Dudley Field, from which the court makes only certain extracts. We have also inserted the title of cases and a digest of various decisions under the rules, which they are intended to explain. The rules generally, however, are as given in Green v. Palmer.—Ed.]

First rule. The pleadings must be true. That is to say, the pleader must set forth his case as he believes it. In this respect, pleadings under the code differ much from pleadings at common law; for, though it was sometimes said to be a rule of that law that the truth should be stated, yet it was equally a rule, that certain fictions should be stated; which was much as if one should say, the pleadings must be true, except when required to be false. Thus the declarations in trover and ejectment were standing falsehoods; while the general issue in assumpsit, the statements under a videlicet, the usual averments of place, time, and amount, and many other allegations, were little better. When a lawyer wrote out a statement and put it on the files of a court, that his client was possessed of a ship, had casually lost it, and the defendant had found it, the truth being that his client had never had possession, while the defendant had had the ship in his own hands from the time it was built; it is difficult to conceive of a man of education being reduced to a position more distasteful. Not a single purpose of pleading was subserved by such statement. It did not apprise the defendant of the nature of the plaintiff's claim; it did not inform the court or jury of that which they were to try; and it did not preserve a record of the point decided. When to such a statement the defendant pleaded the general issue, that plea being nearly universal, it might truly be said that in no stage of the proceedings, before or at the trial, or when judgment was rendered, did the records of the court contain anything from which one could gather the nature of the controversy. Every word of truth in the whole proceeding was oral and unrecorded; everything which was written down was deceptive and false. So of an action of ejectment, under our revised statutes, even after the uncouth barbarisms of fictitious plaintiffs and casual ejectors had been abolished. The plaintiff was obliged to allege, falsely in most cases, that on some day after his title accrued he was possessed of the premises in question, and that the defendant afterwards entered into them, and unlawfully withheld them from the plaintiff. The defendant pleaded that he was not guilty of unlawfully withholding the premises. These pleadings seem to have been framed on the model of those in trover, and answered as little the true purpose of pleadings. Neither the parties, nor the court, nor the jury, before the oral developments of the trial, could guess the claim or defense; and the record afterwards did not show what had been really decided. The usual averments in assault and battery were that the defendant assaulted and beat the plaintiff with sticks, stones, knives, etc., though the defendant had but touched the plaintiff with the tip of his finger. If a note made at Singapore or Calcutta were brought to suit in a county in this state, the court was innocently informed that Singapore or Calcutta lay in that county. These were some, and some only, of the untruths which common-law pleading required, recommended, or encouraged. Under this code, however, the rule is universal and inexorable, that nothing whatever should be alleged which is not believed to be true; and the lawyer who inserts any statement, no matter how trivial, which he does not believe, violates that rule, and with it, his duty as an officer of the law. It has been argued, and sometimes adjudged, that the plaintiff may still set forth his case in different counts, as they were called. But consider for a moment what those counts were. They were generally not different causes of action, but different forms of stating the same cause. Now, as there can be but one true statement of one transaction, and as the code requires the pleadings to be true, it should seem to follow that different ways of stating the same claim are no longer permissible. They were never permitted in a bill of equity. If the plaintiff have different causes of action, he may, of course, and should, set them forth; but he should not set forth the same cause of action in different forms; and when he sets forth different causes, they should be called claims or causes of action, and not counts, because the term count conveys a wrong impression and tends to preserve a nomenclature, and, with the nomenclature, rules no longer in existence.

Second rule. Facts only must be stated. This means the physical facts cognizable by the senses or capable of being shown to a jury without the aid of legal inferences; the facts, as contradistinguished from the law, from argument, from hypothesis, and from the evidence of the facts. A legal inference or conclusion from the facts should not be stated; that is not the province of the pleadings under our system, which is, to develop the facts. To apply the law to the facts—that is, to draw thence legal inferences or conclusions—is the province of the court. See Levinson v. Schwartz, 22 Cal. 229; Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 246, overruling Godwin v. Stebbins, 2 Cal. 105. The words "wrongful or unlawful," when conclusions of law. See Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 246. An averment that the plaintiff was the owner or holder of a note is not the averment of an issuable fact, it is but the averment of a conclusion of law. Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 572; so, also, that a certain amount is due upon a note. Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. An averment that a "location was duly and properly made, according to the provisions of an act," is a legal conclusion, the conditions of the act, and the performance thereof, should be stated. People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 632. The promise to pay alleged in the common counts in assumpsit were merely conclusions of law. Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 235; 83 Am. Dec. 64. Where goods were sold on credit, a general averment in an answer that the "term of credit has not expired" is a conclusion of law. Levinson v. Schwartz, 22 Cal. 229. An averment "that any right that plaintiffs may have ever had to the possession," etc., they forfeited by a noncompliance with the rules, customs, and regulations of the miners of the diggings embracing the claims in dispute, prior to the defendant's entry, is a statement of a conclusion of law. Dutch Flat Water Co. v. Mooney, 12 Cal. 534. The averment in the complaint that the ayuntamiento had full power and lawful authority to do the act in question is but an averment of a conclusion of law, and does not tender an issue of fact. Branham v. Mayor and Common Council, 24 Cal. 602. Argument in a pleading is equally inappropriate, for that is to be made orally before the court, when the facts are developed. Hypothetical statements are improper, for the court is to deal not with hypothetical cases, but with the facts of the case in hand. Snow v. Halstead, 1 Cal. 361. The defendant's pretenses are equally improper, as they are not the facts of the plaintiff's case. The facts must be carefully distinguished from the evidence of the facts. The latter pertains to the trial, and has no place in the pleadings. Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 200; Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 565; Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 455; Depuy v. Williams, 26 Cal. 214. But inasmuch as the evidence is but a series of facts, it has sometimes been thought difficult to distinguish between the greater facts which ought to be set forth in a pleading and those other and lesser facts which go to prove the former. There ought, however, to be no embarrassment on the part of any lawyer who has ever framed or who understands special verdicts. These have been long known, and the rule is as old as their existence, that they must contain the facts found and not the evidence to prove them. The essential facts must be stated directly, in unequivocal language, and not left to be inferred. The language of a pleading is construed most strongly against the pleader. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 508; Moore v. Besse, 30 Cal. 572; but see also Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 191. Facts which are material should be stated in the pleadings by direct averment, and not by inference. Stringer v. Davis, 30 Cal. 318. Allegations simply by way of recitals are insufficient. Stringer v. Davis, 30 Cal. 318; Denver v. Burton, 28 Cal. 549; Shafer v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 4 Cal. 294; see particularly Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 577. The next rule, however, gives us a satisfactory test by which to distinguish the facts from the evidence.

Third rule. Those facts, and those only, must be stated which constitute the cause of action, the defense, or the reply. Therefore: First. Each party must allege every fact which he is required to prove, and will be precluded from proving any fact not alleged. For example, when a writing is by the statute of frauds made necessary to the validity of a contract, the writing must be averred, that being one of the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action. The plaintiff, on his part, must allege all that he will have to prove to maintain his action; the defendant, on his part, all that he must prove to defeat the plaintiff, after the complaint is admitted or proved. See also Jerome v. Stebbins, 14 Cal. 458; Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 455. Second. He must allege nothing affirmatively, which he is not required to prove. This is sometimes put in the following form: that is to say, that those facts, and those only, should be stated which the party would be required to prove. But this is inaccurate, as negative allegations are frequently necessary, and they are not to be proved (Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 243); as, for example, in an action on a promissory note, the plaintiff must allege not only the making of the note, but that it has not been paid. The rule, however, applies to all affirmative allegations, and, thus applied, is universal. No matter what averments were held to be necessary in the former scheme of pleading, nothing of an affirmative character is now necessary beyond what the party must prove. For instance, it is enough to allege that the defendant published a libel of the plaintiff, without adding that he did it falsely or maliciously; the falsehood being presumed, and the malice being inferred from the falsehood. It must be recollected, then, in the first place, that every fact essential to the claim or defense should be stated. If this part of the rule be violated, the adverse party may demur. In the second place, that nothing should be stated which is not essential to the claim or defense, or, in other words, that none but issuable facts should be stated. If this part of the rule be violated, the adverse party may move to strike out the unessential parts. See Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692. What is and what is not essential, an uninstructed person might not readily discover, but a lawyer ought not to be in doubt.

An unessential, or, what is the same thing, an immaterial allegation, is one which can be stricken out from the pleading without leaving it insufficient, and, of course, need not be proved or disproved. See § 463, post. The following question will determine in every case whether an allegation be material. Can it be made the subject of a material issue? In other words, if it be denied, will the failure to prove it decide the cause in whole or in part? If it will not, then the fact alleged is not material; it is not one of those which constitute the cause of action, defense, or reply. To illustrate this, let us suppose an ultimate fact, upon the establishment of which the claim or defense depends, and that the establishment of this fact depends upon the establishment of three or four prior facts, which, being established, prove this. It is the ultimate fact, and not the prior or probative facts, which should be set forth. Miles v. McDermott, 31 Cal. 272; Grewell v. Walden, 23 Cal. 169; see also Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 193. As, for example, an action upon the covenants of a deed; the execution and delivery of the deed are ultimate facts upon which the claim depends. When these come to be proved, it may appear, perhaps, that the deed was delivered first in escrow, till the performance of certain conditions by the grantee; that these were afterwards performed, and then the delivery became absolute. These, however, are circumstances which, though they will appear in proof, should not be pleaded. Or, take the case of an action for land, where the question is one of boundary. The point in issue is, whether the defendant is in possession of the plaintiff's land, that being affirmed by the plaintiff and denied by the defendant. It would be out of place for either party to insert in his pleading a correspondence respecting the dividing fence, or the acts of the parties toward a practical location, because, however important these might be in evidence, they might not determine the cause, since, if the correspondence or the practical location were disproved, the question of the true boundary, according to the deeds, would still remain. If, in an action for a libel, the defendant justifies, he must allege the truth of the charge, not the defendant's admissions tending to prove the truth, since the admissions might be disproved, and yet the charge be true. So, in an action upon a mortgage, if the defense be payment, the fact of payment must be alleged, not the evidence of the plaintiff's admission that it had been paid, since there may have been no admission, but nevertheless a payment.

It has been already said that some latitude is allowable in respect to the number of facts to be stated, depending upon the relief sought. In an action to enforce a written agreement, nothing behind the fact of the agreement need be alleged; while in an action to reform an instrument, the circumstances under which it was made may be most properly set forth. It results, then, from what has been stated, under the present rule: first, that the pleader must insert in his pleading whatever he is to prove; secondly, that he must insert no affirmative allegation which he is not to prove; and thirdly, that what he does insert must be decisive of some part of the cause, one way or the other. In an action of ejectment to obtain a recovery, the title of the plaintiff is the ultimate fact—the fact in issue. The facts going to support his alleged title are probative facts, which, if disputed by the defendant, are facts in controversy. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 193, and cases cited. Complaint should not state facts anticipating a defense. The only object to be gained by such pleading is to put the adverse party upon his oath without making him a witness, and the effect of allowing this would be to establish a system of discovery in conflict with the spirit of the statute. Canfield v. Tobias, 21 Cal. 351. It was held to be bad pleading to state in the complaint a discharge in insolvency, or a new promise. Nothing which constitutes matter of defense should be averred in the complaint. The former is a matter of defense, to be set up by the defendant; and the latter is a matter of replication, either by way of plea or evidence, as the system of pleading may be. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 483.

Fourth rule. All statements must be concisely made, and when once made, must not be repeated. At common law, as well as in chancery, the pleadings were the very opposite of concise. If there were lawyers who thought differently, they were swayed by peculiarities of taste or education. The "terseness of the common law" had as little to justify or recommend it as those other abused phrases, "The law is the perfection of reason," and "The wisdom of our ancestors." Even the forms with which we are most familiar, the traditional forms in daily use, appear to have been framed with an irresistible instinct towards the use of several words to express the meaning of one. If the declaration was for money lent, that was set forth as "money lent and advanced"; if for money paid, it was for money "paid, laid out, and expended"; if for money received, it was, "had and received"; as if, in each instance, one of these words did not express as much as all of them. There were really no concise pleadings at common law, excepting the fictitious ones. A declaration on the case, or in covenant, or in assumpsit on a policy of insurance, or other special agreement, was long, involved, and full of repetitions. The declarations in trover, ejectment, and replevin were short; but they were false, or disclosed nothing. Every pleading that set forth the facts, set them forth wrapped in a cloud of words. A statute referred to was "the statute in such case made and provided." The spirit of redundancy went, indeed, beyond pleadings, and pervaded all writings which came from the hands of lawyers. Conveyances piled expression upon expression, till the sense was nearly lost sight of. Land was "given, granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released, conveyed, and confirmed," two or three times over in every deed. Statutes were overloaded, till the head grew weary with their endless involutions. Thus, also, such words as "duly," "wrongfully," and "unlawfully," so frequently used in pleadings, might better be omitted. They tender no issue, and serve only to detract from that logical directness and simplicity of statement which ought always to be observed in a pleading. Miles v. McDermott, 31 Cal. 272; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574. See, as to surplusage, §§ 453 to 465, post.

There never was a greater slander upon the code than to say that it permits long pleadings. On the contrary, it enjoins conciseness everywhere; and if in any pleading that was ever written under its rule there be an unnecessary word, it was put there in disregard of its provisions. Nor is it possible to frame or conceive of a system proceeding upon the idea of disclosing the facts of the case, which could require greater conciseness than is here required. If pleadings are not to set forth the real claim and defense, they are useless, and had better be dispensed with. A summons to appear before the court and jury on a particular day, to try the rights of the parties on a particular subject, would be just as useful. But if a pleading is to be a statement of the claim or defense, can the wit of man contrive to make it briefer than a concise statement of the facts? If an immaterial statement be inserted, or even an unnecessary word, the courts have the power to strike it out. To avoid repetition, as well as to obtain conciseness, logical order is necessary. There are persons who are incapable of making a logical statement of anything, and such persons will be bad pleaders under the code. But a man of education, as every lawyer is supposed to be, ought to have no difficulty in setting forth any occurrence in its logical, which is its natural, order. And if he does this, and sets forth only the facts on which his case hinges, and uses no more words than are necessary, we shall have brevity and substance, and hear no more of long pleadings, unnecessary recitals, or immaterial averments. The foregoing are general rules, applicable alike to the complaint and answer. How successfully and rapidly they will develop the issues if they be strictly applied, is easily to be seen, since every allegation must be essential to some part of the claim or defense, and the denial of any one must be so far decisive of the case. At common law each plea was to be an answer to the whole declaration; and as there might be as many pleas as one wished, every material allegation might be successively denied. All this may be done under the code in less time, with greater certainty, and in fewer words. The pleadings will be considered in the order in which they naturally occur, omitting, however, any observations respecting the demurrer. There is nothing in the frame of that which requires particular notice, further than to observe that it does not perform an office so extensive as it performed in common-law pleadings. There are many objections formerly brought before the court upon demurrer, which are now brought before it upon a simple motion.

The complaint. This is to contain:

1. The title. Specifying the name of the court in which the action is brought, the name of the county in which the plaintiff desires the trial to be had, and the names of the parties to the action [i. e., all the parties, plaintiff and defendant].

—— Court,
County of ——,
A, B, & C, D,
agt.
E, F, G, H, & J, K.

2. The statement. A plain and concise statement of the facts constituting a cause of action, without unnecessary repetition.

A B, plaintiff, complains [or alleges],
First ——
Second ——
Third ——

And so on; or if there be more than one cause of action, which may be united under § 427, post, thus:

A B, plaintiff, complains [or alleges],
For a first cause of action:
First ——
Second ——
Third ——
For a second cause of action:
First ——
Second ——
Third ——
And so on.

There is an advantage in numbering the allegations, as it tends to produce clearness of statement, logical order, and conciseness, and separates the allegations, leading to singleness of issues.

3. The demand. A demand of the relief to which the plaintiff supposes himself entitled. If the recovery of money be demanded, the amount thereof must be stated.

Wherefore the plaintiff demands judgment that he recover of the defendant the sum of $——, with interest from the day of ——, or judgment that the defendant execute and deliver to the plaintiff a conveyance of, etc., and be also enjoined from, etc.

Some attorneys add: "And that the plaintiff may have such other relief as the case requires," copying the prayer for relief formerly used in chancery; but this is useless, since the court must give such relief as the case requires, whether demanded or not. See § 580. It is, besides, unauthorized. See Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299; Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152. Demand for treble damages must be expressly inserted. See Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 239.

2. Object of code to narrow the evidence on trial. It was the intention of the code to require the pleadings to be so framed as not only to apprise the parties of the facts to be proved by them respectively, but to narrow the proofs on the trial. Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692.

3. Complaint must contain name of court and county where action is brought. So far as concerns the place of trial of civil actions, see §§ 392 to 400, inclusive.

4. Complaint must contain names of the parties to the action. As to who are the proper parties in an action, see §§ 308, and 367 to 389, inclusive.

5. Averment in complaint which must be made to authorize arrest of defendant. Porter v. Herman, 8 Cal. 623; Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 318; Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411.

6. Pleading in actions to recover the possession of real property. It is usual to speak of the action to recover the possession of real property as an action of ejectment, and it is possible that with the technical designation it is sometimes thought that some of the technical allegations peculiar to the old form of the action are still necessary; but such is not the case. There is but one form of civil actions in this state, and all the forms of pleadings and the rules by which their sufficiency is to be determined are prescribed by the code. The complaint must contain "a statement of the facts constituting the cause of action, in ordinary and concise language," and it may be verified by the oath of the party, in which case the answer must also be verified. The system in this state requires the facts to be alleged as they exist, and repudiates all fictions; and only such facts need be alleged as are required to be proved, except to negative a possible performance of the obligation which is the basis of the action, or to negative an inference from an act which is in itself indifferent. Now, what facts must be proved to recover in ejectment? These only: that the plaintiff is seised of the premises, or of some estate therein in fee, or for life, or for years, and that the defendant was in their possession at the commencement of the action. The seisin is the fact to be alleged. It is a pleadable and issuable fact, to be established by conveyances from a paramount source of title, or by evidence of prior possession. It is the ultimate fact upon which the claim to recover depends, and it is facts of this character which must be alleged, and not the prior or probative facts which go to establish them. It is the ultimate facts—which could not be struck out of a pleading without leaving it insufficient—and not the evidence of those facts, which must be stated. It is sufficient, therefore, in a complaint in ejectment, for the plaintiff to aver in respect to his title, that he is seised of the premises, or of some estate therein in fee, or for life, or for years, according to the fact. The right to the possession follows as a conclusion of law from the seisin, and need not be alleged. The possession of the defendant is of course a pleadable and issuable fact, and the only question of difficulty arises from the supposed necessity of negativing its possible rightful character. That negative allegations, which are not required to be proved, may in some actions be necessary, may be admitted; but is there any such necessity as to the possession of the defendant in an action of ejectment? It seems to us that the substance of a complaint in ejectment under our practice is this: "A owns certain real property, or some interest in it; the defendant has obtained possession of it, and withholds the possession from him." If the defendant's holding rests upon any existing right, he should be compelled to show it affirmatively in defense. The right of possession accompanies the ownership, and from the allegation of the fact of ownership—which is the allegation of seisin in "ordinary language"—the right of present possession is presumed as a matter of law. We do not think, therefore, any allegation beyond that of possession by the defendant is necessary, except that he withholds the possession from the plaintiff. The allegation that the possession is "wrongful or unlawful" is not the statement of a fact, but of a conclusion of law. The words are mere surplusage, and, though they do not vitiate, they do no good. The withholding of the possession from one who is seised of the premises is presumptively adverse to his right, and wrongful. It is by force of this presumption that the plaintiff can rest, in the first instance, his case at the trial upon proof of his seisin, and of the possession by the defendant. From these facts, when established, the law implies a right to the present possession in the plaintiff, and a holding adverse to that right in the defendant.

Where the plaintiff has been in possession of the premises for which he sues, it will be sufficient for him to allege in his complaint such possession, and the entry, ouster, and continued withholding by the defendant. Such allegations are proper when they correspond with the facts, but they are not essential, as is thought by many members of the bar. In this state, the possession does not always accompany the legal title. The statute authorizes a sale and conveyance of land held adversely by third persons; and the legal title is frequently held by parties who never had the possession. In the courts of New York —and it is well known that the Practice Code was taken principally from the Code of Procedure of that state—there was at one time some conflict of opinion as to what were sufficient allegations in a complaint in ejectment under the code. It is now, however, settled by the supreme court of that state substantially in accordance with the views we have expressed. In Ensign v. Sherman, 14 How. Pr. 439, the plaintiff averred in her complaint that she had lawful title, as the owner in fee-simple, to the real estate in controversy, which was described; that the defendant was in possession of it, and unlawfully withheld possession thereof from her; and, on demurrer, the complaint was held sufficient. Walter v. Lockwood, 23 Barb. 228, is to the same effect. In Sanders v. Leavy, 16 How. Pr. 308, the complaint was similar to the complaint in the cases cited, and was demurred to on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; because, first, it did not allege that the plaintiff or his grantor was ever in possession; and second, it did not allege that such possession was disturbed and they were evicted by the defendant, his grantors, or predecessors. And it was contended on the argument, as in the case at bar, that the allegations as to the plaintiff's title and the defendant's possession were not averments of facts, but of conclusions of law; but the court held the complaint sufficient, and gave judgment against the demurrer. "To recover real estate," said Mr. Justice Ingraham, in delivering the opinion, "what is it necessary for the plaintiff to prove? Two things: first, that he is the owner of the property; secondly, that the defendant withholds from him the possession without right. Both facts are plainly averred in the complaint." The designation of the withholding of the possession by the defendant, in the cases cited, as unlawful, is not considered as constituting any valid ground of objection. In Sanders v. Leavy, the attention of the court was specially directed, in the argument of counsel, to this mode of characterizing the act. For the reasons we have already stated, we consider it unnecessary to give it any character by special designation; for, being against one who is seised of the premises, it is presumptively adverse and wrongful. To allege that it is unlawful, is merely to state that which follows under the circumstances, as a conclusion of law from the act itself.

The decisions of this court in respect to the necessary allegations of a complaint in ejectment have not been uniform, and perhaps on no one subject of pleading is there so much embarrassment felt by the profession in consequence. In Gladwin v. Stebbins (reported as Godwin v. Stebbins, in 2 Cal. 105), the complaint averred that the plaintiffs were "lawfully entitled to the possession of the premises," and the court held that the allegation was of a material fact, and therefore sufficient. In this respect we think the opinion cannot be sustained. The averment is clearly a mere statement of a conclusion of law. In Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310, the complaint alleged that the plaintiffs had "lawful title as owners in fee-simple of the premises," and "that the defendant is in possession and unlawfully withholds the same"; and on demurrer the court held the complaint insufficient. "Notwithstanding," said Chief Justice Murray, in delivering the opinion, "our statute has dispensed with the old form of pleading, and it is no longer necessary to allege a fictitious demise, etc., still I apprehend that facts sufficient must be pleaded to show the plaintiff's right to recover, and it will not do to state conclusions of law in place thereof. The allegation that the defendant is in possession, and unlawfully withholds the premises, is insufficient; it is a conclusion of law drawn from the character of defendant's possession, the circumstances of which should be stated." The decision, as is apparent, does not relate to the allegation as to the plaintiff's title, notwithstanding the general observations of the chief justice; it applies only to the allegation as to the withholding of the possession by the defendant. So far as this was alleged to have been unlawful, the allegation was of a conclusion of law. But the giving of a certain character to the withholding, as unlawful, did not change the material fact that the possession was withheld; and this, as we have seen, taken in connection with the previous allegations of title in the plaintiff, and possession by the defendant, was sufficient. A more particular statement of "the circumstances" of the defendant's possession or withholding is not necessary, under our system of practice. The decision, in this respect, has tended to produce inconvenience to practitioners, and prolixity in pleading, and we have no hesitation in overruling it.

In Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591, it was held that the findings by the court below—that one of the defendants, and not the plaintiff, was the owner, and entitled to the possession of the property in controversy, and that the defendants did not unlawfully detain the same from the plaintiff —would not support the judgment, and the decision was based upon the ground that the ownership and right of possession were not facts, in the legal sense of that term, but conclusions of law. We have had great doubt of the correctness of this decision, ever since it was rendered; and upon the examination which we have given to the subject, in considering the case at bar, we are satisfied that we erred, and are glad we have an opportunity, at so early a day, of correcting our error. The fact was found that one of the defendants was the owner of the premises in controversy, and that fact alone was sufficient to support the judgment against the plaintiff, nothing else having been found to qualify the right to the possession which accompanies the title. The balance of the findings might have been treated as surplusage. The claim of the plaintiff having been thus disposed of, it was unnecessary to find as to the character of the defendants' detention of the premises. In Boles v. Weifenback, 15 Cal. 144, and Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150, the opinion states that substantial averments of the complaint were only that the plaintiffs were the owners of the property in question, and that the defendant was in possession of it. It does not state that there was any averment that the possession was withheld from the plaintiffs. If such averment were in fact made in the complaint, the decision cannot be sustained. Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 243; see also Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310. When a complaint will be treated as a declaration in ejectment. See Ramirez v. Murray, 4 Cal. 293. It is better to simplify the pleadings by allowing these general averments in actions of ejectment than to introduce the unnecessary confusion which long and complex statements of the facts must necessarily produce. A holding over by the plaintiff is, in effect, an ouster, and may be so charged. If in every case all the facts connected with the title and the wrongful acts of the defendant be inserted in the complaint, the pleadings would be swollen to immoderate dimensions, without benefit to the parties. Garrison v. Sampson, 15 Cal. 95.

Residence of parties not to be alleged. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432.

Averment of title in general terms or specific deraignment of title—facts to be set out in latter case. Castro v Richardson, 18 Cal. 478. Title or possession to be stated. Id.; Steinback v. Fitzpatrick, 12 Cal. 295; Salmon v. Symonds, 24 Cal. 266; Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176; Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465.

Ouster. An allegation of wrongful withholding of possession has the same effect as an allegation of ouster. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. Ouster. Wrongful withholding of possession must be stated. Id. Exact time of ouster need not be alleged. Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183. When ouster is alleged to have taken place before title accrued to party ousted, it is a fatal defect. See Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567. When prior possession is claimed, actual ouster must be alleged. Watson v. Zimmerman, 6 Cal. 46; see also Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150. In the case of Coryell v. Cain, it was held, that, under the facts in that case, the complaint should only have alleged, that on some day designated, the plaintiffs were possessed of the land, describing it; that while thus possessed the defendant entered upon the same and ousted them, and has ever since withheld the possession from them, to their damage—specifying such sum as might cover the value of the use and occupation from the date of the ouster. Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 571. The mesne conveyances, through which title is derived, are matters of evidence, and should not be stated at length in the complaint. Id. A continued adverse holding must be alleged in complaint. Steinback v. Fitzpatrick, 12 Cal. 295. Unnecessary description and evidence of facts should be stricken from complaint. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. In our practice, to entitle the plaintiff in ejectment to recover, it is only necessary to establish his right of possession and the occupation of the defendant at that time. The date at which plaintiff's right accrued or the defendant's occupation commenced, is material only with reference to the claim for mesne profits. See Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465; Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 365. If action is for two separate pieces of land, the complaint must set out each of the two causes of action separately, and each cause of action must affect all the parties to the action, and not require trials to be held in different places. Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150. The complaint may ask, in addition to a recovery of the property, an injunction, restraining the commission of trespass in the nature of waste, pending the action. The grounds of equity interposition should be stated subsequently to and distinct from those upon which the judgment at law is claimed. Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544. A complaint that alleges he is in possession in one place, and in another avers that he is not, shows no cause of action. Dickinson v. Maguire, 9 Cal. 46. A complaint in ejectment, alleging title in plaintiff under a sheriff's sale, made by one sheriff, and a deed executed by his successor, was held sufficient. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315. The allegation of the value of the use and occupation, rents, and profits of the premises, for the period which the defendants were in the wrongful possession and excluded the plaintiff, is sufficient to charge defendants, without any averment that they received such rents and profits. The terms "rents and profits" are not here used in a technical sense. The whole averment is, in effect, only that the value of the use of the premises, while plaintiffs were wrongfully excluded, was the amount stated. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 40. As to actions of ejectment for mineral lands, as to what are necessary averments and sufficient pleadings, see Smith v. Doe, 15 Cal. 100. The complaint in an action for the recovery of the possession of real property is not required to be in any particular form: it must be controlled by the facts of the case which are sought to be put in issue. See the matter discussed in Caperton v. Schmidt, 26 Cal. 490; 85 Am. Dec. 187.

7. Actions of ejectment. What must be averred. The law in respect to actions of ejectment has been materially modified by § 379, ante; see cases there cited, and compare for sufficiency of pleadings. There is no room for doubt that whenever a landlord is entitled to bring an action under that act against a tenant at sufferance, after having given the requisite notice to quit, etc., he may, instead of proceeding under that act, maintain an action of ejectment. In such action it is not requisite that the complaint should state the tenancy, its termination, the notice, etc.; and when it appears from the pleadings that such tenancy existed, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment in favor of the landlord, that it was proven on the trial that he had taken the necessary steps to terminate the tenancy before the commencement of the action, and was then entitled to recover, unless the contrary is shown by a statement or a bill of exceptions. McCarthy v. Yale, 39 Cal. 585.

Complaint in ejectment. Although it is thought by many that a style of pleading in the action of ejectment which would show the right or title under which the plaintiff claims the possession, and the true position of the defendant, both in respect to the title and the possession, would be far preferable to the present system, and would enable the judgment roll to exhibit the issues which were tried and determined with more distinctness and certainty, yet the present system has become so completely established that a change, if any is desirable, ought to come from the legislature. The complaint in this case alleges the damages sustained by the entry and withholding of the possession by the defendant, and the value of the mesne profits; and we entertain no doubt that they are sufficient to support the judgment. The judgment does not specify whether the sum of three hundred dollars was awarded for the damages or mesne profits, or for both; but the presumption is, that the judgment was sustained by the evidence; and whether that sum was awarded for one or both of those demands, the judgment is a bar to a further recovery for the same cause. McCarthy v. Yale, 39 Cal. 585; Id., July term, 1872.

8. Action to quiet title to land. It has been held that complaint must aver that plaintiff was in possession. See Pralus v. Jefferson Gold etc. Mining Co., 34 Cal. 558; Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563. But not necessarily so, under this code. See § 738, post, and notes.

9. Where corporations are plaintiffs. It must be alleged that the party plaintiff is a corporation incorporated under the laws of this state, etc. See California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511; Cumberland College v. Ish, 22 Cal. 641; see, however, Shoe & Leather Bank v. Brown, 9 Abb. Pr. 218; see also Connecticut Bank v. Smith, 9 Abb. Pr. 168; see this case, also, as to foreign corporation requiring same allegation. It is unnecessary to specify the date and title of the acts amending the act incorporating the corporation. It is sufficient to designate the original act of incorporation, and refer generally to the other acts amendatory thereof. Sun Mutual Ins. Co. v. Dwight, 1 Hilt. 51. In a suit brought by a corporation or its assignee, upon an agreement with the corporation, no specific allegation of the incorporation of the company is necessary. A statement of the name of the corporation and of the making of the agreement between the defendant and the company, and of what the company did in fulfillment of the agreement, includes the idea of the legal existence of the company; and the fact of incorporation is mere evidence in support of it, not essential to be particularly stated in the pleading. Norris v. Stops, Hob. 211; Henriques v. Dutch West India Co., 2 Ld. Raym. 1536; Bank of United States v. Haskins, 1 Johns. Cas. 132; Bennington Iron Co. v. Rutherford, 18 N. J. L. 105; 35 Am. Dec. 528; 18 N. J. L. 158; Harris v. Muskingum Mfg. Co., 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; 29 Am. Dec. 372; Richardson v. St. Joseph Iron Co., 5 Blackf. 146; 33 Am. Dec. 460; Dutchess Cotton Manufactory v. Davis, 14 Johns. 239; 7 Am. Dec. 459; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. 770, 778; 14 Am. Dec. 526; Michigan Bank v. Williams, 5 Wend. 478, 482; Kennedy v. Cotton, 28 Barb. 59.

10. Pleadings in actions against corporations. See preceding note; also California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511; Lincoln v. Colusa County, 28 Cal. 662; and see note to § 354, Civ. Code, subd. 2.

11. Suits against corporations, municipal and others. In an action against a municipal corporation, the complaint set out the bond sued on; avers the defendant to be a corporation; that the corporation made and delivered the bond on good consideration, and this was done under an ordinance passed by the proper agents of the corporation, having authority for that purpose; and that the defendant has failed to pay. This is enough, prima facie, to show a liability on the part of the corporation. We see no more necessity for a plaintiff suing a corporation on a note or bond, to set out the ordinance which empowered the corporate authorities to make the contract, than for a plaintiff, suing a principal on a note executed by attorney, to set out in the complaint the power of attorney. Nor is it necessary to set out the vote or other proceedings of the corporate agents, nor to give any further description of the agents than that given in the complaint. The bonds themselves are set out or minutely described, and these show by whom they were executed; and the persons signing them are averred to be the agents of the corporation, duly empowered for that purpose. Underhill v. Trustees of City of Sonora, 17 Cal. 176. The complaint was held to not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Where the allegation is, that the plaintiff, as a justice of the peace, performed services, at the request of the district attorney for that county, in cases wherein the people of the state were plaintiffs, to the amount of three thousand two hundred dollars, "and that the defendant thereby became and is liable to pay the said sum," there is no allegation of the means by which the county became liable. It is not alleged that the services were rendered for or were procured by the county, or that the county received any benefit from their performance; nor is it stated that judgments were rendered in those cases, nor that the defendants in those actions have not paid, or were unable to pay, for the services. Miner v. Solano County, 26 Cal. 116.

12. Actions by and against counties. Counties are quasi-corporations, and have power to sue and be sued. See Pol. Code, §§ 4003, 4075. The right to sue a county is not limited to cases of tort, malfeasance, etc., but is given in every case of account. See, for decisions on former law, Price v. Sacramento County, 6 Cal. 254; McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 123. Under the law prior to adoption of code, the claim must first have been presented to supervisors and rejected; and it is probable that such continues to be the law under the code. See the sections of Political Code above cited, and also the cases cited in this note.

13. Actions by and between husband and wife. Action for division of community property after decree of divorce averments in complaint. See Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Cal. 200; 70 Am. Dec. 774; Dye v. Dye, 11 Cal. 163. Action by wife to recover homestead granted away by husband alone. Harper v. Forbes, 15 Cal. 202. Suit for distributive share of estate of alleged deceased husband, averment of existence of marriage. Letters v. Cady, 10 Cal. 533; People v. Anderson, 26 Cal. 129. No allegation of separate property is required in complaint in an action against the wife for her separate debt, for which she was liable in personam before coverture. Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69. Allegation as to married woman being a sole trader. Aiken v. Davis, 17 Cal. 119.

14. Complaint for relief generally on the ground of fraud. Facts constituting the fraud to be set out. Kent v. Snyder, 30 Cal. 666; Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 623. The fraud is the substantial cause for action, not the discovery thereof; and if the fraud occurred, before commencing action, more than the stated time within which actions may be brought, the cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations. Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 444; Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423; see, however, Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 20; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

15. Action to vacate judgment on ground of fraud, etc. See Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109; Snow v. Halstead, 1 Cal. 359; Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75; Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 295; Mecker v. Harris, 19 Cal. 278; 79 Am. Dec. 215; Crane v. Hirshfelder, 17 Cal. 467.

16. Action to cancel conveyance on the ground of fraud. As to statement of particular facts and circumstances, which may be required to show, on the face of complaint, that the conveyance was fraudulently made, see Kohner v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 578. Averment that grantee was a fictitious person, and that the conveyance was made to hinder and defraud creditors. Purkitt v. Polack, 17 Cal. 327. General averment of fraud as to conveyance, that it was to hinder and defraud creditors, etc. See Harris v. Taylor, 15 Cal. 348; also Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47. The facts constituting the fraud must be definitely and specifically alleged. Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75; Snow v. Halstead, 1 Cal. 359; Oakland v. Carpentier, 21 Cal. 642. So, also, to vacate a patent on the ground of its fraudulent procurement. Semple v. Hagar, 27 Cal. 166. Where a deed was deposited with third person, to be delivered to grantee, but grantor subsequently directs third person not to deliver deed, it must be averred that third person has or is about to deliver such deed, or threatens so to do. See Fitch v. Bunch, 30 Cal. 208. Generally as to averments in complaint, in action to set aside a conveyance, on ground of fraud, see cases above cited, and also Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321; People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 632; Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47; De Leon v. Higuera, 15 Cal. 483.

17. Complaint to set aside fraudulent conveyance. In a suit for a fraudulent conveyance, it is not irrelevant or redundant to set out in detail the inceptive steps which culminated in the alleged fraudulent conveyance. Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 714.

18. Complaint to compel reconveyance of one of two tracts of land granted by mistake. In an action to compel reconveyance of one of two tracts of land described in the same deed, which it is averred was conveyed by mistake, the complaint must show clearly that a mistake was committed, or explain why the plaintiff included in the conveyance the second tract, after having described the one intended to be conveyed. Barfield v. Price, 40 Cal. 535.

19. What allegations sufficient for injunctions. See Bigelow v. Gove, 7 Cal. 135; Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392; Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212; Henshaw v. Clark, 14 Cal. 460; Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107; Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149; Hicks v. Compton, 18 Cal. 206. If the complaint does not show that no adequate or complete remedy at law exists, then injunction cannot be granted. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 645; Tomlinson v. Rubio, 16 Cal. 202; De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352. See also McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121. See, generally, for miscellaneous matters relating to sufficiency of averments, the above-cited cases, and also O'Conner v. Corbitt, 3 Cal. 370; Hihn v. Peck, 18 Cal. 640; Smith v. Sparrow, 13 Cal. 596; Coker v. Simpson, 7 Cal. 340; More v. Ord, 15 Cal. 204; McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145; Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170; Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200. An allegation, simply, of great and irreparable injury is insufficient; the facts stated must show the court that the apprehension of such injury is well founded. De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352; Waldron v. Marsh, 5 Cal. 119; Branch Turnpike Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 13 Cal. 190; Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643.

20. Action to foreclose mortgage, liens, etc. Averments of ownership of note and mortgage. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299. Mortgage stipulating for payment of counsel fees, not exceeding five per cent of the amount due, see Carriere v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 435. A general averment, that a person who is joined as defendant with mortgagor has or claims to have some interest in the premises, sufficient. See Anthony v. Nye, 30

Cal. 401; see, generally, Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597; Stringer v. Davis, 30 Cal. 318; Shafer v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 4 Cal. 294; Hunt v. Waterman, 12 Cal. 301.

21. Redemption of mortgage. No allegation of tender of amount due upon mortgage, previous to beginning action, need be made. Daubenspeck v. Platt, 22 Cal. 330.

22. More than one ground of action stated in complaint. Action on contract, etc. It is necessary only for plaintiffs to state the facts of their case in ordinary and concise language, and if such facts showed that they had a right of action against the defendants, it is clearly sufficient, even though it also showed that they had a right to recover upon two different legal grounds. It may be (see facts of case) that the plaintiffs paid the money to the defendants by mistake, and also hold them liable as indorsers or guarantors. Either would constitute a good cause of action, and it does not make their complaint insufficient because they have two grounds of recovery instead of one. Mills v. Barney, 22 Cal. 247.

23. Action on contract. Complaint on contract for purchase by defendant of certain goods, to aver a readiness or offer of delivery or performance. Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 486.

24. Complaint on executory contract. In Dunham v. Pettee, 8 N. Y. 512, it was held, that in an executory contract for the sale of a quantity of iron, to be paid for on delivery within a certain period, the obligations of the one party to pay and the other to deliver were mutual and dependent; and that in an action by the seller for the price, it was not enough simply to show the default of the purchaser, but that he must show that he was ready or offered to deliver the property. That whichever party in such case seeks to enforce the contract against the other must show performance, or a tender of performance, or a readiness to perform on his part; and that, until that is shown, he himself is in default. Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 488.

25. Averment of damages in complaint for breach of contract. In a suit to recover damages for breach of a contract, it is sufficient that the complaint alleges the contract, the breach complained of, and general damages. Barber v. Cazalis, 30 Cal. 96.

26. Contract may be set forth in complaint in the precise terms in which it is written, or according to its legal effect. A contract may be declared on according to its legal effect, or in hæc verba. If the former mode should be adopted, then the defendant may, by the rule of the common law in a proper case, crave oyer of the instrument; and if it appear that its provisions have been misstated, he may set out the contract in hæc verba, and demur on the ground of the variance. But where the plaintiff sets forth the contract in the terms in which it is written, and then proceeds by averment to put a false construction upon the terms, the allegations, as repugnant to the terms, should be regarded as surplusage to be struck out on motion. 1 Chitty's Pleading, p. 232; Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 300; see also Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250. And consideration need not be alleged for a contract if the contract be set out in complaint in the very terms in which it is written. See McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461; Wills v. Kempt, 17 Cal. 101; see Civ. Code, §§ 1614, 1629. A written agreement imports consideration, and seals are abolished.

27. Complaint on written contract. Joseph v. Holt, 37 Cal. 250.

28. What should be stated in complaint in an action on a contract. The party to a written contract who has performed his part of it, can bring an action against the other party who has failed to fulfill, for work and labor done and performed; but the execution of the contract, its terms, the performance of the same on the part of the plaintiff, and the non-performance by the other party, and the damages sustained, should be alleged, and if there has been variation from the terms of the written contract in the progress of the work, by consent of the parties, that fact should also be averred, and the performance of the contract as varied stated in the complaint. When, by the terms of the contract, the party who has failed to fulfill was to execute his note for the money due, his failure to do so should be averred, for the ground of action against him is his failure to execute the note. O'Connor v. Dingley, 26 Cal. 17; see also, for pleadings on contract, Kalkman v. Baylis, 23 Cal. 303.

29. Assignment of breach of contract of guaranty. Dabovich v. Emeric, 7 Cal. 209.

30. Complaint, where correction of mistake in contract is sought. If a material clause has been omitted by mistake in drawing up a contract, a party seeking to avail himself of the actual contract must obtain a reformation of the writing, by a distinct proceeding to reform it, or by specially pleading the mistake in the suit in which the contract is pleaded, and asking its correction as independent relief. Under a pleading which simply states the terms of a contract, the introduction of a written agreement respecting the subject-matter cannot be followed by oral proof of a material clause alleged to have been omitted by mistake from the writing. Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 122.

31. Action upon an assignment of contract. If an action be brought on an assignment of a contract to one party by another, the pleadings should at least have alleged a positive transfer or assignment, and the character of it, so that the other party might be put upon notice of what he had to meet. Stearns v. Martin, 4 Cal. 229.

32. The performance of conditions precedent must be alleged. And if not alleged, the failure to do so must be taken advantage of by demurrer in the lower court. The defect cannot be shown after verdict rendered. Happe v. Stout, 2 Cal. 462

33. Waiver of tort. As to waiver of tort and maintenance of action upon other grounds, see Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 458; 58 Am. Dec. 415; Miller v. Van Tassel, 24 Cal. 463. But so, also, if the failure to comply with a contract is a tort, the party aggrieved may bring an action in tort, instead of an action upon the contract. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193.

34. Assumpsit. Waiver of tort. If personal property has been wrongfully taken, the tort may be waived and an action in nature of assumpsit be maintained for the recovery of the value of the property so taken. Fratt v. Clark, 12 Cal. 89.

35. Action of trover. See Pelberg v. Gorham, 23 Cal. 349; Nickerson v. California Stage Co., 10 Cal. 520. Conversion is the gist of the action of trover, and must be alleged. Rogers v. Huie, 2 Cal. 571; 56 Am. Dec. 363.

36. Complaint in replevin. Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 139; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574.

37. Complaint in actions to recover property seized by sheriff under process. See § 689, post; see also Ghiradelli v. Bourland, 32 Cal. 585; Kendall v. Clark, 10 Cal. 17; 70 Am. Dec. 691; Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650; Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73.

38. Condition precedent to be alleged. If the payment of a promissory note is agreed by the parties to be made conditional upon the payment by the payee of a certain debt of the payor, such payment is a condition precedent, and must be alleged in complaint to have been made, or plaintiff's right of action on the note is demurrable. Rogers v. Cody, 8 Cal. 324.

39. Complaints in action for purchase-money for goods sold and delivered. The sale and delivery of the goods to the defendant, the place and the manner in which the indebtedness accrued, and whether it was on account of defendant or another, must be alleged. Mershon v. Randall, 4 Cal. 324. Also, the amounts due severally for either goods or money. Cordier v. Schloss, 18 Cal. 576. It is a sufficient allegation which states that defendant is indebted to plaintiff in a certain sum for goods sold and delivered to him at his request, and that defendant has never paid for them. Abadie v. Carrillo, 32 Cal. 172 An allegation setting forth that plaintiffs had purchased "a quantity of malt from P. & W., then and there acting as the agents of defendant," is only another form of declaring that they had purchased from the defendant. It is sufficiently certain to prevent any misapprehension of its meaning, and is no good cause for demurrer. Cochran v. Goodman, 3 Cal. 245.

40. Facts which must be stated in complaint in such action. The complaint contains several counts, which are in the ordinary form of counts in indebitatus assumpsit, for goods sold and delivered, and money paid and expended; and it is objected to, not by demurrer, but after answer, as defective in not stating facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The objection is not well taken. The complaint is sufficient in its allegations, and if they were deemed too general, the defendant could have applied for and obtained an order upon the plaintiffs to furnish a bill of particulars. It states a promise by the defendant, and its consideration and breach. Allen v. Patterson, 7 N. Y. 476; 57 Am. Dec. 542; Beekman v. Platner, 15 Barb. 550; Adam v. Holley, 12 How. Pr. 326; Cudlipp v. Whipple, 1 Abb. Pr. 107; Freeborn v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 338.

41. Complaint in action for moneys had and received, loaned or paid out, etc. If the action is for money had and received to the use of the plaintiff, and the facts stated in the complaint show clearly that the defendants are in possession of money which, in equity and conscience, they are bound to pay over, it is not demurrable. Kreutz v. Livingston, 15 Cal. 346. A demand must be alleged in the complaint. Reina v. Cross, 6 Cal. 31. Where the complaint shows the demand to be barred by the statute of limitations, it is demurrable. See Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78. Averments in action to recover money loaned. See Lambert v. Slade, 3 Cal. 330. And it was held that in an action to recover money laid out and expended for another's benefit, the complaint stated a sufficient cause of action, which averred that defendant was justly indebted to plaintiff in the sum of three thousand dollars, for money paid, laid out, and expended for the use and benefit of defendant, and at his special instance and request, to wit, at, etc., and on the first day of April, 1857, and in the sum of three thousand dollars, for money found to be due from the defendant to plaintiff on an account then stated between them, and the defendant being so indebted to the plaintiff, afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at the place aforesaid, undertook and faithfully promised the plaintiff to pay the same, etc., and that said sum is due and unpaid. De Witt v. Porter, 13 Cal. 171. An averment in a complaint, that defendant owes plaintiff a certain sum for professional services rendered at a certain time, at defendant's request, is sufficient, without alleging the value of the services, or defendant's promise to pay therefor. Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 235; 83 Am. Dec. 64.

42. Money had and received. A complaint for money had and received must allege a demand, or it is demurrable. Greenfield v. Steamer Gunnell, 6 Cal. 68.

43. When tender of purchase-money is to be averred. In an action for non-delivery of produce contracted for and to be delivered on demand and upon payment, it is not necessary to aver an actual tender; an averment that plaintiff was ready and willing to receive and pay for it was sufficient. 1 Parsons on Contracts, p. 449; Crosby v. Watkins, 12 Cal. 88.

44. When a demand must be averred. An allegation that defendant sold to plaintiffs certain produce, and after the sale executed a guaranty that the share of plaintiffs should be at their disposal, and stating that a demand for the same and the refusal of the defendant to deliver, is demurrable, as it should have contained an assignment of the breach of the contract of guaranty, for the material point at issue is, whether the defendant undertook to deliver. In this case the sale operated as a delivery. There was no necessity of a demand on defendant, unless for the purpose of enabling him to comply with his guaranty. Dabovich v. Emeric, 7 Cal. 212.

45. Averment of a refusal to execute a deed. It was held that the failure to aver refusal is fatal to the action, and may be taken advantage of on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. (See facts.) Dodge v. Clark, 17 Cal. 586. A refusal, or a breach of a contract, must be stated in direct, plain, and unequivocal words. Moore v. Besse, 30 Cal. 570.

46. When and how papers and records can be made part of a pleading. Records and papers cannot be made a part of a pleading by merely referring to them, and praying that they may be taken as a part of such pleading, without annexing the originals or copies as exhibits, or incorporating them with it, so as to form a part of the record in the cause. People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 78. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, the complaint referred to a copy of the mortgage annexed, and referred thereto for a correct description of the land, and this was held sufficient for the purposes of the action. See Emeric v. Tams, 6 Cal. 155.

47. Complaints in actions to compel an account. In an action to compel an account, a complaint is sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a decree directing an account which alleges that plaintiff and defendants are parties in a company known as the "Miners' Ditch Company"; that defendants exclude plaintiff from participation in the business or benefit from it; that they have received large sums of money from the same, and refuse to account or pay him anything, etc. Smith v. Fagan, 17 Cal. 178. A request for and refusal to account must be alleged in complaint. Bushnell v. McCauley, 7 Cal. 421. A complaint in an action for rents and proceeds from the leasing and the sale of certain property containing an averment, in general terms, that a copartnership exists as to the property between plaintiff and defendants, without averring any partnership agreement, and then states that plaintiff acquired his interest in the property by the purchase of an undivided interest from other persons than defendants, does not state facts sufficient either for a dissolution and settlement of the affairs of a partnership, or for a partition. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69.

48. Complaint in actions to recover specific personal property. Complaint will be held defective if it appears that defendant came rightfully to the possession of the property, and no averment is made of demand and refusal to deliver the property. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 508.

49. Demand and refusal, how pleaded. An averment that defendant "has failed, refused, and neglected so to return" the property sued for, is not an allegation of the special and formal demand and refusal to deliver, required in actions to recover specific personal property. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 508.

50. Complaint in an action for conspiracy. Where two or more persons are sued for a wrong done, it may be necessary to prove a previous combination, in order to secure a joint recovery; but it is never necessary to allege it, and if alleged, it is not to be considered as the gist of the action. That lies in the wrongful and damaging act done. Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 560.

51. Pleadings in actions for damages. What must be averred. See Tuolumne County Water Co. v. Columbia etc. Water Co., 10 Cal. 193; Hoffman v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 10 Cal. 413; see also Hanson v. Webb, 3 Cal. 236. Grounds of damages to be specially averred. Stevenson v. Smith, 28 Cal. 102; 87 Am. Dec. 107. So, also, for loss of time, compensation for wages paid, etc. Dabovich v. Emeric, 12 Cal. 171. And if treble damages be given by statute, such must be stated, or statute recited in pleadings. Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 239.

52. Complaint in action for damages. This case was for damages sustained by the plaintiff, by reason of the refusal of the defendant, sheriff of Siskiyou County, to execute to him a deed for land bought at public sale; but the complaint is fatally defective in this, that it alleges special damages arising from the inability to get rents and profits from the estate, a tavern in Yreka, without averring that the defendant in execution had any title to the premises, or that the plaintiff, if the sheriff had made him a deed, would have been either entitled to receive or been able to recover possession of the property, or rents, or profits. Knight v. Fair, 12 Cal. 297.

53. Complaint in suit for damages against common carrier. It is unnecessary to state a tender of fare. An allegation of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to pay the carrier the legal amount of fare is sufficient. Tarbell v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 34 Cal. 622.

54. Damages for diversion of water. McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145; Gale v. Tuolumne Water Co., 14 Cal. 25; Leigh Co. v. Independent Ditch Co., 8 Cal. 323.

55. Actions for damage or trespass. The words, "with force and arms, broke and entered," do not confine the proof to the direct and immediate damages, in the same manner as in the old action of trespass, and the facts being clearly set out in the complaint, the addition of these words is surplusage. Darst v. Rush, 14 Cal. 81. Averment of possession to sustain complaint for trespass. McCarron v. O'Connell, 7 Cal. 152. As to matters generally, see Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 124.

56. Damages for infringement on franchise. In an action to recover damages, by the owner of a licensed ferry, against a party alleged to have run a ferry within the limits prohibited by law, it was held that the complaint should have alleged that defendant ran his ferry for a fee or reward, on the promise or expectation of it, or that he ran it for other than his own personal use or that of his family; that the omission of those allegations was fatal. Hanson v. Webb, 3 Cal. 237.

57. Complaint in action of account between cotenants. The complaint avers a tenancy in common between the parties; the sole and exclusive possession of the premises by the defendant; the receipt by him of the rents, issues, and profits thereof; a demand by the plaintiff of an account of the same, and the payment of his share; the defendant's refusal; and that the rents, issues, and profits amount to eighty-four thousand dollars. These averments, and not the form in which the prayer for judgment is couched, must determine the character of the pleading. The complaint is designated a bill in equity; but the designation does not make it such. There are no special circumstances alleged which withdraw the case from the ordinary remedies at law, and require the interposition of equity. The action is a common-law action of account, and, viewed in this light, the complaint is fatally defective. It does not aver that the defendant occupied the premises upon any agreement with the plaintiff, as receiver or bailiff of his share of the rents and profits. It is essential to a recovery that this circumstance exists, and equally essential to the complaint that it be alleged. Pico v. Columbet, 12 Cal. 419; 73 Am. Dec. 550.

58. Suits for divorce. What must be averred. In an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the charge should have been stated with reasonable certainty as to time and place, so as to have enabled the defendant to prepare to meet it on the trial. Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 254; 70 Am. Dec. 717. The information should extend to the particular place or locality where it occurred, though the name of the person with whom may be unknown. Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 254; 70 Am. Dec. 717; see also Codd v. Codd, 2 Johns. Ch. 224; Wood v. Wood, 2 Paige, 113; Richards v. Richards, Wright (Ohio), 302; Stokes v. Stokes, 1 Mo. 322; Wright v. Wright, 3 Tex. 168. Averment of residence in state for six months before applying for divorce. Civ. Code, § 128; Bennett v. Bennett, 28 Cal. 599; see, generally, Civ. Code, §§ 82–148, inclusive, and notes.

59. Complaint averring failure or insufficiency of consideration. See Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78. But a partial failure of consideration cannot be pleaded. See Reese v. Gordon, 19 Cal. 147.

60. Actions on notes, bills of exchange, etc. Complaint upon promissory note should allege the non-payment thereof, not that a certain amount is due thereon. Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71; Brown v. Orr, 29 Cal. 120. Where complaint stated that defendant made and delivered note to plaintiff, a further allegation, that plaintiff "is still the owner and holder of the note," is a conclusion of law. See Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569. A complaint, which regards the maker and the guarantor of a note as joint makers, and contains no allegation of demand and notice, is demurrable. Lightstone v. Laurencel, 4 Cal. 277. In a suit against the maker of a note, or the acceptor of a bill of exchange, where the place of payment is fixed, an averment of presentment at that place, and refusal to pay, is unnecessary. Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307. No allegation of a promise in writing is required in a suit brought upon a promise made by the defendant to accept a draft which another might draw to him. Wakefield v. Greenhood, 29 Cal. 597. An indorser of a note, payable on demand, demand not being made until thirteen months after the indorsement to plaintiff, is, prima facie, not liable. The delay is unreasonable. In such case, facts to excuse the delay are an essential part of the complaint, and must be alleged. Jerome v. Stebbins, 14 Cal. 457. Where demand is barred, new promise to be alleged. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

61. Pleading statute of limitation. New promise, etc. See note to § 312, ante; see also, particularly, § 458, post.

62. Actions upon undertakings. Description of the bond in complaint. Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274; Morgan v. Thrift, 2 Cal. 562; Baker v. Cornwall, 4 Cal. 15. Action for breach, no notice to defendant need be averred. People v. Edwards, 9 Cal. 286. Undertaking on appeal. Tissot v. Darling, 9 Cal. 278. Bond for release of property attached. Palmer v. Melvin, 6 Cal. 651; McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500. Actions against sureties on injunction bonds. Tarpey v. Shillenberger, 10 Cal. 390; Lally v. Wise, 28 Cal. 540. Recognizance under Penal Code. People v. Smith, 18 Cal. 498; Mendocino County v. Lamar, 30 Cal. 627. Undertaking given in replevin suit. Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 147; Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274.

Actions on official bonds Averments in complaint. Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; Ghiradelli v. Bourland, 32 Cal. 585; Van Pelt v. Littler, 14 Cal. 194; Sacramento County v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

63. Action for collection of taxes. People v. Pico, 20 Cal. 595; People v. Holladay, 25 Cal. 300.

64. Claims against estates of decedent's executors and administrators. The failure of plaintiff to aver in complaint, in an action upon a claim against an estate, its presentation to and rejection by the administrator, is an objection that is demurrable on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 393; Falkner v. Folsom's Executor, 6 Cal. 412; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 558; but these cases are overruled by Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140; and the correctness of the latter decision is questioned in Ellis v. Polhemus, 27 Cal. 354. The case of Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 393, is referred to in the following cases: Falkner v. Folsom's Executor, 6 Cal. 412; McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 123; Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500; Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 30; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 498.

65. Complaint by or against executor, etc. Complaint must allege that executor is entitled to sue in that capacity; or if suit is against an administrator, the complaint must show that the party sued was appointed and was acting in such capacity. Barfield v. Price, 40 Cal. 536.

66. Complaint against absent debtor. If the plaintiff desire to subject the assets of an absent debtor to the payment of his claim, he must show that he is without a remedy at law; and if the complaint discloses such remedy at law, it will be dismissed upon demurrer. Lupton v. Lupton, 3 Cal. 120.

67. Filing supplemental complaint. It was held that it is no objection to a supplemental complaint that it prays for a different relief, and fails to bring in all the other creditors, who are alleged by the defense as entitled to a ratable distribution. (See facts.) Baker v. Bartol, 6 Cal. 483.

68. Demand for relief. See § 580, post. The court will grant such relief as the facts stated in the complaint will justify. People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269; Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299. A complaint in trespass may conclude with a demand for injunction. Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 125. So, also, where action is brought to test priority of appropriation of water. Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217. Demand for treble damages must be expressly inserted. How inserted. See Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 239.

§ 426a. Statement of facts in divorce complaint. In an action for divorce the complaint must set forth, for the statistics required to be collected by the state bureau of vital statistics, among other matters as near as can be ascertained the following facts:

(1) The state or country in which the parties were married.

(2) The date of marriage.

(3) The date of separation.

(4) The number of years from marriage to separation.

(5) The number of children of the marriage, if any, and if none, a statement of that fact.

(6) The ages of the minor children.

Legislation § 426a. Added by Stats. 1913, p. 232.

§ 427. What causes of action may be joined. The plaintiff may unite several causes of action in the same complaint, where they all arise out of:

1. Contracts, express or implied;

2. Claims to recover specific real property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof, or for waste committed thereon, and the rents and profits of the same;

3. Claims to recover specific personal property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof;

4. Claims against a trustee by virtue of a contract or by operation of law;

5. Injuries to character;

6. Injuries to person;

7. Injuries to property;

8. Claims arising out of the same transaction, or transactions connected with the same subject of action, and not included within one of the foregoing subdivisions of this section.

The causes of action so united must all belong to one only of these classes, and must affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial, and must be separately stated; but an action for malicious arrest and prosecution, or either of them, may be united with an action for either an injury to character or to the person; provided, however, that in any action brought by the husband and wife, to recover damages caused by any injury to the wife, all consequential damages suffered or sustained by the husband alone, including loss of the services of his said wife, moneys expended and indebtedness incurred by reason of such injury to his said wife, may be alleged and recovered without separately stating such cause of action arising out of such consequential damages suffered or sustained by the husband; provided, further, that causes of action for injuries to person and injuries to property, growing out of the same tort, may be joined in the same complaint, and it is not required that they be stated separately.

Legislation § 427. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 64 (New York Code, § 167), as amended by Stats. 1855, p. 196. The changes therefrom are noted infra.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 133; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 705, adding subd. 8.

4. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 219, (1) in introductory paragraph, striking out "they," before "all arise"; (2) adding the first proviso to the end of the final paragraph.

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 30, (1) in introductory paragraph, inserting "they" (stricken out in 1913); (2) in final paragraph, adding the second proviso.

Joinder of causes of action, in general. The plaintiff may unite several causes of action, where all the matters complained of are parts of one transaction (Pfister v. Dascey, 65 Cal. 403; 4 Pac. 393; Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107; 57 Pac. 791); and the fact that both legal and equitable causes of action are joined does not preclude the court from granting the relief warranted by the facts. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266. It is the settled practice in equity, in order to avoid a multiplicity of suits, to allow suit, in the same action, for every species of relief necessary to secure the rights of the plaintiff in the subject-matter. Doudell v. Shoo, 20 Cal. App. 424; 129 Pac. 478. There is no requirement in the code that distinct causes of action shall correspond to or be consistent with each other. Cowan v. Abbott, 92 Cal. 100; 28 Pac. 213. Causes of action cannot be united, except when authorized by statute (Smith v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 36 Cal. 281; Dyer v. Barstow, 50 Cal. 652; Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449; Stark v. Wellman, 96 Cal. 400; 31 Pac. 259; Mallory v. Thomas, 98 Cal. 644; 33 Pac. 757; Thelin v. Stewart, 100 Cal. 372; 34 Pac. 861); and although expressly authorized, yet the plaintiff is not compelled to unite them. Realty Construction etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 156 Cal. 543; 132 Pac. 1048. Damages arising from single wrongs, though at different times, make but one cause of action. Hall v. Susskind, 109 Cal. 203; 41 Pac. 1012. A demurrer is properly sustained to a complaint which shows a misjoinder of causes of action and of parties. Lapique v. Munroe, 19 Cal. App. 253; 125 Pac. 760.

Causes of action arising out of contracts. Several causes of action arising out of contracts are properly united. Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78. Thus, a cause of action based upon an express contract may be united with one based upon an implied contract. Cowan v. Abbott, 92 Cal. 100; 28 Pac. 213; Olmstead v. Dauphiny, 104 Cal. 635; 38 Pac. 505. An action upon a contract for the direct payment of money may be united with one arising out of a contract, wherein the damages for its breach are unliquidated, and for which the plaintiff is not entitled to a writ of attachment. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732; Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161. There is no misjoinder of causes of action in a suit in equity to settle the affairs of a partnership, where the subject-matter of the suit relates to but one transaction, and the principal relief asked is to establish the partnership and for an accounting of the partnership assets and business. Doudell v. Shoo, 20 Cal. App. 424; 129 Pac. 478; Bremner v. Leavitt, 109 Cal. 130; 41 Pac. 859. A cause of action for work and labor performed by the plaintiff for the defendant may be joined with a similar cause assigned to the plaintiff. Fraser v. Oakdale Lumber etc. Co., 73 Cal. 187; 14 Pac. 829. A cause of action for damages for breach of contract, with each term of the contract separately and specifically alleged, and all summed up in one general allegation of damages, may be joined with a cause of action on quantum meruit, which particularizes each item of work and labor performed and materials furnished, and the reasonable value thereof, where they all arise out of contracts expressed or implied. Remy v. Olds, 88 Cal. 537; 26 Pac. 355. A cause of action for a commission, based upon a sale of property made under a given state of facts, may be united with a cause of action based upon a sale made under another state of facts; both causes of action being based upon the same contract, and the plaintiff being entitled to recover upon either, he should not be compelled to elect upon which he will proceed. Rucker v. Hall, 105 Cal. 425; 38 Pac. 962; Wilson v. Smith, 61 Cal. 209. In an action for the purchase price of goods, an allegation that a further sum is due as interest does not constitute a separate cause of action. Friend & Terry Lumber Co. v. Miller, 67 Cal. 464; 8 Pac. 40. The owner of property adjacent to a street is not a party to a contract for the improvement of the street, made between the contractor and the superintendent of streets, within the meaning of the first subdivision of this section. Dyer v. Barstow, 50 Cal. 652. The plaintiff may unite, or sue separately on, causes of action for the foreclosure of a lien for street-work, as to each lot, under the same contract, although one person may own two or more of such lots. Realty Construction etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 165 Cal. 543; 132 Pac. 1048. Several causes of action upon contracts for the direct payment of money may be united, where one of them is secured by pledge of personal property, while the others are unsecured. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732. Where the contract alleged is an entirety, and the defendant's promises are all founded upon the same consideration, the plaintiff may ask for a money judgment, and for the specific performance of an agreement to convey; and it is his duty to unite both in the same action, if he wishes to enforce both. Mann v. Higgins, 83 Cal. 66; 23 Pac. 206.

Causes of action on contract and tort. A cause of action for breach of contract cannot be joined with one for injuries resulting from a tort (Stark v. Wellman, 96 Cal. 400; 31 Pac. 259); nor can a cause of action for the violation of the terms of an express contract be joined with one for the conversion of personal property (Stark v. Wellman, 96 Cal. 400; 31 Pac. 259); but, if they arise out of the same transaction, actions ex delicto and actions ex contractu may be joined. Boulden v. Thompson, 21 Cal. App. 279; 131 Pac. 755.

Claims to recover specific real property. A claim to recover specific real property, with damages for the withholding thereof, or for waste committed thereon, and the rents and profits of the same, may be united. Furlong v. Cooney, 72 Cal. 322; 14 Pac. 12; Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291.

Causes of action to recover possession of several distinct and separate parcels of land may be united, where they are separately stated, affect all the parties to the action, and do not require different places of trial. Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150. Claims for rents, issues, and profits, and for damages for withholding, in an action to recover specific real property, are in the nature of alleged trespass for mesne profits, which can be recovered only after or contemporaneously with judgment for the recovery of possession of the demanded premises; and, when united with ejectment, judgment for such damages can be rendered only when there is also judgment for recovery of possession. Locke v. Peters, 65 Cal. 161; 3 Pac. 657. Specific real property, with damages, may be recovered; but recovery of damages cannot be had, where the plaintiff fails to recover the property. Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 484; 87 Am. Dec. 135. A cause of action to recover possession of real property may be joined with one for rents, issues, and profits. Beckman v. Waters, 3 Cal. App. 734; 86 Pac. 997.

Claims to recover specific personal property. A cause of action to recover specific personal property, with or without damages for the withholding thereof, cannot be united with a cause of action for injury to the property. Hall v. Susskind, 109 Cal. 203; 41 Pac. 1012.

Claims against a trustee. A claim to enforce an express or implied trust may be united with a claim to enforce a vendor's lien existing without any written contract. Burt v. Wilson, 28 Cal. 632; 87 Am. Dec. 142. The cause of action in a complaint, under § 738, post, is not within the purview of the fourth subdivision of this section. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449. A complaint which states one cause of action in ejectment and one for the establishment of a trust, is good, in the absence of a demurrer for misjoinder of causes of action. Everson v. Mayhew, 85 Cal. 1; 21 Pac. 431; 24 Pac. 382. Several causes of action upon claims against a trustee, by virtue of a contract or by operation of law, may be united, though they may relate to distinct parcels of real estate. Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820.

Injuries to character. In an action for conspiracy, which in one aspect is for the publication of a libel, and in another is for malicious prosecution, each cause of action should be separately stated in the complaint, so that the defendant may plead to them separately. White v. Cox, 46 Cal. 169. Where the complaint alleges wrongful acts of the defendant, by which the property of the plaintiff is damaged, his character injured, and his health permanently impaired, there is a misjoinder of distinct causes of action. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56.

Injuries to person. A cause of action for injury to the person cannot be joined with one for injury to property. Thelin v. Stewart, 100 Cal. 372; 34 Pac. 861; Schermerhorn v. Los Angeles Pacific R. R. Co., 18 Cal. App. 454; 123 Pac. 351.

Injuries to property. Any number of separate causes of action for distinct nuisances may be united, where they affect all the parties. Astill v. South Yuba Water Co., 146 Cal. 55; 79 Pac. 594. A cause of action to abate a nuisance may be united with one to recover damages incurred by reason thereof. Grandona v. Lovdal, 70 Cal. 161; 11 Pac. 623. A complaint seeking an injunction against the operation of a quarry, and for damages sustained thereby, does not set up two causes of action. Rooney v. Gray Bros., 145 Cal. 753; 79 Pac. 523. Where the several owners of a stream join as plaintiffs in an action for damages for diverting the waters of the stream, and for an injunction to restrain the further diversion thereof, the complaint is subject to a demurrer, both for a misjoinder of parties plaintiff and for a misjoinder of causes of action. Foreman v. Boyle, 88 Cal. 290; 26 Pac. 94.

Transactions connected with same subject-matter. A cause of action to quiet title and to declare a deed a mortgage, arising out of the same transaction, is not a union of two causes of action. Louvall v. Gridley, 70 Cal. 507; 11 Pac. 777. Two or more causes of action against a toll-collector, for penalties incurred for demanding and collecting excessive toll, are improperly united, even if separately stated. Brown v. Rice, 51 Cal. 489. An action to foreclose a mortgage executed by two persons, to secure a note made by one of them, and praying for judgment against the maker of the note and for a decree of foreclosure against both, is not demurrable on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299; Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; 99 Am. Dec. 363; Bailey v. Dale, 71 Cal. 34; 11 Pac. 804; Levy v. Noble, 135 Cal. 559; 67 Pac. 1033.

Causes of action must affect all parties. Causes of action which do not affect the same parties cannot be properly united (Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482; 4 Pac. 458; Hall v. Susskind, 109 Cal. 203; 41 Pac. 1012); but a cause of action against a defendant individually may be united with a like cause of action against him in a representative capacity. Sacramento County v. Glann, 14 Cal. App. 780; 113 Pac. 360. A complaint stating eighteen separate and distinct causes of action, all in one count, and affecting eighteen different persons, is defective (People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 83 Cal. 393; 23 Pac. 303); but, it having been settled that a defendant who is the owner of all the lots in a foreclosure suit may be joined in a simple action to enforce the lien, no difference is perceivable, where the single action is brought against three owners in common of all the lots in suit (Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Crist, 21 Cal. App. 1; 130 Pac. 435); and where the suit is upon several distinct contracts, by the same parties, relating to the same transaction, involving joint and joint and several liabilities. Melander v. Western National Bank, 21 Cal. App. 462; 132 Pac. 265.

Causes of action must belong to the same class. A complaint cannot mingle several distinct causes of action, not all belonging to any one of the classes mentioned. Cosgrove v. Fisk, 90 Cal. 75; 27 Pac. 56. Several causes of action, all arising out of injury to the person, or all arising out of injury to property, may be united, provided that all the causes of action so united belong to one of the classes designated in this section. Schermerhorn v. Los Angeles etc. R. R. Co., 18 Cal. App. 454; 123 Pac. 351.

Causes of action must be separately stated. The provision for a separate statement of causes of action does not authorize the joinder of separate causes of action to enforce separate forfeitures arising under a statute. Smith v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 36 Cal. 281; Reed v. Omnibus R. R. Co., 33 Cal. 212. Where the complaint includes two or more of the several classes, and does not separately state the causes of action, but unites them in one count, there is a clear violation of the provisions of the act (McCarty v. Fremont, 23 Cal. 196); but a misjoinder of causes of action, which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties, is not ground for a reversal of the judgment. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449. Pleading one cause of action in several counts does not affect the substantial rights of the opposing party. Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398. The statement of a cause of action in several counts, instead of one, does not, of itself, render the complaint ambiguous and uncertain, or open to a general demurrer. Demartin v. Albert, 68 Cal. 277; 9 Pac. 157. The common counts cannot all be united in one count as one cause of action, without any specification of the sums due upon each several causes of action. Buckingham v. Waters, 14 Cal. 146. Each count must contain all the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action, and its defects cannot be supplied from statements outside of it, unless expressly referred to in it, and not then if matters in it relate to the gravamen. Haskell v. Haskell, 54 Cal. 262; Baldwin v. Ellis, 68 Cal. 495; 9 Pac. 652; Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398; Bidwell v. Babcock, 87 Cal. 29; 25 Pac. 752; Green v. Clifford, 94 Cal. 49; 29 Pac. 331; Reading v. Reading, 96 Cal. 4; 30 Pac. 803; Hopkins v. Contra Costa County, 106 Cal. 566; 39 Pac. 933; Barlow v. Burns, 40 Cal. 351. Where separate counts are not necessary, and where the entire complaint states a cause of action, the judgment will not be reversed on the ground that each cause in the complaint is not complete. Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398. Forcible entry and forcible detainer are distinct offenses, or separate causes of action, and should be separately stated (Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; 91 Am. Dec. 589); but the complaint cannot be amended for the purpose of stating forcible entry and forcible detainer in separate counts, where no objection is raised by demurrer to the complaint, which does not separately state each distinct offense. Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; 91 Am. Dec. 589. Where the gist of the action is negligence, the plaintiff may set forth all the facts, the indirect consequences of which resulted in the injuries complained of. Fraler v. Sears Union Water Co., 12 Cal. 555; 73 Am. Dec. 562. A motion to compel a plaintiff to elect between counts is properly denied, where, in the first count, he alleges delivery to the defendants, under an agreement to make returns of proceeds at a given price, and the second count is laid on quantum valebat, and the third count alleges an agreement to sell and deliver for a fixed price. Estrella Vineyard Co. v. Butler, 125 Cal. 232; 57 Pac. 980; Cowan v. Abbott, 92 Cal. 100; 28 Pac. 213.

Remedy where causes of action not separately stated. Where causes of action may be properly united, but are not separately stated, the remedy is not by demurrer, but by a motion to make the pleading more definite and certain, by separating and distinctly stating the different causes of action. City Carpet Beating etc. Works v. Jones, 102 Cal. 506; 36 Pac. 841; and see Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382; Fraser v. Oakdale Lumber etc. Co., 73 Cal. 187; 14 Pac. 829; Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332; 33 Pac. 119; Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820. The defect of a failure to state separately the causes of action united in the complaint cannot be reached by a motion to dismiss the action. Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523. Where the complaint improperly unites two causes of action, advantage of the defect must be taken by demurrer, or it is waived. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449. It is not waived, however, where the defendant submits to trial, the objection having been previously raised by demurrer. Thelin v. Stewart, 100 Cal. 372; 34 Pac. 861.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Contracts express or implied. A cause of action against an indorser on the note, and a cause of action in equity to foreclose the mortgage, were held to be properly joined. Eastman v. Turman, 24 Cal. 382. Mortgage assigned as security for debt due by mortgagee—assignee may unite his causes of action against mortgagor, mortgagee, and parties having liens or encumbrances on the property mortgaged, and make these persons all parties. Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 107. Action for foreclosure of mortgage made by husband and wife together to secure a note made only by husband, cause of action against husband for amount due on note and interest, and also against husband and wife for foreclosure and sale of property, held to be properly united. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299. Legal and equitable claims, founded upon instruments in writing, may be united. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266. Cause of action for enforcement of trust, either express or implied, may be united with cause of action to enforce vender's lien existing without any written contract. Both of the claims being founded on trusts, one lying in contract and the other arising by act and operation of law. Burt v. Wilson, 28 Cal. 638; 87 Am. Dec. 142. See also, generally, under this head, Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457; 83 Am. Dec. 78; Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 233.

2. Claims to recover specific real property, with or without damages, or for waste and the rents or profits. Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291; Gale v. Tuolumne Water Co., 14 Cal. 25.

3. Injuries to property. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 595, 596. Claims for value of the property destroyed, and for the damages caused by its destruction, may be united. Tendesen v. Marshall, 3 Cal. 440. Uniting claim for injury and damages. See Fraler v. Sears Union Water Co., 12 Cal. 555; 73 Am. Dec. 562.

4. Causes of action separately stated. Though united in one complaint, the different causes of action must be separately stated. McCarty v. Fremont, 23 Cal. 197; Buckingham v. Waters, 14 Cal. 146; Cordier v. Schloss, 18 Cal. 581. Ejectment may be for two distinct pieces of land, but the two causes of action must be separately stated, affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial. Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150.

5. Generally. A complaint against a sheriff and his sureties, averring trespass of sheriff and against his sureties as signers of the bond, and not otherwise, the causes are not properly united. Ghiradelli v. Beurland, 32 Cal. 585. Claim for damages for personal tort cannot be united with claim properly cognizable in court of equity. Mayo v. Madden, 4 Cal. 27. A claim for the possession of real property, with damages for detention, cannot be joined in the same complaint, under any system of pleading, with a claim for consequential damages arising from a change of a road, by which a tavern-keeper may have been injured in his business. Bowles v. Sacramento Turnpike etc. Co., 5 Cal. 225. A claim for damages may be united with a demand for a statutory penalty, in an action against a sheriff for failing to execute and return process. There is no necessity for bringing two suits. Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642.

CHAPTER III.

DEMURRER TO COMPLAINT.

§ 430. When defendant may demur.
§ 431. Demurrer must specify grounds. May be taken to part. May answer and demur at same time.
§ 432. What proceedings are to be had when complaint is amended.
§ 433. Objection not appearing on complaint, may be taken by answer.
§ 434. Objections, when deemed waived.

§ 430. When defendant may demur. The defendant may demur to the complaint within the time required in the summons to answer, when it appears upon the face thereof, either:

1. That the court has no jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, or the subject of the action;

2. That the plaintiff has not legal capacity to sue.

3. That there is another action pending between the same parties for the same cause;

4. That there is a defect or misjoinder of parties plaintiff or defendant;

5. That several causes of action have been improperly united, or not separately stated;

6. That the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action;

7. That the complaint is ambiguous;

8. That the complaint is unintelligible; or,

9. That the complaint is uncertain.

General and special demurrer. See post, § 431.
Demurring and answering at same time. Post, §§ 431, 441.
Serving demurrer. Post, § 465.
Judgment on demurrer. Post, § 636.
Demurrer is an appearance. Post, § 1014.

Waiving objections by not demurring. Post, § 434.

Legislation § 430. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 40 (New York Code, § 144), as amended by Stats. 1859, p. 139. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 133; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5. 3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 706, (1) striking out the word "or" at the end of subds. 1, 2, 3, 4, 6; (2) in subd. 5, adding, after the word "or," the words "not separately stated"; (3) rearranging subd. 7 into the present subds. 7, 8, 9, that subdivision formerly reading, "7. That the complaint is ambiguous, unintelligible, or uncertain."

Objections that may be reached by demurrer. The code contemplates one demurrer to a pleading, in which may be taken any or all of the objections enumerated in this section (People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 29; 18 Pac. 90); and no grounds of demurrer, other than those enumerated, can be considered. Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107; 57 Pac. 791; Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382. A demurrer is a pleading, within the meaning of the statute and the common law. Davis v. Honey Lake Water Co., 98 Cal. 415; 33 Pac. 270. The office of the demurrer is, not to set out the facts, but merely to raise questions of law as to the sufficiency of the facts to constitute a cause of action or defense. Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7; Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 237. The legal character of the causes of demurrer is the same, whether assigned in a demurrer or in an answer. Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82. Want of consideration for the execution of an instrument, apparent from the averments of the complaint, may be taken advantage of by demurrer (McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461; Mulford v. Estudillo, 17 Cal. 618); and also where the agreement sued on is within the statute of frauds (Harper v. Goldschmidt, 156 Cal. 245; 134 Am. St. Rep. 124; 104 Pac. 451); and the failure of a complaint, based upon alleged fraud, to aver facts showing fraud, is ground of demurrer. Cosgrove v. Fisk, 90 Cal. 75; 27 Pac. 56; Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80; Pehrson v. Hewitt, 79 Cal. 594; 21 Pac. 950. Conclusions of law are not admitted by a demurrer. Buttner v. Kasser, 19 Cal. App. 755; 127 Pac. 811. The pleading must show on its face a cause of demurrer. Mulford v. Estudillo, 17 Cal. 618; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335; 99 Am. Dec. 384. Thus, a failure to serve a copy of the complaint with the summons is not a ground of demurrer, the omission not appearing on the face of the complaint. Ghiradelli v. Greene, 56 Cal. 629. Only the defects appearing on the face of the complaint can be reached by demurrer; defects or uncertainties, made apparent only by allegation of facts, cannot be raised by it. Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 237; Kamm v. Bank of California, 74 Cal. 191; 15 Pac. 765; Mulford v. Estudillo, 17 Cal. 618; Ghiradelli v. Greene, 56 Cal. 629. Irrelevant and immaterial matters in the complaint, which do not affect the sufficiency thereof, cannot be reached by demurrer, but must be made the subject of a motion to strike out. Bremner v. Leavitt, 109 Cal. 130; 41 Pac. 859. An objection to a pleading which contains all the essential averments, but states them in form too general to enable the defendant to meet them by a specific technical defense, should be met, not by demurrer, but by motion to make the pleading more specific. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133; 10 Pac. 369; but see contra, McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. The prayer of the complaint is not a subject of demurrer (Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299; De Leon v. Higuera, 15 Cal. 483; Poett v. Stearns, 28 Cal. 226; Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; 99 Am. Dec. 363; Bailey v. Dale, 71 Cal. 34; 11 Pac. 804; Levy v. Noble, 135 Cal. 559; 67 Pac. 1033); neither is surplusage (Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363); nor will a matter of form be noticed on demurrer (Phelps v. Owens, 11 Cal. 22; Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227); hence, failure to specify the name of the county, or the court or the title, or that the complaint does not show where either of the parties resides, is not a ground of demurrer (Otero v. Bullard, 3 Cal. 188); nor is an exception to an executor's account a pleading which may be demurred to (Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753); nor can want of verification of pleadings be raised by demurrer (Turner v. Hamilton, 13 Wyo. 408; 80 Pac. 664); nor is the non-appearance, in the record, of the Christian name of one plaintiff, a good ground of demurrer (Nelson v. Highland, 13 Cal. 74); nor is the setting up two accounts for one cause of action, in the complaint (Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107; 57 Pac. 791); nor is an objection that the statute gives a person another remedy (Triscony v. Brandenstein, 66 Cal. 514; 6 Pac. 384); nor a failure to allege special damage in an action for breach of contract (McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461); nor a failure to show that plaintiffs were innocent purchasers in good faith and without notice. McDermont v. Anaheim Union Water Co., 124 Cal. 112; 56 Pac. 779.

Plea of limitations. The bar of the statute of limitations may be taken advantage of by demurrer, where the defect clearly and affirmatively appears on the face of the complaint. Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423; Barringer v. Warden, 12 Cal. 311; Ord v. De la Guerra, 18 Cal. 67; Smith v. Hall, 19 Cal. 85; Mason v. Cronise, 20 Cal. 211; Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448; Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118; Cameron v. San Francisco, 68 Cal. 390; 9 Pac. 430; Wise v. Williams, 72 Cal. 544; 14 Pac. 204; Wise v. Hogan, 77 Cal. 184; 19 Pac. 278; Jenness v. Bowen, 77 Cal. 310; 19 Pac. 522; Doe v. Sanger, 78 Cal. 150; 20 Pac. 366; Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137; Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40; Pleasant v. Samuels, 114 Cal. 34; 45 Pac. 998; Williams v. Bergin, 116 Cal. 56; 47 Pac. 877; McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761; Lloyd v. Davis, 123 Cal. 348; 55 Pac. 1003. Where a counterclaim appears upon the face of the answer to be barred by the statute, it must be specially pleaded to by demurrer on that ground, or it is waived. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848. A demurrer on the ground of the bar of the statute is sustained, not because the complaint states, as the time when the cause of action accrued, any period, the time from which to the commencement of the action corresponds with the time prescribed in any particular statute as bar, but because the time, as stated since it accrued, exceeds the time defined as a limitation of actions of that nature. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146. Where an allegation of the complaint is consistent with the conclusion that the debt is not barred, the defense must be raised by plea, and not by demurrer. Curtiss v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 90 Cal. 245; 25 Am. St. Rep. 114; 27 Pac. 211. The bar of the statute must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, though it is not specified in the code as a ground of demurrer. Bell v. Bank of California, 153 Cal. 234; 94 Pac. 889. Where the complaint shows that the statute has run, the defendant may set it up either by demurrer or answer; but when the complaint does not so show, the defendant must plead his right by answer. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274.

Want of jurisdiction. Lack of jurisdiction must appear on the face of the complaint, to be a ground of demurrer. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432.
